PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

The object of this Book is, in the first place, to facilitate reference to the enormous mass of reported decisions of the four High Courts established in British India during the ten years which immediately succeeded the establishment of the Bengal tribunal on the 1st July, 1862. Those decisions cannot practically be disregarded, however much they may in some cases be impugned. Those ten years comprise my own experience of the Indian Courts, and of the growing inconvenience of their undigested reports.

In the second place, the object is to systematize the subjects of those decisions. I have selected twenty-four heads or departments of law, in which to exhibit consecutively, under their different subdivisions, their gradual and comparative development by the aid of the four concurrent jurisdictions mentioned above, and also of the Privy Council. In doing so care has been taken, where several rulings have been made in the same case, to apportion them to their respective heads.

A former edition of this Work appeared three years ago, (bringing the decisions down to December, 1869,) having in view the first only of these objects, which may or may not have been adequately secured. At all events a considerable edition was disposed of, and the demand for a second, together with the greater leisure on return to England, suggested this effort (which has been a laborious one) to supply it.

The notes contained in the former edition have been to some extent, though sparingly, weeded. There have been added the notes contained in the following volumes:

BENGAL LAW REPORTS, vols. iv.—viii., inclusive.
SUTHERLAND'S WEEKLY REPORTER, vols. xiii.—xvii., inclusive.
MADRAS HIGH COURT REPORTS, vols. iv.—vi., inclusive.
BOMBAY HIGH COURT REPORTS, vols. v.—vii., inclusive.
NORTH WEST REPORTS, vols. i.—iii., inclusive.

I. ADMINISTRATION.

1.—ADMINISTRATION (Section 282 of the Indian Succession Act does not interfere with the right of a decree-holder under Section 203 Act VIII of 1859, to have his decree satisfied out of the property of a deceased person (or out of the property of the defendant, the representative, if it should appear that he has not duly applied the property of the deceased) to the exclusion of other creditors, after deducting the expenses chargeable under Sections 277 to 281 of the former Act. Nil Komol Shaw v. J. Reed, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 513.)

Where a widow administering her husband's estate sued to recover certain moveable property wrongly appropriated by him on account of a claim against his father,—Aeld that defendant was rightly referred to a separate suit. Manly v. Manly, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 136.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants on the ground that they were in possession of his deceased debtor's property. It being found that the defendants received no assets from the deceased,—Held, the suit was rightly dismissed.

If the suit had simply been against the defendants as heirs or personal representatives of the deceased, and if they had alleged that no assets had come to their hands, the plaintiff would have been entitled to a decree against them as representatives of the deceased (if he had prayed for such a decree), without going to a trial on the question whether or not the defendants had assets; and in that case he might have proceeded, in enforcement of his decree, under the provisions of Section 203 of Act VII of 1859. Hiralall Mookerjee, In the matter of the petition of, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 100, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 431.

In the administration by the Court of the estate of a deceased, the dividend in respect of a debt against the estate is to be estimated on the amount of the debt at the date of the order for payment, and not at the date of proof. Agra and Masterman's Bank v. J. M. Robinson. In the matter of the Land Mortgage Bank of India, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 140.

A suit for a legacy must be brought, not within the jurisdiction where the legatee resides, but within the jurisdiction where the heir resides. Ashotosh Bone v. Hum Chum Nag, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 305.

Where an ad valorem stamp duty had been paid on a portion of the property of the testator under letters of administration which were valid until revoked, it was held that, in determining the stamp to be affixed to new letters of administration to be granted, credit should be given for the amount of duty which had been already paid; and such duty was not payable a second time. In the goods of Lieutenant-General Peter Innis, deceased, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 253.

The Court will restrain by injunction a creditor from proceeding in an administration suit, after an order has been made on a summons obtained by another creditor, under Section 24 of Act XI of 1854, for the administration of the same estate. Latheemund Sett and others v. S. M. Komulmoney Dosssee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 9.

2.—ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL.

The statement of a belief by the Administrator-General that applicants for probate are about to make charges which Section 30, Act V, 111 of 1852, prohibits, and thereby renders it illegal for the Court to refuse letters of administration to applicants otherwise well entitled, and of a deceased, the dividend in respect of a debt against the estate is to be estimated on the amount of the debt at the date of the order for payment, and not at the date of proof.
ADMINISTRATION—LETTERS.

application is altogether de hors the Administrator-General's Act. Foggo v. Louden, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 139.

The Administrator-General appointed under Act VIII of 1855, has the same right of retainer in satisfaction of his own debt as that which an ordinary executor or administrator has. Arthur M. Ritchie v. W. Stokes, 2 Mad. Rep., 255.

When letters of administration which had been granted to the Administrator-General of Madras were recalled, and he had merely taken manual possession of cash, Government promissory notes, and the title-deeds of leaseholds belonging to the deceased, the High Court, under Section 22 of Act VIII of 1855, allowed him commission at the rate of 2½ per cent. on the cash and the value of the notes, but refused to allow it on the leaseholds. In the goods of Simpson, deceased, 1 Mad. Rep., 171.

The bare possibility that the Act of Limitations may ultimately become a bar to the recovery of assets is not such danger of misappropriation as warrants the granting to the Administrator-General of an order under Section 12 of Act VIII of 1855.

Semble.—A debtor to the estate of a deceased person cannot apply for an order under that section. In the goods of Giridir Das Vallaba Das, deceased, 1 Mad. Rep., 234.

The Administrator-General appointed under Act VIII of 1855 has the same right of retainer in satisfaction of his own debt as that which an ordinary executor or administrator has. Arthur M. Ritchie v. W. Stokes and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 255.

In a suit, brought by a second mortgagee against first mortgagees (admittedly overpaid) to compel the first mortgagees to convey to him the mortgaged premises, the heir or legal representative of the deceased mortgagor is, according to the balance of authority, a necessary party. Cases bearing on the circumstances attending the execution of the second mortgage were not free from doubt, the cause was allowed to stand over, for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to apply for an order to the Administrator-General (under Section 17 of Act XXIV of 1867) directing him to apply for letters of administration in respect of such assets to the Administrator-General. In the goods of Duncan (deceased), 1 B. L. R., O. C., 3.

A British subject died intestate, leaving property within the jurisdiction of the High Court for the N. W. Provinces, and of the High Court at Fort William. General letters of administration were granted by the High Court for the N. W. Provinces to the Administrator-General of Bengal, who was not then aware that the deceased had left property within the jurisdiction of the High Court at Fort William. On discovering that the deceased had left property within the jurisdiction of the latter Court, the Administrator-General applied to that Court for general letters of administration, which were granted by the Court, on condition that he would apply to have the letters of administration granted by the High Court for the N. W. Provinces recalled. The High Court at Fort William has power to grant to the Administrator-General letters of administration which shall operate throughout the whole of the Presidency of Bengal. In the goods of F. Nechterlion, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 19.

A pecuniary legatee is not entitled to letters of administration cum test in preference to a creditor, and therefore is not entitled, under Sections 10 and 17 of Act VIII of 1855, to a grant of administration in preference to the Administrator-General. In the matter of the administration de bonis non cum test, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 19.

When letters of administration have been granted to the Administrator-General, and subsequently withdrawn on a false representation, the Court will grant a rule calling on the executors to show cause why the rule should not be extended to the Registry of the Court. In the goods of Maharajah Srivenuendo Benaich Rao Imrul, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 10.

Where citation has issued, and letters of administration have been brought in, the proper course is for the promovent to proceed by plaint. In the goods of Harrokto Sett, deceased, and Kisto Mohun Byock v. Radhakiso Sett, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 117.

Under Sections 212 and 213 Act X of 1865, it is necessary that the attorney applying for letters of administration should be within the jurisdiction of the Court. In the goods of J. C. Nesbit. In the goods of F. C. Briant, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 49.

4.—Certificates.

(a) Right to Certificate.

Two certificates of administration cannot run together. So, a widow who fails to appear and contest the grant of a certificate to another party, made prior to her own application, cannot claim one for herself afterwards, but she may be allowed a certificate to act as guardian of her minor (adopted) son. Sreemutty Sham Manna v. Ramdyal Goozoo, 1 W. R., Mis., 3.

Certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 can only be granted to persons claiming to be representatives of deceased persons to enable them to recover debts and receive interest or dividends; but such certificate concludes only the debtors of the estate, and the procedure given by the Act was not intended to apply to the decision of any right to succeed to the estate of a deceased person. Ex-parte Ram Narasinga, 2 Mad. Rep., 164.

A person was trustee of "wudf" or trust property. He had also some other property (how much was not clear) of his own. He made a will relating only to the trust property, and appointed an executor. Held that the executor mentioned in the will was entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, with regard to the trust property; and the legal personal representative of the deceased was entitled to a certificate under the same Act, with respect to any other property of which he died possessed. Mirza Daud Ali v. Syed Nadir Hossein, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 46; S. C., 11 W. R., 383.

The circumstance of a deceased party having the day of his death informed his debtor that he had given the whole of the moneys due to him to his mother-in-law, was held to be a sufficient indication (whether the gift was valid or not) that she was the proper person to receive the money due to the deceased and the certificate under Act XXVII of 1860. In cases under Act XXVII of 1860, Judges should always certify whether the certificate has been actually granted. Zeeeuomissa Khanum v. Kutto Begurn, 12 W. R., 239.

If there are several applicants for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the heir or the person or persons having the largest interest in the estate are entitled to the certificate, in preference to others whose interests are less considerable. If the Court thinks any small interest not sufficiently protected, it may call upon the party taking the certificate to give security to the extent requisite for the protection of such interest. Aseem Khan v. Mussumat Ameern, 12 W. R., 38.

The executor under a will, if it be not contested, has an undoubted right to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, though he be not the legal heir. If the will be contested the Judge should enquire into its validity. If he considers it proved, should give a certificate, leaving the parties dissatisfied to set it aside by a regular suit. Bidkoo Bhoooshun Mookerjee v. Issur Chunder Roy Chowdury, W. R., 1864, Mis., 4.

Claim under a will to a certificate to enable applicant to collect the debts of a deceased Mohamadan under Act XXVII of 1860. No necessity for collecting the debts being shown, and the inheritance being disputed,—Held that the Judge was right in refusing to give a certificate under that Act. Syed Agameer v. Gomance Khanum, W. R., 1864, Mis., 6.

The allegation of objectors who claim the property of a deceased person under a tussqemnannah transferring the property from the widow to them, should be enquired into; and if it is proved to be genuine, the objectors are entitled to a certificate, instead of the widow, as legal heir of the deceased. Deb Pershad v. Monga Koowvar, 4 W. R., Mis., 19.

A certificate may be granted to a widow, as guardian of her minor son, to collect the debts due to her deceased husband, notwithstanding that the adoption of the husband may have been set aside. Nitto Kallee Debeeh v. Obhoy Gobind Chowdury, 5 W. R., Mis., 10.

Where a will appointed the nephews of the testator to manage 4 annas of the property (the subject of the will) in their own right, and 12 annas as guardians of a minor son,—Held that the nephews were entitled to one certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, instead of the title of the estate, instead of the widow. Charlilal Chakka and others v. Chand Monee Dassse and others, 8 W. R., 105.

An heiress was held entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, although the owner of the property had died nine years previously, and the property had been previously managed by a third party. Pullash Money Dossse v. Anund Money Dossse, 8 W. R., 398.

A Hindu female is not entitled to apply for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, on the presumption that her husband is dead, when he has only been absent nine years. Shurno Money Dossse, 8 W. R., 421.

When the title of a person claiming as adopted son of the deceased is disputed, the certificate may properly be granted to the widow of the deceased. Dirig Paul Singh v. Mussamut Gainda Koowar, 1 Agra Rep., M.A., 13.

The application of a widow for a certificate having been opposed by a third party (K.), who produced an alleged will of the deceased, the Judge ordered the grant of a certificate to K. Subsequently the widow petitioned for an enquiry into the genuineness of the will, and the Judge, after examining witnesses, considered there were sufficient grounds for investigating the charge of forgery, and directed that K. should be sent to the Magistrate for that purpose. Held that the Judge ought not to have granted the certificate to the party who produced the will unless he was quite satisfied that the will was genuine. As the order, however, directing that K. should be sent to a Magistrate was made with jurisdiction, the High Court could not interfere. In the matter q' Kooth Hur, 11 W. R., 171.*
in the absence of other disqualifying circumstances, and in the discretion of the Court, be entrusted with the duty. Abdool Ali v. Abidunnissa Khatoom, W. R., 1864, Mis., 41.

Certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 can only be granted to persons claiming to be representatives of deceased persons to enable them to recover debts and receive interest or dividends; but such certificates include only the debtors of the estate, and the procedure given by the Act was not intended to apply to the decision of any right to succeed to the estate of a deceased person. Ex parte Ram Narasinga, 2 Mad. Rep., 164.

A mother is not entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect debts due to her deceased daughter, in preference to the husband of the deceased. Such certificate, however, will not authorize the husband's interference with the mother's possession of the landed property which she claims as her own. Mohun Soondur Koowar v. Ramanoogro Narain, 3 W. R., Mis., 3.

The mother of a deceased adopted minor son is his legal representative, and entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 as his legal heir. Shreemutty Deeno Moyee Dosssee v. Doorga Pershad Mitter, 3 W. R., Mis., 6.

Held that the certificate in this case was given to the party best entitled to it in accordance with the object of Act XXVII of 1860, i.e. the deceased's full sister's son, who was the party in possession, in preference to the deceased's half brother. Shaitk Lall Mahomed v. Busool Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 562.

The childless widows of the brother and nephew of a deceased person are not entitled under the Hindu law to be considered as the legal representatives of the deceased; and there being evidence in this case of the deceased having assigned his property to his illegitimate sons and acknowledged them as his sons, a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to administer to his estate was granted to them. Prodhan Ram v. Musst. Feria Koower, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 189.

Certain members (N. and A.) of a joint Hindu family, having commenced a suit to set aside an adoption by one of the family (C.), a compromise was effected by which the several parties took separate shares of the family property. C. having died, N. and A. applied for a certificate to collect the debts due to his estate, but were opposed in a joint petition made by the widow and adopted son.

Held that the applicants could not be entitled to the certificate, which might, however, be given to the son with the consent of the widow. Musstmut Munbaise Koower v. Newruung Lalt, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 135.

Where the will set up by objects to an application by the natural heir for a certificate of administration is not sufficiently proved, a Court is justified in looking on the natural heir as the party entitled to the certificate. Dinobuddoo Chowdary v. Rajmohiner Chowadrain, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 73.

A nephew is entitled to a certificate of administration in preference to a deceased son's daughter's son. Aree Murdon Bhuggot v. Jnnauth Bhuggot, 15 S. W. R. C. R., 328.

A trustee who had been appointed by will to act in respect of Government securities belonging to an estate having demised, and the minor heir having come of age, the parties entitled applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to enable them to draw interest on the securities. Upon this, the Judge recorded an order that they might apply for a certificate in respect of the deceased trustee's estate.

Held, that the applicants had nothing to do with the trustee's estate; and that it was the duty of the Judge to grant the application, if no person showed a better right. Pronauth Sircur, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 325.

Where the widow of a deceased sharer showed that he had mortgaged his share of joint family estate, and that each sharer had transacted business and dealt with parts of the property separately, it was held that there was sufficient evidence of separate right to entitle her to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1870. Sumundree Koowwurv. Kalee Churn Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 199.

A Hindu widow is entitled to a certificate to collect her husband's debts if he was living separate from the rest of her family. Chintanum Singh Chowdary v. Prasunmut Neetu Koowwaare, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 469.

The person entitled to a certificate enabling him to collect the debts due to the estate of a deceased ascetic or devotee must be the disciple, or spiritual brother, or preceptor of the deceased, and such person should not be deprived of his right, even though mentally incapable of succeeding to the office of the deceased. Gureb Doss v. Mungh Doss, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 383.

(6) Effect of Certificate.

Held that a certificate granted under Act XX of 1841 did not establish the right of inheritance of the party to whom it was granted, but simply empowered to collect debts due to the estate of the deceased. The title of plaintiff or her father could not, under the circumstances, be questioned by a co-sharer after its public acknowledgment and practical effect given to that acknowledgment during a long period of years. A. Skinner, manager of Skinner's estate, v. Victoria Skinner, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 128.

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 authorizes the holder of it to collect debts due to the deceased, but not to recover property which belonged to the deceased from a person wrongfully in possession. Awoojie v. Mee Noy, 8 W. R., 1.

The defendant gave a bond on unstamped paper to the plaintiff's eldest brother. On the obligee's death the succession was disputed, and the obligor refused to pay the subsequent interest to the plaintiff. Held that, as the plaintiff had failed to take out a certificate of succession to the obligee, the obligor was justified in such refusal.

Held also that the plaintiff could not recover the stamp penalty from the obligor. Gudi Jnakanay Gaur v. Gauruda Reddi, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 124.

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 does not preclude a suitor from showing that the relationship certified to did not exist. Bundhoo Bhugut v. Syed Mahomed Hossein, 2 W. R., 70.

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is not indispensable in order to allow a party who is next heir to come in to represent a deceased party in a
The effect of such certificate is that it is conclusive of the representative title against all debtors to the deceased, and affords full indemnity to all debtors paying their debts to the persons to whom the certificate has been granted. Mussamut Bhogubatty Koorer v. Bhola Nath Thakoor, 8 W. R., 317.

A certificate of heirship granted under Regulation VII of 1827 is not prima facie evidence that the holder of it is the rightful heir of the deceased. The effect of such certificate is merely to give security to persons in possession of or indebted to the estate of the deceased in dealing with such holder as the legal representative of the deceased. Sripat Ramchandra Kulkarni v. Vitho gee Valad Malharjee Paitt et al., 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 178.

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 simply empowers the person to whom it is granted to demand and receive the debts due to the deceased, and is in no way a determination of a competent Civil Court of the right of such person to possess- ing at the time of the death, and which may be due to other parties. Govinda papp v. Kindappa Sa't Truler; Govin da papp v. Kyatadoo; Mattappapp v. Naganna, 6 Mad. Rep., 131.

The object of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is to enable the parties who represent the deceased at the time of his death, and not to recover fresh claims that may accrue subsequent to his death, and which may be due to other parties. Mussamut Y'hangoo Koorer v. Mussamut Dameenah Koorer, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 343.

Parties who are decree-holders on the record are prima facie entitled to take proceedings in execution and draw the money standing to their credit under their decree, without the necessity of taking out a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, when there are no debts to be collected as due to the estate of a deceased decree-holder. Manick Moyer Chow drain v. Poorno Chudder. Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 510.

A certificate of heirship granted under Act XXVII of 1860 is not necessary to give to a person, claiming to be the representative of a deceased creditor, the right to institute a suit to recover a debt due to the estate of the deceased, or the right to present an application for execution of a decree obtained by the deceased. But such certificate, or a probate, or letters of administration, must be produced by the person proceeding as representative before a decree or order can be passed, or process of execution issued for payment of the debt due, except the Court should think that payment is withheld from fraudulent or vexatious motives, and not from any reasonable doubt as to the party entitled.

The effect of the provision in the note to Article 12, Schedule 1, of the Court Fees' Act (No. VII of 1870) on the operation of a certificate duly granted, which has become liable to cancellation under that provision, but has not been cancelled, considered. Govinda papp v. Kindappa Sa't Truler; Govinda papp v. Kyatadoo; Mattappapp v. Naganna, 6 Mad. Rep., 131.

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is opposed by a party claiming under a will, the Judge is bound to proceed under Section 3 of the Act, and determine which of the claimants is entitled to the certificate.

Where an applicant for a certificate is entitled to a share, the mere fact of the share being small will not debar her from getting a certificate entitling her to collect according to the share. Rasissisa Begun v. Rance Khugoorontissi, 10 W. R., 462.

The object of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is not to determine any question of heirship, but merely protects debtors of a deceased person from liability for payments made to a certificate-holder.

If it be found that such certificate-holder was not the rightful heir, the question of heirship may be tried in a regular suit, notwithstanding the grant of a certificate.

The certificate to collect debts should nevertheless ordinarily be granted to the person entitled to the inheritance. Mahomet Fouka v. Mahomet Bhugawan, 3 N. W. R., 326.

The certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is simply necessary to give to a person, claiming to be the representative of a deceased creditor, the right to institute a suit to recover a debt due to the estate of the deceased, or the right to present an application for execution of a decree obtained by the deceased. But such certificate, or a probate, or letters of administration, must be produced by the person proceeding as representative before a decree or order can be passed, or process of execution issued for payment of the debt due, except the Court should think that payment is withheld from fraudulent or vexatious motives, and not from any reasonable doubt as to the party entitled.
In cases where the right of inheritance really vests, the purchaser of the rights of a deceased judgment-debtor, whose representatives hold under a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, does not acquire the entire estate, but acquires its subject to all legal and equitable rights of inheritance. Sham Chunder Roy v. Yulmukh Ram Rundho, 14 S. W. R. C. R., 448.

A regular suit, and there was no evidence of the necessity of making admissions on points of fact. Yusoda Koonwar v. Gowree Byjnath Pershad, 6 W. R., 35.

Where the defect in the Judge's procedure had been cured by the widow appearing and opposing the application on its merits, Yusoda Koonwar v. Gowree Byjnath Pershad, 6 W. R., Mis., 53.

When applications are made for certificates under Act XXVII of 1860, a Judge should determine who is entitled, and should grant the certificate accordingly. He has no power to make an order in respect of the property of the deceased. Khajah Oheed Khan v. The Collector of Shahabad, 9 W. R., 502.

Where application is made for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, on the allegation that there are debts due to the estate of the deceased, and the allegation is not denied, the Court is bound to hear the petition. Fusi Moula v. Cholam Shurruff, 12 W. R., 505.

On an application for a certificate of administration under Act XXVII of 1860, when the applicant claimed as heir of the deceased and impugned his marriage, the Judge was bound to enquire summarily into the question of the marriage of the deceased and the consequent legitimacy of his children. Taylor v. Mussamut Nundu Jan W. R., 1864, Mis., 25.

When an application is made for a certificate for adjudication on a state of facts admitted by all parties through their pleaders, who also, by consent between themselves, submitted their view of the question of law to be decided on the Acts of 1841 and 1860. The questions so submitted were—(1) Did it appear on the evidence that there was a separation between A. and his nephew according to the Mitacksha doctrine? (2) If the evidence per se established a legal separation, was such separation negatived by certain admissions of A.? The Judge refused the application of the widow under Act XXVII of 1860, and granted possession to the nephew under Act XIX of 1841. The nephew was a man of substance, and able to bring a regular suit, and there was no evidence of possession by force or fraud on the part of the widow, the only question being her right according to the Mitacksha law.
under Act XXVII of 1860, the Judge, instead of considering the necessity or otherwise for a certificate, should ascertain whether the applicant or any one else is entitled to the certificate sought, and grant the same accordingly. Sheikh Mean Jan v. appellant, 5 W. R., Mis., 20.

Where an application is made for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the Judge, instead of enquiring whether any debts are due, and whether or not those debts are barred by limitation, ought simply to determine the right to the certificate; and if there be such a right, to grant the certificate. Kaleenath Dutt, 8 W. R., 12.

One E. K. obtained, on a stamp sufficient to cover Rs. 2,000 only, a certificate to collect the debts of her alleged father, H. B. The debts due to the estate having turned out to be larger than had been supposed, she applied for the cancelment of the first certificate, and the grant of a fresh one on a higher stamp. Meantime one B. represented to the Judge that she was the widow and sole heir of H. B., and that E. K. was in no way connected with the deceased, asking for an extended time to ascertain the grant of a certificate to herself. This application having been rejected, an appeal was preferred to the High Court, which was also dismissed. Before the decision of the appeal, B. intervened on E. K.'s second application, praying that orders might be stayed until the decision. The Judge refused to entertain B.'s petition, and returned it to her vakeel. An order was afterwards obtained from the High Court suspending the grant of the further certificate to E. K.

Held that, under the special and remarkable circumstances of this case, which called for the most careful examination and scrutiny, the Judge should have made enquiry into B.'s allegations, and if he had ascertained that they were correct, should have refused to grant to E. K. an extension of her certificate, and should have taken measures to have the parties who committed the fraud punished in the Criminal Court. Mussamut Bheekun v. Mussamut Elahee Khanam, 11 W. R., 153.

An application having been made by the widow of a deceased proprietor for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, on the ground that she was entitled in right of inheritance (her husband having separated himself from his brother, the objector), and a will also having been set up which gave her extensive rights over the estate, the Judge granted the application without going into the validity of the will. Held that, for the purposes of the Act, it was quite sufficient to decide the case upon the question whether the estates of the two brothers were joint and separate at the time of the death of the applicant's husband. Sookrach Bahadoor v. Jurinah Bibee, 11 W. R., 341.

Where N. applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect debts of M., who held property from one K. subject to certain trusts, and the application was opposed by one claiming to be the legal heir of the deceased, and alleging that the will was spurious, as well as the deed by which M. had held from K., Held that the only point to be determined, in order to the grant of the certificate, was the validity of the will. A party may by will appoint a stranger to succeed him in the trust of property, while his legal heir succeeds to his private property: the former in such a case would be entitled to collect debts due to him in his private capacity, and each may have a certificate granted to collect his respective debts. Daood Ally Beg v. Nadi Hossein, 11 W. R., 389.

A Hindu woman applied for a certificate of administration under Act XXVII of 1860 to the estate of her brother who had died seven years before, and whose property had since been in the possession of his so-called heir-at-law. The applicant alleged that, at the time of her brother's death, she was pregnant, and subsequently gave birth to a son, who died in infancy. As representative of that son, who was deceased's legal heir, she applied for the certificate. The Lower Court summarily rejected her application on the ground of lapse of time. Held that this was not a sufficient reason for rejecting the application, and that the Judge must proceed to an enquiry under the Act. Srimaty Doorgadasi Dabi v. Jadunaht Mookerjee, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 26.

One B. L. R., Ap., 26. as widow of A. and guardian, under a will of his minor son, obtained a certificate of administration under Section 3 of Act XL of 1858. C., another widow of B., subsequently applied for a certificate under Section 3 of Act XXVII of 1860. The Judge summarily rejected C.'s application, on the ground that the grant of a certificate to her would lead to confusion.

Held, on appeal, that the Judge ought to have issued notices and proceeded under Section 3 of Act XXVII of 1860. In the matter of Rani Raisunnissa Begum, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 129.

The objects of Acts XIX and XXVII of 1860 are so different that two cases under those Acts respectively cannot be decided entirely upon issues common to both. In this case, although the widow was bound by the mistaken consent of her Pledader to abide by the issues of law erroneously framed by the Judge,—Held that the Judge's error in drawing the issues gave this Court no jurisdiction to interfere with an order as to which, by Section 18, Act XIX of 1841, neither appeal nor revision was allowed. Jusoda Koonwar v. Baboo Goureer Bynumah Pershad, 6 W. R., Mis., 55.

The petitioner, a Hindu widow, applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 of her deceased husband's estate and stated in her petition that her husband possessed, at the time of his death, self-acquired property, besides the property he had inherited from his brother. The opposing parties set up a will of the deceased's father under which a certain share of the testator's estate was given to the petitioner's husband, and in the event of his death without children to his mother, and after her death to his brother. Held that it was not necessary for the purpose of the application to decide on the validity or otherwise of the will, as the widow was entitled to a certificate in respect of her husband's self-acquired property; and further that the will, which purported, in certain events, to give to the testator's widow that share of the property which he bequeathed to his son (the petitioner's husband), could not affect her claim to the certificate in respect of her husband's self-acquired property. Mussamut Khoodoomoney Diabe v. Mussamut Khoozum money Diabe.
ADMINISTRATION—CERTIFICATES.

Mussanmut Golosnkey Dahee, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 36.

Before granting a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, a Judge is not required to ascertain whether there are any debts due to the estate of the deceased. Shurut Chunder Mookerjee v. Tha-koormonoo Debha and others, 9 W. R., 240.

To entitle an applicant to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, it is not necessary for him to show that debts are actually due; it is sufficient if circumstances render it possible that debts may be due, or may accrue within the jurisdiction of the Court. Bamakally Dossee, appellant, 10 W. R., 4.

A suit to set aside a summary order passed under Act XXVII of 1860 may be brought within a year from the date of the order; but such order is no bar to a suit upon title, though brought after the year. Kalee Prosunoo Mookerjee v. Sreemooi Koylash Monte Debiit, 8 W. R., 126.

When a party claims a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 by reason of a will said to have been executed by the deceased, the Judge should decide upon the issue raised by him and say whether under the will he has a preferable right, instead of granting a certificate to the widow of the deceased upon her giving security to satisfy any claims which may be brought, should the will be roved to be a genuine document in a Civil Court. Uggut Chun, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 395.

A suit to set aside a summary order passed under Act XXVII of 1860 has been transferred by the High Court from the holder of a certificate to negotiate a Government, limited to particular debts. Pran Khan, petitioner, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 160.

Where security has been taken by an order of a District Judge under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect debts due to the estate of a deceased son, who had been allowed to draw his trust and guardianship have ceased. If he gives up his duties of his own accord he does so on his own responsibility, and the Court will not order him to act. Sambhoo Chunder Khan v. Ishan Chunder Banerjee, W. R., 1864, Mis., 24.

No appeal lies from an order of a District Judge refusing to grant a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860. Viskanath Hari et al., 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 71.

Where an application for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 has been transferred by the High Court, in the exercise of the power vested in it by Section 19 Act XVI of 1868, from the file of a Judge to that of a subordinate Judge, the order of the latter is appealable to the Court of the Zillah Judge, and only specially applicable to the High Court. Syud Fuzl Hassein v. Tupuduck Ali Khan, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 395.

Where, after a certificate has been granted under Act XXVII of 1860, an application is made by a party claiming to be the rightful heir, with a distinct allegation of fraud having been committed in obtaining the certificate, it is the duty of the Judge to call upon the opposite party to substantiate their allegation that the claimant is disqualified from inheriting. Khettar Monee Debee v. Mudhule Chunder Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 160.

Where a Judge, holding that the special title put forward by an objector had not been proved, decided that the widow of the deceased was best entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the decision was held to be correct, inasmuch as the Judge was not deciding upon the general right and title of the parties to the property, but under a special law for the collection of debts and for the protection of debtors. Protap Narain Doss, v. Poonoo Mathe Duye, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 415.

A Hindu widow holding a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect debts due to the estate of her deceased son, who had been allowed to draw interest on certain Government Promissory Notes, which, though entered in the certificate, stood apparently in the name of her late husband, having applied for authority to negotiate those Promissory Notes,— Held that she was bound to show how she got possession of those notes. Bidya Soonduree Dossee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 267.

Where security has been taken by an order of the High Court from the holder of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, a Zillah Judge is not competent of his own motion to release the money and give it back. If he thinks the time for doing so has arrived, it is for him to report the circumstances to the High Court for orders. Security taken from the holder of a certificate of administration should not be returned till the time allowed for an opposing claimant has expired. Gour Sun- dur Paray v. Kritso Kant Mahalon, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 108.

In a suit for arrears of rent, where plaintiff holds a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, and an intervenor appears under Section 77, Act X of 1859, the party who is in actual and bona-fide receipt of the rent is entitled to retain possession. Shank.

Act XXVII of 1860 does not contemplate a division of the certificate, or a power to collect fractional shares of debt. Mustamit Bebe Khodum v. Jan Khan, 13 W. N. R., C. R., 265.

An application by a daughter-in-law under Act XXVII of 1860 for a certificate as heiress, would be properly rejected upon the sole ground that the applicant was not the heiress.

If a Civil Court is proceeding under Section 8 of Act XXVII of 1860 to grant or has granted a certificate authorising a person to deal with Government Securities which are claimed by a third person as his property, that is a ground on which such third person may come into Court to oppose the grant of a certificate or to seek for its cancelment. Bandum Sethu v. Bandum Muha Lakshong, 4 Mad. Rep., 180.

A suit does not lie to annul a certificate for the collection of debts granted, under Act XXVII of 1860, the mode of proceeding provided by the Act being the only remedy. Payyaindu Avidatha Peringadi Ibravi v. Pudiamadatamel Peringadi Amanathe, 5 Mad. Rep., 283.

The provisions in the Code of Civil Procedure for review of judgment are not applicable to Act XXVII of 1860. Where the Civil Court granted a certificate under the Act to the petitioner, and subsequently made an order granting a certificate to the counter-petitioner, the High Court set aside the latter order. Sivu and others v. Chenamma and others, 5 Mad. Rep., 417.

A certificate of administration granted under Act XXVII of 1861 may be recalled, if it has been obtained by a false and fraudulent statement. In the matter of the petition of Bhabada Dusi, 8 B. L. R., Ap. 128, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 464.

Under Act XXVII of 1860, no question of title to any specific property can properly be tried. A party seeking to raise such a point should be referred to a regular suit. Shaikeh Imamun v. Must Nunnioo, 17 S. W. R. C. R., 193.

There is no appeal under Act XXVII of 1860 with reference to the amount of security which a Judge may think it right to demand from an applicant for a certificate under that Act. Raj Mehinee Chowdrain v. Dino Bundhoo Chowdry, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 566.

Held that the lower Appellate Court properly exercised its discretion in refusing to recall a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, because there was an heir in a nearer degree to the deceased than the person to whom the certificate was granted; the object of that Act being to give facilities to debtors and not to assist parties in establishing a disputed title of property. Kabur Chunder Bundoo v. Ram Kanayo Doss Biswas, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 174.

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 should be issued directly if it is granted, provided the proper stamp prescribed for such certificate be furnished. Dhunjut Singh Dougr v. Government, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 489.

An appeal will lie under Section 6 of Act XXVII of 1860, merely for the purpose of varying the Judge's order by reducing the amount of security required by him from the party declared entitled to have the certificate.

When an appeal has been properly instituted under Section 6, it has been ruled that the Court may alter or vary the Judge's order with respect to security. Musumut Soneea v. Ram Sakhi, 2 N. W. R., 146.

Where there are rival claimants for a certificate to collect the debts of a deceased person, the Judge has, under Section 3, Act XXVII of 1860, a discretion to present it to such person as, under the circumstances of the case, shall appear best entitled to it.

Quere.—Has he power, under the Act, to grant them a joint or separate certificate? Rani Raisunnissa Begum v. Rani Khijuunissa, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 149.

Act XXVII of 1860 does not provide for an adjudication of the rights of parties to succeed to property, or their actual title to it, its whole object being the security of debtors paying debts due to the estate of deceased persons. Sheikh Mohamed Ennoos v. Lalla Jamarad Lall, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 356.

5.—EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

The widow of a legatee of one-half of the residue and the bulk of considerable estate sues to set aside alienations made by the widow of one of three executors, acting as managers; her husband, the deceased executor, being legatee of one-sixth. The alienations were made pending a suit by the same plaintiff in the Supreme Court to administer the entire estate, and to expose defalcations and frauds of the managers and executors also, after an injunction issued in that suit prohibiting alienation. Alienations set aside.

N.B.—This was the general subject and character of the suit, but there are specialities here not detailed as to the doctrine of its pendens, &c. Ex-parte Nilmadhub Mundel and Nitrutan Mundel, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 169.

J. and M. were named executors of the will of H., who died in 1844. M. alone proved the will, but J. did not renounce probate until nine years after the death of H. and the commencement of litigation. The only act as an executor of H. proved against J. was that, in a deed executed by him for the conveyance of the share of H. in a certain estate in which J. was also interested in another capacity, he was described as executor of H., and the deed recited that probate had been granted to him. Held that he was by this reason, as well as on the ground of having an unfair advantage in respect of certain property in litigation, precluded from purchasing the interest of H.'s sons under a decree. Dhomedorus Chunder Mookerjee v. Motee Lali Mookerjee, Cor. Rep., 57.

When, in order to save an estate from sale in execution of a decree against the testator, his executor raised a loan from the plaintiff giving him a mortgage of the testator's property,—Held that even if the executor had funds to pay the plaintiff the debt without raising a loan, that fact would not invalidate the plaintiff's claim against the estate.
unless there was good reason to infer that he knew of those funds or might have known of them, if he had used ordinary diligence in making enquiries on the point. Katee Naranjil Roy Chowdhy v. Ram Coomar Chaudh, W. R., 1864, 90. An administrator holding a certificate under Section 7, Act XL of 1858, is not bound to file in Court periodical accounts of moneys realized and disbursed on account of the minor. Mussamut Sonkally Koowar, appellant, 6 W. R., Misc., 53. Although the executor defendants first gave orders for a third-class funeral for the deceased, yet, as they by their conduct induced the plaintiff to furnish a second-class funeral, they were held liable to pay for the same, whether they had assets or not. Without intending to rule that, in all cases, when an ordinary administration account has been directed, the value in money of a specific chattel on the estate, it is competent to the executor to prove them as having been made on other dates than those stated in the schedule and discharge. Ameeronissa, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

Where one son of a deceased party sued in the Recorder's Court another son who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, for his share of the deceased's estate, it was held that the Recorder had no power to transform the suit into a general administration suit. The Court may, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, order all necessary parties who claim a share in the subject-matter of the suit to be made parties. Oh Singide v. Auknifee, to W. R., 10.

Act XII of 1855 does not apply to wrongs which do not survive to the representatives of a deceased person. A widow who is the heir of her deceased husband is liable to make good the wrong committed by the husband. The plaintiff's right of suit does not abate by the death of the husband, but survives against his heir. Meevally Chunder Monee Dassey v. Santo Monee Dassey, 1 W. R., 411.

An executor holding the estate in trust to pay the profits in certain defined shares to the heirs and their representatives, could not plead adverse possession against them, so as to bar their claim by limitation. Ramee Khajoorunnissa v. Mussamut Kohemunnissa and others, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 190.

The testator by his will appointed his wife, guardian of his infant children, "in order that all his property she should carry on the management (until his youngest son should attain twenty-two years of age), and in the testator's name the management of his firm." He appointed his brothers, R. and M. his vakeels to settle any quarrel that might arise, and directed them not to give unjust advice; but should the vakeels give unjust advice, Hamabai was not to act upon it. Upon certain contingencies Hamabai and the vakeels were to separate, and make over to the sons their shares.

Held that Hamabai was by implication appointed sole executor, and that she alone, to the exclusion of the testator's brothers, was entitled to probate. Amaeronissa v. Ameeronissa, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 825.

In a suit brought against the representatives of a deceased Mahomedan, alleged to be in possession of his estate for recovery of the amounts of a bond-debt due by the deceased, the plaintiff should first be allowed to establish his right of suit against the estate, although the defendants plead that they possess no property belonging to the deceased to satisfy the claim. Such a plea, if established, is one to be regarded in framing the decree.

The decree in such a case should be for payment out of the property of the deceased. And ordinarily the Court should not direct payment of the costs by the defendants personally, but out of the estate. Maddho Ram v. Dilbur Muluk, 2 N. W. R., 449.

An administrator, under Section 7, Act XII of 1889, is entitled to recover the sums of money noted in the Court periodical. As to the funds of those estates, and the sums due thereon, section 7, Act XII, W. R., 27.

Although the Court may order an additional account, the orders for an additional account are made without prejudice to the ordinary orders for a periodical account. An additional account will be ordered, if the Court is satisfied that the defendant is liable to pay for the value of the goods in question, or if the defendant is liable to pay for the same account as his own account of the goods in question.

As to paying the discharge of the deceased's estate, the Court may order the discharge of the estate, or the discharge of the estate for the value of the goods in question.

An executor, under the provisions of the Act, is entitled to recover the profits in the account of the deceased, and not the profits in the account of the deceased's estate.

The estate of the deceased is treated as the estate of the deceased. Where one executor, under the provisions of the Act, is entitled to the discharge of the estate of the deceased, the court may order the discharge of the estate of the deceased, or the discharge of the estate of the deceased for the value of the goods in question.

An executor, under the provisions of the Act, is entitled to recover the profits in the

The plaintiff claimed under a will, and the subordinate Judge having found the will not bona-fide, ought to have decided the case on that issue only, instead of going into the other issues affecting the right of succession of the wife and sons of the testator. The judgment of the subordinate Judge was therefore declared conclusive as to the matter of the bona-fides of the will; and his award of one set of costs to all the defendants, although they appeared by separate vakels, was upheld, the defence being a common and not a separate one. The Rev. Francisco de Apis v. Louisa Des Auges, 17 S. W. R., C.
R., 188.

An unprivileged will will not be recognised by the Court and admitted to probate unless executed in accordance with the directions contained in Part VIII, Act X of 1865; such directions being imperative and not merely declaratory.

Held (reversing the decision of the Court below), that, on the true construction of the will, the stock in trade, &c., was not bequeathed to the wife for her sole and separate use independent of any future husband; her husband did not become a trustee for her in respect of such stock in trade or the profits of the business, and he was not bound to render an account. Ord v. Ord, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 53.

Where a testator has an ascertained domicile, the construction of his will must depend on the law of that domicile; but if no particular law is applicable, the will is to be interpreted by principles of natural justice.

In such cases, in applying the rules of Hindu,
Mahomedan, or English law to the wills of Hindus, Mahomedans, or East Indian Christians respectively, their particular habits and modes of life may be looked to as a guide to the interpretation.

From the context of the will and surrounding circumstances, "children" may be interpreted as illegitimate children.

Where by the will the income of estates was left to devisees for life, with a gift over of the corpus on their death, and a portion of the income, instead of being divided among the tenants-for-life, was applied to the purchase of other estates;—Held, these estates did not pass to the remaindermen, but formed the absolute property of the tenants-for-life, and passed to their devisees. Barlow v. Orde,
5 B. L. R., 1; 13 S. W. R., P. C., 41.

N. E. I., a Hebrew merchant, domiciled in Calcutta, and possessed of both real and personal property, died, leaving a will, by which, after appointing his mother, K. E. I., and his brother, I. E. I., executrix and executor thereof, and making various bequests and provisions, he made the following bequest of the residue of his property:—"And what may remain after payment of the above-mentioned sums, as well as the debts, shall remain under the control of my brothers, S. E. I. and I. E. I., for the purpose of defraying therewith the expenses for the year, and making charitable distributions as commanded, and giving alms for my spiritual benefit according to their judgment." Held, assuming that the High Court should act in conformity with the English Court of Chancery in carrying out charitable bequests, that, as far as the bequest related to giving of alms for the testator's spiritual benefit, it was void for uncertainty. The "defraying expenses and making charitable distribution," were limited by the bequest to the year within which the testator died.

Semble,—The English rule of law which prohibits the bequest of money for superstitious uses, has no application in India. Judah v. Judah,
5 B. L. R., 433.

A testatrix, after appointing certain persons to be executors of her will in respect of the whole of her property, directed that they should "take possession of the whole of her property, and keep the same under their protection;" that they should pay out of her estate the charges of interment, that they should repair four houses annually out of the income thereof, having let them out to hire, and after paying taxes and ground rent, divide the proceeds every three months between the testatrix's two sons; that the executors should not give the rents to the creditors, because the bequest of the income to the sons was "not an entire gift to them, but a mere provision for their support." The will proceeds as follows:—"Should my son M. happen to die before the decease of his wife, then I give the share of M. to his widow H. M., &c., and after the death of H. M., should my son M. not have left any legitimate male child, then I give the above share to my son J., &c. After the death of M. (and his wife), should he have left legitimate male children, such male children shall in the same manner receive the income once in every three months, till they attain the age of twenty-one years, and then the amount of their share shall be divided into equal portions, and each of them having become the owner of his portion shall receive the same from my executors; but if H. M. die before M., and M. die without having had legitimate male children, then I give and bequeath the shares of my son M. to my son J. as a provision for his support, &c. If my sons M. and J. die without having male issue, and if their wives, that is to say H. M. and C. J., die without having male issue begotten by my sons, then I give my garden, &c., actually and entirely to the sons and daughter of my daughter Goolsanum, begotten by her first husband, G. A., that is, to A. M. B. and N., or in case of their death, to their sons and daughters lawfully begotten, or to such of them as shall survive at the time. My said garden shall be divided into equal shares, and each of them having received his share in equal proportion as a legacy from me, shall enjoy the same.

M. and H. M., his wife, died without leaving any children; J. died in the lifetime of M. A., and one of the sons of Goolsanum died without leaving children in the lifetime of H. M. Held, first, that the direction to the executors to lease the property indefinitely, and out of the income to make repairs, the maintenance of the sons, was sufficient to vest the legal estate in the trustees.

Secondly, that such estate was an estate in fee.

Thirdly, that the children of Goolsanum took equitable estates in remainder in fee, defeasible in case of their death in the lifetime of the first taker for life, in which event there was substituted a devise to their children in fee.

Fourthly, that the children of Goolsanum took as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and therefore, that as there was nothing from which cross remainders between the children of Goolsanum could be implied, the share of A. reverted to the heir-at-law of the testatrix.

Fifthly, that wherever any estate in fee is devised to trustee in trust without any limitation of the estate of the cestui que trust, the latter takes the beneficial estate in fee. Shircore v. The Administrator-General, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S.

The scope and intent of wills when disputed must be decided and interpreted by Courts of Law, and not by admissions made by unadvised persons through third parties. Mary Pogose v. Mussamut Chamarine Bibe, W. R., 1864, 336.

Where there is an absolute bequest and power to executor to delay making over the legacy at discretion,—Held, that, on attaining majority, the legatee should at once be put in possession. D. J. de Silva v. M. D. de Silva, 1 Ind.Jur., N. S., 16; Bourke's Rep., O. C., 281.

A testator nominated A. B., &c., "to be executors and trustees of this my will, and eventually guardians of my dear children and estate, until such time as my children shall severally attain the age of 25 years, when I request the aforementioned gentlemen (my wife being dead), their heirs or executors, will divide, or cause to be divided, into shares agreeably to the number of our surviving children, giving to the boys two shares and to each of the girls one, or to their lawful issue or husband, the whole of my estate, each child to be put in possession of his or her share when they shall respectively attain the age of 25 years; and whenever either of my daughters shall enter into the holy state of matrimony, I request that a proper settlement may be made upon her and her children, and in the event of either of my children departing this life without leaving husband, wife, lineal descendants, or her or his share shall be divided equally amongst our other children or their lawful issue; but on no account shall any division of the principal of my estate take place till after the death of their mother."

Held (reversing the decision of Phear, J.) that after the mother's death, each child took a vested interest on attaining the age of 25 years,—that is, at the time when possession is to be given,—and not an interest subject to be divested in the event of the child dying without husband, wife, or lawful issue. Taylor v. Philott and others; Philott v. Morris and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 375.

A special case was stated for the opinion of the Court, as to whether S. M. took a vested interest in the sum of Rs. 6,325, under the following clause of will:—"I paid to the M. O. Soc. Rs. 6,000 for S. M., and invested Rs. 6,826, the interest on which I directed my trustees, after the death of the mother of S. M., to realise the latter sum and pay it to the M. O. Soc., for S. M., in terms of the regulations of the Society. Held that the bequest was prima facie for the benefit of the mother-at-law of the daughter."

That, having regard to the regulations of the M. O. Society, the bequest was a gift for the benefit of the society generally.

That if the will had given the mother the interest for life, instead of saying it had been given, it would have vested.

That the interest vested in S. M. at once, and formed part of her estate. In the matter of the goods of Susan Collins, deceased, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 104.

A testatrix bequeathed the interest of a Government Promissory Note to "The Calcutta Armenian Orphans' College Funds for the Relief and Enjoyment of the Poor Families, Widows, Orphans, and Schools of the Armenian Nation," to be received half-yearly by the wardens of the funds for the time being. Although there was a charity in Madras, called "The Armenian Orphans' College," there was none in Calcutta or elsewhere answering the description of the Calcutta Armenian Orphans' College, but there were two, and only two, charitable institutions in Calcutta which provided for the relief and enjoyment of the poor families, widows, orphans, and schools of the Armenian nation. Of these, one, the Church of St. Nazareth, distributed money amongst, and gave relief to, the poor families, widows, and orphans of the Armenian community; and the other, the Armenian Philanthropic Academy, educated gratuitously the poor and orphans of the same community. The note was invested by order of the Court; and there had been a large accumulation of interest thereon. The governors of the two institutions concurred in asking that each should receive a moiety of the accrued and future interest of the fund. Held that the cyprés doctrine should receive a moiety of the accumulated fund should be paid half-yearly, of the two institutions concurred in asking that each of the same community.

A testator after providing for payment of debts, &c., directed that the whole of his property should be disposed of and the proceeds placed in the Oriental Bank, with power to the executors to invest the same in mortgages, and to leave existing mortgages untouched. The will then contained this direction: “That a monthly stipend of Rs. 15 be paid to my daughter E. S. for her own benefit, and Rs. 20 for the benefit of her two children (during their minority), and in the event of the demise of any of the said children occurring, the sum of Rs. 10 to cease rateably as being the allowance for each child. That on each of the children attaining their age of majority, I request that my executors pay to each of them severally and proportionally the full amount of interest accruing from my estate (the existing provision for my two daughters to continue during their natural life), and after their demise the said interest in like manner to revert to their heir or heirs in succession.”

Held, first, that a direction to pay a monthly stipend to E. S. and M. D. respectively is simply a charge upon the testator’s estate to pay the said stipends to E. S. and M. D. for their respective lives.

Secondly, that E. S. and M. D. were severally entitled during the life-time and minority of their children. A charge of a monthly stipend of ten rupees in respect of each child, such sum to cease on the death of each child or on its attaining majority, till which latter event the said children take no interest under this will.

Thirdly, each child upon attaining its majority will take a share of the residue, proportioned to the number of children then living, and a contingent proportionate interest in the shares of each of the other children, which would become vested on the death of each one dying under twenty.

Fourthly, the limitation of the gift “during their natural life and after their demise, the said interest in like manner to revert to their heir or heirs in succession,” does not prevent the children from taking their several shares absolutely under the will.

A deed of gift such as a tumleek namah, executed at a time when the grantor was labouring under a sickness from which she never recovered, can only operate as a will. A. recovered from the fever, but died suddenly a year later, without having made any other testamentary dispositions of his property. The case was brought by B. as executor of A., according to the tenor of these documents, against the widow of A., for the purpose of having probate of them granted to him as of the will of the deceased.—Held (reversing the judgment of Macpherson, J.) that the documents were only intended to have a testamentary effect in the event of A.’s having died of the sickness he was suffering from at the time of writing, and therefore probate which had been granted by the Court at the original hearing was ordered to be brought in and cancelled. Sreemutta Kameenu Dassee v. Bissornath Gosee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 6.

Probates may be granted of the will of a Bhuddist made after the 1st January, 1866. It is not necessary that the will of a Bhuddist should be executed according to the formalities required by the ADMINISTRATION—PROBATES.

Letters of administration, with copy of will annexed, may be equivalent to probate, but neither is of itself sufficient to prove a will, the genuineness of which is contested. Ten Couries Dosses and others v. Hurzeher Mookerjee, 8 W. R., 308.

The High Court cannot compel a native to prove a will in solemn form, unless he have applied for probate, and thus submitted himself to the jurisdiction. Tiruvalur Kirustappa Mudali, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 59.

In the case of a British-born subject dying and leaving assets in Moulmein, but no assets in Calcutta, and a will dated 5th August, 1865, before Act X of 1865 came into effect,—Held that the executrix could not obtain probate or letters of administration, with will annexed, from the High Court in Bengal. *E. The High Court will grant probate of wills of British European-born subjects who have no assets within the local limit of the ordinary civil jurisdiction of the Court. In the goods of Reed, deceased, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 20.

Where a Hindu testator died out of the jurisdiction of the Court, but left effects within it, it was competent to the Court to grant probate, there having been no certificate applied for in the Zillah Court under Act XXVII of 1860. In the goods of Tarachand Coondoo Chowdhry, deceased, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S. 10; 1 Bourke's Rep. Test., 3.

The stamp requisite for an application for a probate of a will, or letters of administration, is not required to be proportionate to the value of the property involved, as such applications come under the provisions made in Article 1, Schedule 2, Act VII of 1870, for common applications and petitions. Indoomanth Sadhookhein, In the matter of, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 40.

A person who is not the next of kin, and who has no interest in the estate of a testator, has no right to oppose the grant of the probate or dispute the validity of the will. In the matter of Moe Tsee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 351.

A grant of probate of a will is not in the nature of a summary proceeding to be contested by a regular suit in the Civil Court. The grant must be contested by a suit in the Court out of which such grant issued, and it must be contested before the Court sitting as a Court of Probate, and not in the exercise of its ordinary civil jurisdiction.

Persons who seek to contest a will must prove an interest to entitle them to a locus standi in Court, but the want of interest is an objection which should be taken at the earliest stage of the proceedings. There is nothing in the Indian Succession Act to deprive a district Court, as a Court of Probate, of jurisdiction to hear and determine an application to revoke grant of probate of a will on the ground of the execution of such will having been obtained by force and coercion.

Semple,—That a legatee under a will has “an interest” sufficient to maintain a suit for the revocation of probate. Mayho v. Williams, 2 N. W. R., 268.

ARBITRATION.

1. REFERENCES IN SUITS .................. 15

When a suit is referred to arbitration, the order of reference should provide for the appointment of an umpire in case of any difference of opinion among the arbitrators, and should declare that the decision shall be with the majority.

When once a matter is referred to arbitration it can never again be dealt with by the Court, unless the reference be fruitless, in which case the suit may be brought back on the file of the Court without any reference to the arbitration proceedings.

In a suit in which plaintiffs claimed a 6-annas share of certain land belonging to a mouzah, it was found on measurement that 262 beegahs of the land claimed belonged to that talook. Pending the suit, all the defendants except one (O.) agreed to a reference to arbitration, upon which it was found that 44 beegahs, in addition to the 262, belonged to the plaintiffs.

Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover as against all the defendants, including O., a 6-annas share in 262 beegahs; and as against all, except O., a 6-annas share in the 44 beegahs awarded by the arbitrators. Dooragchurn Thakoor and others v. Kally Doss Hazrah and others, 10 W. R., 463.

The Judge intimated that he should refer the suit to arbitration, and allowed a certain time to the parties to object to that course. No objection was made within such time, and thereupon the Judge referred the cause to arbitrators named by him. Futteh Singh v. Gango, 4 W. R., 4.

The Code gives no power to a Court to enforce arbitrators on an unwilling suitor. The award of arbitrators so appointed will not be enforced. Shonath, alias Byrnat Kala v. Ramnath, alias Chotay Kala, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 161.

An arbitration on behalf of an absent plaintiff is not allowable without special authority. Goor Chunder Pututundee v. Joogul Chunder, alias Shama Churn, 1 W. R., 80.

The application for a reference to arbitration must be made in Court by an instrument in writing by the parties in person, or their Pleaders specially authorized in that behalf. Bhrigoo Roy v. Bhogratth Upadhyia, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 41.

Before a Judge refers a case for arbitration he should ascertain whether the persons nominated are willing to accept the office, and till he has done so any nomination of an arbitrator by him, without the application or consent of the parties, is illegal. But when a case has once been referred to arbitration, after the preliminary steps have been properly taken, the Judge has the sole power of appointing fresh arbitrators in the room of such as refuse to act. Troyluckhonath Roy v. The Collector of Beerbhoom; Lockenath Roy v. The Collector of Beerbhoom; Hieronath Roy v. Kasheenal Roy, W. R., 1864, 388.

An order of reference to arbitration should provide for difference of opinion among the arbitrators and for authorizing a majority to decide the case. Futtch Singh v. Gango, 4 W. R., 4.

An application for arbitration, as provided by Section 313, Act VIII of 1853, is wholly invalid unless made by all the parties materially interested. Bycunt Nath Chatterjee v. Sheikh Nazeroadeen and others, 10 W. R., 171.

Section 313, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply to a reference to arbitration made at the hearing of a cause. Jeyasanker Davoy v. Nagananda Davoy 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 736.

Where reference to arbitration was made by Mooktears of the parties without holding special authority for that purpose as provided by law (Section 313, Act VIII of 1859) from their clients respectively,—Held that such reference to arbitration, being unauthorized and illegal, was not sufficient to remove the bar of limitation under the Presidents of the late Sudder Court. Shunker v. Hur Narain, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 49.

Held that a Mooktuar in a Revenue Court must be empowered by an instrument in writing to refer the matter in dispute to arbitration in the same way as a Pleader in a regular suit—Chapter VI, of the Civil Procedure Code being made applicable to suits under Act X by Section 14 of Act XIV of 1863. Ram Pershad v. Nasser Hossein, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 63.

Act VIII of 1859, Section 313, does not apply when a reference to arbitration is agreed to at and during the hearing. Jeyasankir Devi v. Naganada Debi, 1 Mad. Rep., 106.
Where both parties could not agree in nominating an arbitrator, and the Judge nominated one under Section 314, Act VIII of 1859, and one of the parties, six weeks after the nomination, objected to the Judge's nominee, but could not show on appeal that he did not request the Judge to nominate some one, the appointment was held good and binding upon both parties.

When an application for reference to arbitration is made in open Court at or during the final hearing of a suit, in the presence of all parties, and they consent thereto, a written authority, such as that referred to in Section 313 of Act VIII of 1859, seems not to be required.

Quere,—Does Act X of 1859 empower a Judge to refer a case to arbitration?

In referring a matter to arbitration, all the parties to the suit must accord their written consent; the consent of the Pleaders is not sufficient.

A suit having been referred to arbitration, was dismissed by the arbitrators for default; whereupon the plaintiff objected to the award and charged the arbitrators with collusion. The Judge, finding that the charge was not made out, referred the matter back to the arbitrators for a proper award.

Held that the plaintiff's revocation of his consent to the reference did not put an end to the arbitrators' power.

Whatever matters parties to a suit may agree to refer to arbitration, they can refer such matters, or any of such matters, as are in difference between them in the suit; and the Court in passing judgment on the arbitration award, must confine itself to the plaintiff's claim and give a decision thereon.

There is nothing in Act VIII of 1859 to prevent parties, who have a suit pending in Court from submitting the subject matter of that suit and other matters in dispute to arbitration under Section 327.

Where an application for reference to arbitration is made in open Court at or during the final hearing of a suit, in the presence of all parties, and they consent thereto, a written authority, such as that referred to in Section 313 of Act VIII of 1859, seems not to be required.

Section 326 of the Civil Procedure Code makes all submission to arbitration by an instrument in writing practically a rule of Court.

The Courts will not interfere to enforce performance of an award made under a submission to arbitration entered into by a few persons, without the consent of the entire community, in respect of a religious quarrel relating to a state of things which has been in force at a mosque for fifty years, by the common consent of all the worshippers having an interest therein.

A party, by appearing before arbitrators, unless both parties agree, the provision of Section 319 being not obligatory, but simply permissive.

Held further that, under such circumstances, the refusal on the part of one party to nominate other arbitrators does not amount to a withdrawal from the agreement to proceed to arbitration.

Either of the parties in a reference to arbitration may withdraw from the proceedings at any time previous to the making of the award, unless the submission to arbitration has been made a rule of Court under Section 326 of the Civil Procedure Code.

A revocation by deed can set aside a deed by which a person binds himself to abide by the decision of arbitrators.

Section 326 of the Civil Procedure Code makes all submission to arbitration by an instrument in writing practically a rule of Court.

Where both the parties agree to an arbitral settlement under Section 9 of the Arbitration Act, 1940, the parties submit the matter to the arbitrator. The arbitrator makes a decision which is binding upon both parties.

When an arbitral award made in operation of a suit is not binding upon both parties, the suit may be referred to the suit not binding upon the plain. When an arbitral award in a suit is made in operation of a suit in which the parties have consented to refer the matter to the arbitrator, the arbitrator's award is binding upon both parties.

Either of the parties in a reference to arbitration may withdraw from the proceedings at any time previous to the making of the award, unless the submission to arbitration has been made a rule of Court under Section 326 of the Civil Procedure Code. Allen Aiyappa v. Nundula Peraya, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 82.

No appeal lies from an order directing that an agreement to submit matters in dispute to arbitration should be filed under the provisions of Section 326 of the Procedure Code. The fact of one of the parties to the agreement revoking his submission is not a sufficient "cause" within the meaning of that Section. Pestonjee Mussuerwanjee v. D. Manockjee, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 183.

An arbitrator has full power to retract his resignation of office before it is accepted. Maharajah Jay Mungh Singh v. Mohun Ram Marwaeer, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 38.

According to the proper construction of the Code of Civil Procedure (that is to say, construing it with reference to the constitution of the Civil Courts of India and the abiding direction to them to proceed in all cases according to equity and good conscience), when persons have agreed to submit the matter in difference between them to the arbitration of one or more specified persons, no party to the agreement can revoke the submission to arbitration, unless for good cause, and a mere arbitrary revocation of the authority is not permitted. Where no time was originally fixed within which the award was to be made, it is open to either party to hasten the proceedings by giving notice to the arbitrators that the award must be made, and an umpire appointed, within a reasonable time, but where the time elapses after the notice has been actively employed by the arbitrators, and the delay has been owing to necessity which they could not control, the parties cannot recede from their submission by reason of that notice. Pestonjee Mussuerwanjee v. D. Manockjee and Co., 10 W. R., P. C., 51.

4.—POWERS AND DUTIES OF ARBITRATORS.

An arbitrator has no right to allow documents entrusted to him by the Court to be removed from the netheuce by any one; and when an award is returned to Court after remittal it should be accompanied by all books, exhibits, and proceedings pertaining to it. Maharajah Sir Mangul Singh v. Mohun Ram Manawareer, 12 W. R., 398.

Arbitrators ought only to take such evidence as is required by the terms of the agreement, referring the question in dispute to arbitration. Krishnakanta Forammack v. Bidya Sundaree Dassi, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 25.

Where by an order of reference made pending a suit, all matters in difference between the parties are referred to an arbitrator by the Court under Act VIII of 1859, section 317 et seq., the arbitrator has power to deal with the costs of the suit. Muddoosoodun Choudry v. Koylas Chunder Shaw; Koylas Chunder Shaw v. Muddoosoodun Choudhry, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 12.

A suit was, by order of Court, referred to three specified arbitrators, who were to make an award within six months, and, in case of difference of opinion, all matters in dispute were to be referred to the decision of an umpire. The arbitrators had only one meeting, at which an agreement was come to by the parties to settle all matters in dispute among themselves, and withdraw the matters from arbitration, which was accordingly done, but nothing appeared to have been afterwards done. No award was made by the original arbitrators within six months from the reference. On application by the plaintiff to have the suit restored to the file of the Court. Held, that the suit was still pending, the arbitrators not having determined it while they had jurisdiction to do so, and it was ordered that it should be brought again before the Court. Gopinath Nundy v. Shib Chundru Nundy, 6 B. L. R. Ap., 74.

An award directed that the defendant should pay the costs of the suit, and of the reference, and of the award, without fixing the scale. On application to the Court to do so, the case was sent back to the arbitrator for that purpose. Held that, when the order of reference gives the arbitrator full discretion over costs, he alone can fix the scale. Barrut Chunder Doss v. Damjee Pittumber, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 7; S. C., 1 Cor. Rep., 150.

Where all matters in difference between the parties in the suit were referred to arbitration under an order of Court,—Held that the arbitrators had power to award interest after the date of the submission, and to deal with the costs of the reference and award. Mohun Lall v. Nathu Ram, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 144.

Arbitrators should give separate awards in a case referred to them by the Judge, and on other matters referred to them by the parties, instead of mixing them all up and giving a general award. Roghoon Nundund Lall Sahoo v. Bunwaree Lall Sahoo, 3 W. R., Mis., 27.

The time for delivery of an arbitration award may be extended at the discretion of the Court.

The refusal of arbitrators to amend a clearly bad award is misconduct under Section 324, Act VIII of 1859. Deb Narain Singh v. Rajmonoe Koonwar, 3 W. R., 168.

The neglect of some of the arbitrators to attend meetings of the arbitrators is misconduct within the meaning of Section 324, justifying the setting aside of the award by the Court which appointed the arbitrators, but not by a Court of Appeal. Sreenath Ghose v. Rajchunder Paul and others, 8 W. R., 171.

An award is not reversible, unless the provisions of Section 324, Act VIII of 1852 apply. Apply. An arbitrator is not bound by technical rules of Court.

An award made by private submission may be valid and binding though no proceedings under Section 327, Act VIII of 1859, have been taken to enforce it.

It is almost an universal rule that a submission to arbitration is revocable before award made.

Where several arbitrators are appointed, and the parties do not agree to be bound by the act of the majority, the award, in order to be valid and binding, must be concurred in and executed by all the arbitrators.

Arbitrators have no power to delegate their authority to others. Thus, if some of the arbitrators are absent, those present cannot appoint others in their stead. Baboo Surajebet Narain Singh v. Baboo Gooree Narain Singh, 7 W. R., 269.

The decision of arbitrators in a matter not in difference between the parties, nor referred to them, is null and void for want of jurisdiction. Mushukel Singh v. Konumuti Beura, 15 S. W. R., C. R. 172.

By an order of Court, of January 17, 1867, a suit was referred to two arbitrators, under section 312, Act VIII of 1859, who were to make their award in writing, and submit the same to the Court within three months. No order for enlarging that time was made. The first meeting of the arbitrators was held on May 22nd, 1867, and four subsequent meetings were held, at which all the parties attended, and evidence was taken; at the last of which meetings, namely, on 27th July, an objection for the first time was taken on behalf of the defendant that the time limited by the order of reference had expired, but the arbitrators proceeded with the reference.

The award was made on the 12th August, 1867, and remained with one of the arbitrators until his death in August, 1868. Subsequently it was produced by the other arbitrator, on the application of the parties to the suit, and delivered to the successful party, by whom it was brought into Court on the 10th May, 1870, and judgment was moved for in accordance therewith. Held, that the arbitrators had authority to make the award. The award was referred to two arbitrators, under section 312, an award was properly submitted to the Court. Section 320, is not necessary to the completion of an award under sections 315 and 318.

Although an arbitrator may deliver his award to one of the parties, he ought not to hand over with it the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits. S. M. Jagat Sunder Dusi v. Samtan By Suk, 5 B. L. R., 357.

5.—Award.

If a person was in fit condition to manage his affairs down to the time when the proceedings before an arbitrator in which he was interested were substantially concluded, the award will not be invalidated by reason of the person having become insane before (the final publication of the award. Gourenath and another v. The Collector of Monghyr and another, 7 W. R., 5.

In a suit pending before arbitrators, an appellant who is a co-plaintiff on application, and makes no objection to the arbitration, is bound by the award. Shitilath Biswas v. Kishen Mohun Mookerje, 5 W. R., 130.

Where in a suit to recover a sum of money on an award, the five arbitrators came to a decision, and made, dated, and signed a rough draft of their award, and the defendant then withdrew from the submission, and a fair copy was then made, bearing the same date as that of the rough draft, but signed by only four of the arbitrators,—Held that the award was complete at the date of the rough draft, and that its validity was not affected by the subsequent occurrences. The validity of an award cannot be impeached because the arbitrators after-wards do an act required neither by the law nor by the terms of the submission. Kula Nagabushnam v. Kulasekhashchalam, 1 Mad. Rep., 178.

Where parties do not give their consent to the appointment of arbitrators and the judgment proceeds on the arbitration award, the decree is not binding on those parties. Where four arbitrators had been appointed and only two acted, the award was held to be invalid. Rask Beharee Roy v. Dooragadur Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 211.

Held that the parties, having signed the award of arbitration, must be bound by that until it is legally set aside, and the plaintiff's suit to enforce his right, irrespective of the award, was not maintainable. Golam Ali Khan v. Imam Ali Khan and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 224.

Held that the award made by one of the arbitrators, and the umpire in the absence of a second arbitrator who declined to attend, is not a valid award. Busunt Rai v. Girdharche Singh, 3 Agra Rep., 93.

An award of arbitrators, to be legal, must be completed and signed by each in the presence of the whole of them. In the petition of Maharajah Sir Jai Mangul Singh Bahadur, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 82; S. C., 11 W. R., 433.

Where no time is fixed for sending in an award in the order of Court referring a case to arbitration, the award itself falls to the ground. Gungabohind Nook and others v. Kally Prosone Nook and others, 10 W. R., 206.

Quere,—What is the effect of an award arrived at in a pending suit which was referred to arbitration by an order of Court otherwise than by consent of all the parties? Doorga Churu Thakoor and others v. Kally Doss Hazrah and others, 10 W. R., 463.

Held that a verbal order of the Magistrate under Act IV of 1840 cannot be regarded as an order or award within the meaning of the term of Clause 7, Act XIV of 1859. Hakeem Gunga Pershad v. Moulvoe Mahomed Kooloo Alum, 2 Agra Rep., 27.

An award made by the consent of the parties cannot be set aside merely by reason of its having been sent in a week later than the date appointed, when such delay is not owing to misconduct or corruption. Held further that, when an award has been made, no plea of jurisdiction on limitation can be raised before the Court which is to pass its decree according to the award. Ameen Chun v. Mendhoo Khan, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 53.

An award of survey authorities adopting an Act IV order is not illegal, and consequently governed by limitation under Act XIII of 1848. Ramgutty Nag Chowdhry v. Burodachurn Bose, 1 W. R., 120.

An award under Act IV of 1840 does not relieve a party of the obligation to prove his right and title, when sued by a person acting as a trespasser. Byodonath Sorbhan v. Kenaoram Holdar, 1 W. R., 211.

An award by a survey Court cannot over-ride the decree of a competent Court. Shambkat Banerjee v. Gopal Lall Tagore, 1 W. R., 328.

An award is illegal for more than is claimed. Luhnt Narain Singh v. Narain Singh, 1 W. R., 333.

A liability arising under an award is not one of such a nature as to fall within the terms used in the Small Cause Court Act to denote the claims cognizable by such Court.

An award should be construed, not by oral evidence given by the arbitrators, but by looking at the language of the award itself. Müzumut Guneşhî v. Chtay Lal, 3 N. W. R., 117.

Where, on a reference to arbitration, the case had been regularly heard by all the arbitrators sitting together, and an award been drawn up and signed by them, the mere omission of the arbitrators to sign the award at the same time and in each other's presence does not invalidate the award. Bhubanandari Dasi v. Makhun Lal Dey, 8 B. L. R., 128.

6.—PROCEDURE AFTER AWARD.

A case remanded by the High Court was referred by the Zillah Judge to two arbitrators, who went fully into the matter in dispute, and wrote and signed as their award separate papers, bearing different dates, which were filed in Court. The defendant then filed a petition of objections, after which the Judge returned the papers to the arbitrators, with an order that they should sign their award conjointly in a form which he prescribed. The award having been submitted, the Judge took up and disposed of the objections previously made, making a decree in accordance with the award. Held that the objections made to the two papers were not objections to the award, and that under Section 325 the Judge had no power to pass judgment till all objections to the award had been finally disposed of, or within ten days after the submission of the award. Maharajas Sir Mungul Singh v. Mohun Ram Marwarie and others, 12 W. R., 398.

Where matters in dispute are referred to arbitration, and it is found that one question at issue is omitted from the reference, and that the award returned by the arbitrators contains no decision thereon, the party interested should bring the omission to the notice of the Court. If he fails to do so, the Court is not wrong in not passing any order or coming to any decision on that point. Raj Naruni Roy v. Juggesur Mookerjee, 14 S. W. R. C. R., 247.

A case having been referred to arbitration without provision being made for a difference of opinion, and the arbitrators having given in differing awards, the Court of first instance tried the case anew, and dismissed the suit. This decision was confirmed on appeal. In special appeal the plaintiff asked that the case might be sent back to the arbitrators with a provision for difference of opinion, and that they might submit their award a second time. Held that it was too late at this stage to allow such a course. Thakoob Dass Chuckerbutty v. Ram Jeobun Chuckerbutty, 14 S. W. R. C. R., 150.

The procedure provided in Section 327 is not imperative upon a plaintiff who seeks to enforce an award made without the intervention of a Court of Justice. Palasniyapa Chetti v. Rayappie Chetti 4 Mad., Rep., 119.

Where plaintiff applied that a private award by arbitrators might be enforced, and the first Court gave judgment in exact accordance with the award, it was held that that judgment was final, and that the lower Appellate Court acted without jurisdiction in entertaining an appeal therefrom. Modooosoodhun Doss v. Odailo Churn Doss, 12 W. R., 85.

No appeal lies from an order rejecting an application to file an award (Mitter, J., dubitante).

Where the application was considered as a regular suit, the Judge was right in decreing costs in a regular suit. Roy Priyanath Chowdhry v. Prasen-nochunder Roy Chowdhry, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 249.

A judgment of a Court given in accordance with an award of arbitration is final, even if there has been corruption and misconduct on the part of the arbitrators. Ramanogra Choby v. Mussanant Putmoota Chobegan, 7 W. R., 205.

An arbitration award as to division of property left to minor sons alleged to give effect to the wishes of a father regarding a partial division of his property after his death, was set aside, so far as it affected those sons, on proof that the partition was injurious to them. Ramnarain Ramchand v. Manmoh Pandy, 101 Cal., 305.

Held that the plaintiff having failed to set aside an award made by the Criminal Court, under Act IV of 1840, within the limitation period, his claim not in opposition to that award was not maintainable. Mohunt Gopal Nath v. Abdool Ghanee, Agra Rep., A. C., 120.

There is no appeal from a judgment given according to an award of arbitrators, even if there has been corruption and misconduct on their part. Sreenath Ghose v. Rajchunder Paul and others, A. C., 280.

Where a Court's order declining to pass sentence according to an arbitration award is reversed in appeal, the lower Appellate Court's order is open to special appeal. Section 325 applies only to the Court which refers a case to arbitrators. Pureshnath Dey v. Nobin Dutt, 12 W. R., 93.

An award of arbitration cannot be enforced unless the application for enforcement is made within six months from the date of award. Bhyrub Jha v. Hunooaum Dutt Jha, 5 W. R., 123.

An appeal lies from the order of a Court directing the enforcement of an award of arbitrators, when the matter was referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court. Anud Chunder Singh v. Gopal Chunder Dow, 3 W. R., 154.

An appeal lies from a judgment given on an arbitration award, on the ground that the judgment is contrary to the award. Narain Singh v. Rajmonee Koonaw, 3 W. R., 168.

The Court which refers a matter to arbitration cannot sit in appeal from the decision of the arbitrators; nor has a lower Appellate Court jurisdiction to go into the merits of the case. Harad-hun Dutt v. Radhanath Shaha and others, 10 W. N. S., C., 2 B. L. R., N. S., 14.

A Court has every power to look into the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits submitted by arbitrators under Section 320, Act VIII of 1859, and if satisfied that the award is of such a character as to raise a reasonable presumption of misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, it may set aside the award. Puresh Nath Dey v. Nobinchunder Dutt, 12 W. R., 93.

A case remanded by the High Court was referred by the Zillah Judge to two arbitrators, who went fully into the matters in dispute, and wrote and signed, as their award, separate papers bearing different dates, which were filed in Court. The defendant than filed a petition of objections, after which the Judge returned the papers to the arbitrators, with an order that they should sign their award conjointly in a form which he prescribed. The award having been submitted, the Judge took up and disposed of the objections previously made, making a decree in accordance with the award. Held that the two papers originally sent in were not an award, which, under Section 320, Act VIII of 1859, should be considered as a single instrument complete in itself; and that the Judge was right in sending back the papers directing the arbitrators to sign their award conjointly and in the presence of each other. Maharajaj Sir Joynangul Singh v. Mohun Ram Marwarce and others, 12 W. R., 397.

An application that an award be remitted to the arbitrators, in order that the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits in the suit which have not been submitted with it to the Court under Act VIII of 1859, Section 320, should be considered, ought to be made within ten days after the award has been originally submitted; otherwise, if the award be good on the face of it, the Court will give judgment upon it. Banay Madhub Roy v. Hurry Mohun Roy, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 16.

Section 323, Act VIII of 1859, authorises a Court which refers a case to arbitrators to remand it to them for reconsideration when their award contains mistakes, omissions, or defects which cannot be amended by the Court under Section 322. Such award, on the refusal of the arbitrators to reconsider it, becomes null and void, without proof of corruption or misconduct under Section 324. Mohun Kishen and others v. Bhooobun Shyaim and others, 7 W. R., 406.

Where by the terms of a reference to arbitration all matters in difference are referred to the arbitrator, the Court will not modify (Section 322), remit (Section 323), or set aside (Section 324) the award, on the ground that the arbitrator in his discretion has awarded damages to the plaintiff, and at the same time make him pay all the costs, when it is not shown that he exercised the discretion given him improperly. Mohendranath Bose v. Nicsser Mangee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 224.

In an application to set aside an order made by a Judge in chambers, extending the time (of ten days) for making an application under Section 324 of Act VIII of 1859 to set aside an award on the ground of misconduct of one of the arbitrators and of the umpire,—Held that the words of the section being in their ordinary import obligatory, and there being nothing in the other parts of Code to show that such construction was at variance with the intention of the Legislature, and a similar provision having been held by the Courts in England to be imperative that the application to set aside the award must be made within the ten days, provided the Court be then sitting, and if not, on the first day of its sitting after that time, and that there is no power to enlarge the time to make such application. Edulji Shaporji v. Tulsidas Sundaradas, 2 Bom. Rep., 285.

An application to set aside, under Section 324 of Act VIII of 1859, must be made within ten days after the award has been submitted to the Court. The words of the Act are imperative. Edulji Shaporji and others v. Tulsidas Sundaradas, 1 Ind. Jur. N. S., 234.

It is no ground to set aside an award of arbitrators, under Section 324, Act VIII of 1859, that the arbitrators decided the case against the written statement of the defendant. Gooroo Churn Dey and others v. Ramdhone Paul and others, 7 W. R., 28.

An appeal lies from an order enforcing execution of an arbitration award, or from a decree under Section 325 of Act VIII of 1859. Where the appeal was brought on an insufficient stamp, the appeal was dismissed without prejudice to the appellant bringing a fresh appeal within 20 days on a full stamp. See Vali Alam v. Biboo Nisran, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 104; S. C., 12 W. R., 56.

A judgment in accordance with an arbitration award is, under the express terms of Section 325, Act VIII of 1859, final, if the reference to arbitration has been conducted pursuant to the provisions of the Code. And where the matter in dispute in a suit was referred to arbitration, and the provisions of Act VIII were not strictly complied with, -Held nevertheless that, as the appellants had consented to the arbitration and to the appointment of arbitrators, and took part in the proceedings, and after having made objections to the award (which objections were considered by the arbitrators), they assented to the award, the Principal Sudder Ameen was justified in passing a judgment in accordance with the award, and that the High Court would not interfere with that judgment. Missar Datta Kishun and others v. Missar Bhagwan Das, 3 Agra Rep., 199.

An order rejecting an application to file an award under Section 327, Act VIII of 1859, is not a decree, and is therefore not appealable. Baboo Chintammun Singh v. Roopa Koorer, 6 W. R., Mis., 83.

An application was made, under Section 327 of Act VIII of 1859, to file an arbitration award, and the Court, after calling on the opposite party to show cause why it should not be filed, rejected the application. Held that the case did not come within the meaning of Section 325, and that the order being simply one of rejecting an application to file an award was final. Raj Kumar Singh v. Kalichurn Singh, 2 B. L. R., App., 20.

An application to file an award under Section 327 of Act VIII of 1859 should be made to the Court of the lowest grade competent to receive it, and no appeal lies to High Court from an order by a District Court confirming an appeal of a subordinate Court declining to file such an award. Ex parte Balkrishna Bhasakar Gupte, 2 Bom. Rep., 96.

An order refusing to enforce an obviously illegal award of arbitrators under Section 327, Act VIII of 1859, is not a decree, and therefore not appealable. Digambori Dassia v. Poorna Chand Dey and others, 7 W. R., 401.

Following a Full Bench Decision, 6 W. R., Mis., 83 (from which Dwarkanath Mitter, J., dissented), it was held that no appeal lies from an order of a lower Court rejecting an application for filing an award under Section 327, Act VIII of 1859, even though the order awards costs. Pronath Chowdhry v. Ramdhun and others, 11 W. R., 104.

An appeal, on the allegation of want of consent of parties, lies from the order of a lower Court, under Section 327, Code of Civil Procedure, directing a private award of arbitration to be filed and enforced. Jalodhur Santal v. Gomesh Santal and others, 6 W. R., 60.

An arbitration award should be filed in Court. Effect of not filing as defined in Section 327, Act VIII of 1859. Soophul Singh v. Metsoo Singh, 1 W. R., 163.

An arbitration award cannot convert into a simple debt cognizable by a Civil Court a claim for moneys collected by defendant as Tehsildar. Such a claim is cognizable under Section 24 of Act X of 1859. Under Section 327 of Act VIII of 1859, the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to enforce the arbitration award. Shoshee Mohun Shaha v. Sheer Nirzear, 5 W. R., Act X. R., 13.

When a matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of any Court, a Small Cause Court in the mofussil has jurisdiction to entertain an application under Section 327 of Act VIII of 1859 to file the award, provided it relates to a debt not exceeding the amount cognizable by such Court, and that the defendant resides within its jurisdiction. Elam Paramanick v. Soja Father Sheikh, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 43; and 10 W. R., 85.

In an arbitration case between a mahajun and his gomasta, an award was made to the effect that Rs. 725 were outstanding and to be paid to the kuti, of which Rs. 483 were due to the mahajun, and Rs. 241 to the gomasta; that the gomasta should point out the parties owing the Rs 483, or in default make good the amount. The mahajun applied to the Subordinate Judge of Bhaugulpore, under Act VIII of 1859, Section 327, to file the award. The Subordinate Judge held that it was not proved that the gomasta had done as required by the award, and ordered him to pay the deficit. The gomasta appealed to the Judge, who held that no appeal lay from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge enforcing the award. Held, on special appeal, that the Subordinate Judge's judgment decided a question of fact not determined by the award, and that an appeal would lie. Rambhenjun Bhusuk v. Srikishen Bhukut, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 260; S. C., 11 W. R., 140.

When complaint has been preferred to a Criminal Court, and the Magistrate has directed that the subject-matter of the complaint be referred to arbitration, if the parties consent and proceed to such reference, the award may be enforced under the provisions of Section 327, Act VIII of 1859. Sico Nund Rai v. Mohanund Ram, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 45.

Held that a suit for cancelment of the award made under Sections 6 and 7, Regulation IX of 1833, where it was not alleged that the proceedings were contrary to law, but that the plaintiff did not consent to it, was not maintainable under Section 9 of the said enactment; the consent of the parties not being necessary under the provisions of those sections. Ikramoolla and others v. Sheo Periahd, 2 Agra Rep., 340.

A Court should make full inquiry into the objections made to an award before setting it aside; and should not hastily assume that the mere circumstance of the arbitrator having some interest in the matter at issue would necessarily bring the award within the provisions of Section 324 of Act VIII of 1859, and render it liable to be set aside. Senuk Kuchee v. Oree Dobey, 2 N. W. R., 241.

A suit lies to enforce an award made without the intervention of a Court of Justice.

The procedure provided in Section 327 of the Civil Procedure Code is not imperative upon a plaintiff who seeks to enforce an award so made. Palanitppa Chetti v. Rayappa Chetti, 4 Mad. Rep., 119.

The Court to which an application should be made to enforce an award under Section 327 of the Civil Procedure Code is a Court having jurisdiction in the matter to which the award relates, that is in respect of the whole matter of the award. Gangappa, M. v. Kupinappma M., 5 Mad. Rep., 128.

No appeal lies against a decree made in accordance with an award upon a submission to arbitration in the suit. Ramireddy Narasreddy v. Mummareddy Pappireddy, 5 Mad. Rep., 404.

On the application of one party to a reference to arbitration, without the intervention of a Court, to have the award filed and for judgment thereon, an objection of the other party that the award had been come to after the arbitrators' authority had been repudiated, was overruled, and judgment was passed by the Moonsiff in accordance with the award. Held (Paul, J., dissenting) an appeal lay from the decision of the Moonsiff.

In another case the question was referred to a Full Bench whether when an award has been ordered to be filed, and judgment has been given in accordance with it, under Section 327 of Act VIII of 1859, is such judgment open to appeal? The answer given (Paul, J., dissenting) was: It is open to an appellant to show that the paper which has been filed is not an award. If it is an award, and judgment is given in accordance with such award, such judgment is final. — Per Paul, J., the judgment is final. Sashthi Charan Chatterjee and others v. Taruk, Chandra Chatterjee and others, Lala Iswari Prasad and others v. Bir Ben Jan Tewari and others, 8 B. L. R., 315; 15 S. W. R., F. B., 9.

The addition, in a judgment according to an award of a trifling direction upon a matter not referred to the arbitrators, which was quite separable from the other parts of the award, and did not affect the decision on the matter referred, was held to come within the concluding part of Act VIII of 1859, Section 325, and not to affect the finality of the judgment. Hura Soenduru Dabee v. Srecdhur Bhutlacharjee, 17 W. R., C. R., 352.

A reference to arbitration made under an order of Court cannot be revoked at the instance of a party. If an arbitration award is set aside and the matter is tried as a suit before the Court, the arbitrator cannot be examined as a witness as to the grounds of his decision, but only to prove any admission which may have been made before him in the course of the arbitration, and which might be material evidence. Nilmonu Bose v. Mchima Chunder Dutt, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 516.

An Appellate Court is competent to refer cases to arbitration.

Where a party contests the validity of an arbitration award, on the ground that it was not completed within the time fixed by the Court, he must show that the delay arose from corruption or misconduct on the part of the arbitrator, or that the award was made after the issue of an order of Court superseding the arbitration and recalling the suit. Rusool Bibu v. Safik Ali Chowdry, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 31.

A Moonsiff has no jurisdiction to entertain an application and keep an order on the enforcement of an arbitration award relating to the determination of rent. Atal Hossein v. Greesh Chunder Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 556.

A judge is not bound to give costs at a certain valuation; and a suit to carry out an arbitration award need not be valued. Khoda Buksh v. Mowba Buksh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 255.

"All matters in difference in the suit, including all dealings and transactions between the parties," having been referred to the arbitration and award of certain persons, the arbitrators should ascertain upon what points the parties are at issue, and upon each of these points come to a finding.

If a Court regards an award as not open to objection, such Court must deliver judgment in accordance with the terms of such award, and not modify the same.

An award, defective and illegal on the face of it, should be at once remitted to the arbitrators, under Section 3 of Cap. 6 of Act VIII. of 1859. Luck- mee Narain v. Pyle, 2 N. W. R., 150.

A judgment given according to an award under Section 325 of Act VIII of 1859, without waiting the ten days prescribed by Section 324 of that Act, is illegal, and will be set aside.

After passing judgment according to an award, such award cannot be re-submitted to the arbitrator for reconsideration and correction. Pophar Per- shud v. Punchun Rue, 2 N. W. R., 235.

Held (by Loch, J.) with reference to the Full Bench Ruling reported in vol. 5, Weekly Reporter, page 188, that an appeal lies, on the point of costs, from a decree enforcing an arbitration award. Khoda Buksh v. Mowki Buksh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 255.

An order of a Civil Court setting aside an arbitration award, being an interlocutory order, is not open to an appeal immediately, but when the Court sets aside the award on the ground of misconduct on the part of the arbitrator, and, after hearing the case on its merits, makes its decree in favour of the plaintiff, it is competent to the defendant to appeal against that decree. Muthooranuth Tewarie v. Brindabun Tewarie, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 237.
In order to the validity of a decree on an arbitration award, it is necessary that the award be filed, that the judgment be passed according to the award, and that the decree follow on the judgment and be carried into effect in the same manner as other decrees. Himutoollah Chowdry v. Bibee Hirun, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 62.

Two out of three arbitrators appointed in the case, submitted their award before the Moonsiff. The defendant, against whom the award had been made, applied to the Moonsiff to set aside the award on the grounds of corruption and misconduct, and that the award was a nullity, inasmuch as only two out of three arbitrators had made the award. The Moonsiff overruled the objections and passed a decree in terms of the award. On appeal to the Judge, the order of the Moonsiff was set aside on the ground that the award was illegal, as two only of the three arbitrators originally appointed had made the award, and that the evidence did not prove the plaintiff's case.

On an application to the High Court to set aside the order of the Judge,—Held that under section 325, Act VIII of 1859, the judge had no jurisdiction to set aside the award when the Court of first instance had passed judgment according to the award. In the matter of the Petition of Sheik Habi Bax, 5 B. L. R. A. P., 75; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 33.

Where certain arbitrators, summoned by the revenue authorities under the Regulations, investigated ancestral debts, and ascertained the amounts to be contributed by the other co-sharers to one who paid it, and they, accepting the award, promised to pay principal and interest on a certain date; and also further agreed that, if they failed to pay on the specified day, their shares should thenceforward become his absolute property,—Held that such an agreement amounted to a conditional sale, and was liable to the incidents which under the Regulations attach to such sales, and the suit for possession, without summary process of foreclosure, was not maintainable. Ghosee Lall and others v. Grain Lall, 3 Agra Rep., 184.

This case having been withdrawn by the Judge, for trial in his own Court, from the Principal Sudder Ameen's Court, where it had already been referred to arbitration,—Held that the Judge was quite competent to decide the case himself, without necessarily being bound also to refer it to arbitration. Aboo Mahomed and others v. Kissen Mohun Surma and others, 6 W. R., 290.

When a person goes away from the country and remains away, and there is no evidence to show an intention to return, that person becomes incapable of acting as umpire within the meaning of Section 319 of Act VIII of 1859. Gadadkur Moitry v. Ganga Prasad Moitry, 4 B. L. R. O. C., 89.

I.—MISCELLANEOUS.

A plaintiff’s cause of action is a very different thing from his title; the one being something done contrary to his interest, which obliges him to seek the aid of a Court of Justice, the other being the proof that something affords him a valid ground for relief. Brojo Lall Roy v. Khetter Auth Mitter, 12 W. R., 55.

When an agreement is entered into to pay off money due under a decree by monthly instalments, each monthly instalment becomes a separate cause of action, and limitation applies to each instalment separately. Mussamut Khidu v. Kali Sahu, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 112; 12 W. R., 71.

Where the plaintiff alleged that he was in possession of property, and prayed the Court to cause the registry to be altered into his name, without alleging that the proper authorities had improperly refused to make the entry, and without joining as a defendant the only person who had power to do so,—Held that the plaintiff’s suit ought to have been dismissed. Irreemyari v. Rev. H. A. Kaundanya, 2 Mad. Rep., 363.

To support a bill quia timet, the plaintiff must have a title in possession or expectancy, and the property must be in danger. Laloo v. Laloo and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 8.

Each instalment of a kistbundee, as it accrues due, constitutes a fresh cause of action. Enactoolah Chowdhry v. Hurro Chunder Da, 2 W. R., 39.

A stranger having no interest in the matter, has no right, even with the consent of presumptive reversionary heirs, to sue for an order declaring an adaption to be valid. Brojkishoree Dossee v. Sreenath Bose, 9 W. R., 463.

Money paid under compulsion of law cannot be recovered back as money had and received. Juggerbundhoo Ghose v. Chowdhry Mundus Hossein, W. R., 1864, 205.

In a suit to compel defendant to remove an embankment recently constructed on his own land, on the allegation that it infringed plaintiff’s right of irrigation by a certain channel, where it was found that the embankment in question was no manner of obstruction to the water-course by that channel,—Held that, to entitle plaintiff to a decree, there must have been some actual infringement of his right by the defendant, and not merely some act whereby, as it were, that right was denied or questioned. Shama Churn Chatterjee v. Boidonath Banerjee, 11 W. R., 2.

A suit for a declaration of a right to receive marks of recognition and honour at idol-festivals, or for damages from priests for withholding the same, is not cognizable by a Civil Court. Gopin Dupp Ghese v. Gooroo Dupp Chuckerbutty, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 198.

Mahomed Hossein Chowdhry and others*, 10 W. R., 191.

The defendant sued one J. H. P. in the Small Cause Court, and obtained a decree, in execution of which he caused a steamer to be attached, as being the property of J. H. P. Thereupon the plaintiffs, alleging themselves to be in possession of the steamer as mortgagors from J. H. P., in order to obtain its release, paid the amount of the decree against J. H. P. into Court, and the steamer was given up. Subsequently an order was made by the Court, on the application of the plaintiffs, that the money should remain in Court pending the result of a suit to be brought by them for its recovery. They accordingly brought a suit against the defendant. The Judge of the Small Cause Court found that J. H. P. had no attachable interest in the steamer, and that the plaintiffs had paid the amount of the decree on compulsion,—Held the plaintiffs could maintain the suit, although the defendant had not actually received the amount of the decree. W. Morin v. Dewan Ali Shirang, 8 B. L. R., 418.

Giving instructions to counsel in reference from the Small Cause Court acting for the suitor within Clause 10 of the Letters Patent of the High Court, and can only be done by an Attorney of the Court.

Where the plaintiff had expended money at the request of the defendant in the purchase or settlement of Tazi Mundi Chittis,—Held he was entitled to recover. Kauayal v. Chagmul Bux, 8 B. L. R., 412.

The plaintiff executed a bond jointly with a servant of the defendant's on 10th July, 1861. The proceeds were expended for the defendant. On 30th August, 1864, the creditor obtained a decree upon the bond for principal and interest, which the plaintiff satisfied by two payments made on the 4th July, 1866, and 30th June, 1868, respectively. He brought a suit against the defendant for the amount paid on 22nd June, 1869. Held, that the plaintiff could maintain his suit against the defendant for the amount paid by him, and that the suit was not barred by the Law of Limitation. Bhagirath Adhikuri v. Turini Chundra Pakrati, 7 B. L. R., 35, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 413.
CAUSE OF ACTION—WHERE A SUIT DOES NOT LIE.

3.—WHERE A SUIT does NOT LIE.

In a suit for confirmation of possession of a hill, with the places of worship appertaining thereto, and the idols set up thereon, the alleged cause of action being that defendant intended to lay claim to the offerings made, and proposed to call in question plaintiff's possessory right, Held that the plaintiff disclosed no cause of action whatever. Poorun Chand Galesha v. Parish Nath Singh, 12 W. R., 82.

Plaintiff having sued as the shebait of certain lands in defendant's talook, alleging that they belonged to his lakhiraj debutter, and asking to have a thak demarcation amended and his right declared, it was held that, as plaintiff had been present at the survey proceedings which were his own act, he had no cause of action; and that in his case, such an objection on the part of the defendant ought to be admitted even in special appeal. Soodukhina v. Issur Chandra Mojoomdar, 12 W. R., 25.

The property of the plaintiff having been included among the lands to which certain resumption proceedings between the Government and a third party, plaintiff filed an objection which was disallowed by the Collector. The Special Commissioner on appeal declined, for want of jurisdiction, to entertain the objection. Held by the majority of the Court (Scotland, C. J., and Innes, J., dissenting) that such a suit is not maintainable. Arunachella Pillai v. Appan Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 188.

Apayer for honor, though entitled to the same remedies upon the bill as the party for whom payment was made, is not entitled to bring a suit in his own name and in his own behalf, for the value of the goods for which the bill was drawn. Carmichael v. Brojonath Mullick, 1 Hyde's Rep., 274.

Two brothers executed and filed a deed of compromise, dividing between them the family property, and a decree was passed in terms thereof. Under this decree, the elder was to hold possession of certain lands, the rents of which were to go to perform the worship of the family idol. The younger, however, kept the elder out of possession of the lands, who therefore, performed the worship at his own charges, and then took out execution for possession and mesne profits, in order to recoup his own expenditure on the family idols. The younger also took out execution, and objected that his brother had not performed his trust as family sebait, so that he had been compelled to perform the ceremonies at his own expense. His objection was overruled. The elder brother having died without executing his decree, his widow applied to execute it for the amount of the mesne profits due under it. Held, on the appeal of the younger in his own case, that the non-performance of ceremonies by his brother gave him no ground of complaint, unless he could show that such failure was not caused by any default on his part. Held in the other case that the widow was entitled to execute the decree for mesne profits of the idol lands, without showing that the ceremonies had been performed by her husband out of his own private funds. Radhaajibun Musasafi v. Taramonee Dossee, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 79; 11 W. R., P. C., 31.

Held that a claim to receive fees as Chowdree from persons using a certain market-place, is not a right which can be enforced by the Courts of Law. Bhinuk Chowdree and others v. The Collector of Jounpore, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 271.

A suit will not lie for obstructing a public road, without showing any particular inconvenience to the plaintiff in consequence of such obstruction. A donor does not, by dedicating a thing to the public, necessarily become guardian of the public interest, and thereby oblige him to prevent通行 of persons passing along the road. Burenda Prasad Mustasafi v. Ghose Chand Mostasafi, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 295; S. C., 12 W. R., 160.

A suit cannot be maintained to enforce the performance of certain services by barbers. Rajkisto Majee v. Nobaee Seel, 1 W. R., 351.

A rent was caused by any default on his part. Held in the other case that the widow was entitled to execute it for the amount of the mesne profits due under it.

A widow cannot sue during the life-time of an adopted son who has arrived at majority. A petition of the adopted son withdrawing an objection previously made by him to the suit being brought, cannot cure the defect in her plaint. Jatunobee Chowdhraein v. Dwarkanath Roy Chowdhry and others, 7 W. R., 455.

A benemear has no right to maintain a suit in a Civil Court for property in which he has no beneficial interest. Mehroonissa Bibe v. Har Churun, Base, 10 W. R., 220.

Suits to set aside improper alienations by a widow cannot be brought by those whose rights are only inchoate and remote, as are those of a minor who is only entitled in reversion after the life-estate of his mother and her sister, in the event of their surviving their mother, whose alienations he seeks to set aside. Bama Sowndry Dossee v. Bama Sowndry Dossee, 10 W. R., 301.

Held that, where a third party was recognized as joint proprietor, and the collections were made in the joint names of the plaintiff and herself, the mere payment of the rents to plaintiff's sircar could not entitle plaintiff to sue for the whole rent in his

A party has no right to bring a civil suit to get possession of land which has been taken from him, and awarded to his adversary in the execution of a decree in a boundary suit. R. Watson v. Bejoy Gobind Bural; Racee Shoomasoodery Debba v. Bejoy Gobind Bural, W. R., 1864, 331.

A person cannot sue to set aside an agreement under which he has lent money on security of him no cause of action in a suit for declaration of own name. Watson and Co. v. Nileunt Sz'rear, 10 W. R., 331.

No cause of action to set aside illegal acts of an adopting mother arises to the adopted son, either from the date of his obtaining possession, or from the date of the final decisions in any case brought for him or against his mother, or by or against him, to prove or disprove the validity of his adoption. Kishen Mohun Koon v. Muddun Mohun Teware, 3 W. R., 32.

R. having executed two mortgages of the same share, his mortgagees obtained against him separate decrees, in each of which the property was declared liable to sale in satisfaction of the debt. Plaintiff first purchased under the decree obtained on the earlier mortgage, and defendant (who was the second mortgagee) himself purchased the same right, title, and interest at the second sale. The suit was brought for confirmation of plaintiff's possession of the estate, on the ground that his title was affected by the subsequent purchase of the defendant. Held that plaintiff had no cause of action, as his rights had not been disturbed by any act of the defendant. Buddrenath Jha v. Amrit Sahoo and others, 10 W. R., 126.

A putnee having been sold for arrears under Act VIII of 1859, was bought by one M., from whom B. purchased a portion. Not being able to get possession, B. sued the ryot for rent under Act X; but the putnee having been again sold for arrears, he gave up his claim to possession, and sued for the rents payable during the years he had been kept out of possession, less what was barred by limitation. His suit was dismissed on the intervention of an heir of the zamindar, who objected that the lands cultivated by the ryot were not within the portion bought by B. B. then sued the zamindar and ryot for the wasilat accruing during the years he had been kept out of possession. The Judge held that the plaintiff had established his claim, and remanded the case for enquiry as to the amount of wasilat, retaining it on his file pending the enquiry, and eventually decreed it in favour of the plaintiff.

Held that limitation as regards appeal would run, not from the Judge's order of remand, but from the final decision.

Held that the plaint was bad against the ryot, but it did disclose a cause of action against the zamindar, who was said to have kept the plaintiff out of possession of his purchased land.

Unsuccessful intervention in a suit for rents against ryots, followed by no result operating injuriously on plaintiff's title or possession, can afford him no cause of action in a suit for declaration of right and confirmation of possession. Jugt At Chunder Roy and another v. Mohima Chunder Paul and others, 11 W. R., 331.

Where a party residing on one side of a public lane encroaches on the lane by building, narrows the passage at that particular spot, so far as to cause the traffic to pass over a portion of the land of the party residing on the opposite side of the lane, the remedy of the latter is, by recourse to the Criminal Court, to prevent the obstruction of the public thoroughfare. If he does not so, he has no cause of action against the other. Abduol Hye v. Ram Churn Singh and others, 11 W. R., 445.

A mere notice that an adoption has taken place is not of itself a cause of action upon which a reversioner is bound to sue. Hurree Lall Sha and others, 11 W. R., 477.

4.—Whole Cause of Action.

A., who resided and carried on business in the Upper Provinces, sent hoondees for sale to B. in Calcutta, and drew hoondees against it upon B. payable in Calcutta. The hoondees were negociated, and afterwards presented to B.s gomastah in Calcutta, and there accepted and paid by him for B. In a suit by B. against A. for balance of account,—Held that the whole cause of action arose in Calcutta within the meaning of Section 12 of the Letters Patent. Dhanraj v. Gobindaram, 1 B. L. R., 0. C., 76.

An application was refused for leave to commence a suit in the original side of the High Court, to recover a sum which was made up of various items, with respect to which of some to which the cause of action arose in Madras, but as to the great bulk of the claim, the cause of action arose elsewhere. Upon appeal the decision was sustained.

Per Bittleston, J.—the High Court, especially when exercising its ordinary original jurisdiction, is bound to adopt the interpretation of the words "cause of action" and "part of the cause of action" laid down with general, if not complete, uniformity under the English County Court Act. The cause of action means the whole cause of action. The whole cause of action includes every fact essential to the maintenance of the action, and each of these facts separately is but a part of the cause of action. The character of the High Court refers to a cause of action arising wholly or in part within the local limits. The cause of action spoken of may consist of several parts, which parts may arise in different places.

Per Holloway, J.—The High Court is not bound by the definition of cause of action derivable from the English cases. Irrespective of the domicile of the defendant, there is a competent forum, wherever a place can be indicated to which the right and its infraction can both be referred, because

Where plaintiff brought an action to recover money paid by him in Calcutta, on bonds drawn by defendant beyond the local limits, but sent by him to Calcutta, and there accepted and paid by the plaintiff. Held that the whole cause of action arose within the local limits of Calcutta, so as to give the High Court jurisdiction under the 12th Section of the Charter. Joan Mull v. Munnooollah, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 319.

Where a promissory note payable within the jurisdiction is also in the first instance delivered within it, the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction. Isier Chunder Sen v. L. Cruz and another, 9 Ind. Jur., N. S., 233.

A Hindu, whose share in an ancestral estate had been alienated by a co-proprietor, instituted simultaneously three different actions against the co-proprietor, and the persons to whom the alienations had respectively been made, to recover several distinct parcels of land which constituted his share, Held, that as the plaintiff had but one single cause of action against the co-proprietor, he ought to have brought but one suit against him, and either included all the alienees in this suit, or brought separate actions against the alienees for the several pieces of land in their possession, and caused the proceedings in these suits to be stayed till the suit against the co-proprietor was determined.

The course of procedure last indicated is the more correct course. Held, further, that, as the separate suits against the co-proprietor were instituted simultaneously, the error in splitting up the claim against him did not affect the merits; and accordingly the decree was affirmed. Vithu et al. v. Nârdyân Dâbhul Rue, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 30.

The defendant, who resided and carried on business at Patna, was in the habit, several times in the course of the year, of sending goods to Calcutta by boat, and coming down himself by rail; he received his goods, and remained in Calcutta until he sold them. He had no place of business, nor any gomusta or agent of his own in Calcutta, but used to sell the goods himself, and put up sometimes at one ârût, sometimes at another. His stay in Calcutta varied from two to four months. He used to pay commission on the goods sold to the ârût where he put up, and he was in the habit of drawing hundis at Patna on himself at Calcutta, accepting and paying them in Calcutta. The plaintiff brought a suit on a hundi so drawn, and purporting to be so accepted by the defendant, of which payment was refused by the defendant. The defendant admitted the drawing of the note, but alleged that the acceptance was forged. The Judge found that the note had not been accepted by the defendant. The summons was served on the defendant in Calcutta. Leave to institute the suit under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent. Leave to institute the suit under Clause 12 not having been obtained, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Hurjibun Das v. Bhugwen Das, 7 B. L. R., 102.

5.—When cause of action accrues.

The right of action to a person who is restored to possession under a decree of the Privy Council, does not accrue before the decision of the Privy Council; and he is entitled to interest on mesne profits from the time of his ejectment up to one year after the decision of the Privy Council, that being held to be a reasonable time to be allowed to him for commencing his suit. Ranee Asmood Koor v. Joykuran Lall, 5 W. R., 125.

In a suit by a sharer for reimbursement of payments made by her over and above her share to save the property from sale in execution of a decree for rent at the suit of the seindar who had obtained a former decree, which, however, he was prevented by a subsequent order of the Court from executing, Held that the date of payment by the plaintiff, and not the date of the original decree, furnished the cause of action from which limitation was to count. Bunwarze Mohun Saha v. Pronath Saha, 2 W. R., 159.

In a suit by the widow of one of three judgment creditors to recover the third part of a bond debt which had been decreed in their favour, and of which execution had been taken out, Held that, as the entire sum due on the bond with penal interest to date of decree had been recovered, plaintiff's cause of action had fully accrued, though a balance of interest was still due. Mussamut Busunoisissa v. Bibe Rowshan Jahan, 10 W. R., 397.

In a suit by the sons and grandsons of one N. to set aside a sale by N. of a part of the ancestral estate to S., whose rights and interest in the estate were purchased at auction by the defendant N. L., it was held that the cause of action to the sons would accrue, and limitation run from the date on which S. got possession from N. Nuthoo Lall Chowdhy v. Chede Saker, 12 W. R., 446.

In a suit for contribution by the manager of a joint family, on the ground that the plaintiff had borrowed money and applied it in the payment of certain joint family expenses, and that he had borrowed again to pay off the first loan, and had liquidated the second loan from his private funds, Held that plaintiff's cause of action arose from the date on which he had made payments of accounts of the joint estate, and, not having sued within six years of that date, he was out of Court. Ramkisto Roy v. Muddon Gopaul Roy, 12 W. R., 194.

Where a party in permissive possession of land sets up his own absolute title by suing the tenant for rent, he converts his permissive possession into an adverse one, which, as wrongful possession, is a cause of action. Khuruckdaree Singh v. Rewat Lall Singh, 12 W. R., 167.

The plaintiff sued for confirmation of his title to and for possession of a jote in the Nowabad mehal, deriving his title under a pottah from the ijaradar. The defendant's case was that he had bought the lands as a talook, and been in possession accordingly; but finding that the lands had been surveyed as a part of the Nowabad mehal, he took a pottah from the ijaradar four years previous to the plain-

Where plaintiff paid money to defendant, and defendant paid him to Calcutta, the plaintiff—arose within the jurisdiction of the High Court, ibid. 1 Ind. Jur., N. 1944.

Where a cause of action is within it, the jurisdiction.

Another, 9 Inc. 12.

A Hindu, who had been alienated three priests, and had respective parcels—Held, that the cause of action to have been either included or brought separately in the several paras caused the jurisdiction of the court to have been included in the jurisdiction.

The course more correct in separate suits is to have been brought simultaneously claim against the defendant accordingly the jurisdiction of the court to have been included in the jurisdiction of the court.

The defendant in Nardyan Dass 1910, brought a suit to recover a debt. The defendant alleged that the defendant in Calcutta. Held, the suit was brought at Patna, and conformed to the provisions of the Patna Act, and the court was entitled to entertain the suit.

The defendant in Calcutta. Held, the suit was brought at Patna, and conformed to the provisions of the Patna Act, and the court was entitled to entertain the suit.
CAUSE OF ACTION—WHEN IT ACCRUES.

The defendant's pottah was found to be a forgery. Held that the plaintiff's cause of action arose solely from the title set up by the defendant under the pottah derived from the ijaradar, and not from the date when the defendant purchased the lands as a talook. Shahafioodeen v. Moultie Nadooru, 12 W. R., 54.

Where the suit was for the recovery of certain sums advanced as a loan at different times, and the account entered was simply a statement of advance, repayment, and balance (which was adjusted, struck, and verbally admitted by the debtor), Held that the creditor's cause of action arose on the date he made the loans, and three years' limitation must be counted from that date, unless the original right has been kept alive by some written acknowledgment or new and distinct contract.

Held further, that the balance struck and orally admitted by the debtor does not amount to a written acknowledgment within the 4th section of Act VIII of 1859, or to a new contract so as to revive the old cause of action. Kunhy Lall and others v. Bunsee, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 94.

In a suit for declaration of right and confirmation of possession by setting aside certain improper chittahs prepared by a Civil Court Ameen while deputed to deliver possession in execution of a decree,—Held that, when in execution the Ameen measured a portion of the plaintiff's land as covered by defendant's decree, and delivered over possession to defendant, taking receipts and issuing proclamation as required by Section 324, Act VIII of 1859, a cause of action arose to plaintiff under the circumstances against defendant. Gour Pershad Dos v. Soobid Ram Deb, 12 W. R., 279.

Where one of two co-owners of a putnee fraudulently fails to pay his share of rent, and permits the putnee to be sold by the zemindar for arrears, the other co-owner's cause of action against him accrues at the date of sale when the fraud is consummated. Bhugwan Chunder Roy and others v. Raj Chunder Roy, 9 W. R., 553.

Where property lost in one district is found in another, in the possession of a party who refuses to restore it, the owner's cause of action arises from the date of such refusal; and a suit to recover possession of the property must be instituted in the district in which it is found. Ram Pertiap Singh v. Bkolabutty Koonwar, 9 W. R., 386.

In a suit to recover compensation for certain lands taken by the magistrate for roads, where plaintiff had applied for compensation in the usual course, but, after various delays on the part of Government, had been refused compensation, and referred to the Civil Court after the period of limitation had expired,—Held that the plaintiff's cause of action arose from the time when he was dispossessed, and not from the date when his application for compensation was rejected. J. Hills v. The Magistrate of Nuaddee, 11 W. R., p. 1.

The principal acquires no fresh cause of action against the agent from the date on which the agent admitted the amount which was due from him and executed an agreement to pay it. Maharajah Mahk row Chund Bihadoor v. Judio Mohun Mitter, 5 W. R., Act X, R., 91.

A vakeel received money for his clients, and gave it to their agent for delivery to them; the agent did not deliver it accordingly, and the vakeel was compelled by the Civil Court to pay it over again. The vakeel thereupon sued the agent for the money. Held that the case fell under Section 16 of the Act of Limitation.

Held also, that treating the case as one of implied contract, the cause of action arose when the plaintiff was compelled to pay money which the defendant was legally bound to pay; and, thirdly, that, if the defendant was in truth the plaintiff's agent, but had induced the plaintiff to make him so by the fraudulent representation that he was the agent of the clients, the cause of action would have arisen at the discovery of the fraud. Peruballi v. Vimaraja Ramaya, 2 Mad. Rep., 21.

Where a bond was given to secure a debt which was to be repaid by seven annual instalments, and the bond provided that upon failure to pay a single instalment the whole principal sum secured should immediately become due and recoverable with interest,—Held that the cause of action in respect of the principal and interest arose on failure to pay the first instalment. Kuruppana Nayak v. Nallanna Nayak, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 209.

B. advanced money to A. for the purchase of an estate. The estate was purchased by A., but it was conveyed to B. Held, that before A. could maintain a suit to obtain possession of the land, he was bound to pay or tender the money advanced by B. Bhyrub Chunder Sein v. Annundmoy Cheowdrain Marsh., 494.

The cause of action in respect of accretions accrues from their formation and delivery to the defendant. Luchunwara Shaw and others v. Jatadharee Haldar and others, 7 W. R., 89.

A zemindar, G., died in 1240, leaving a widow, B., and his mother, H., the latter of whom created a putnee pottah in 1241, under which B. received the rents from 1257 to 1273 from the principal defendants. Plaintiff, as adopted son of G. and owner of the zemindary, sues the putneedar to set aside the putnee. Held that, if the creation of the putnee was illegal, B., as the widow and heiress of G., had an immediate right to set it aside; if she did not, and lost her right by lapse of time, plaintiff's right of action must have accrued on his adoption in 1252. Shumbhoonath Shaha v. Bunwarse Lall Roy, 11 W. R., 10.

Where no law, special custom, or agreement is shown, making the remuneration on a joint contract for labour to be done payable in advance, the cause of action accrues from the time when the labour was performed. Rajah Pertadh Sen Bahadoor v. Runjeet Roy, W. R., 1864, 68.

Plaintiff executed a zur-i-peshgee lease to defendant for a term of years, and arranged with him contemporaneously that he (the lessee) was to make an annual payment (out of the rents payable to plaintiff) to a creditor of the plaintiff, with a view to clear off a debt. These payments, though made punctually for a time, were withheld while a balance of the debt still remained due, to recover which the creditor sued the lessor (plaintiff) and obtained a decree.

Held, that plaintiff's (lessor's) cause of action against the defendant (lessee) arose from the date of the latter's breach of contract,—i.e., the date on which he failed to pay. Zoolfee Begum and another v. Ram Shurn Roy and others, 10 W. R., 80.

R. purchased a putnee mehal and devised it to his son G. G. died after R., childless and intestate, and leaving a widow, S., who also died, neither of the three having ever taken possession of the mehal. Plaintiff, as G.'s nephew, sues to recover possession of the mehal. Held, that his cause of action did not arise until the death of S. (Markby, J. dubitante). Ram Doolub Sandyal v. Ram Naran Moitro and others, 7 W. R., 455.

In a suit to recover possession of lands which had been sold to plaintiff, but which had been subsequently taken back by one of the vendors under an agreement that he would make over other lands in exchange, plaintiff's contention being that he had been dispossessed of these other lands which were eventually decreed to another party,—Held that plaintiff's cause of action originated on the date of the decree depriving him of the lands last mentioned. Kabul Krishna Doss v. Mokessure Debba, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 270.

The political department in Chota-Nagpore, as judgment creditors, took out attachment against a family estate in which the rule of primogeniture prevailed. Kabuliat he agreed to make good any retrenchments his employer, the zemindar, might make in his accounts. Some retrenchments were made, and where all the accounts were remitted, and where all the accounts were disbursements, the cause of action arose in the district within which the principal kutcherry lay. Prosana Chundra Bose v. Prosana Chundra Raj, 7 B. L. R., Ap. 35, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 343.

The defendant at Purola agreed to sell and deliver to the plaintiff certain goods, for which the plaintiff then paid in advance. By the terms of the agreement, the goods were to be measured at the market rate at Purola. The goods were not delivered in pursuance of the agreement. Held, in an action brought to recover their value at the market rate at Purola, that the cause of action arose at Purola, where the goods ought to have been delivered. Chander Chunder Bannerjee v. Collins, 2 Hyde's Rep., 79.

The representative of a deceased person may be sued in that Court within the jurisdiction of which the cause of action with the deceased person arose. Ladd v. Parbutty Dassee, 2 Hyde's Rep., 18.

A contract was entered into at Rutlam for the establishment of a partnership to be carried on principally at Muttra, where all the transactions were to be conducted by means of the capital embarked in the concern at that place. Held that the cause of action in a suit for the balance resulting from these partnership transactions arose at Muttra. Seth Luchmee Chund Radhakishen v. Seth Zorawar Mull, 1 W. R., P. C., 35.

Where defendant, in an action for goods sold and delivered, pleaded want of jurisdiction, inasmuch as the whole cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction, the Court found that a material part of the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction, and gave a decree for plaintiff, leaving it to defendant to dispute execution if so advised. Door-gapsarad Bose v. T. A., Water, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 191.

A suit to have certain lands declared liable for the satisfaction of an instalment bond is substantially a suit for an interest in land, and as such cognizable by the Courts within whose jurisdiction the property is situated, even though the cause of action has not arisen there and the defendants reside elsewhere. Ram Lal Mookerjee v. Chitto Cowaru, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 277.

The defendant was appointed a Superintendent of two estates, one called Chulman, within the Sub-division of Diamond Harbour; and the other Aliapore, within the Sub-division of Aliapore. By his kabuliat he agreed to make good any retrenchments his employer, the zemindar, might make in his accounts. Some retrenchments were made, and to recover the balance which appeared due, the Zemindar brought this suit. Held, that as the defendant had agreed by his kabuliat to make the principal Kutcherry his place of business, and as both the plaintiff and defendant agreed that the cause of action arose in the principal kutcherry, and as it was the place to which all the moneys were remitted, and where all the accounts were disbursed, the cause of action arose in the district within which the principal kutcherry lay. Prosana Chundra Bose v. Prosana Chundra Raj, 7 B. L. R., Ap. 35, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 343.

The defendant at Purolá agreed to sell and deliver to the plaintiff certain goods, for which the plaintiff then paid in advance. By the terms of the agreement, the goods were to be measured at Mazrod and delivered at Padshú. In default of delivery it was stipulated that the value of the goods should be paid for at the market rate at Purolá. The goods were not delivered in pursuance of the agreement. Held, in an action brought to recover their value at the market rate at Purolá, that the cause of action arose at Padshú, where the goods ought to have been delivered. Chandi Lal Maniktlibhat v. Mahiputra v. Valad Khundu, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 33.

If the cause of action is the taking of money, it arises at the place where the money is taken. Trechurru Bukshu v. Gopaul Chunder Samaunt, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 500.

CAUSE OF ACTION—SEVERAL CAUSES.

7.—SEVERAL CAUSES OF ACTION.

Several parcels of land were held under one pottah, by which the ryot was bound to pay one lump sum as rent for all. Held that the landlord's having recently kept separate papers as to each parcel, and dealt with each parcel separately, does not amount to a departure from a waiver of the original contract contained in the pottah, so as to entitle him to split up his claim, and sue separately for the rent of each parcel.

There is no misjoinder of causes of action in a suit for money contracted to be paid, and for the cancellation of a kistbundee, and for money deposited on the kistbundee.

Kinnoo Monee Debia v. Shoekoram Sircar, 3 W. R., 128.

Combined causes of action may be brought in the Court which has jurisdiction to the full amount of such combined causes of action.

Kinnoo Monee Debia v. Shoekoram Sircar, 3 W. R., 128.

Different suits may be brought on different causes of action, though the object to be gained in each may be one and the same.

Suits for possession of land in two districts should not be split, there being but one cause of action.

Where plaintiff claimed property which she alleged to have passed into the hands of different defendants by several acts of wrongful alienation at different times, and the Court of first instance tried the case as a whole, notwithstanding that it found the causes of action to be several and distinct against several defendants,—Held that the lower Appellate Court, when this objection was made before it, ought to have tried the case as made up of separate suits against so many different defendants.

Where the payee of a hoondee, in a suit to recover the amount of the same, made four persons defendants,—viz., the drawer and the acceptor of the hoondee, his own endorsee, and a party whom plaintiff alleged to be the principal, whose agent was the drawer,—the suit was held to be a combination of four suits in one, not allowed by the Civil Courts.

Habee Beparee v. Choolmen Muth, 10 W. R., 263.

Where a plaint containing separate causes of action on the part of distinct plaintiffs, though but one prayer—viz., for the delivery up of certain nekasi papers—was filed and tried as a single suit, the Court trying the case was held to have committed a mere technical irregularity, but an incorrect proceeding liable to lead to injustice.

Ramoomar Sircar v. Rellooomee Dutt and others, 10 W. R., 279.

A claim for possession and a claim for mesne profits may be brought separately, or they may be united. When united, a separate stamp fee for mesne profits is not necessary.

Where the claim of a brother's son in 1847 was that he had title as heir to the moiety of an estate, prior to the other brother's widow, in respect to the whole estate, on the plea that it was joint and undivided, and his claim now is that she has no title prior to him, but accepting the decision of 1847, and regarding the widow's title to be prior to his, and as holding a life-interest in the whole estate before him, he now claims as heir next in reversion after the widow, regarding her property as separate, with a view to a declaration of his right as such heir to have a certain alienation by the widow (alleged by him to be illegal under Hindu laws) set aside,—Held that the two cases and causes of action were essentially different.

Baboo Sunkur Dyal Sing v. Baboo Purmessur Dyal Singh, 6 W. R., 44.

A separate cause of action arises as to each of several sums received as mesne profits in respect of the same property.

A claim for the money amount of a dower, and a claim to establish a lien on specific property in respect of that amount, constitute two distinct causes of action; and a plaint which sets up the first claim simpliciter cannot be treated as if it set up the latter.

A claim for rent in respect of a jumma which has been divided into a 14-annas share and a 2-annas share is properly the subject of one suit, and should not be treated as two distinct causes of action for which separate suits are maintainable.

In the Civil Court of Berhampore, plaintiffs sued defendants for money due by one S. deceased. Defendants 1, 2, 3, and 4 were sued as heirs of the deceased; 5th defendant, as having instigated the other defendants to withhold payment. 1st defendant resided at Vizagapatam, 2nd at Bimlipatam, 3rd and 4th at Madras. The 5th defendant resided at Berhampore. From the accounts produced, it appeared that there were, between the plaintiffs (merchants at Berhampore) and deceased (a merchant at Madras) a series of transactions of different kinds, in which they acted, sometimes as principal, and sometimes as agent, the one for the other.

Held that, although in the account sued upon, there were some items which, if they could be separated from the rest, would give a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the Berhampore Court, they could not be so separated, and that the intention was that the dealing should be continuous; that upon that footing the plaintiffs had properly sued for the balance of the whole account, but that they had brought their suit in the wrong Court, because the whole cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction of that Court, and none of the defendants, who were properly joined in the suit, dwelt or worked within that district.

Held also that the wrongful addition of resident defendant could not bring the case under the operation of Section 4, Act XXXIII of 1861, and that the cause of action against the 5th defendant was totally distinct from that alleged against the others, and the two could not be joined in one suit.

A plaint is bound to include in his plaint all the grounds upon which his suit is based. A second suit upon a different ground, which existed before the commencement of the first suit, would not be allowed, as it would be splitting the cause of action. Akhiram Das v. Srikam Das, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 421.

Each alienation by guardians constitutes a distinct cause of action, and a suit which combines several of them in one plaint ought not to be entertained. Looloo Singh and others v. Rajender Laha, 8 W. R., 364.

Where a plaintiff originally filed a plaint against the defendant and other persons, to invalidate a number of conveyances and sales, of which some had been confirmed by decrees, or had been made in execution of decrees, and which related to land in two separate zillahs, and the Subordinate Judge passed an order, purporting to be an order under Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, for the trial of the several causes of action separately, and directed the plaintiff to file several plaints, and there being no difficulty in respect of the stamp duty chargeable on the institution of the suits, from plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis, and the appellants having paid the proper stamp duty on the appeals,—Held that the results of such order and direction might be regarded as the institution of new suits, and that, as far as the suits were cognizable by the Court of the Subordinate Judge, or by the High Court in appeal, the High Court might, in the absence of any objection on the part of the parties, proceed to dispose of them.

The High Court accordingly dismissed the suits relating to property in a district not cognizable in the Court of first instance; and in those appeals in which, by the reason of the amount being less than Rs. 5,000, the appeal lay to the District Judge, returned such appeals to the appellant for presentation in the proper Court.

A direction in such a case to file separate plaints is not within the scope of Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code. That section does not require the plaintiff to file separate plaints, but provides for the separate trial of the several causes of action contained in the one plaint filed on the institution of a suit.

Where several causes of action have been improperly joined in one suit, the plaint should be rejected on the ground of misjoinder. Musammat Rutta Beece v. Dumru Lall, 2 N. W. R., 153.

A suit was brought against six defendants, the cause of action against five of them being unconnected with the cause of action against the sixth.

The Assistant Judge was bound to enter into the merits of the claim, over which the Court of first instance had jurisdiction.

The Assistant Judge, in whose Court the suit was brought, tried one of the causes of action, over which he had jurisdiction, but refused to try the other, over which he had no jurisdiction. In appeal, the District Judge refused to enter into the merits of either, on the ground of the misjoinder of the causes of action.

Held that the District Judge was bound to enter into the merits of the claim over which the Court of first instance had jurisdiction, it not being affected by the error in the misjoinder of the two claims. Sayad Samsuddin Pirjade v. Gunpatra Jagannath et al., 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 19.

Misjoinder of causes of action is not alone a valid ground of special appeal. Shunkur Putuck v. Lulu Shko Churn Lul, 2 N. W. R., 443.

The mere claiming of three shares of money due under a bond executed in favour of plaintiff and others jointly, under different titles derived by plaintiff from different persons in different ways, cannot affect the unity of the cause of action on which the suit is brought. Kalu Sunkur Bhadoda v. Eskan Chunder Bhadoda, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 528.

Omitting to join causes under the provisions of Section 8, Act VIII of 1859, can be no ground for the infliction of the penalty prescribed by Section 7. Jardine, Skinner & Co. v. Shama Soodoorey, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 196.

In a suit where the plaintiffs collectively have the same cause of action against all except one of the defendants, and one alone of the plaintiffs has a cause of action different from the common cause against the same one defendant, the two causes cannot be joined together in the same action. Mussumut Kamoola Khanum v. Khaja Mahomed Easa Rkum, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 429.

The plaintiff sued in the Moonsiff's Court for possession of his house and for rent. Held that there were two causes of action which could be properly joined in one suit; and that although the amount of rent sued for was within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court, yet, as the Small Cause Court could not give all the relief sought, the suit was properly brought in the Moonsiff's Court. Jagomohan Sahu v. Mani Lal Chowdhry, 3 B. L. R., Ap. 77; S. C., 11 W. R., 542.

Work and labour, goods sold and debt, may be combined in one cause of action on one homogeneous account. Rajah Periadth Sen Bahadoor v. Kunjeil Roy, W. R., 1864, 68.

A suit brought to recover the three sums of money,—one on a general adjustment of account, another on account of deposit, and the third as the amount of a bond,—the Court of first instance was held to have had a discretion to join the three causes of action in the same suit, and such joinder was held not to affect the jurisdiction of appeal. Ruttun Chunder Bysack v. Roopa Bibeet, 12 W. R., 529.

A suit to set aside two sale transactions of different dates and made to different vendees, will be dismissed for misjoinder. Banee Krishun v. Koon Chun Lall, 2 N. W. R., 221.

8.—DECLARATORY SUITS.

Where B. sued for a decree to declare that he should be heir to the property of the defendant, a Hindu widow, after her death, and for an injunction to restrain her from adopting any other than a member of his family, he being the nearest relative of her husband, and the fittest subject for adoption according to the Hindu law,—it was held that the suit would not lie, as in the former case the right was contingent and defeasible by adoption, and in the latter the adoption of a stranger was not illegal. Babaji Jivoji v. Bhaidjiter, 5 Bom. Rep. A. C. 71, 70.

The purchaser of property from a judgment-debtor, whose right, title, and interest have been subsequently sold to another party who desires to take possession, has a right to sue for a declaration of title and confirmation of possession for the purpose of clearing his title from the suspicion of its being founded on a collusive sale. Goburdun Dass v. Munnoo Lall, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 95.

Plaintiff's right to a declaratory decree as to the erroneousness of the Magistrate's order passed under Section 321 Code of Criminal Procedure, permitting defendant to erect a drain-pipe to take water from plaintiff's reservoir, was held to be not affected by the fact that the Magistrate's order had not been put in force. Meghranj Singh v. Rushdhurn Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 281.

Under Section 84 of Act XX of 1866, the District Judge ordered, without taking evidence, the registration of a document which had been opposed on the ground that the execution of it had been obtained fraudulently, and by putting the executant under duress. The executant brought a civil suit against the party in favour of whom the document had been drawn, for a declaration that the document was not genuine, and was invalid and inoperative. Held, that the Civil Court had the jurisdiction to try the genuineness of a registered document; that the registration of a document, the execution of which was obtained by improper means, affecting the property of the executant, is a good cause of action on which to ask for a declaratory decree. Prassanna Kumar Sandyal v. Mathurnath Bamerjea, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 487, and 8 B. L. R., Ap. 26.

The plaintiff, claiming under a will of the deceased, applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, but the High Court on appeal refused the same. He now brought a suit alleging that he was in possession of the property of deceased, and asked for confirmation of right and possession by enforcement of Schedule 2 of Act VII of 1870, did not apply. This was not a suit to obtain a declaratory decree, where no consequential relief was prayed. Dinabundhu Chowdury v. Rajahmimi Chowdhray, 8 B. L. R., Ap. 32, and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 72.

The plaint in this case having disclosed that certain thakbust proceedings were carried on by defendants in collusion with their co-sharer, and in fraud of the plaintiff,—Held that the plaint had made out a sufficient cause of action for a declaratory decree under Section 15, Act VIII of 1859. Euroda Kant Benerjea v. Koornardin Kant Bannercr, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 467.

Suit brought by plaintiff against the first three defendants as his tenants on Kanam, and the fourth the representative of a rival jenmi, to obtain a declaration of title as Jemmi. Plaintiff had previously sued the first three defendants to establish the relation of Jemmi and Kanomkar, and to recover the land. He failed, and then brought the present suit.

Held, that this was a case of the employment of the device of a suit for a declaration of title in order to get back land by a crooked, and not legal process, after failure to recover by proper legal means, the intention being to cut off the defendants (the tenants) from the plea of res judicata.

The Court, which had a discretion as to whether such a suit should be permitted, ought at once to have said that it should not. Where there are not interests to be protected, there is no foundation for a suit for a declaratory decree. Shunguny Menon v. Kolampatty Vallia-Noir, 6 Mad. Rep., 117.

Plaintiff stating that he was obstructed in the cultivation of certain land which belonged to him, asked that the obstruction be removed and damages granted. The damages were disallowed; but the Civil Judge declared that plaintiff was entitled, basing that entitlement on the statute of Limitations. Held that where a man seeks a declaration of a title other than the possession which he has, mere possession for the period of the Statute will not justify the declaration, which, allowing it to be made, ought to be based upon a finding of the title alleged by plaintiff, and not upon the existence of a possession for the period required by the statute to bar the action of another. Accordingly, the Lower Appellate Court was required to return a finding on the issue "whether the title asserted by plaintiff is proved." Srimulat Sami Reddi v. Rama Sami Reddi, 6 Mad. Rep., 390.

The plaintiff, as the eldest surviving male representative of the Istimrar Zamindar of Shivaganga, sued for a declaratory decree establishing his right to succeed to the Zamindari upon the death of the first defendant, and for maintenance. Plaintiff was the eldest surviving son of the only daughter of the Istimrar Zamindar, by his senior wife. The first defendant, the Zamindari, was the youngest of his two daughters by his third wife. He had also a daughter by his second wife, and another by his sixth wife. First defendant obtained possession of the Zamindari under an order of Her Majesty in Council, which established the right of the daughters of the Istimrar Zamindar to succeed to the Zamindari on the death of his surviving widow Augamuttu, without prejudice to the rights of the first defendant and her sisters, inter se. When first defendant obtained possession, she was the only survivor of the Zamindar's five daughters. The plaintiff's mother, and the daughter of the sixth wife, pre-deceased Augamuttu, and the daughter by the second wife, and the first defendant's uterine sister survived Augamuttu. Besides the plaintiff's mother, the first defendant's uterine sister was the only one of the deceased daughters who had issue, and her only child, a son, died issueless some years before first defendant had established her right to the Zamindari. Before Augamuttu's death the first defendant was twice married, and had issue by her first husband the third defendant, and by her second husband the second, fourth, and fifth defendants. The Civil Court made the declaratory decree prayed for, but refused maintenance. The defendants appealed upon the grounds—That the present was not a case for a declaratory decree; but, if it were, the decree should have declared either that the first defendant's son (second defendant) had the preferable right, or that the Zamindari was the plaintiff's property of the first defendant, and that, therefore, her daughters were her rightful successors. *Held that the plaintiff had a right to institute the suit; that the daughters of the first defendant were not her rightful successors to the Zamindari; and that the plaintiff, as the eldest grandson of the Istimrar Zamindar, was entitled to be, preferable to the second defendant, declared reversionary heir to the Zamindari on the death of the first defendant. Srimulat Mutti v. Vizia Ragunada Rani Kolundaphuri Nachiar and others.

Suits for a declaration of title to a divided share of ancestral property. The ground alleged in each case for seeking the declaration was that the representatives of the brothers of the plaintiff's father had refused to be parties to the registering of the property in plaintiff's name, and had executed a deed of sale of it to a third party (3rd defendant), and registered him as the purchaser. The Court of first instance in each case decreed for the plaintiff. The Appellate Court, following the case reported at 2 Madras High Court Reports, 333, dismissed the suits, on the ground that the plaintiffs were not in a position to maintain them. On special appeal, Held, that the suits should be remanded for a declaration of the plaintiff's title, if established.

To maintain a suit for a declaration of title, some adverse act intended and calculated to be prejudicial to the title which the plaintiff seeks a declaration of, must appear to have been done by the defendant. The mere denial of the title, or doing an act which causes annoyance, cannot imperil the plaintiff's title, nor have any serious effect on the quiet enjoyment of his proprietary right, and is not sufficient to support such a suit. The principle upon which the decision reported at 2 M. H. C. R., 333, proceeds, is inapplicable to suits under Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code. Kurun v. Peria Siddeh Ditto v. Linga Gauidan, Ditto v. Dodddali, 6 Mad. Rep., 307.

Where there is a dispute as to the shares of the several members of a family in a family property, the possession of which is undisturbed, a suit will lie to ascertain the shares of the different members. In a suit for a declaratory decree, it is not necessary to allege any overt act which may give rise to or, in the shape of damages or a decree for possession. Baboo Bhagwan Singh v. Thakoor Singh, Singh v. Thakoor Singh, Baboo Bhagwan Singh v. Thakoor Singh, 8 B. L. Rep., 382, 392, is judicial to the W. R., C. R., 169.

In a suit for a declaration of right, a plaintiff ought on the face of his plaint to show not merely that he has a title, but that circumstances exist which necessitate his application to the Court for a declaratory decree. It is discretionary with the Court to make a declaratory decree. Syed Khadam Ali v. Musumut Nazir Begum, 3 N. W. R., 266.

To entitle a plaintiff to a declaratory decree, he must show some cause of suit, something more than a wish to interfere with his rights.

Intention to interfere with such rights should be held to constitute a cause of action, if at all, only when it is clearly shown. Musumut Lissmann Kooer v. Debu Dyal Rai and others, 3 N. W. R., 137.

A suit was brought against the plaintiff by his tenants, for an illegal distress in catching crops raised by them on the land let to them by him. The present defendant, in the course of that suit, presented a petition to the Court, in which he stated that he was the owner of the land on which the CAUSE OF ACTION—DECLARATORY SUITS.

Crops attached had been raised. The plaintiff brought the present suit for a declaration of his title and confirmation of possession alleging that the defendant's statement affected his (plaintiff's) title by throwing a cloud over it. On special appeal it was objected, for the first time, that the plaint disclosed no cause of action, and the objection was admitted and prevailed.

Per Paul, J.—A suit merely in anticipation of a threatened ejectment will not lie. There must be something in the case either in the nature of an invasion of some right, or in the shape of an impediment or obstacle in the way of full enjoyment of proprietary right, to found a claim to a declaratory relief; but a mere allegation, or a mere threat without action taken or founded upon it, will not be sufficient to entitle a party to a declaration of his title. Sheik Jan Ali v. Khon Car Abdur Khuna, 6 B. L. R., 154; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 420.

The plaintiff built a bridge over a certain khal (canal), which was removed by order of the Magistrate under Chapter XX of the Criminal Procedure Code; the defendant, it was alleged, set the Magistrate in motion. The plaintiff now sued the defendant for a declaration of his right to erect the bridge in question, and to have the order of the Magistrate set aside, that such suit would lie. The Judge in the Court below assented, and the suit was to lie to try the plaintiff's right to erect a bridge over the khal. Held, on appeal, the suit ought to have been dismissed. Madhale Chandra Gupto v. Kamala Kant Chuckerbutty, 6 B. L. R. 643, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 293.

On account of certain property in execution of a decree, A. preferred his claim under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that he held a mortgage thereof from the judgment-debtor. Thereupon an order was passed for sale of the property subject to the mortgage. B. afterwards claimed the same property as his absolute estate, and his claim was allowed, and the suit property was released from attachment. A. was not a party to these proceedings. Held, that A. could maintain a suit against B. for a declaration of his title as mortgagee. Gobind Prasad Tewari v. Udai Chand Rana, 6 B. L. R., 320.

A brought a suit for a debt against B.; obtained a decree, and attached certain land in execution. C. intervened, claiming the property as his; but, on the 28th March, 1868, his claim was disallowed, on the ground that in two suits previously brought against C. and others for possession of the same property on the 30th December, 1863, by X. and Y., whose interest he held (as B. was aware), the suit had been purchased by B., it had been decreed that the land belonged to B. The decrees in these suits were dated 13th and 19th January, 1864; they were in favour of B., and ran in his name alone. C. had purchased a moiety of the property at an auction sale on the 7th March 1859; X. and Y. claimed under a pre-existing mortgage over the same property, the equity of redemption under which had been foreclosed.

C. now brought a suit against A. and B. for confirmation of his possession, and a declaration of his title to the property. He alleged that B. was his servant, and had purchased the interest of X. and Y. in the property benami for him; that he (C.) had made the purchase with his own money in the name of B.; that the suits, originally brought by X. and Y., had been compromised; that while the decrees of the 13th and 19th January, 1864, were nominally in favour of B., they were really in his (C.'s) favour; and that the suit brought by X. and Y. had been allowed to proceed in B.'s name, in order that C.'s title might be strengthened by a decree in his favour, B. being only nominally the decree-holder. C. also stated that, since his purchase on 7th March, 1859, he had always been in possession, and he dated his cause of action from the 28th March, 1868, when his claim to the property which had been attached by A. in his suit against B. was disallowed. The Subordinate Judge gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff C. alone appealed to the High Court. Held, that C., not having been disturbed in his possession, and seeking a declaration of his title only and no relief, should have stated clearly and precisely what that title was; that as against A., who had not appealed, the decision of the Subordinate Judge was final; that as between B. and C. the matter was res judicata; that C. could not go behind the decrees of the 13th and 19th January, 1864, which had been passed in favour of B., and show that the purchase by B. and subsequent decrees were really benami for C., and in his favour. A decree, until it is set aside, is, as between the parties to it, conclusive both as to the rights of those parties and the character in which they sue. Bhawoalal Singh v. Maharajah Rajenoon Pratap Singh Bahadoor, 5 B. L. R., 321, and 13 S. W. R., C. R., 157.

A suit for a declaration that certain property which has been ostensibly held by one of the defendants was in fact the property of another of the defendants who was the judgment-debtor of the same property, is not governed by Clause 3 Section 1 of Act XIV of 1859, but by Section 246 Act VIII of 1859. Syud Abdoolah v. Shaik Shokoor Auli, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 192.

When a person obliges the tenants of an estate to pay rent to him, his act may be treated as a disposition of the party wronged, sufficient to entitle the latter to sue for declaration of title. Radha Madhub Panda v. Juggerauth Doodah, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 183.

B. mortgaged by deed certain premises to J. D., and at the same time delivered to him title-deeds comprising the said premises, and also other immovable property, which was not governed by the said section. B. subsequently became embarrassed, and assigned all his immovable estate to trustees for his creditors.

The trustees sued J. D., and alleged that he had refused to permit the sale by them of the said immovable property, including the mortgaged premises (they offering to apply the proceeds of the latter in satisfaction of J. D.'s claim), and to hand over to them the said title-deeds, prayed for a declaration that the said immovable property other than the mortgaged premises was vested in them, free from any lien on the defendant.

J. D., in his written statement, claimed a lien on all the title-deeds, and submitted that he was not bound (until his claim was satisfied) to hand them over to the plaintiffs, or to produce the same, or his deed of mortgage.

Semble,—That on the authorities, J. D. was not bound to produce the title-deeds before satisfaction of his claim.

Quere,—Whether before such satisfaction he was bound to produce even his deed of mortgage?

Held that J. D. not having made any attempt or taken any active measures to enforce his lien, and no foundation having been laid by the plaintiffs upon which consequential relief could be granted by the Court, the latter were not, under Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code, entitled to a declaratory decree.

A suit for establishment of a lakeraj title to, and confirmation of, possession in land which was alleged to have been brought to sale and purchased in execution by the principal defendant, who had then sued some of the plaintiffs for a kuboolcut.—Held that there had been no invasion of plaintiffs' title even if they had a lakeraj title, and that therefore they had no cause of action.

A person entitled to ask for a declaration of right except as against a defendant hostile to him in respect of that right.

9.—RULINGS UNDER SECTIONS OF ACT VIII OF 1859.—Section 5.

In suits brought against the Government, nomine, under the Code of Civil Procedure, the local Government must be considered as the party sued.

Semble.—The jurisdiction to entertain suits against the Government under Section 5 of Act VIII of 1859 exists only where the cause of action arose. Subbaraya Mudali and others v. The Government and Cuntiff, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 286.

Where a District Court has jurisdiction, under Section 5, Act VIII of 1859, to try a suit, and defendant makes no application to the Judge, or communication to the plaintiff, with a view to being tried in a different district, the case is not one for the exercise of any special power by the High Court for that purpose. Kisto Dass Koon-doo and others v. Issur Chunder Chowdry, 11 W.R., 189.

Section 7.

A. sued B. for recovery of a receipt which had been deposited by the former with the latter as security for a certain advance of money. Held that he was not thereby debarred, under Section 7, Act VIII of 1859, from bringing a suit for the balance due on the whole account between them.

Nawab Medhi Ullak Khan v. Mahomed Wajid Ullac, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, P. 10.

Sections 2 and 7, of Act VIII of 1859, are not by express enactment incorporated in Act X of 1859; yet, inasmuch as the principles on which they are based are maxims of general equity, suits under Act X of 1859 should be governed by those principles.

Section 7 of Act VIII of 1859 does not require a plaintiff who has separate and distinct causes of action against a defendant to include them in one suit, but prohibits the making one and the same cause of action the subject of several suits.

Section 7, of Act VIII of 1859, applies whether the omission to sue has been the result of knowledge and intention or not. The test as to whether a suit is barred by Section 7 of Act VIII of 1859, is, whether the claim in the new suit is in fact founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit.

Bulow Singh v. Chittak Singh, 3 N. W. R., 27.

When a mortgagee files a suit to recover mortgaged lands, alleging that the mortgagees in possession had been overpaid, but did not, in that suit, claim to recover the overpayments, which were therefore not awarded to him,—

It was held, that he could not recover such overpayments in a fresh suit brought for that purpose, as his claim was barred by Section 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

At a sale for arrears of rent, A. became the purchaser of a certain putni talook. B., whose right might have been sold, sued for and obtained a decree for reversal of the sale on the ground of irregularity. In the meantime, A. had committed default, and the putni was again sold for arrears of rent. The Zemindar drew out from the Collectorate the amount due to him. C., who had brought B.'s right, title, and interest in his decree, now sued A. for recovery of the surplus proceeds of sale in the hands of the Collector, and obtained a decree. He afterwards sued A. for mesne profits for the time during which he was in possession of the putni talook. This was a suit by C. against A. for recovery of the surplus proceeds of sale in the hands of the Collector, and obtained a decree.

On the authority, J. D. was not entitled to ask for a declaration of right except as against a defendant hostile to him in respect of that right.

The consequences of an infringement of that direction are not, that the suit which does not include the whole claim shall for this reason be barred.

The words "in bar of suit" refer to any subsequent suit brought for the portion of the claim omitted in the previous suit, and not to such previous suit itself.
A plaintiff who omits to sue for a portion of his claim, stating that he does not relinquish it, but means to sue again for it, can gain nothing by such a statement.

Neither can such a statement furnish a reason for holding the first suit to be barred.

Section 7 of Act VIII of 1859 does not authorize the taking a case in progress of trial off the file of a Subordinate Judge in order that it may be completed by the Judge himself, or some other Court.

It is clear that such transfer must take place on the institution of the suit.

In a suit for demurrage, the cause of action being the detention of a boat, plaintiff is bound to sue for the whole of the demurrage due; failing to claim a portion, he is barred by Section 7, Act VIII of 1859, from suing subsequently for such portion.

A person suing for the value of cattle illegally taken away, should include in his plaint whatever claim he wishes to make in respect of damages caused to him by the defendant's wrongful act, and cannot afterwards maintain a new suit for any damages which he might have claimed in the former suit.

A suit by an heir on the same cause of action on which a suit was previously brought by his father, though for property different from that which was the subject of that suit, is barred by Section 7, Act VIII of 1859.

A suit for demurrage, the cause of action being precluded from all future suit.

Where a plaintiff sues upon an instalment-bond as each successive instalment fell due, and the whole of his claim on each instalment was included in his suit. He recovered the full amount of the first instalment being precluded from all future suit.

Where a suit was brought for a large amount of property, consisting partly of Government paper which, it was alleged, had been fraudulently appropriated by the defendant and the plaintiff obtained a decree. Held that the plaintiff was not precluded by Section 7 of Act VIII of 1859 from afterwards bringing a fresh suit on a piece of Government paper which might have been, but by mistake was not, included in the previous suit.

Whether a relinquishment or omission under Section 7, Act VIII of 1859, extends to cases of omission to ask for a particular description of relief which a plaintiff may intend to seek against the parties to the suit in respect of his cause of action.

Where the plaintiff claimed by right of inheritance for partition of one out of a number of villages left by his ancestor, and the Lower Court dismissed the claim as untenable under Section 7, Act VIII of 1859. — Held that Section 7 of Act VIII of 1859, which bars all future suit for the portion omitted or relinquished, has not the effect of prohibiting more than one suit to enforce satisfaction of a claim against the representatives of a deceased person. The creditor has a right to make all the property of the deceased debtor in the bonds of the several persons who may have succeeded it liable for the payment of his debt, but he is not bound to bring his suit in such a shape as to include the whole of the representatives and whole of the property at the risk of being precluded from all future suit.
and others v. Soobhan and others, 2 Agra Rep., 323.
In a suit by members of a Hindu family which had become separate in 1862, to recover certain moneys said to have been misappropriated by the defendant while manager of the joint estate, it appeared that the plaintiffs had previously sued him since the separation to recover certain other moneys belonging to the said joint estate, also said to have been misappropriated by him while manager, and obtained a decree.

Held that the present claim should have been included in the former suit; and whether the omission was by mistake or not, it must be taken to have been relinquished, and under Section 7 of Act VIII of 1859, could not now be entertained. Ganesh Chandra Chowdhry v. Ram Kumar Chowdhry, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 265; S. C., 12 W. R., 79.

An auction-purchaser of a zemindary being entitled to be paid his rents in Azemabad rupees, and having sued for the same in Company's rupees (the former coining being more valuable than the latter), his omission to sue for the difference of value was held to be an abandonment of claim under Section 7, Act VIII of 1859, and to bar his recovery of it in a fresh suit. Meer Mahomed Soaduck Golestan v. A. Forbes, 5 W. R., Act X of R., 90.

A suit to recover possession of a house, as well as the rent due thereon, was held to be no joinder of causes of action, but warranted by Section 8, Act VIII of 1859. Juggamohun Sakoo and others v. Monee Lall Chowdhry, 11 W. R., 542.

Where one of several co-debtors satisfies the debt, his cause of action for contribution accrues against all at one and the same time, and under Section 8 of the Civil Procedure Code. The contributories may all be included as defendants in one plaint. The decree, if in favour of plaintiff, should order payment separately by each defendant of the amount only of his just proportion of the debt. Tauasi Taluvar v. Palaniande Taluvar, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 187.

Section 8.

Where, under Section 8 of Act VIII of 1859, causes of action have been joined in the same suit, the pecuniary limitation determining the jurisdiction of the Court must be calculated on the entire amount claimed. Therefore, where a suit was brought for land and mesne profits, and the whole claim was valued above Rs. 1000,—Held, that the Principal Sudder Ameen had jurisdiction although the value of the land standing by itself was under the value cognizable by him. Luchme Pershad and others v. Mussamut Kallasoo and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 89.

The words “cognizable by the same Court” in Section 8, Act VIII of 1859, have reference to the nature of the claims to be joined in one suit, and not to the value of each claim. Horo Chunder Turkochoramonee v. Issur Chunder Roy, 6 W. R., 296.

One of three widows of a Mahomedan sued the other two, together with her deceased husband's sons and other heirs, for possession of 18 out of 96 seahans of property left by the deceased, to which she was entitled by right of inheritance under the Mahomedan law; and to set aside two deeds of bi-mukasa, or gift in lieu of dower, one dated 28th July 1842, granted in favour of one widow over a part of the property in suit, and the other dated 14th March 1847, in favour of the other widow, over other portions of the same property.

The Lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, on the ground of a misjoinder of causes of action; and that there were two causes of action which could not be tried together under Act VII of 1859, Section 8.

Held, per Kemp, J. (whose opinion as senior Judge prevailed), that there was no misjoinder of causes of action; that the case must be remanded to the Judge for trial on the merits.

Held, per Glover, J.—This was such a misjoinder as was provided against by Section 8 of Act VIII of 1859, and that the Judge was right in dismissing the suit. Mussamut Amiran v. Mussamut Ashkur, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 90; S. C., 12 W. R., 11.

There is no suggestion in Act VIII of 1859 that causes of action between different plaintiffs and different defendants respectively should be united and tried at one trial. On the contrary, the express provisions of Sections 8 and 9 forbid, by implication, the larger and more extensive union of causes of action.

The Code of Civil Procedure assumes that the plaintiff always is single, and gives no warrant for two or more plaintiffs to make their separate claims in one action. Romoona and another v. Manicho Moyee Chowdhrain, 9 W. R., 525.

Held that no separate suit would lie for mesne profits accruing during the pendency of the suit and delivery of possession. Section 10, Act VIII of 1859, provides for mesne profits accruing before the suit. Oonkur Dass v. Heera Singé, 1 Agra Rep., A. C. 141.

Section 15.

Unless a plaintiff can show that there is some relief which a Court can give, no declaratory right can be made, and no suit will lie under Section 15, Act VIII of 1859. When a plaintiff in a suit asks for one thing (e.g., exclusive possession), a Court ought not to give him a decree because he proves that he is entitled to another thing (e.g., joint possession). Beejoyouth Chatterjee v. Luckhee Monee Dabee, 12 W. R., 248.

When a plaintiff succeeds to declare that a deed is valid, and to confirm his possession under it, and fails to show sufficient cause for the Court's interference under Section 15, Act VIII of 1859, the Court ought simply to declare to that effect, and not to determine that the plaintiff has no right, and that the deed is void. Phoolchunder Lall v. Shoranee Koonwar, 9 W. R., 104.

Where the defendant alienated property in which he had merely a life-interest,—Held that the alienation was invalid as against the plaintiff, who was entitled as reversioner. Held also that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree declaratory of his title under Section 15 of Act VII of 1859. Taramulla Thamul v. Venkataram, 2 Mad. Rep., 378.

In order to entitle a plaintiff to a bare declaration of right under Section 15, Act VII of 1859, he must make out, to the satisfaction of the Court, some act done by the defendant which is hostile to
ity. Case and others, 4.

cise its discretion. *Kenaram Chuckerbutty v.
Denonath Panda, 9 W. R., 325.*

In suits for declaratory decrees under Section 15, Act VIII of 1859, it is entirely in the discretion of the Court to grant or to withhold relief, and each case must be judged by its own particular circumstances.

Purse Jan Khatoon and others v. Bykunt Chunder Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 380.

A suit for confirmation of possession by declaratory title was remanded to the Lower Appellate Court for enquiry whether the injury complained of was so recent and of such a nature as to entitle the plaintiff to a declaratory decree with reference to the terms of Section 15, Act VIII of 1859.

Held that the Lower Appellate Court was competent, under the order of remand, to enquire into the question of possession. *Bykunt Chunder Chuckerbutty and another v. Puru Jan Khatoon

Suit instituted by a lineal descendant of Mahomed
B. K., for a declaration of the Court, under Section 15 of Act VIII of 1859, that certain lands and premises in Calcutta were waqf lands, under a certain towliatnamah executed by the said Mahomed
B. K., the authenticity of which was admitted, and that the defendants who were in possession might be restrained by injunction from recovering the rents of, or intermeddling with, the said lands or premises, and that it might be referred to the Court in chambers to appoint a proper person to act as mutwallee under the said towliatnamah, and that such mutwallee, when so appointed, might be declared entitled to the said lands and premises.
The causes of action were alleged to have arisen that such mutwallee, when so appointed, might be restrained by injunction from recovering
the rents of, or intermeddling with, the said lands
or premises, and that it might be referred to the Court in chambers to appoint a proper person to act as mutwallee under the said towliatnamah, and that such mutwallee, when so appointed, might be declared entitled to the said lands and premises.
The causes of action were alleged to have arisen
that such mutwallee, when so appointed, might be declared entitled to the said lands and premises.
The causes of action were alleged to have arisen that such mutw callee, when so appointed, might be declared entitled to the said lands and premises.

Before the enactment of Act VIII of 1859, Section 15, a suit could not have been brought for a mere declaration of title without consequential relief. A suit cannot be brought against several defendants to eject one, and to obtain a declaration of title against the rest. *Nana Mauni and others

Under Section 15 of Act VIII of 1859, it is discrionary with the Court whether it will make a declaratory decree or not. In a suit brought for confirmation of possession by a declaration of right determination of boundaries in respect of certain land of which the plaintiff was in possession, by setting aside a new Thakbust map, prepared by the Deputy Collector, and a proceeding before that officer to which the plaintiff was no party, the plaintiff not having gone before the Deputy Collector and pointed out to him the ground upon which the defendant the map was not correct, — Held that the plaintiff ought to have a declaratory decree. Baboo Matee Lall and others v. Maharajah Bhooj Singh Bahadour and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 245.

In a suit brought, on the ground of an existing right of inheritance, for immediate possession and mesne profits, by setting aside an adoption, the Court will not allow the form of action to be changed, and proceed to decide whether (the claim for possession on the ground of an existing right being abandoned) a declaratory order may not issue for setting aside the adoption, but will, on failure of right to immediate possession, dismiss the suit.

According to Section 15, Act VIII of 1859, declaratory orders can be issued only in suits brought to obtain such orders. Rance Rajessuree Koonwar and others v. Maharance Inderjeet Koonwar and others, 6 W. R., 1.

Act VIII of 1859, Section 15, does not give power to the Court to give a declaratory decree, unless the position of the parties is one of hostility to one another. The plaintiff must come into Court with some definite complaint against the defendant, which is such as admits of specific relief being afforded by the Court with regard to it. He cannot, irrespective of all behaviour on the part of the person whom he makes defendant, bring that person into Court merely for the purpose of getting the Court to clear up difficulties, whether of fact or law, which may have arisen between himself and the defendant. He must generally allege and rely upon some cause of action against the defendant, except in that class of cases in which the Court gives its aids towards the fulfilment of trusts, and this principle is not affected by Section 15 of Act VIII of 1859. Therefore, where a plaintiff bought, at a sale in execution of a decree, the right, title, and interest of one defendant, a judgment-debtor, in a ship, and by his plaint sought to discover the bona fide of certain transactions by way of mortgage between the judgment-debtor and the other defendants, and asked a declaration that he, as purchaser, was entitled to the said land, the remaining two-fifths and one-fifth belonging respectively to a brother and sister of S. J., when S. J. gave the conveyance, it was endorsed by his sister. This endorsement amounted to an estoppel as against her, or any one claiming through her, against saying that S. J. had not a full right to convey.

Held also that it was not necessary to make the personal representatives of the mortgagor parties. He who has the equity of redemption is the only necessary party. Blaquiere v. Ramdhone Dossi, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 319.

Where the Receiver of an estate appointed by the High Court on its original side, received permission to bring a suit on behalf of the parties interested in the estate, and brought the suit in his own name, it was held that, though the framework of the suit was erroneous, yet the error being one of form only, and no objection on the ground of that error having been taken in the Court below, such objection could not be allowed to prevail in the Court of Appeal, which might amend the proceedings without consent of the parties interested, or further notice of appeal. Jagannath Prosad Dutta v. C. S. Hogg and others, 12 W. R., 117.

The Court will not, except for some very cogent reason, order principal parties to leave the Court during the hearing of a case. Bwddarella v. Issureeprasun, 1 Hyde's Rep., 249.

In a suit by a superior holder (representing the vendee) for the recovery of certain potsahs, which were alleged to have been granted) for a declaration that the potsahs were forgeries, against a party holding a portion of land by a title derived from lessees under those potsahs, it was held that all the parties interested in and holding under the potsahs should be made parties to the suit, on the principle that all persons who are interested in the question must be made parties to a suit in a Court of Equity. Dhurckimn Roy v. Ameerudden Mahomed, 12 W. R., 247.

Wife made party to the suit, on the ground that a building on the estate was erected by her husband with money forming her separate estate. Gonga Dutt v. Bisnounath Ghose and Indroomoni Dasse, Cor. Rep., 41.

The representatives of a deceased partner are not necessary parties to an action for damages under a guarantee to the original firm. Burking-young v. Bhooohn Mohun Banojee, Cor. Rep., 90.

A person cannot at one time set himself up as a substantial party in a suit, contesting it in both the lower Courts on the merits, and then turn round and say in special appeal that he has nothing to do with it, and has been unnecessarily brought in. Kristo Gopal Shaha v. Kasenauth Shaha and another, 6 W. R., 66.

Where a party in the position of a mere stakeholder is made a defendant in a suit, his proper course, under the Civil Procedure Code, is to pay the money into Court and ask that the parties really interested may be substituted for himself as defendants. Assaram Burlia v. The Commercial Transport Association, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 113.

The firm of C., T. and Co. acted as agents for the trustees of G. D. It appeared, from entries in their books, headed "Account of the Trustees for G. D.," that the firm had in their hands Rs. 12,453 to the credit of the trustees in 1848, at which time the firm stopped payment. D. T., a member of the firm of C., T. and Co., and W. S., were the trustees. In the earlier accounts the names of D. T. and W. S. both appeared; in the later ones.

namely, from 1842 until they were closed in 1848, at the head of the account, there was a memorandum written in small letters "D. T., trustees," but it did not appear that W. S. had ever renounced the trust, or conveyed the trust to D. T. In 1846 D. T. died, leaving G. and T., the surviving partners of the firm, the executors of his will. W. S. survived D. T. In 1867, the representative of G. D. brought a suit for an account against G. and T., as the executors of D. T. Held upon the facts that there was no proof that any specific property, the subject of the trust, had come to the hands of G. and T. as executors of D. T., and any other claim was barred by Section 2, Act XIV of 1859.

Semble.—No suit would lie in the absence of W. S., or his representative, as a party. J. C. Michie v. D. M. Gordon and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 271.

A party who had sued, on the part of himself and of his minor brother, to recover possession of ancestral property alleged to have been alienated, sold his rights and interests in the suit to a third party, whose name was accordingly substituted in the place of plaintiff. Held that the substitution of such party for the plaintiff, in respect of part of the latter's share in the subject-matter of the suit, did not make that party a party to the suit, and gave him no status which would enable him to appeal. Salkur Roy v. Choozer Singh, 2 W. R., 487.

Where the purchaser of a plaintiff's rights was substituted for the plaintiff, the irregularity was held to be cured by the consent of the defendant, implied in his offering no opposition, but appealing from the judgment on the merits, making the substituted plaintiff one of the respondents. Bier Chunder Roy v. Sheikh Tumpeetoodeen, 12 W. R., 87.

In the case of an unincorporated or unregistered company, the plaintiff, if he does not know of what persons the company is composed, may sue the company by the name under which they are carrying on business, stating in this plaint his inability to describe them better. Koylakch Chunder Roy v. Education Dept., 8 W. R., 47.

Where a person sues another as liable for the acts of the accredited agent of the latter, it is not necessary that the alleged agent should be made a party to the suit.

The omis lies on the plaintiff to prove that the alleged agent was the duly accredited agent of the defendants in reference to the transaction, the subject of the claim. Hath Ram and others v. Gobind Ram, 4 Agra Rep., 131.

In a suit by A. on a bond in favour of B., the plaintiff may show by oral evidence that the money secured by the bond was his own; but where B. has sold A. must either entitle himself B.'s personal representative or make B.'s personal representative a party to the suit. Derva Ram v. Venkatesa Achary, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 452.

Convenience requires that in suits where there is community of interest amongst a large number of persons, a few should be allowed to represent the whole; and if the whole body be represented in the suit, then it is proper that the whole body should be bound by the decree, though some members of the body are not parties named in the record. Srikhand Narayinappas v. Indupuran Ramahugam, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 226.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain land said to have been included in a talooka pottah given him by the zamindars, alleging that defendants were obstructing his possession. For the defence it was averred that these lands fell within a nine annas share which belonged to one D., and that by process of sale they became the right of other parties under whom defendants held as lessees.

Held that it was unnecessary to make the lessors on either side parties in the case. Nagur Chand v. Doorga Doss Chowdry and others, 11 W. R., 137.

Where a gross fraud is being practised on a Court, with the object of evading an order which the Court has made directing a minor's guardians to account, any person who appears before the Court and exposes the fraud, undertaking also to prove it, has a locus standi in Court, and has a right to be heard. Hossein Ali Khan v. Syed Burkat Ali, 10 W. R., 372.

An interpleader-suit is not improperly constituted merely because one of the defendants does not claim the whole of the subject-matter. The Secretary of State v. Mir Mahomed Hossain and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 360.

No appeal lies from an order passed under Section 21, Act VIII of 1859, declining to issue notice as against certain alleged legal representatives of an original party. Bibee Sohadra v. Roy Kalitha Soy, W. R., 1864, Mis., 23.

Exemption from arrest on process of execution under Section 21, Act VIII of 1859, does not extend to all women of rank, but is limited to the women therein described,—women, that is, "who, according to the custom and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public." J. Davis and others v. M. A. Middleton and others, 8 W. R., 282.

One of several shareholders who obtained a decree for a kabooleut from several defendants, cannot sue for his individual and separate share of the rents, without making all the shareholders party to the suit. Har Khowar v. Bhoorjiah v. Jagoogl Rishore Saha Roy, 16 S. W. R., 399.

Where a minor and her father are made co-defendants, the latter, and not the minor's mother, is the proper party to defend the suit, even though he may have no personal knowledge of the facts. Jooobraj Chowkedar v. Whelan, Rampiar v. Whelan, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 399.

In a suit by putneedars for arrears of rent, where parties who had subsequently acquired an interest in the putnee appeared and petitioned the Court assenting to the suit being carried out in the names of the plaintiffs,—Held, that there was a sufficiently constituted suit and a sufficient array of parties to enable the Court to give a decree. Sreenath Mookerjee v. J. White, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 126.

In a suit for declaration of right against a proprietor of an estate, it is necessary that the proprietor himself, and not his karindah only, be made a party to the suit. Madho Rao Apa v. Thakoor Pershad, 3 Agra Rep., 127.

In a suit by A. against B. and C. in which a decree was given against B. alone,—Held that C. could not be made liable, either on the appeal of B., or on the cross-appeal of A. to B.'s appeal.
When an inhabitant of foreign territory sues within British territory, it is imperative on the Court to demand security from him for the payment of all costs that may be incurred by the defendant in the suit, even though the defendant is also a resident of foreign territory. Koromoye Debia v. Oma Churn Dutt, 12 W. R., 465.

In an action brought by the manager of a concern, on the basis of a contrary separation by defendant, and addressed to a previous manager, now deceased, it was held that, as the plaintiff did not disclose that the plaintiff had any interest of his own in the suit, and as the contract was not in terms with him personally, he could not maintain the action in his own name. C. Glasscott v. Gopal Shaikh, 9 W. R., 254.

To question an Act of State, directly or indirectly, the contention must be raised in a suit duly constituted, to which the Government must be made a party. Nawab Umjdi Ali Khan v. Mohumdee Begum and another, 10 W. R., P. C., 25.

In a suit by two plaintiffs for the value of personal property plundered, if the cause, time, place, and parties charged be the same in both instances, the fact that both plaintiffs have not a joint interest in the whole of the property plundered by the defendants is insufficient to put them out of Court. Jugobundhoo Dutt v. C. B. Masyek, W. R., 81.

Misjoinder of claims without proof of substantial injury sustained thereby, is no ground for special appeal. Durshun Pandey v. Mussamut Saminah Bebee, 1 W. R., 114.

Misjoinder of parties is not an objection which can be allowed to be taken in special appeal. Tiluck Chunder Chuckerbity v. Muddun Mohun Jogee, 12 W. R., 504.

The provision of Section 9, Code of Civil Procedure, under which a Court has power to order separate trials of different causes of action if they cannot be conveniently tried together, applies only to causes of action mentioned in Section 8, i.e., by and against the same parties. Kossella Koer v. Behary Patuck, 12 W. R., 70.

A suit by a zamindar for possession of lands and for arrears of rent of those lands under a kubuleut given by the defendant, and to set aside a summary award of a Deputy Collector, and to have it declared that a bhakee bisit tenure set up by the defendant, is not merely fraudulent, or bad on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action. In such a case, all the distinct portions of the plaintiff's claim form, support, and have a relation to and connection with his proprietary title which he seeks to confirm, and which prima-facie entitles him to the collections. Maharaj Rajender Kishwar Singh v. Sheopusharn Misur, 5 W. R., P. C., 5.

Courts should reject plaintiffs against several defendants for causes of action which have accrued against each of them separately, and in respect of which they are not jointly concerned. Motee Lal and others v. Ranee, 8 W. R., 64.

In trying together two distinct suits turning upon entire documents, a lower Appellate Court was held to have reversed the procedure indicated in Section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Ram Nidhree Koondoo v. Goluck Chunder Moskanto and others, 11 W. R., 280.

The claims of different parties setting up different leases from A., and thus opposing the purchaser of the estate from A. in obtaining possession, may be joined in one suit brought to set aside their leases, and to recover the profits which they had misappropriated. Shooroop Chunder Paul v. Mahoor Mohun Paul Chowdary, 4 W. R., 109.

Lands were sold, and the purchase-money paid. The vendor was unable to give the purchaser possession, or to return the purchase-money, and gave him bonds for the amount. It afterwards appeared that others were jointly interested with the vendor in the land; and the Court below, on the ground of such joint interest, held that the vendor must be taken to have executed the bonds as their agent, as well as on his own account, and made a decree for the plaintiff in a suit on the bonds in which they were joined as defendants. Held that, whatever might be the liability as between the different members of the family inter se, the vendor alone was liable to be sued on the bond. Ramtall Bha-gut v. Mussamut Kullabuttee Koonwuree, Marsh., 9.

The dismissal by the judge, on appeal, of a suit for rent as multifarious, because brought against some forty tenants holding separately, was upheld in special appeal, notwithstanding the objection that the plea was not taken in the first Court. Gunesh Persad v. W. Wilson, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 86.

A village had been divided into four separate portions, with four different parties who were afterwards dispossessed under one and the same survey award which demarcated the village as appertaining to the defendant's estate. Held that the four parties could sue jointly. Anund Chunder Ghose v. Kom Naran Singh, 2 W. R., 219.

The Court should reject plaintiffs against several defendants for causes of action which have accrued against each of them separately, and in respect of which they are not jointly concerned. Raja Ram Tewary and others v. Luchmun Pershad and others, 8 W. R., 15.

Only persons, whose claims must necessarily be taken into consideration before deciding on the defendant's title, should be joined as defendants in a suit. The Government v. W. Ferguson, 9 W. R., 158.

Where the plaintiffs in a suit put forward a joint claim, it is not enough that one of them makes out the plaintiff's title; the suit should be dismissed, unless the joint claim is established. Ram Comul Chucker-bity v. Nund Ram Coola and others, 10 W. R., 261.

tenant to two parties jointly, the obligation can only be properly enforced by a suit brought by those parties jointly. Gopal Chunder Gooko v. Jwamal, 10 W. R., 411.

A suit to recover possession as cultivators, brought by two plaintiffs, whose holdings, although originally one, have for a long time been separated and held separately, will be dismissed for misjoinder. Giruler v. Syud Nya Al, 2 N. W. R., 306.

The misjoinder of plaintiff, which does not produce error in the decision of the case on its merits, is not a ground for the reversal of a decree on special appeal.

Semble,—That such misjoinder is not a ground for the reversal of a decree in regular appeal. Where the widow of H., a Muhammadan, and his two daughters, brought a joint suit for their respective shares of the estate of H., which were awarded to them jointly,—

_Held_ that this was an error of procedure which did not affect the merits of the case. Sayid Miyu Gulam Nabi et al. v. Khuranbibbi, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. I., 177.

_Held_ that there was no misjoinder of different causes in a suit including plaintiff's whole claim, where his cause of action was that the Revenue Commissioners had taken possession of his lands and given it in pottah to other people. In the matter of Ruinsuirr Duss, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 381.

Plaintiff having obtained a decree establishing his title to a number of villages constituting one talooqua, subsequently brought one suit against all the persons severally in possession of the several estates constituting the talooqua for mesne profits during their wrongful possession,—_Held_ that there being no common liability, the suit must be dismissed for misjoinder. Koondun Lal v. Rai Himmul Singh, 3 N. W. R., 86.

A Lower Appellate Court has no power to reverse the decree of a Court of first instance on the ground of misjoinder of parties. Ram Kunye Chuckerbutty v. Frossono Cooorin Stein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 176.

In a suit for rent, as of a single howalah, where the defendants pleaded, and the Court found, that the lands constituted two howalahs,—_Held_ that it would not be necessary to dismiss the suit; but on general principles, and for the comfort of the defendant, the Court might try the other issues, and do justice between the parties. Sureep Chun

J. L. and H. N., brothers, members of a joint Hindu family, subject to the Mitakshara law, borrowed money by absolute and conditional sales of their joint estate. After the death of J. L., his son, J. L., brought against a decree establishing his title to a number of villages constituting one talooqua, subsequently brought one suit against all the persons severally in possession of the several estates constituting the talooqua for mesne profits during their wrongful possession,—_Held_ that there being no common liability, the suit must be dismissed for misjoinder. Koondun Lal v. Rai Himmul Singh, 3 N. W. R., 86.

Four plaintiffs sued as partners; but it was found, during the trial, that they were not all partners at the time the cause of action accrued; and the Judge thereupon amended the issue which had been raised on that point, and raised the question whether the plaintiffs were or were not partners. And it being decided in the negative, the Judge ordered two of the plaintiffs' names to be struck out of the plaint, and he gave a decree in favour of the other plaintiffs. _Held_, that the Judge acted rightly in amending the issue, but that he should have done so without striking the names of the plaintiffs out of the plaint. Such an error is "an error in an interlocutory order not affecting the merits of the case;" and therefore under Section 350, Act VIII of 1859, not a ground for reversing the decree on appeal. East India Railway Company v. F. J. Jordan, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 97.

In a suit to recover property bought by one S. and his mother D. as guardian of his minor brother, where it was found that D. alone was entitled to the properties as heir to its owner, her late father,—_Held_ that it was not necessary to dismiss the suit on account of its formal incorrectness, but the name of S. should have been struck off the record, and the suit allowed to proceed as that of D. alone. Sreeparl Harhah and others v. Gyaram Hate and others, 11 W. R., 507.

The plaintiffs are three widows of three out of five sons, and sue for their husbands' shares of property, on the allegation that the five sons possessed property left by their father at his decease, that the three widows had, since their husbands' deaths, been holding possession of their husbands' shares in co-parcenary with the other two surviving sons; and that the said co-parceners in collusion with the other defendants contracted debts, and allowed them to purchase the property at auction, whereby the plaintiffs have been dispossessed.

_Held_ that the finding that the husbands of two of the plaintiffs died before their father was fatal to the claim, not only of these two plaintiffs, but also of the third plaintiff who chose to join the other two in a suit of this sort.

_Held_, further, that the plaint in this suit was bad on the ground of multiplicity, and should not have been admitted, inasmuch as the acts of the purchaser defendants in taking possession being found to be separate acts, the suit was in reality three suits against so many different defendants. Even if the plaint was rectified, the Court at the hearing should have insisted on the plaintiffs making an election of a cause of action, and of a defendant, on which which and against whom they may proceed. Hurro Monee Dossi and others v. Onoookool Chin der Mookerjee and others, 8 W. R., 461.

A plaintiff who with his co-sharers has given a joint lease to the defendant, is not competent to sue alone for his undivided share of the rent. Ramjoy Singh v. Nagur Ghaze, 5 W. R., Act X R., 68.

12.—CO-PLAINTIFFS AND CO-DEFENDANTS.

When a third party's cause of action is different from that of a plaintiff in a suit, he cannot be made

Where co-sharers who had paid their share of revenue assessments were made defendants in a suit for contribution, together with other co-sharers whose proportion was paid by the plaintiff, the defendants who have paid are entitled to their costs of appearing, and notwithstanding the plaintiff may have made no claim against them, but has joined them merely for the sake of conformity. Golam Ahmed Shaw and others v. Behary Lal and others, Marsh., 239.

A decision in a suit between a plaintiff and two defendants does not conclude any question between the two defendants. Obhey Churn Nundee v. Bhoon Mouzoomdar, 12 W. R., 524.

It was considered, under the circumstances of this case, not consistent with the principles of equity and good conscience, to refuse a clearly proved right on the technical ground that on one co-defendant's appeal no decision adverse to another co-defendant can be come to. Ooday Singh v. Paluck Singh, 16 W. R., C. R., 271.

In a suit by A. against B., in which C. intervened and was made a co-plaintiff with A.—Held that the Court ought only to have decided the controversy between the co-plaintiffs on the one side and the defendant on the other, and (instead of declaring the respective interests of the plaintiffs in that stage of the case) to have left them, if they disputed as to their shares in the amount of their decree, to make that the subject of a fresh suit. Demoor Doss v. Choomee Bikke, Cor. Rep., 120; S. C., 2 Hyde's Rep., 216.

The personal attendance of either party to a suit is not to be insisted upon if he live more than fifty miles from the place where the Court is held. Sheikh Golam Bukhsee v. Pulton Singh, 3 W. R., Act X R., 162.

A Rajah instituted a suit under Act X of 1859 through an agent appointed in that behalf. The Deputy Collector cited the Rajah himself to appear and be examined. He excused himself on the ground of the privilege under Act VIII of 1859, Section 22, and at the same time petitioned that the evidence of his general agent might be taken. The Deputy Collector, without examining the general agent, dismissed the suit, on the ground that the suit ought to have been instituted by the general agent; and that the Rajah himself was bound to obey his citation. Held that the Deputy Collector was bound to receive the evidence of the general agent and to decide the case upon the evidence which was tendered; and that the refusal of the Rajah, who had the privilege which he claimed, and his appointment of a special agent or mookhtear for the purposes of the suit, instead of his general agent, were no grounds for dismissing the suit. Maharajah Jyegud Indur Bunwarte and others v. Sooroomar Chowdery and another, Marsh., 627.

A Court is justified in declining to summon a plaintiff when defendant, has failed to give any kind of proof. Chytnunu Chunder Roy v. Kedarnath Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

A defendant who has appeared on one or more occasions, and contested the suit up to a certain point, is not a defendant who has not appeared in the sense of Section 58, Act X of 1859, because at some subsequent stage of the proceedings he was not present when the suit was heard. Radha par sand Singh v. Sansar Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 37.

Under Section 45 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a defendant in a suit is entitled to “sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer in person or by pleader.”

What may be “sufficient time” in a particular case, can only be determined by considering the peculiar circumstances of the case. Where the time allowed is manifestly insufficient, an Appellate Court will interfere. Khadur Bhi v. Rahiman Bhi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 167.

Where defendants, summoned under Section 41 of Act VII of 1859, did not appear on the day fixed for them to appear and answer, and their reasons for not appearing were not being considered sufficient, they were not allowed to appear in the case.—Held that the lower Appellate Court was right in refusing to hear an appeal from that decision. Joy Prokash Singh v. Megraj Singh, 12 W. R., 208.

14.—Addition of Parties.

The plaintiffs having filed their plaint against parties prima facie liable to them upon the contract, and having opposed a claim made by the original defendants to have the suit dismissed as against them on their paying money into Court, and to have third parties added as defendants not being considered sufficient, the defendants were not allowed to appear in the case,—Held that the lower Appellate Court was right in refusing to hear an appeal from that decision. Joy Prokash Singh v. Megraj Singh, 12 W. R., 208.

were rightly made defendants, as having been interested both in the subject-matter and in the result of the suit; and, even if they had been wrongly made defendants, the onus would, under the circumstances, remain on the plaintiffs. Ram Taruck Ghophiu v. Ru dha Bultul Sircar, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 97.

14. Where a co-heir, who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, for an account of the estate of the deceased proprietor, a third party was added as a defendant under Section 73 of Act VIII of 1859, "it appearing from the accounts put in that a large portion of the assets had been disposed of by him as agent" of the holder of the certificate. On appeal, held that a co-heir is entitled to follow property of the deceased into the hands of any person who has misappropriated it, and such right is not taken away by the certificate. Therefore any person who, with the consent of the holder of the certificate, has improperly possessed himself of property belonging to the deceased, and misappropriated it, may be joined as a co-defendant. The third party was rightly so joined in this case.

The words in Section 73 of Act VIII of 1859, "who may be likely to be affected by the results," construed to mean, "likely to be affected, if added as parties." Nyu Thu Yu v. Mi Khun Mhaw, 5 B. L. R., 371; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 443.

After the dismissal of the plaintiffs' suit, and pending a regular appeal to the High Court, the plaintiffs applied for leave to add the name of a party to whom a share of their right in the subject-matter had been assigned subsequently to the dismissal of the suit in the Court below. The Court refused the application. Mussamut Jamuela and others v. Mahomed Hassien, Marsh., 251.

When a party is substituted or added as a defendant, under Section 73, Code of Civil Procedure, the suit is commenced as against him from the time he is made a defendant, and not before; and limitation runs in his favour up to the date of his admission into the suit. Ethian Chunder Bamerjee v. Krisgulity Nag, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 377.

Plaintiffs having succeeded in a suit for a foreclosure of a mortgage, by a conditional bill of sale, of a share of two mouzahs, then sued for possession and registration of names as proprietors. Whilst this suit was pending, certain parties intervened and asked to be made parties under Section 73, Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that plaintiffs' vendors were not entitled to the full share claimed, as they themselves had purchased a portion thereof.

Held that the Court exercised a wise and proper discretion in allowing the intervenors to be made parties, for a decree in plaintiffs' favour, though not legally binding on them, would, nevertheless, have caused them great difficulty in all matters of rent. Saligram Singh v. Gheno Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 19.

The object of Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, is to prevent needless litigation, and there are cases, e.g., when it is necessary to make plaintiff's co-parners defendants, when a Judge should exercise the discretion vested in him by that section, even if the plaintiff omits to ask him to do so. Motu Chund Dass v. Mooeneh Dhur Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 432.

An order adding a party to a case is not one affecting the merits in the sense of Section 363; but where such order is made without postponing the case (Section 73) for a reasonable time, it is a very important matter. Koomara Oopendra Krishna Deb v. Nobin Krishna Bose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 370.

Where a corporate body, e.g., the East India Railway Company, is sued, not in its corporate capacity, but through an agent, the suit is brought in a wrong form.

As, in such a case, the corporate body is not likely to be affected by the result of the suit, a Court is justified in refusing an application to make such corporate body a party in the suit under Section 73, Act VIII, 1859. Nobun Chunder Paul v. C. Stephenson, agent of the East India Railway Company, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 534.

In a suit to enforce the performance of a contract on the allegation that defendant had received the consideration money, but refused to execute the conveyance, a third party intervened alleging a subsequent conveyance of the same property by an instrument which had been registered. The First Court dismissed the plaint, but the Lower Appellate Court gave plaintiff a decree against both parties,—Held that it was irregular to place an intervenor upon the record and decide an issue between him and the other parties to the suit. Gurdadzhur Chatterjea v. Raj Kisto Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 73.

In a former suit by A. against his agent for an account of the collections of a certain share in land, B. intervened and was made a party. In that suit the Court declared A. to be the zamindar, and as such entitled to the rents and to an account,—Held that that finding was binding against B. in a subsequent suit against him by A. for recovery of the same share. Shco Suru Singh v. Ram Khelawan Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 165.

In a suit for confirmation of possession and registration of names on the allegation that plaintiffs' possession had been disturbed by defendant's interference in the collection of rents, a third party intervened stating that he was in possession, and that the parties through whom plaintiffs claimed had no right or interest in the property. Held that the intervenor was rightly made a defendant under Section 73 of the Civil Procedure Code,—Held, also, that this did not shift the burden of proof from the plaintiffs, who were bound to prove their own case. Kjinul Sahoo v. Gooroo Bukih Koor, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 362.

15.—RULINGS UNDER SECTION 73 OF THE CODE.

When a co-defendant (a co-sharer with the plaintiff in the property in dispute) was thought by the Judge to be a necessary party as respondent in the appeal,—Held that the Judge should, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, and otherwise, have caused him to be made a respondent, instead of dismissing the appeal. Achumbah Pawry v. Ramsahoy Pawrr, 2 W. R., 1864.

Where a plaintiff is admitted as a co-plaintiff, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, limitation will count against him, not up to the date of his own admission, but up to the date of the filing of the original plaint. Kalee Kishore Chatterjee v. Luckhee Debca Chowdhrain and others, 6 W. R., 172.
PARTIES TO ACTION—RULINGS UNDER SECTION 73 OF THE CODE.

When a party is substituted or added as a defendant, under Section 73 of Act VIII of 1859, the suit is commenced against him at that time, and not before; therefore, where A. sued B., as representative of C. for land, and more than twelve years after the cause of action accrued found that B. was not in possession, but D., and by order of Court D. was substituted as defendant.—Held the claim against D. was barred. Raj Kishore Doss v. Bu lbun Chunder Shaw and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 49; S. C., 6 W. R., 298.

An intervenor claiming under a title adverse to that set up both by the plaintiff and the defendant, may be made a defendant, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, if his interest in the subject-matter of dispute is likely to be affected by the decision between them as in a suit for possession by foreclosure before; therefore, where A. sued B., as representative of C. for land, and more than twelve years after the cause of action accrued found that B. was not in possession, but D., and by order of Court D. was substituted as defendant.—Held the claim against D. was barred. Raj Kishore Doss v. Bu lbun Chunder Shaw and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 49; S. C., 6 W. R., 298.

An intervenor claiming under a title adverse to that set up both by the plaintiff and the defendant, may be made a defendant, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, if his interest in the subject-matter of dispute is likely to be affected by the decision between them as in a suit for possession by foreclosure before; therefore, where A. sued B., as representative of C. for land, and more than twelve years after the cause of action accrued found that B. was not in possession, but D., and by order of Court D. was substituted as defendant.—Held the claim against D. was barred. Raj Kishore Doss v. Bu lbun Chunder Shaw and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 49; S. C., 6 W. R., 298.

Held that it is opposed to the spirit of the Civil Procedure Code to dismiss a suit merely on account of there being defective of parties,—the Court, under Section 73 of the Code, being vested with the power of making the persons who seem to be interested in the subject-matter parties to the suit. Ruchpaul v. J ohures, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 147.

Where one son of a deceased party sued in the Recorder's Court another son, who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, for his share of the deceased's estate, it was held that the Recorder had no power to transform the suit into a general administration suit. The Court may, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, order all necessary parties who claim a share in the subject-matter of the suit to be made parties. Oh Singhe v. Aw ki nifee, 10 W. R., 86.

It is discretionary with a Court to add defendants under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859. The exercise of such a discretion cannot be interfered with, unless it is manifestly judicial and wrong. Dyram Seal v. Issur Chunder Chuckerbutty, 2 W. R., 118.

Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, is permissive, not imperative. Discretion is vested in a Court to make persons not before it parties to a suit. Poran Mund ul Mollah v. Sh am Chand Ghose, 1 W. R., 228.

Where a Hindu widow instituted a suit in respect of rights inherited by her from her deceased husband, and then adopted a son,—Held that, under Section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the adopted son might be made a co-plaintiff. Pervartani v. Ambalavana Pillai, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 197.

A Court may, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, add parties to a suit, as well as transpose a party from his position as pro forma defendant, and array him amongst the plaintiffs after amendment of the plaint under Section 29. Pitambar Pyne v. Toolsee Dosses, 7 S. W. R., 39.

No person ought, under Section 73, to be added as a plaintiff whose right of action is barred by the Law of Limitation. Kishen Lall Chowdhry v. Chunder Coomar Roy, W. R., 1864, 152.

A person cannot be made a party to a suit under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, unless he is likely to be affected by the result of the suit. The title of the plaintiff only will form the subject of the decree. Joygobind Doss v. Gourpreehsa Shaha and others, 7 W. R., 201.

An application made in due time by a person who has an interest in the result of the suit praying to be added as a defendant under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, ought to be granted. Koylalnath Roy v. Nirendur Koomar Dut Chowdry, 5 W. R., 109.

A suit having been instituted by a guardian in the name of an infant, without a certificate under Act XL of 1859, was dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. The minor on coming of age applied to have his name substituted on the record. The High Court, under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, ordered that his name should be added as plaintiff, and that the suit should be proceeded with. But as the dismissal by the lower Court was correct so far as the materials before the Court enabled it to deal with the suit, the order of remand was not to take effect until all the costs of the defendant had been paid by the plaintiffs. Madhuchhunder Chowdry v. Bukteswree Debea, 12 W. R., 102.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession of a share of an estate which he alleged he purchased from the principal defendant, who denied plaintiff's title on the ground that the purchase-money had not been paid. Subsequently certain persons prayed to be made defendants, as they held a durnokurree, and were not liable to be turned out. They were accordingly added as defendants under Section 73, Civil Procedure Code. It then appeared that the possession sought by plaintiff was khas possession.—Held that although it was primâ-facie necessary for these intervenors to be made defendants, yet, after the intention of the plaintiff became apparent, nothing would be gained by removing them from the record, even if the Court had power to do so in special appeal. Kewul Sahoo v. Issun Dyal Roy, 12 W. R., 334.

In a suit brought on the allegation that defendant had sold to plaintiff certain talooks, but had not put him in possession, in which defendant pleaded that he had put plaintiff in possession, and in which third party petitioned, stating that defendant had only been joined owner of the talook with a co-heir, whose right, title, and interest petitioner had purchased,—Held that it was irregular to make this petitioner defendant, and that Section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not enable parties, who are not likely to be affected by the result, to come into the suit and raise new questions which do not properly arise. Puddloochun Stein v. Lal chund Goopita, 10 W. R., 283.

In a suit to recover possession of a certain mouza, claimed by the plaintiff as a portion of his dur-putnee talook, which was brought against several defendants, four other persons applied to be made defendants, on the ground that they were co-sharers with the defendants on the record in the property in dispute. The application was granted; the added defendants were found to be possessed of the share which they claimed; and on the proofs which they adduced the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. The plaintiff's claim, as against the original defendants who made no opposition, was decreed in special appeal, on the ground that they should not have been made defendants, and that the plaintiff was not bound to prove his case against anybody else but the person against whom he had brought the suit.—Held that Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, leaves to the Courts of original jurisdiction a discretion in such cases; that the section is not limited entirely to cases where the suit as framed cannot proceed; that the words “persons who may be likely to be affected by the result” do not mean persons on whom the result would be legally binding. Held also that, upon the one issue common to all the defendants, viz., whether the property claimed was in the plaintiff’s talook or in that of the defendants, the Court could only come to one consistent finding; and that on the finding of the facts in the Court below the suit should be dismissed against all the defendants. Kaliprasad Singh v. Jainarayan Roy, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 24.

It is the duty of every Court to pass distinct orders upon all petitions and applications properly presented to it in connection with any suit pending before it.

When an application is made in due time by a person who has an interest in the result of the suit, praying to be added as a defendant under Section 73 of Act VIII of 1859, the application ought to be granted. Koylasmath Roy v. Nurendur Koomar Dutt Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 109.

The action of the Court under Section 73, Act VIII of 1856, is a matter of discretion, and, upon a true construction of Sections 363 and 350, not a matter of appeal; but an appeal will lie after decree against interlocutory orders, if they affect the decision on the merits or the jurisdiction of the Court. Ridhunath Sahoy v. Gopee Sahoy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 90.

CIVIL PROCEDURE—MISCELLANEOUS.

I.—PLAINTS.

(a) Miscellaneous.

The reception of a plaint for arrears of rent by the Collector on Good Friday, although by the Collector or by the Board of Revenue such day is not an authorized holiday, is not illegal. There is no illegality in the reception of a plaint engrossed on insufficient stamp paper, if the full amount of the stamp duty has been paid at the time. Suits for arrears of rent are to be instituted within three years from the last day of the Bengal (or other) year in which the arrears claimed shall have become due. Gobind Kumar Chowdhrv v. Hurgopal Nag, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 72; S. C., 12 W. R., 537.

Where an appeal had been compromised before a Bench of the Sudder Court, and in the presence of the parties, before it had been entered in the cause list hung up in the Court-room,—Held that appeal was entitled to a refund of the full amount of stamp duty paid by him. In the matter of Yugobrindle v. C. B. Marley, 7 W. R., 157.

An appeal has been compromised before a Bench of the Sudder Court, and in the presence of the parties, before it had been entered in the cause list hung up in the Court-room,—Held that appeal was entitled to a return of the entire amount of the stamp duty, there having been no settlement of issues. Bhitoon Chunder Roy Chowdhrv v. Parbity Dabea, Marsh., 274.

The correct test when a second suit is brought for something omitted to be sued for in a previous suit, is whether the claim in the new suit is in fact founded on a different cause of action, or whether it is merely a repetition of the cause of action which was the foundation of the former suit. Judomath Bose v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, 8 W. R., S. W., P. C., 3.

Where a suit, cognizable by the High Court by reason of the testamentary and intestate jurisdiction of the Court, was wrongly entitled as being brought in the ordinary original civil jurisdiction,—Held that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. It was a mere blunder which the Court could correct. Toyluck Nauth Dass v. Megnauth Dass, 2 Ind. Jur. N. S., 245.

When a suit was, by the Collector's order, transferred to a lower Court, and obtained the same date, the suit, the subject of which is partly without jurisdiction in the lower Court,—Held that the Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit. It was a mere blunder which the Court could correct. Ameer K oolee Kalm v. Rassr'cl'Lall .z'ngrand ol/wrr, 6 W. R., 104.

It is only at the time of presentation of the plaint that the plaintiff in a suit which has been brought in a Court, in which, with reference to its proper jurisdiction, there has been no discovery of a defect, can claim the benefit of Sections 30, 31, and 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Sheik Mukhur Ali v. Mussumat Basoo and others, 8 W. R., 47.

Where a plaint substantially asked for was to have his right of pre-emption declared, on the ground that he was a partner in the thing sold, a mistake in the wording of his claim—viz., the use of the words "shuffa khullut" (which means a partner in the commensality and appendages of the land), instead of "shuffa sharik"—was held not to prejudice his status in the suit. Wahed Ali Khan v. Hunoman Pershad, 12 W. R., 484.

The law does not declare that the date of registry of the plaint shall be taken to be the date of institution of a suit. A plaintiff who has bonda-ta instituted his case within time, will not be prejudiced by delay in registration. Jugobindhoo Bose v. Cour Mone Dassi, 3 W. R., 1.

The lower Court dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction on the ground that the suit was one for money had and received, the cause of action having arisen in Calcutta.

Held by the majority of the Court (dissentient Jackson, J.) that the lower Court had jurisdiction; that the object of the suit was in fact to obtain from defendant L. a share of the mesne profits which L. had without authority (as alleged by plaintiff) paid to a third party; that if L. has so paid them to a wrong party, he is liable to pay them again to the party entitled to receive them, himself being left to any remedy which he may have against the person who has wrongly received them; and that the mere fact of the sum now sued for being identical in nature with that paid by L. to defendant R. did not make this an action against R. for money had and received from L. to his use.

Held also by the majority, that the Judge's order of dismissal was equivalent to a non-suit under the old Code of Procedure; and by the new Code of Procedure (Section 32, Act VII of 1859), if it appears to the Court that it has not jurisdiction, the proper course is for an appeal to be taken to the proper Court; and that an appeal from such an order is not an appeal contemplated by Section 348. Kamekhkopershad Mookerjee v. Lannour, W., F. B., 86.

When a suit, the subject of which is partly without jurisdiction of the Court in which it is instituted, is registered before the permission required by Section 11, Act VIII of 1859, has been obtained, there is no good reason why the requisite sanction should not be applied for after the error has been discovered. Gour Sundaree Debia v. Sumboon Mjoomdar, 12 W. R., 328.

When a suit was, by the Collector's order, instituted at the Sudder station, instead of at the Sub-Division Deputy Collector's office,—Held that it was a case in which the plaint might have been returned to the plaintiff to file it in the Sub-Division Deputy Collector's office. Kalu Churn Chowdhrv v. Ram Gobind Mjoomdar and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 104.

Upon the presentation of a plaint, a Judge should cause the date of presentation to be noted on the petition. Sreenath Churn Nundee v. Moyna Kumaree Beebee, 3 W. R., Mis., 29.

A plaintiff's suit should not be dismissed because, in describing his cause of action, strictly accurate language has not been used. A plaint should be construed literally, but according to the plaintiff's real meaning, unless such meaning is inconsistent.
with the words used in the plaint, so as to deceive the defendants and prejudice his defence.

In an action against a firm, the names of the partners should be specified in the plaint, and a summons served on one or more of its members if resident within the jurisdiction.

Where the amount to which the plaintiff would be entitled on the evidence exceeds that specified in the plaint, plaintiff is restricted to the amount so specified.

A plaintiff must state clearly in his plaint the substance of his claim, —i.e., the particular mode in which his claim arises, as well as the amount of that claim. Thus, where a plaintiff allowed the Court below to decide the case as if his contention was an ordinary case between a landlord suing to enhance and a tenant resisting his claim, and the statement of the defendant divulged the material circumstances of the case, that the plaintiff's estate was let in farm, the High Court refused to allow the plaintiff in appeal to rest upon an alleged stipulation in a farming lease, the existence of which he altogether suppressed in the Court below, reserving to him the right of collecting from the tenant an enhanced rent during the currency of the farming lease.

A defendant must be taken to admit all material allegations in the plaint which he does not traverse.

Where the amount to which the plaintiff was let in farm, the High Court refused to allow the plaintiff in appeal to rest upon an alleged stipulation in a farming lease, the existence of which he altogether suppressed in the Court below, reserving to him the right of collecting from the tenant an enhanced rent during the currency of the farming lease.

Where a plaint charged the defendants with the way of plaintiff's enjoying them, and justified the plaintiffs in bringing the present suit.

contract, ought to find how much is due from defendant to plaintiff, either for rent or interest, and in respect of what premises. Maharajah Rajaundar Singh v. Karummun Singh, 5 W. R., Act X, R. 62.

All suits should be brought by the person or persons in whose legal right of suit is vested, and not by agents in their own names. The objection that a suit is not so brought is an important one, materially affecting the regularity of procedure. Lal Manchur Dass v. Kishor Dyal, 3 N. W. R., 175.

The date of a suit must be taken to be that on which the plaint was originally filed, and not that on which it was filed in another Court, either as an amended plaint or as a plaint returned to be filed in that Court. Khelat Chunder Ghose v. Nusshe-bunnessa Bibot, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 47.

A plaint may be received and admitted by a Moonsiff on a Sunday or other holiday. Univer-rum Chatterjee v. Protob Chunder Shironnute, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 231.

Upon a prayer for general relief, a plaintiff is not entitled to any relief which is inconsistent with his plaint; therefore, where a plaint brought a suit to set aside his father's will, on the ground that he had no power to dispose of his property, but that the plaint was entitled as eldest son and heir-at-law according to Hindu law, the suit should have been dismissed with costs, and no account should have been taken of the plaintiff in respect of his interest in a portion of the property, the bequest of which was, in the opinion of the Court below, void for remoteness. Hirinall Mallick v. Matilall Mallick, 5 B. L. R., 682.

Plaint must state the relief sought for, the subject of the claim, the cause of action, and when it accrued; and in suits for damages for injury done, the plaint should name the person from whom the injury accrued. The strict rules of English law do not necessarily apply to plaints in this country. Molesh Chunder Moskeya v. Runudum Paul, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 248.

In a suit to have certain properties declared liable for the amount of certain decrees, plaintiff's case being that the properties were those of his judgment-debtor, and had passed, in fact, to his being put out of Court. H'zes, 7. P., v. Gurrub Hos.

When a plaint was presented to a Kurkun left in charge of a Court during vacation, and the cause of action on which the suit was brought became barred before the vacation ended, it was held that, as the Judge was the proper person to receive plaints, the presentation to the Kurkun was invalid, and did not prevent the period of limitation from running. Nandvallish v. Allibhuni J. Sujajani, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J. 254.

The munim of a firm is not, for the purpose of presenting a plaint, the recognized agent (under Section 17 of the Civil Procedure Code) of a partner who is present within the jurisdiction. The munim and such partner should join in presenting the plaint, or appointing a pleader.

The partner's not so joining is not a ground on which an Appellate Court should reverse the decree of a Lower Court, unless the irregularity affects the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. Bisandis Palad Mogurum et al. v. Lakmichund Kisanchund, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J. 155.

By Section 32, Act VII of 1859, a plaint is bound to satisfy the Court that his right of action is not barred by lapse of time. Rajah Shobe Barlad Sen v. Bahoo Budoo Singh, 12 W. R., P. C., 6.

A suit cannot be dismissed merely on the grounds that the plaint did not contain a specification of the land in the defendant's possession, and that there was an error in the plaint in the description of the defendant's residence. Syur Resu Ali v. Puramund Chuckerbatty, 6 B. L. R., Ap. 84, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 474.

Held, that it is not competent to the Judge of a Small Cause Court in the Mofussil to set aside an order which he has made respecting a plaint. Jumul Valad Bahiravudas v. Ramchunder Jog-npetal, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C. 97.

(b) Rulings under Section 14 of the Code.

When a survey award is contested by a plaintiff within the proper time, and the accuracy or otherwise of the same is the very question to be tried, it cannot be held to be the award of a "competent authority" within the meaning of Section 14, Act VII of 1859: Anand Chunder Mittler v. Doorga Dass Roy, 2 W. R., 213.

The finding of a Survey Deputy Collector that a party has been in possession of certain land for more than a year, where the fact is not disputed, is not a "summary award" under Regulation VII of 1822. An award supposes a contention between parties, and a decision after proper investigation into the points at issue. The adjudication by Revenue authorities of the boundaries of two districts is not an effectual settlement of the question of jurisdiction, which must be tried by the Civil Court itself under Section 14 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Radhapershad Singh v. Ranjeewan Singh and another, 11 W. P., 389.
An award by a Deputy Magistrate under Section 318, Act XXV of 1861, is not an award of a competent Court under Section 14, Act VIII of 1859. Issur Chunder Sen v. Kaltee Doss Hajrah, 3 W. R., 95.

An award of the survey authorities is an award within the purview of Section 14. Radhamadhab Banerjee v. Rajah Damodur Singh Audhaj, 5 W. R., 1864, 369.

Where a plaintiff sued in the Court of B. for the recovery of certain lands, and the defendant objected that the lands in question were not in the district of B.,—Held that the Court had power, under Section 14, Act VIII of 1859, before it proceeded to try the suit, to enquire and determine whether the lands were in B. or not.

The rejection of a plaint under the same Section cannot give jurisdiction to a Court which does not otherwise possess it. Hurro Nath Roy and others v. W. Scott and others, 12 W. R., 200.

The adjudication contemplated by Section 14, Act VIII of 1859, is an adjudication which is effectual till reversed by a competent Court. Consequently, when a summary adjudication of a revenue officer charged with the settlement of boundaries, declares certain land to belong to a certain district, the land is de facto placed in the jurisdiction of that district; and while it remains so, all actions regarding it must be brought in the Courts of that jurisdiction. Srenath Dutto Chowdhry v. Daorga Doss Roy Chowdhry, 6 W. R., 1864, 360.

Held that reports and proceedings of Deputy Collectors or other revenue officers appointed by the Governments of Bengal and the North Western Provinces to investigate the matter of the definition of boundary by a revenue officer under Act L of 1847, are in no way adjudications by competent authority as contemplated by Section 14, Act VIII of 1859. Whether the Court enquires into and determines the proposition of jurisdiction or rejects the plaint, the proceeding is open to appeal; and if it appears that jurisdiction has been unduly assumed, the subsequent enquiry of right must be set aside as carried on without jurisdiction. Maharajah Moheshur Buksh Singh v. The Collector of Ghoosepore, 2 Agra Rep., 318.

(c) Rulings under Section 26 of the Code.

In a suit to recover possession, plaintiff is bound, under Section 26, Act VIII of 1859, to give the date on which he was dispossessed as accurately as possible, especially where one of the issues is whether he has been in occupation of the land within twelve years of suit. Boidonath Surnam and others v. Ojai Bibee and others, 11 W. R., 238.

Under Section 26, Act VIII of 1859, the plaint is intended to be a statement of facts, and not merely a prayer for relief.

To set aside an award, there must have been some fraudulent suppression of evidence or other malpractice of the successful party, which should be definitely stated in the plaint. Hur Chunder Doss v. Hazaree Mull, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 12.

The object of Section 26 of the Civil Procedure Code is to secure the definite statement of the subject and object matters of the litigation, and the words "so far as they can be ascertained" were not intended to compel a plaintiff to insert every name and title to which the defendant may conceive himself entitled.

A plaint was presented to the Court on the day previous to the expiration of the time limited for suing, but it was returned to the plaintiff for the purpose of being amended by the insertion of the particulars required by Act VIII of 1859, Section 26; and on the second day after (the intermediate time being Sunday), it was again presented, amended as required, and received. Held that the suit was commenced, for the purpose of saving the Statute of Limitations, when the plaint was first presented to the Court, and that it was therefore within time, notwithstanding the day when it was presented after amendment was beyond the period of limitation. Sham Chand Koondoo v. Kally Kunth Roy and others, Marsh., 336.

The object of Section 26, Act VIII of 1859, is to identify the parties to the suit; and the term "description" applies rather to the patronymic than to a title such as Roy Bahador. Kishen Chunder Choula v. Meghrag Kohkria Roy Baha- door, 12 W. R., 450.

A statement of dispossession made in a petition preferred under Section 26 of Act VIII of 1859, by a person claiming land sold in execution of a decree, and ordered to be put in possession of the auction-purchaser, cannot operate as an estoppel in a suit subsequently brought by the claimant to "establish her right" on the allegation of her being in possession of the land in question. Mussammut Bibee Khanum Jan v. Ruttan Lal and others, 8 W. R., 95.

(d) Verification of Plaints, &c.

A plaintiff is not necessarily guilty of fraud if he omits to state in his plaint that he had formerly sued for a portion of the rent now sued for, but had failed for want of evidence. Nor can he be punished for false verification under Section 37, Act X of 1859, in respect of a plaint verified by his agent. So much of the lower Court's judgment as declared the plaintiff guilty of fraud, and deserving to be punished for false verification, and as amounted to an order in view of criminal proceedings being taken against him, was cancelled in the exercise of the High Court's general powers of superintendence and revision. Taraphand Roy Chowdhry v. Gopaldoss Dutta, 7 W. R., 450.

It is incumbent on all Courts, without regard to rank or station, to see that plaints and written statements are subscribed and verified by the parties in person, except when unable to do so by reason of absence or other good cause, when they may be allowed to be subscribed and verified by competent persons only. A plaintiff may be excused from verifying his claim, not only by reason of his absence, but also for any other good cause to the satisfaction of the Court. Rajah Lela Nund Singh, petitioner, v. W. R., 168.

The Court will allow a written statement to be verified by the constituted attorney of the party without notice to the other side. Finlay, Campbell, and Co. v. J. Steele, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 40.

When a plaint has been verified by a person who has not shown, to the Court that he is a person competent to verify it, the Court will order the plaint to be removed from the file. Goverend, Gurney, and Co. v. Steele, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 39.

A mere paper of exceptions to a plaintiff’s statement does not require verification, and even if it does, the defendant should be so informed at the time of filing, and should be allowed time to verify the same if necessary. Rahaj Punchanan Doss v. Unnopoorno Daye, v. W. R., Mis., 6.

It is not competent to a Judge of a Small Cause Court to raise any objection to the verification of a plaint by an agent, after such verification has been expressly sanctioned by him at the commencement of the suit. Rajah Suttocurn Ghosalu v. Suroop Chunder Doss, 12 W. R., 465.

Act X of 1859 does not provide for the verification of written statements. When the first Court goes into the merits of a case, irrespective of the omission to verify the written statement, it is not competent to the Judge on appeal to make such an omission a ground for throwing out the appeal. G. Clerk v. Sreenath Singh, v. W. R., 132.

The plaintiff brought a suit for rent claimed to be due for three years; he failed to prove his claim, and the suit was dismissed for want of evidence. He afterwards sued to recover rent for one of the same years, and recovered the amount. The Judge, on appeal, reversed the decree, and made an order remitting the case to the Deputy Collector to enquire under Act X of 1859, Section 37, whether the plaint had committed perjury in the first suit, the plaint in which was verified by his agent. The 37th Section of the Act requires that the statement of claim shall be verified by the plaintiff or his agent, and enacts that if the statement shall contain any averment which the person making the verification shall know or believe to be false, or shall not know or believe to be true, such person shall be subject to punishment according to the law for the time being in force for the punishment of giving or fabricating false evidence.

Held that there was no foundation for the order, the averment having been made by the agent, and not by the plaintiff; and besides, there was no evidence that it was untrue, there having been no finding in the first suit that the rent was not due. Tarapersad Roy Chowdhr v. Gopal Doss Dutt, Marsh., 72.

M. S. sued for money lent by the plaintiff to the defendant, the defence being that the defendant’s gomasta, who accepted bills for the amount, had not authority from the defendant to do so. Several preliminary objections having been overruled, a decree was passed for the plaintiff.

Held that, if there be an informality in the verification of a plaint, the case may proceed on the written statement, if it contain the same allegations as the plaint.

That all written documents on which the plaintiff relies need not be filed with the plaint, but only those on which the cause of action is grounded. Manooram Shaw v. Hurrypersaud Roy, Bourke’s Rep., v. C., 162.

Where an application is made that a written statement be verified by a person other than the plaintiff or defendant, it is always desirable that notice be given to the other side, although not absolutely necessary. Finlay, Campbell, and Co. v. J. Steele, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 39.

In a suit for possession after foreclosure, defendants urged that C, (and not A, and B, the plaintiffs) was the actual mortgagee. This was denied by A. and B., who obtained a decree. In a subsequent suit brought by the representatives of A. and B. for mesne profits, they, in conjunction with C, urged that C. was the real mortgagee; and C. was made a co-plaintiff, but he did not verify the plaint. A decree was given for mesne profits in favour of C., the plaint,—Held that the fact that C. had not verified the plaint was no sufficient ground for dismissing the suit. Decree affirmed. Ruy Muanlall Mittra v. Bishnu Chundra Chatterjee, 1 B. R., A. C., 100.

When a plaint is subscribed and verified by a person other than the plaintiff, notice should be given to the defendant; nothing more formal need be done by way of notice to support an application for the admission of the plaint, if the person verifying is qualified in other respects according to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. Sreenmuty Poddomoney Dossee v. Shama Churna Chuckerbutt, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 226.

The verification of a plaint signed with the name of the plaintiff by her mookhtear, and which does not aver what is false, but attempts to do what the law estops her from doing, is not a false verification within the meaning of Section 24, Act VIII of 1859.

If a plaint not only asks for relief which a Court can afford, but seeks to open up matters already adjudicated upon in another suit, the Judge (instead of rejecting the plaint for prolixity under Section 29) should entertain the suit and adjudicate upon the matters adjudicated upon in the former suit, amending the plaint by striking out the issues relating to the matters adjudicated upon. Rames Koshun Dhavan v. Syed Eayat Hossein, W. R., F. B., 41; and Marshall, 127.

Generally, plaints should be verified by the plaintiff. The exception under Section 28, Act VIII of 1859, in favour of persons unable to verify, should be separately pleaded and considered in each case. Maharajah Mukunward Buksh Bahadoor, petitioner, 5 W. R., Mis., 33.

The Zillah Courts ought never to allow a person other than the plaint to verify the plaint, save strictly under the exception which the law permits,—namely, where the plaintiff, by reason of absence.
or other good cause, is unable to subscribe it. See Act VIII of 1859, Section 28.

Whenever the plaint is not presented by the plaintiff in person, the Court should satisfy itself that the verification is actually signed by the plaintiff.

Where the case of the plaintiff rested upon an imputation against the defendant of having forged the plaintiff’s name to a deed, the Court gave the plaintiff, a Rajah, an opportunity of appearing and giving evidence, which he failed to do upon the professed ground that persons of his station had a prejudice against appearing and deposing in a Court of Justice. The Court discredited the imputation, and dismissed the suit. Rajah Nursing Deb v. Rammohun Mookerjee and another, Marsh., 176; W. R., F. B., 45.

When an application is made to a Court to permit a plaint to be subscribed and verified on behalf of the plaintiff by a person other than the plaintiff, the Court must exercise the power vested in it by Section 28, Act VIII of 1859, and must decide whether or not the plaintiff, by reason of absence or other good cause, is unable to subscribe and verify the plaint, which would have rendered it inadmissible. Makarajah Mohessur Buksh Singh Bakadoor v. See Narain Singh and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 59.

Where the plaintiffs described themselves as lately carrying on business under the name of C. and Co., and verified the plaint, which contains a prayer that the defendant may be criminally prosecuted under Section 441 of the Penal Code, brought a suit in a Civil Court for possession and for the demolition of a wall or fence put up by the defendant, dating his cause of action from his failure to prove any cause of action which is not inconsistent with the plaint. Luchhooa Debia v. Brinduban Dey, 12 W. R., 313.

Where a plaint alleges the cause of action to be the prosecution of a false charge of forgery, and the statement of the subject-matter imports that the charge was false to the knowledge of the defendant, the omission to allege expressly malice and the absence of reasonable and probable cause is no good ground of objection to the hearing of the suit. Bishen Suhaye Singh v. Beer Kishore Singh and others, 8 W. R., 295.

Where a plaint is not presented by the plaintiff, but by reason of absence or other good cause, is unable to subscribe and verify the plaint, which contains a prayer that the defendant may be criminally prosecuted for forgery, the plaint should be rejected. Bishen Suhaye Singh v. Beer Kishore Singh and others, 8 W. R., 295.

A plaint which is unnecessarily prolix, or argumentative, or which contains irrelevant matter, ought to be rejected by the Court to which it is presented, or ought to be returned to the plaintiff for amendment. A plaint which contains a prayer that the defendant may be criminally prosecuted for forgery should be rejected. Bishen Suhaye Singh v. Beer Kishore Singh and others, 8 W. R., 295.

A plaint that is bad on the face of it ought not to be admitted, nor ought it to be amended after the issues have been fixed. Amur Narain v. Mussamut Rughoobunsee Koonwar, 5 W. R., 234.

The plaint having failed in an application, under Section 441 of the Penal Code, brought a suit in a Civil Court for possession and for the demolition of a wall or fence put up by the defendant, dating his cause of action from his failure in the Criminal Court. In the Court of first instance, he obtained a decree for possession. The Judge on appeal dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground that he had no power to set aside a Magistrate's order under the law cited.

Held that, if the Judge was of opinion that the plaintiff had misstated his cause of action, he ought to have directed him to amend his plaint. Daboo Jha v. Lwua Jha and others, 11 W. R., 223.

The power of the lower Courts to amend a plaint extends by a viva-voce examination to the elucidation of what is ambiguous in the claims of the contending parties to the amendment of what is erroneous, and the supplying what is defective, but not to the conversion of a suit of one character into another, inconsistent with and opposed to it, of a suit for possession with mesne profits into a suit for resumption. Gobind Mohapatrav and others v. Madhuk Persaud Punidit, 6 W. R., 211.

The Court has power to strike out a plaint parties improperly introduced. Bhuorub Chunder Dass v. Madhuk Chender Poramanick, 1 Hyde's Rep., 251.

A plaint wanting in precision, or defective in form, should be returned for amendment, and not rejected. Ramub Mookerjee v. Huree Narain Thooper, W. R., 1864, 92.

Amendment of a plaint is not allowable after issues are fixed. Amur Narain, alias Nurput Suhaye, v. Mussamut Rughoobunsee Koonwar, 5 W. R., 234.

A plaint cannot be amended in an Appellate Court. Abdool Guftoor v. Mustamit Nur Banu, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 78.

A paper referred to in a plaint is not a part of the plaint. A plaint may be amended upon subsequent application, with reference to an objection taken when it was filed, Toulton v. Gayther, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 273.

A lower Court has discretion to permit, or not, the filing of a petition to amend a plaint, and its refusal is no ground for special appeal. Messrs. R. Watson and Co. v. Nidhoo Digwar, 10 W. R., 87.

A putneedar, in execution of a decree for rent against his mouraseedar, attached certain property belonging to the latter, including a parcel of land belonging to plaintiff, who, in order to save the parcel from sale, paid the whole amount due under the decree, and then sued the mouraseedar to recover the amount. The suit having been dismissed on the ground that there had been no obligation on plaintiff to pay the amount, she appealed, alleging that the parcel was within and subordinate to the holding of the mouraseedar, and the sale would possibly have jeopardized her right. Held that if the plaint did not sufficiently disclose the cause of action, the plaintiff should have been allowed to amend it under Section 32 of the Civil Procedure Code: not having been so allowed, he was at liberty to prove any cause of action which was not inconsistent with the plaint. Luckhee Peer Debia v. Brindablan Day, 12 W. R., 206.

Plaintiff sued one M. M., overseer for the municipal office, for the recovery of money due on a contract under which plaintiff had done certain work, defendant contracting for the municipality, and for the performance of work known by plaintiff to be municipal work.

The municipality having ignored the contract, it was held that the contract being a quasi contract, defendant could not be held personally liable in the present action of contract.

Plaintiff could not be allowed to amend his plaint so as to make defendant liable in the present action of contract. Mokhendronath Mookerjee, overseer, 9 W. R., 206.

Where a plaint is returned for amendment, under Section 29 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the order of return should specify a time for such amendment. Ismail Sahib v. Aranuwea Chetti and another, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 427.

(f) Rejection of Plaint.

A plaint which in the first count did not sufficiently disclose the subject of claim, without reading the schedule annexed as part of the plaint, or when the action accrued, and in the second count did not show any right to sue in the plaint, was rejected by the Court as irregular, but with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit.

Semble.—The Court will not make the payment of costs, in respect of the former plaint, a condition precedent to filing a fresh plaint, where there is no suggestion of mala fides. Luckey Money Dossee v. Kletter Coomary Dossee and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 117.

A plaintiff's omission to insert in his plaint the words "Roy Bahadour," though ordered to do so, in describing the person sued, was held to be no sufficient reason for the rejection of his plaint.

Held that the Court to which a plaint is presented has no authority to reject it merely because the document upon which the plaintiff sues is not produced with the plaint, as directed by Section 39 of Act VIII of 1859, and that the High Court has power to set aside such an order of rejection, as well as the decision of the District Court confirming it in appeal, and to direct that the plaint be received.

Where the lower Court rejected a plaint on the ground of an improper joinder of causes of action, and also that the suit was not sufficiently valued, and the High Court was of opinion that there had been no improper joinder of causes of action, the order of the lower Court was reversed, and the Civil Judge directed to deal with the case in accordance with Section 31, Act VIII of 1859. Kristha Aiyangar v. Perumal Naidu and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 436.

Though a plaint has been registered, the Court may reject it under Act VIII of 1859, Section 32, as barred by the Act of Limitation. Chetti Gaundan v. Sundaram Pillai and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 51.

A plaint will not be rejected under Section 32 of Act VIII of 1859, if the subject-matter alleged raises a fair question of claim or right for trial and determination between the parties. The mere unlikelihood of the plaintiff's success is not enough to justify the rejection of his plaint. Lakshmi Amlal v. Tikaram Tovayi, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 420.

Where the plaint, in a suit to establish a right to landed property and to recover arrears of rent, alleged no specific acts of ownership since 1845, but contained a statement general enough to let in evidence of such acts, and it did not appear that the plaint had been questioned,—Held that the plaint should not have been rejected under Section 32 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that it appeared to the Court that the right of action was barred by lapse of time. Udya Verma and others v. Naissa Chambitta and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 342.

A suit was brought in the Civil Court of a Moonisff, who gave judgment for the plaintiffs, but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the claim was improperly valued. A second suit, on the same cause of action, was then brought in the Court of the Moonisff, who again decided for the plaintiffs; but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the suit was prohibited by Regulation 11 of 1827, Section 21. The High Court, on special appeal, reversed that decision, and remanded the suit; and the District Judge then threw out the claim, under Section 2 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that the cause of action had already been heard and determined. In a second special appeal against this decision,—Held that the plaintiffs were not precluded from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action; and that the case came within the spirit of Section 36 of Act VIII of 1859; as there being no express power given by the Code to reject a plaint after it had been registered by reason of the claim being improperly valued, the doing so ought to have only the same effect as if the plaint had been originally rejected. Dullabh Jogii and others v. Narayan Lukhu and others, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 110.

Where a plaint is rejected under Section 32, Act Y of 1859, the plaintiff can bring a suit on the same subject-matter, provided he is not barred by lapse of time. Kadambini Dassee v. Unnopoornara Dutt, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 289.

In a suit by a son against a father and certain purchasers to obtain a declaratory decree in respect to certain property, the fact of each purchaser being concerned only in a portion of the case does not render the suit multiparous. Kanth Narain Singh v. Prem Lall Parrey, 3 W. R., 102.

In a case in which several causes of action had been joined together which should not have been included in one plaint, the High Court in appeal declined to dismiss the suit on that account, as it had been fully tried below, and there would be no objection now in dismissing it. Nujmoodeen Ahmed v. Bebee Zukoorun and others, 10 W. R., 45.

A suit against five defendants, including claims of the most miscellaneous character against each defendant, was dismissed by the first Court on the ground of multiparousness. The Subordinate Judge, on appeal, held that plaintiff was in any case entitled to a decision on one of his claims; and further held that the suit was not multiparous. Held, on special appeal, that the Court could not select one claim on which to proceed, when plaintiff insisted on pressing all. Held, further that the plaint was multiparous; and though it would not be permissible for defendant to take that objection for the first time after the case had been fully gone into on the merits, yet, as the objection had been taken originally, the suit was properly dismissed by the first Court. Munni Manirudeen Ahmed v. Ram Chand and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 341.

A claim for rent in arrear and a claim to remove clouds on the title to demise raised by the tenant are not objectionable on the ground of multiparousness, and may therefore be included in the same plaint. Maharajah Rajaender Kishwur Singh v. Sheopasarun Missur, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 273.

Where there has been a misjoinder of causes of action against different persons, and the proper stamp fee in the plaint having been paid, plaintiff prays for leave to withdraw his suit against all except one defendant, or one set of defendants, the Court may perhaps permit the suit to proceed against such defendant or defendants alone, but it cannot exercise that option for plaintiffs who insist on their right to proceed against all the defendants. Ram Doyal Dutt v. Ram Doolat Deb and another, 11 W. R., 273.

A plaintiff may maintain separate suits for partition of immovable family property where the property is situate within the limits of different districts, and is not bound to try in one suit in the manner pointed out in Section 12, Act VIII of 1859. Subba Ram v. Rama Rau, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 376.

(g) Multifariousness

In a suit in a Moonisf's Court, it was found, after issues had been fixed, and some evidence recorded, that the claim had been under-valued, and that the proper valuation would carry it beyond the jurisdiction of the Moonisf. The plaint was accordingly returned, and additional stamps having been filed, the case was tried by the Principal Sudder Ameen. The Court on appeal held that the plaint had been illegally returned by the Moonisf, and that the act of the Principal Sudder Ameen in proceeding to try the case was illegal. He accordingly dismissed the suit.

Held that the Moonisf was right, under Section 31, in not dismissing the suit, but rejecting the plaint; and that, when the same plaint was filed with the proper amount of stamp duty in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen, the Court had jurisdiction to try the case. Ram Gatty and others v. Coomomonee Dabee and others, 11 W. R., 177.

In a suit for pre-emption, the valuation of the property sued for is to be calculated at the market value for which it would sell, and not at ten times the value of the sunder jumma. Anjul Singh v. Defun Singh, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 143.

In a suit for possession of a share of an undivided estate, and to set aside a kobala by which the estate had been illegally alienated, plaintiff is not bound to value his claim according to the price stated in the kobala. Augopura Chowdhry v. Meah Bibee and others, 10 W. R., 207.

An error in the valuation of a claim is not an error, defect, or irregularity, which affects the merits of the case, and an Appellate Court is restrained by Section 350 of the Code of Civil Procedure from ordering the reversal of a decree on account of any such error, which does not also affect the jurisdiction of the Court which originally tried the suit. Nunsa Bin Biba v. Baba Bin Bakhur and another, 1 Bom. Rep., 63.

Instead of dismissing a case on account of under-valuation, the Judge should try it on the merits, on the plaintiff putting in a sufficient stamp to make up the proper valuation. Gooroodass Roy v. Chundra Coomar Roy, 1 W. R., 135.

Section 350, Ar. VII of 1859, does not prohibit a Court of Appeal from modifying or reversing a decision of a lower Court, on the ground of under-valuation of the suit, if the proper valuation would have taken it beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. Huree Pandey v. Basso and others, 11 W. R., 257.

In a suit to recover damages on account of the value of crop cut and carried away, where defendant denied plaintiff's title to the land, and an adjudication on this point became necessary to enable the Court to decide the claim for damages,—Held that the Moonisf's order was erroneous by which he compelled the plaintiff to put in an additional stamp to represent the value of the land, and that the character of the suit was not changed by the payment of an additional stamp duty. Ram Dool Lal Gangooly and others v. Hurrosoory Dossia and others, 10 W. R., 272.

said to have been illegally executed by his father, he need not be compelled to value the case at the total of the consideration mentioned in those deeds. Sheo Gobind Singh v. Bejoyram Protab Singh, 1864, 317.

Where the appeal by the mortgagee was not with reference to property, but to mortgage lien,—Hold that the valuation for the purpose of stamp in such appeals should be with reference to the value of the lien for the mortgage debt of incumbrance; and not with reference to the value of mortgaged property. Bheeka v. Mund Kishore, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 158.

A suit to set aside a false sale-deed was sufficiently valued at the sum mentioned in that sale-deed. And even if this were not so, it was the duty of the Court in which such suit was preferred to give the suitor the option of supplying such additional stamp as was thought necessary before ejecting the plaint. Thakoor Patuck v. Ramsoomrun Lall, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, P. 17.

A Lower Appellate Court was held to have done right in dismissing a suit on the ground of under-valuation, although the plaint had been admitted and acted on by the first Court without objection by the parties. Mewa Lall v. Beharee Lall, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 357.

Where a plea of under-valuation of the suit was not pressed in the first Court by the defendant's pleader, it was not sufficient to be raised in special appeal, although previously urged in the Lower Appellate Court. Soorjee Kant Bannerjee v. Kyisto Kissore Poddar, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 423.

Where a pre-emption suit was valued at Rupees 31, though the consideration was Rupees 2,000, the High Court, in special appeal, refused to remand the case to enable plaintiff to make up the deficient stamp. Aervo Lall v. Behuru Lall, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 195.

Where excess stamps had been filed in consequence of an over-valuation of the appeal, the surplus amount was ordered to be refunded. In the matter of G. H. Grant, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 47.

Where a plaintiff includes a suit for mesne profits in a suit for possession, he is bound to value his claim at what he knows to be its real amount, and cannot be allowed, in the course of a mere enquiry into the amount of damages after decree, to depart from the claim made by his plaint, and set up what is substantially a new and distinct claim. Gooroo Das Roy v. Bungshee Dhur Sein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 61.

In a suit for possession by an auction purchaser, where plaintiff valued his claim at what he paid for the property, held that the valuation was primafacie not incorrect, and until rebutted by evidence and the result of a proper enquiry, should be accepted as correct. If the value was doubted, an enquiry should have been instituted under Act XXVI of 1867. Mussamul Soobhuddin v. Rajah Ram Prokash Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 5.

Where a Court is satisfied that the market value of the subject of a suit or appeal presented to it is of such an amount as to bring the suit or appeal within its jurisdiction, it is bound to receive it. The Court will generally assume that the value of the property in suit is that arrived at by the computation for the purposes of ascertaining the stamp duty where the Stamp Act prescribes arbitrary principles of calculation; but where it is asserted and shown to the satisfaction of the Court that the market value is in excess of the amount computed for such purposes, the Court must take notice of the actual market value. Respondent is at liberty, if he think fit, to question, at the hearing of an appeal, the appellant's estimate of the market value of the subject of the appeal. Mussamul Dhunoo v. Damodur Dass, 2 N. W. R., 177.

In a suit to annul a sale-deed which prejudices the title of the plaintiffs to immovable property, a stamp calculated on the consideration money mentioned in the sale-deed is sufficient. Tkhaor Pathick v. Ram Numun Lal, 2 N. W. R., 433.

The law which provides that the decision of a Court as to the market value or annual profits of property in suit shall be final, repeals by implication the provisions in Sections 31 and 36 of Act VIII of 1859, whereby an appeal is allowed from the order of a first Court rejecting a plaint for improper valuation. Mudhaosoodun Chuckerbutty v. Kyemonooe Dasslee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 415.

Where a plaint is rejected under Section 30 of Act VIII of 1859 by the first Court, on the ground that it is undervalued, an appeal lies from such order under Section 36 of Act VIII of 1859, and this appeal was not taken away by the note to Article 11, Schedule B to Act XXVI of 1867, the object of which was to prevent appeals only where the question merely related to the amount of stamp to be impressed upon the plaint. Collector of Sythet v. Kuli Kumar Dutt, 7 B. L. R., 663, and 16 S. W. R., F. B., 10.

An Appellate Court has no power to set aside a decision arrived at by the Court of first instance as to the valuation of the property in suit. Mofuddin v. Kurimunisa Bibee, 6 B. L. R., Ap. 11, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 381.

Hold in special appeal that the Lower Appellate Court was right in setting aside the proceedings of the Moonsiff, on the ground that the property in suit was valued at an amount beyond his jurisdiction; but the plaintiff was entitled to have the plaint returned to him, that he might present it with the proper additional stamp before the proper Court. Mussamul Jaddu v. Sheikh Hifzaat Hossein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 358, and 5 B. L. R., Ap. 15.

When a suit has been admitted upon a certain stamp, tried, and decreed for the plaintiff, "under valuation" is no ground for dismissing the defendant's appeal. Emauddin Khan v. Ramkissoor Kesar, 5 B. L. R., Ap. 39.

When it appears on an appeal, that the suit has not been rightly valued, and, if rightly valued, the Court of first instance would not have had jurisdiction to try it, the Appellate Court may entertain the objection, though it had not been raised in the Court below. Sheo Gobind Ramut v. Abhai Narayan Singh, 5 B. L. L. R., Ap. 17.

On a dispute arising as to the proper valuation of a suit, the Court may, on the application of either party, issue a commission and make an enquiry into the market value or the nett profits of the property in dispute. The final decision as to the proper valuation is vested in the Court which hears the suit.

When the defendant asserts that a suit is over-valued, the onus of proving the truth of his assertion lies on him. Uma Sunhar Roy Chowdry v. Syed Mansur Ali Khan Bahadur, 5 B. L. R., Ap. 6; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 326.

Held that, when the omission of the first Court to summon the plaintiff was brought to the notice of the lower Appellate Court, the latter Court did not err in law in directing the first Court to entertain the application, and to consider whether or not it ought to be granted. No special formalities are required to be observed in making such an application.

Held that, when the plaintiff absented himself on being summonsed, the Judge was perfectly justified in taking his neglect into consideration, even though the summons was not legal. Bonamatee Churn Mylee v. Sheikh Hafezooddeen, 12 W. R., 217.

An application for a fresh summons to appear, &c., should be issued on petition showing that a fruitless endeavour had been made on the part of the plaintiff to serve the first summons, and that it was not by any default of his that he had failed. Urquhart v. Gilbert, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 244.

A written summons distinctly describing the nature of the document required must be issued on a party to a suit required to produce a document. A verbal order to his pleader is not sufficient, and is not such a summons as is contemplated by law. Doorgamonee Dossee v. Benode Monee Dossee, W. R., 1864, 164.

For the purposes of summons, a Railway Company must be deemed to dwell at its principal office. Hanlon v. India Branch Railway Co., 1 Hyde's Rep., 197.

Where an appellant delayed to give in the names of his witnesses, but would yet have been within reasonable time to secure their attendance on the day of hearing if summonses had been sent through different peons by the railway,—Held that the lower Appellate Court was bound to have directed the issue of the summonses, and to have given every assistance to the party asking for them, all additional expenses being paid by such party. Pearee Mohun Mookerjee v. Madhub Chunder Ghosal and others, 9 W. R., 489.

Section 42 (prohibiting the summoning of a plaintiff or defendant, residing more than 50 miles from where the Court is held, to attend in person, unless he is within the jurisdiction of the Court) is applicable to suits for rent under Act X of 1859. Shekhh Golam Bukhshee v. Pulnon Singh, 3 W. R., Act X R., 162.

Plaintiff is entitled at any stage of a case before hearing to a summons, without reference to the number of applications which he may have previously made; and it is the duty of the Court to comply with such application, if any time be left before the hearing of the case. Onooroo Chunder Mookerjee and others v. Heeramonee Dossee and another, 11 W. R., 418.

(a) Service of Summons.

Where an appellant to the High Court was unable to serve notice on the plaintiff (respondent), because of inability to trace the plaintiff in the place given as his place of residence, when he (plaintiff) commenced the suit and in his petition of appeal to the Zillah Court,—Held that the case might be dealt with in analogy to the procedure in respect to summonses under Section 57 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Bedhoo Koolanee v. Bonamatee Gurtrain, 11 W. R., 496.

Failure to prove service of summonses on the defendants who did not appear, is no reason for dismissing the suit as against the defendant who did appear. Sogundalamee Debea v. Azemooddeen, W. R., 1864, 33.

The lower Court should itself carefully see that due and reasonable time is given in all cases for the service of notices on defendants. Lokkenath Thakoor v. Sobhan Meser, 5 W. R., Act X R., 39.

A summons cannot be sent by post to any place to which letters are not registered by a post-office. A special bailiff cannot be sent to serve civil process in a foreign territory. Kasim Ajim Deeplay v. Kasim Mohammed Baracha, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 59.

Service upon an attorney's clerk of an order directed to be served upon an attorney is not good service. Emritfall Saligram v. Kidd, 2 Hyde's Rep., 116.

The defendant, an officer in the Bombay Staff Corps, holding an appointment in Scinde, came to Bombay on leave, and remained about ten days. During his stay in Bombay, he was served with a writ of summons on a cause of action arising in Scinde. Held that the defendant did not "dwell" within the local limits, so as to give the Court jurisdiction under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent. Cowasjee Tramee v. Wallace, 1 Bom. Rep., 113.

Every summons not actually served on a defendant or respondent, or his recognized agent, must be stuck up on the house in which the defendant or respondent is dwelling. If the defendant or respondent cannot be found, the summons should be returned to the Court, and an order obtained from the Court as to the mode of service.

Remarks on this case, in which a decree was passed against the defendants of the second part, making them liable to the costs of the defendants of the first part, when the former probably never had been summoned, or had any notice of the suit. Gopaul Doss v. Greethaare Doss and others, 6 W. R., 14.

A mofussil Judge stated, in his return to the Sheriff of Calcutta, that substituted service had been effected by fixing a copy of the summons to the "house" of the defendant. Held that the return was insufficient, and that the word "dwelling-house" must be expressly mentioned. Ruddro Baboo v. Labodur Mullick, 1 Hyde's Rep., 132.

A fresh writ of summons will not be granted till the old one is returned into Court. Issurhande Neein v. Aushotos Cheratterjee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 283.

Where a summons on a witness is returned, with the endorsement that the witness could not be found, on the very day fixed for the hearing of the case, the party on whose application the summons was issued cannot be expected on that day to be prepared to show that the witness was material, or had absconded.
CIVIL PROCEDURE—SERVICE OF NOTICE.

A summons on a witness ought not to be affixed upon his residence; the proper course is that prescribed in Section 156, Code of Civil Procedure. Prem Chand Roy v. Becharam Mookerjee and others, 6 W. R., 126.

Substituted service, under Section 57 of Act VIII of 1859, having been effected on one of the defendants in a suit, he applied to have an ex-parte judgment set aside and ordered a new trial, on the grounds that he had no notice of the suit, and had a good defence on the merits. Application dismissed.

Held that a substituted service having been effected under Section 57 of Act VIII of 1859, an ex-parte judgment will not be set aside on an allegation of no notice, and of good defence on the merits. Kissing Chund and others v. Bhoobunessur Chunder and others, Bourke's Rep., O. C. 25; 1 Cor. Rep., 151.

The actual presence of the defendant within the jurisdiction of the Court is not necessary, if he was dwelling at the commencement of the suit, and a temporary dwelling is sufficient to give jurisdiction to a Small Cause Court.

Service of a copy of the summons on the door of the house in which the defendant is dwelling is one of the modes of service provided in lieu of personal service, but it is necessary that the defendant should be residing in the house in such a manner as to make it probable that knowledge of the service of the summons will reach him. There may be a dwelling sufficient to give jurisdiction, and yet not the kind of dwelling necessary to make a good service, Ananthlu Narayanan v. Periyavan Rene, 5 Mad. Rep., 101.

Persons merely looking after the affairs of a defendant are not agents on whom service of summons will be sufficient under Section 49, Act VIII of 1859. Ram Soonduru Dossia v. Anee Sureet Soonduru Debia, 17 S.W. R., C. R., 33.

When there is no return of service to a summons, the law gives a Court full discretion either to issue a second summons or to take, or not take, stronger measures. It is not imperative on one Court to take measures to expedite the service in another Court; but it is the business of the party interested to move the Court to do what is necessary, Dowult Mundur v. Omrao Singh Rane, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 336.

Where an ex-parte decree was passed against the defendant, and it appeared that the writ of summons had not been served upon him in sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer, the Appellate Court, reversing the order of the Court of first instance, directed the ex-parte decree to be set aside and ordered a new trial.

Quære.—Whether the affixing of a summons to the outer door of the place of business of a defendant is good service upon him under Section 55 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Grish Chund v. Bhanoo Motee Chowdary, 11 W. R., 329.

After a list of witnesses has been filed and the CIVIL PROCEDURE—ARREST BEFORE JUDGMENT.

Where a lower Appellate Court threw out a case on the ground that the plaint had not been filed by a recognized agent within the meaning of Section 17 Act VIII of 1859, though that point had been disposed of by the Court of first instance,—

Held, that the case should not have been thrown out on such a technical objection not affecting the merits of the case: Mannoo Dossee v. Ishan Chunder Bonnerjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 245.

Service of a summons intended for one partner upon another partner of the same firm is not a sufficient service. Partners are not the recognized agents of each other within the meaning of Clause 2, Section 17, Act VIII of 1859. Luchmeput Dargare v. Sibnarain Mundle, 1 Hyd.'s Rep., 97.

A “recognized agent” described in Section 17, Act VIII of 1859, has not the option of addressing the Court, as the suitor himself may do. Vide Section 10 of the Charter of the High Court: Pranath Chowdhry v. Ganendro Mohun Tagore, 3 W. R., 108.

A recognized agent, under Clause 2, Section 17, Act VIII of 1859, cannot prosecute or defend a suit in his own name. A gamasta of a firm ceases to be a recognized agent under Clause 2, Section 17, Act VIII of 1859, when the business of the firm ceased before the institution of the suit: Mokha Harakroy v. Kallachund Dass, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 327.

Applications under Sections 74 and 75, Act VIII of 1859, on the ground first mentioned in Section 74, must show at least that defendant is about to leave the jurisdiction, with a view to avoid process, or to delay the plaintiff in the prosecution of his suit. Evidence sufficient to support this must be adduced in all cases: Teenam v. Ramruttan, 2 Hyde's Rep., 181.

It is not necessary for the plaintiff to show that the defendant intends to obstruct or delay the plaintiff in execution of his decree, in order to justify an application to the Court for his arrest before judgment under Act VIII of 1859, Section 80: it is enough if his going away will have that effect: Agra and Masterman’s Bank v. Minto, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 265.

Where a defendant is arrested prior to decree under Act VIII of 1859, Section 78, and a decree is afterwards obtained against him in the suit, the plaintiff, if he wishes to detain the defendant in prison, must have him brought before the Court, and his subsistence money fixed, in the same way as in the case of an arrest in execution of a decree; and if he fails to do so the defendant is entitled to his discharge from prison: In the matter of Kallachund Dass, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 327.

A creditor is not entitled, merely because he has a just demand against his debtor, to move the Courts to put in force the extraordinary processes of arrest or attachment on mesne process; he must also have good reason to believe that his debtor is about to depart from the jurisdiction of the Court, or to deal with his property in such a manner that it will be unavailable for satisfaction of the claim against him: Goutiere, A. F. v. Robert Emile and others, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 32.

IV.—ATTACHMENT BEFORE JUDGMENT.

(See also Attachment in Execution.)

No appeal lies to the High Court, under Section 27, Act XXI of 1863, from an interlocutory order of the Recorder of Rangoon passed before judgment in the suit,—e.g., one passed under Section 83, Act VIII of 1859, directing a defendant to furnish security.

Quaere,—Whether, under Act VIII of 1859, there is any appeal from an order to furnish security under Section 83: Ahmed Ally Mahomed v. Gladstone, Wyllie, and others, 7 W. R., 508.

Certain property was attached before decree under Act VIII of 1859, Section 83. On the 11th of May the plaintiff obtained a decree in the suit against the person whose property had been attached. On the same day the judgment debtor filed his petition in insolvency, and the usual vesting order was made. Held that the official assignee was entitled to the goods, notwithstanding the attachment before decree followed by the decree: Rampersaud and others v. Kallachund Dass, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 325.

In attachment before judgment under Sections 83 and 84 of Act VIII of 1859, the Court does not interfere with the legal disposal of the property attached beyond declaring that possession shall not be taken without its previous sanction, undertaking only that, if no subsequent order to the contrary be made, the property shall be forthcoming at the time of pronouncing the decree to abide whatever order it shall make about it: Sava Ramji v. Jadhavji Mathu, er-parte Gamble, Official Assignee, 2 Bom. Rep., 150.

Where moveable property of defendants in certain suits in Civil Court in the Mofussil had been attached before judgment under Sections 83 and 84 of Act VIII of 1859, and so continued until decrees and orders for execution had been made in those suits, and warrants for such execution had been lodged with the Nazir of the Court,—Held that those warrants at the latest, on their delivery to the Nazir, bound the property without re-seizure by him; and that accordingly the execution creditors were entitled to preference as regarded the attached goods over the Official Assignee, in whom the estate of the defendants had become vested by the orders of the Insolvent Debtors' Court at Bombay, made before sale by the Nazir of the attached property, but subsequently to the delivery to him of the warrants for execution: Held, however, also, that mere attachment before judgment does not so bind the property attached as to give to the attaching creditors priority over the official assignee, in whom the estates of the

Where a under Act V afterwards a plaintiff, if in prison, must and his subs. as in the and defendants had been vested by orders of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, made subsequently to such attachment, but before decree and warrant for execution. Gamble v. Bholagir and others, 2 Bom. Rep., 150.

The omission to apply for compensation under Section 88, Act VIII of 1859 (assuming that section to be applicable to the present case), does not bar a regular suit for compensation for illegal attachment; and the fact that security was not given, by which release of property might have been obtained, does not affect the right of suit for the improper attachment. Further, that, under the circumstances, the attachment being needless and unjustifiable, and without due authority of law, the award of damages was fair and unquestionable. Daniel v. Mohun Bhee, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 104.

Compensation under Section 88, Act VIII of 1859, can only be awarded, on the application of the defendant, by the Court which disposes of the case, and cannot be given by another Court in whose custody certain property belonging to the defendant has been found and attached at the instance of the plaintiff. Hurso Sondery Dossee v. Bungsee Mohun Dass, 3 W. R., Mis., 28.

Section 88 of Act VIII of 1859 is not applicable to an attachment made previous to that Act coming into operation. Kishen Chunder Singh Roy v. G. M. Gasper, W. R., 1864, 224.

No appeal lies from an order refusing to grant compensation under Section 88, Act VIII of 1859. Hurso Sondery Choudhirain v. Bungsee Mohun Dass and others, 8 W. R., 332.

In an application made under Section 81, Act VIII of 1859, the Court must be satisfied that a removal of goods is being made or about to be made, with a view to evade the execution of a decree in a specific suit, though it is not necessary that the suit should be actually commenced at the time of their removal. Ramnairin Poddar v. Esiket Levy, 2 Hyde's Rep., 183.

N. S., and subsequently J. S., filed plaints and obtained attachment orders against J. R.'s property. J. S., who got a decree on the 13th and an order for sale of the property on the 28th of February, subject to three prior attachments; one by J. S., whose plaint was filed on the 30th of January, and obtained a decree on February 22nd; and a third by K. S., who also filed his plaint and got a prohibitory order on January 30th, and a decree on February 28th for an order for the sale of the goods on notice to the other three plaintiffs; and the Court ruled that N. S. and K. S. were entitled to priority over R. R.

 Held that the process in attachment before judgment is in all respects the same as in cases of attachment after judgment, and the effect in binding the property attached, so as to prevent alienation, is the same. That of several creditors, he who first attaches is entitled to priority; but if the title of the first attaching creditor is not supported by a judgment at the date of the second attachment, the second attachment will have priority over the first. That an attachment, whether before or after judgment, places the property in the custody of the law. That if property have been attached before judgment, there is no need of a second attachment in the same suit after judgment. That the words "attachment before judgment," in Section 89 of Act VIII of 1859, must be read as equivalent to "attachments in pending suits;" or, in other words, the phrase "before judgment" must be read as meaning "until after judgment." Rajchunder Roy v. Issurchunder Roy and others, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 139.

Section 89, Act VIII of 1859, is applicable only to Mofussil Courts, and a Judge exercising the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court has no power to remit fees under any circumstances. F. Barrow v. Hugh Treveor Pollock; 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 57; 1 Hyde's Rep., 149.

The words in Section 81 of Act VIII of 1859, "where the defendant is about to dispose of his property, or any part thereof," refer only to property within the jurisdiction of the Court where the suit is pending; therefore, where an order under Section by the First Subordinate Judge of the 24 Pergunnahs in respect of property in Calcutta was sent up to the High Court, in order that it might be endorsed in accordance with the provisions of Section 1 of Act XXIII of 1840, the High Court refused to endorse it. Barrow v. Hugh Treveor Pollock and another v. E. R. Solano, 8 B. L. R., 335.

Section 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure renders an attachment before judgment ineffectual as a bar to process of execution against the property attached in satisfaction of a decree in another suit, whether obtained before or after the attachment. Referred Case No. 11 of 1871, 6 Mad. Rep., 135.

V.—Practice.

(a) Miscellaneous Rules.

The practice of the High Court at Calcutta in its original side in the case of decrees by consent, is to require the defendant in person, or some one instructed by him, to appear in Court to consent. Saunders v. Romanath Paul, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 395.

An objection which, if taken, might have been cured, and which has not been taken in the Court below, cannot be taken in the Court of Appeal. Dhurm Das Pandey and others v. Mussamut Shama Sondery D西亚, 6 W. R., P. C., 43.

An appeal from an order of the lower Appellate Court, declaring that a party who claimed to be in possession of property taken in execution of a decree to which he was no party, and with which he had no concern, had no locus standi in the execution case, is in the nature of a miscellaneous appeal, and should be on a stamp for an ordinary petition. Mohesh Chunder Banerjee v. Chunder Monee Dabee and another, 9 W. R., 139.

Where the Statute of Limitation was pleaded for the first time in a petition for review of the judgment of the lower Appellate Court,—Held that the review being part of the proceedings in regular appeal, the question was whether the Statute might be pleaded for the first time in regular appeal; and that when, upon the admitted facts, it is clear that the Statute is a bar, it may be pleaded for the first time in regular appeal. Sarasvati v. Pathanna Setti, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 258.

Where, in the course of the hearing of an appeal, the appellant desired to withdraw, in order to avoid the decision of a question raised by the respondent at the hearing,—Held that, under Section 348 of the Civil Procedure Code, the respondent was entitled to have the case heard and determined. Venkataramanayia v. Kuppi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 302.

In cases where, for the purpose of stamping an appeal, it is impracticable to ascertain accurately what portion of permanent revenue has been assessed on the lands in dispute in a suit, the appellant should furnish to the Registrar a memorandum giving an estimate of the market value and the data on which it has been calculated. If the Registrar considers the estimate clearly insufficient, the Court will issue a commission to ascertain the proper market value.

An appellant has no right to withdraw an appeal which has been regularly registered without the permission of the Court.

Where the appellant had given notice of the withdrawal of the appeal before the day of hearing, and notice of withdrawal had been given to the respondent, but not until costs had been incurred,—Held that the appellant was not at liberty to withdraw the appeal, and the Court ordered that the appeal be set down for hearing. Kareem Bee v. Begam Bee, 3 Mad. Rep., O, A. J., 368.

Where an appellant had been heard at length and the respondent heard partly in answer, and the Court came to a conclusion after research into the record without any new matter being brought forward by the respondent, it was considered unnecessary to hear the appellant in reply. Rousseau v. Nuboo Kishore Bhuddro, 12 W. R., 302.

In a suit for confirmation of possession of an estate under a bill of sale, by setting aside a bond in which land was hypothecated, and, without going into plaintiff's case, gave him a decree. Held that the Judge ought to have tried first, not the defendant's case, but the plaintiff's, who was bound to prove his possession and the genuineness of his bill of sale. Rash Jeet Roy v. Sheik Ezud Buksh and others, 11 W. R., 276.

The Court will not make a rule absolute obtained by a person who is not a party to the suit. Grant, Smith, and Co. v. James Steel, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 60.

An irregularity in a trial is no ground of complaint to the party at whose instance it was caused. The suspicion that a party who has failed to prove his case may prove more successful on a second and fuller investigation is no sufficient ground for directing a new trial. Maharajah Koomour Nitrastur Singh v. Nund Lal, 1 W. R., F. C., 51.

In trying a question of fact, no Judge is justified in acting principally on his own knowledge and belief, or public rumour, and without sufficient legal evidence. Meethun Bibe v. Busheer Khan and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 277.

A Deputy Collector having died before giving his reasons for a decree said to have been made by him the whole of the subsequent proceedings were held to be bad, and the case was remanded to the Collector to be tried de novo upon the evidence upon the record. Nubo Chunder Banerjee v. Issur Chunder Mitter, 12 W. R., 254.

Every reference in a suit to law officers, likely to bind a right, should embrace all important facts proved or admitted in the cause which may affect the conclusion, and it is the duty of the Court itself to frame the questions as to elicit an opinion upon the very facts on which the legal title depends. Myna Boyer v. Ootooram, 2 W. R., P. C., 4.

The rule of Circular No. 31, dated 3rd October, 1864, that the time allowed for obtaining a copy of judgment or decree shall not begin to count till the whole of the requisite pieces of stamp paper are put in, extends also to plain paper filed under the general rule at end of Schedule B, Act X of 1862, in the copy cannot be comprised within the stamp paper put in. Chumun Chowdury v. Sheikh Ali Assim, 9 W. R., 138.

Motion to compel the execution, by an infant, of a conveyance of land, refused on the ground that such an order on such motion was virtually a decree for specific performance. Monomathnath Day v. Aushootosh Day, Cor. Rep., 8.

A motion was on summons that a suit, seeking a declaration that defendants had forfeited their right to a lease by reason of non-payment of rent, be discontinued or dismissed. Defendant entitled to have the forfeiture set aside, but not on motion. Costs reserved till the hearing. Prince Ghomah Mohamed v. The Calcutta Club, Cor. Rep., 67.

It is not the practice to hear more than one counsel or vakheel in support of ex-parte motions. Baroda Soondery Dorsee v. Hurry Hur Mookerjee, 6 W. R., Mis., 114.

A case entered on the undefended Board can only be transferred to the defend Board on payment of the costs of the adjournment, if any, thereby occasioned. Bindoomadhub Mitter v. Woones Chunder Paul, 2 Hyde's Rep., 86.

Translations of papers, if required, should be applied for before the case is posted. Kondyra Gaundan v. Ramasvu Gaundan, 1 Mad. Rep., 130.

Where a defendant shows bond-fides, by offering to pay anything like a fair proportion of his debts, a reasonable time will be granted to enable him to pay the residue. Sabatoola Sircar v. Thompson, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 93; 1 Hyde's Rep., 98.

In the event of a defendant neglecting to furnish a written statement, the Court will examine him as to the grounds of his defence; and should it appear desirable that a written statement should be put in, the case will be adjourned for that purpose at the expense of the defaulting party. Ramruntion and Gobedhorne Dass v. Oriental Inland Navigation Company Limited, 2 Hyde's Rep., 89.

The Court will not press hardly upon a defendant who tends a reasonable substantial payment. Grant v. Radhakant Sen, 2 Hyde's Rep., 249.

Where a decree is passed ex parte in an original suit the defendant has no right to a special appeal; even though his appeal have been entertained by the Civil Court. Chitalamba Pillai v. Kaman, 1 Mad. Rep., 180.

One co-defendant, whose interests are separately represented, may cross-examine another. Narasima v. Kistnana and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 456.

Before a notice on a respondent can be reissued an application must be made to the Court detailing the grounds on which it is preferred. Ram Lockun Sircar Surburkar v. Prithke Ram Chowdhry, 2 W. R., Mis., 37.

When a party applies to have his case revived alleging that no notice was served upon him as the law requires, the Judge ought to examine on oath the officer by whom that service was reported to have been made, and ought not to be satisfied with the formal report of the Nazer. Sreechath Thakoor v. R. Watson and Co., 4 W. R., Mis., 4.

In a case of default, when a defendant admits liability, the case should not be dismissed, but should be decided according to the defendant's admission. Lekhraj Roy v. W. Buckland, 5 W. R., Act X R., 65.

Where a seire facias was issued under the old Supreme Court procedure at the suit of two, and one of them only sued upon it,—Held that the non-joinder of the other was a ground of non-suit, and that the objection might be taken at any stage. Ishward Mundul v. The Heirs of Nawab Golam Ali, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 249.

Proper procedure pointed out in a suit for recovery of possession of certain lands on an allegation of illegal dispossession, where defendant sets up a superior title as proprietor against the allegation of a similar title on the part of plaintiff. If defendant in such a case established his better title as landlord, then plaintiff cannot, in a Civil Court, succeed on the title of an under-tenant. Kooebrooden v. Nyan Bibee and others, 8 W. R., 354.

There is no law which prevents a lower Appellate Court from looking into all the facts of a case before coming to a conclusion on the point of limitation. Kedarnath Ghose v. Kasim Mundul and others, 8 W. R., 364.

Where the application of a party to a suit to have the evidence of witnesses residing beyond the British territories taken under a commission failed, owing to circumstances beyond his control, a subsequent application to have other witnesses examined within the British territories ought to have been compiled with. Mullick Ali Shah and others v. Mussamut Meher Banoo, 8, W. R., 448.

Satisfactory proof of service of summons is necessary before the rejection of an application for re-hearing by a party against whom a decree was passed ex-parte. Kashee Kant Chowdhry v. Beejoy Gobind Chowdhry, 2 W. R., Mis., 24.

A Recorder refused an application for execution against certain defendants who came in and confessed judgment before any issue of summons in the suit. The plaintiffs then appealed to the High Court, by petition, for an order that the Recorder should issue execution against the defendants, or that he should show cause for not doing so. The affidavit did not state whether any decree had actually been made.

Held that the affidavit was insufficient; the Court cannot grant a rule to show cause, unless it is satisfied that the rule should be made absolute, if no cause be shown. In re Comp. D'Escumpte de Paris v. Currie and Co., 3 B. L. R., Ap., 153; 12 W. R., 413.

A party must show due right of interest in the subject-matter of the suit to entitle him to complain of any acts injurious thereto, and a mere stranger without interest cannot maintain any suit.

Such a right for the purposes of a suit to close a new door alleged to have been opened with a design to assert (injuriously) rights over adjacent lands, may be shown without paying the stamp necessary in a suit directly for the land itself. Chundun v. Taliab Ali, 2 N. W. R., 41.

Where the Judge who decides the case is not the Judge who heard the witnesses and received the evidence, the defect may be cured by the assent of the parties. Syed Mohamed v. Oomandub Khemem, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 184.

When the time for doing an act expires whilst the Court is closed, the act, if done on the day on which the Court is next open, will be held to be done within time. Musumut Muchul Koerr v. Luiger and others, 2 N. W. R., 112.

The Sudder Court, being equally divided, referred a case for the opinion of the High Court of Calcutta. The High Court at Agra having been established in the meanwhile,—Held that the Chief Justice of that Court had power to hear and determine the case.

A widow, being old, presented a petition in a suit by her daughter-in-law, as guardian of the former's infant son, relinquishing all her rights in the property to the daughter-in-law herself, and as guardian of the infant. The son died, and the mother now sued her daughter-in-law for possession as heiress of her son. Held that, by the petition, the mother had transferred no rights to the daughter-in-law as proprietor, but that the mother, as heiress of her son, was entitled to the estate. Mussamut Udey Kunwur v. Mussamut Ludu, 6 B. L. R., 283, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 15.

The Court has power to order a case to be set down at once in the General Cause List, if the defendant enters appearance by his attorney before the time for appearance fixed in the summons has expired. When a defendant so appears the Registrar ought so to set down the case, as a matter of course, or at least ask the Judge in Chambers whether he should do so or not. Cumming v. Green, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 75.

Where property is seized and retained by a Collector in his capacity of Receiver, his acts cannot be disputed by way of motion to discharge or get rid of the attachment. Bisessuree Debia v. Sookram Dass Mohunt, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 347.

A number of cases having been instituted against the same defendant, and relating to the same matter, the plaintiff in one of them applied to both the lower Courts to have them all tried together, pointing out particularly that the documentary evidence in one of the other cases was necessary, and should be made use of in the trial of his case.

This application was refused by the first Court, and the lower Appellate Court decided the case of the applicant upon evidence recorded with it, and disposed of the others as governed by that judgment.

 Held, that all the cases should have been tried together; but as the Judge failed to comply with the application to do so he should have tried each case separately on its merits. Nichal Singh v. Syud Ali Ahmed, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 110.

When a day is fixed for the settlement of issues in a case, the Court ought not to proceed to dispose finally of the case except with reference to the specific circumstances detailed in Section 145, Act VIII of 1859. Sheikh Jeeawan v. Goolab Khan, 15 S. W. R., 97.

Directly an intervenor's name has been struck off on the ground that he has no interest in the case, all the evidence he had put in should be removed from the record. Bucha Singh v. Mirza Mashook Ali Bey, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 572.

In a suit for a declaration that certain property, which plaintiff as decree-holder attempted to sell, belongs to his judgment-debtor, where the opposite party claims to have been in possession of the same under an alleged hibba, and plaintiff gives sufficient evidence to raise a reasonable presumption that there has been fraud and collusion in the case, it became for the Court to go on to the evidence on the other side, and ascertain whether the transactions which are the subject of enquiry are fraudulent or valid. Kudumbunno Dossee v. Thuropoorna Doss, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 289.

Where a plea of res judicata is set aside and a suit admitted by a Judge, his successor has no authority to re-open the question, but should, under any circumstances, record his opinion on the merits. Salabmunissa Khatoon v. Moheschunder Roy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 85.

A Judge has no power to keep a case on his own file and refer the witnesses to be examined, some by the Munsiff and some by the Subordinate Judge, and then to decide it himself. Guwadro Chunder Sandyal v. Wooma Moyee Debia, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 176.

Every Court has power to recall its own order on being satisfied that the order was obtained through fraud or misrepresentation or suppression of facts. Sheo Purshun Chobey v. Collector of Sarun, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 256.

A regular suit to set aside a summary order is against general principles, and only lies when the power to bring such a suit is expressly conferred, as under Section 246, Code of Civil Procedure. A paper Section 246 is useless in his attempt to obtain execution against any particular property has only the remedy provided in Section 246, and failing to take advantage of that, his only alternative is to make a fresh application for execution. Mussamat Phoolbas Koovers v. Lall Jugessur Sahi, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 340.

(6) Withdrawal, Striking off, Abatement, and Revival of Suits.

The death of an appellant was held to be no reason for the abatement or postponement of a case which was being conducted by an agent of the deceased defendant, and was not in any way prejudiced. Jugomohun Singh v. Baboo Pershad, W. R. (1864), Act X R., 47.

In a suit to recover possession of timber, the first defendant had ceased to have any interest, and after the settlement of issues he died. Held that the cause of action against the other defendants survived, and that the first defendant having no interest in the subject of the suit, it was not necessary that the suit should be revived against his representatives. Moong Khine and others v. R. C. Burn and others, 6 W. R., 2.

A suit for possession with mesne profits does not abate by reason of the lands having since been washed away. Unoo Poorna Debia v. Kam Lochan Ghose, 5 W. R., 227.

A Court is not bound to dismiss a case on account of the non-appearance of a plaintiff summoned by the defendant to attend as a witness, when the defendant did not petition for attachment or other legal process to be made by the Court to compel the plaintiff's appearance. Bustee Narain Roy v. Sham Soonder Nundee; Sodanund Roy v. Sham Soonder Nundee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 43.

Following the procedure of Act VIII of 1859, a suit ought not to be dismissed because it was instituted before the Collector, instead of in a Sub-Division Court under Section 20, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), but the plaint should be returned to the plaintiff, with a view to its being filed in the proper Court. Rance Shurnt Soonder Roy v. Khenum Kuree Debia, 5 W. R., Act X R., 87.

No appeal lies from a Collector's order dismissing a suit for default on the non-appearance of the plaintiff after being summoned. The proper course for the plaintiff is to apply for the revival of his suit, showing cause why he should not have been summoned, and why the Collector's order was defective. Sheikh Golam Baksheev v. Pulton Singh, 3 W. R., Act X R., 162.

The judgment of a first Court passed on the default of a party summoned to attend as a witness is a judgment open to regular appeal. Chunder Mohun Mookumdar v. Teelooram Bose, 4 W. R., Act X R., 19.

On the day fixed for the hearing of a suit in a Court of Small Causes, the plaintiff's vakéel appeared and stated on behalf of his client that the defendant had satisfied him in respect of the matter of the suit, which he prayed might be dismissed. The defendant did not appear. Held that the Judge was right in dismissing the suit, but that he should have recorded an order under the first provision in Section 98 of Act VII of 1859. Held also that, in such a case, when the plaintiff applies for a return of stamp duty, he must strictly bring himself within the subsequent part of the same section as modified by Section 26 of Act X of 1862. Anonymous, 1 Mad. Rep., 127.
A plaintiff who is permitted to withdraw from his suit under Section 97, Act VIII of 1859, must pay the defendant's costs. On such withdrawal, the proper order to be recorded is not one of dismissal, but one simply permitting the plaintiff to withdraw the suit, with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the same matter on payment of costs or otherwise as the Court may direct. J. R. Davvett v. J. P. Wise, 1 W. R., 322.

J. C. sued W. N. W. for specific performance of an alleged agreement, on the faith of which J. C. had withdrawn a suit instituted by him against W. N. W., and for the repayment of Rs. 10,000 due on account stated and for other relief. The suit was withdrawn without leave of the Court. It also appeared that W. N. W. carried on his business not to sell, buy, or receive money without the consent of R. P. S., who was to receive back his money with 20 per cent. interest. The Court dismissed the suit without costs or otherwise as the Court may direct, and directed that W. N. W. was to be referred to for the dissolved partnership. Juggobando Chatterjee v. W. N. Watson and Co., Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 162.

There is nothing in Section 97, Act VIII of 1859, to prevent a suitor from instituting a claim for possession, and afterwards bringing one for rent. Ramkishom Mundle v. Moorad Mundle, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 67.

A. and B., as joint owners of certain land, brought an action for damages on account of trespass. B. died after action was brought. Held that the cause of action survived to A.}

Semble.— The words "cause of action" in Section 100 of Act VIII of 1859 mean right to bring an action. Chundernas Dutt v. Biswambhur Lahu, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 42.

Section 102, Act VIII of 1859, does not bar the right of heirs to proceed with an appeal as against joint heirs. Mussamut Lutesonnisu Bheee v. Syed Rajaar Ruhan and others, 8 W. R., 84.

Where a suit is dismissed under Section 110, Act VIII of 1859, upon default in appearing made by both parties, no appeal lies from a refusal by the Judge to issue a fresh summons upon the plaint already filed. Lokenath Sahoo v. Tukeer Singh and others, Marsh, 630.

The claim of a petitioner to represent a deceased person for the purpose of executing a decree made in favour of the deceased, ought not to be rejected, but the Judge should, in accordance with the principle of Section 103, Act VIII of 1859, call upon the plaintiff to establish his right to represent the deceased. Wooma Churn Mookerjee v. Luckbee Narain Roy Chowdhry, 1 W. R., Mis., 10.

A party having died while a suit against him was pending, his widow was brought upon the record as defendant, and judgment was given against her, which was subsequently affirmed by appeal. The original decree embraced an award of certain wasilat (accruing after the husband's death) for which the widow was personally liable. Between the original and final judgments she married again, and execution of the decree was accordingly sought against her second husband. Held that he was not liable to summary proceedings in execution, and that the term "judgment" in Section 105, Act VIII of 1859, did not include the himself Chambers, and made note that the application for a commission was made upon no and as the affidavit (presented in Chambers) having been sent to the office of the plaintiff's attorneys for a copy to be made and served upon the defendant, was not then in Court, the application for a commission and to adjourn the hearing was refused, and plaintiff's counsel not being instructed to proceed with the hearing, and leave to withdraw the suit having been also refused, the suit was dismissed.

Held, that the Judge was wrong in refusing to postpone the case for the production of the affidavit in Court, and that there was no legal ground whatever for the refusal to withdraw the suit, which was accordingly restored to its place in the list, and remanded in order to be tried. Dädâbah Niárói Co. v. Sôrâbji Cowâsî, 3 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 25.

Although a case may have been set down for final disposal, if it be a case in which further evidence is required, the Judge is bound, under Section 145, Act VIII of 1859, to adjourn the case, unless he is satisfied that the plaintiff has, without sufficient cause, failed to produce his evidence. Moonshee Syud Ameér Ali v. Baboo Ram Bahadur Singh and others, 7 W. R., 84.

A suit was postponed on the application of the defendant's pleader; but on his applying for further adjournment at the time fixed for hearing, the application was refused; the Court tried the case, the defendant not appearing and not being represented, and gave a decree for the plaintiff. An appeal was allowed, and the case was sent back for re-trial. Amrînâth Jîvâ Baboo Roy Dhumîn Singh Bahadur, 8 B. L. R., 44, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 503.

The adjournment of a trial by public proclamation is irregular and objectionable. 6 Mad. Rep., Rul. XXIX.

Where an appellant is refused postponement and his appeal is dismissed in his absence, the case is one of default. Buldeo Misser v. Syud Ahmed Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

An agreement to take an oath by the parties to a suit filed in Court is not an adjustment by mutual agreement of compromise within the meaning of Section 98 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The defendants agreed that a decree should be passed against them if they failed to perform an agreement by which they bound themselves to take an oath, the terms of which were set forth in the agreement, and one of them failed to take the oath. The lower Court thereupon passed a decree for the plaintiff.

Held, by the High Court, that the procedure of the lower Court was not sanctioned by law. Konnapalan Ukhât Chadvan Hîg v. Perotta Meloden Ramen Namtiar, 4 Mad. Rep., 422.

Civil Courts have no power to sanction the bringing of a fresh suit, except under Section 97, Act VII of 1857. Argoon Singh v. Huru Hur Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 472.

Where a compromise of a suit is made it ought to be carried out by proper deeds and filed in Court, particularly where infants are concerned, so as to have the assent of the Court at the time, instead of its being totally concealed from them. Moutrie Abdool Ali v. Moazzamfiir Hossein Chowdhry, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 22.

Held, in accordance with a ruling of the Calcutta High Court, and in contravention of a ruling of the late Sudder Court in 1850, that, when a compromise has been effected, and a party allowed to withdraw his suit under the provision of Section 98, Act VIII of 1859, if the compromise has not been acted upon, the plaintiff is restored to his original right of action. On the contrary, if acted on, either in whole or in part, the plaintiff cannot be restored to his original right of action, unless he is satisfied that the plaintiff has, without sufficient cause, failed to produce his evidence. Moonshee Syud Ameér Ali v. Baboo Ram Bahadur Singh and others, 7 W. R., 84.

Where defendants against whom an ex-parte decree has been passed by a Collector apply to his successor, under Section 56, Act X of 1859, for a revival of the suit, showing good and sufficient cause for their non-appearance, and that there has been a failure of justice, the successor is competent to alter or rescind his predecessor's decree according to the justice of the case. Kashee Nath Roy Chowdhry and others v. Shabritree Smoorde Dossee and others, 10 W. R., 156.

No legal decree can be passed ex-parte without a Court being satisfied of the due service of the summons. Ram Lochun Soor v. Nitya Kailee Dobia, 12 S. W. R., 210.

N. sued his gomasoth (M.) and M.'s surety (C.) under Section 25, Act X of 1859, and got a decree ex-parte as against the surety. Upon N.'s proceeding to execute the decree, C. applied for a revival of the suit, which was granted, and a re-hearing was appointed for the 4th May 1869, but subsequently postponed to the 8th, on which date the case was struck off by the Deputy Collector, under the provisions of Section 54. Subsequently N. applied for a fresh execution of his original decree to the Collector, who sent the record to the Deputy Collector, with instructions to carry out the execution. Thereupon C. obtained a rule from the High Court calling on N. to show cause why the Collector's order should not be set aside. Held, that the Deputy Collector's order striking the case off the file annulled the decree so far as C. was concerned, and that the Collector's order directing execution was without jurisdiction. Guddadhur Chatterjee v. Nundolall Mookerjee, 12 W. R., 466.

The fact of a decree in a rent suit having been given ex-parte does not detract from its value as evidence of the relationship of landlord and tenant between plaintiff and defendant, provided due notice has been served on the latter; and such a decree may be filed as evidence without the judgment on which it was founded. Toomij v. Durrup Singh, 12 W. R., 473.

Held, that the hearing of a suit in which a pleader was duly appointed on behalf of the defendant, but not instructed to answer, or instructed not to answer at all, was an "ex parte hearing," and that no appeal lay from a judgment passed in such suit. Bhimacharja bin Vyaanakatcharja v. Fakir-W. obtained a decree against D. and others, found upon a Solehnamah said to have been put in by them. Certain property belonging to D. was attached in execution, and a notice of sale proceeding as it does on a ground common to all the defendants, the decision may, under Section 337, be modified in appeal even in favour of defendants not before the Appellate Court. Doorga

Both parties then went back to the Moonsiff, who, on 26th April, 1867, recorded a proceeding that the original ex-parte order was to stand. In the meantime the defendant appealed to the High Court, which reversed the Judge's order.
Held, that the effect of the High Court's order was to render valid the Moonsiff's order admitting the defendant to defend the suit, and that no application for review was necessary on the part of the defendant.
Held, that the High Court's order being a final decision by way of appeal on a question which arose in the suit, could not be reversed with except by the Privy Council. Nubo Kristo Mookerjee v. Nuduir Chun Hatte, 12 W. R., 374.

jee v. Nuduir Chun Hatte, 12 W. R., 374.
Process of execution is executed within the meaning of Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, when an attachment of the property takes place; and if a party means to contest the validity of the decree, on the ground that he had no notice of the summons, he must come in within 30 days from that time, and not from the time that the property is actually sold in cases under Act VIII of 1859, and within 15 days in cases tried under Section 58, Act X of 1859.

A party to a suit against whom a judgment ex parte has been passed, cannot prefer a special appeal from that judgment. He must proceed, under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, to get rid of the ex-parte judgment against him. Devasa Setti v. Ramanadha Bhatt, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 109.

Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply to cases in appeal. Anonymous Case, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 68.

Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply to a defendant who is only absent on an adjourned hearing. It relates only to one who has never appeared. Goranchand Goswami v. Raghu Mandal, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 121; S. C., 12 W. R., 169.

The effect of granting an application under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859 is to declare that there has not been yet a valid decree in the suit, and thereby any attachment that has issued in execution of the decree which has been set aside becomes invalid.

A obtained a decree ex-parte against B. Property belonging to B. was attached in execution. While under attachment, B. sold the property to C. Afterwards B. applied for, and obtained an order, under Section 119 of Act VIII of 1859, to set aside A.'s decree and for a new trial.

Held, that C.'s purchase was not null and void, under Section 240 of Act VIII of 1859. Lala Jagat Narayan v. Tulstram, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 71.

The object of Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, is to make it imperative on a defendant against whom an ex-parte decree has been passed, and who desires to come in and set aside that decree, to apply to the Court as soon as possible after he has notice of the passing of the decree,—i. e., within a reasonable time not exceeding 30 days from the first actual execution of process to enforce the judgment. Shaik Golam Ahyak v. Sham Soonder Koowree, 7 W. R., 375.

Process of enforcing a judgment (within 30 days from which a defendant may apply to set aside an ex-parte decree) has not been executed within the meaning of Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, until the proceedings in execution have been brought to a termination by a sale of the property attached. Radha Binode Chowdhry v. Mudhoo Soondan Sircar and others, 7 W. R., 198.

The stamp required for a petition of appeal from an order rejecting an application to set aside an ex-parte decision under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, is a Rs. 2 stamp. Such an appeal should be treated as a summary and not a regular appeal. Parbity v. Greedharee Lall, 4 W. R., Mis., 15.

In regular suits, where a Court of first instance refuses to re-admit a suit, there is an appeal under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859; but there is no provision for an appeal in Section 347 for an appeal where an Appellate Court has refused to re-admit an appeal struck off for default. Anonymous, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 49.

A suit having been decreed against a number of defendants, some of whom did not appear, one (R.) of the latter applied for a new trial under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, and the case was remanded by the Judge to the Sudder Ameen. On the last day of the new trial, another (K.) of the defendants against whom judgment had been given ex-parte, tendered a written statement in which it was alleged that summonses had not been duly served upon her. The statement was received, and the suit was dismissed in toto. In appeal, the Principal Sudder Ameen reversed that part of the decree which related to K., on the ground that she had presented no petition in conformity with Section 119 of the Code.

Held that K. was properly before the Sudder Ameen's Court, and was entitled to the benefit of the order of dismissal, and that the Principal Sudder Ameen went on too narrow a ground, and should have tried the case on its merits. Kooroonamyee Dabee v. Nobokissen Mookerjee, 11 W. R., 18.

The thirty days "after any process for enforcing the judgment has been executed," within which a defendant may apply under Section 119, Code of Civil Procedure, for an order to set aside an ex-parte decree, mean thirty days after the execution of any process against the person or property of the defendant. Shib Chunder Bhadoree and others v. Luckhee Debia, 6 W. R., Mis., 51.

When a suit has been decreed against several defendants, and one of them, who was not present at the hearing, obtains a rehearing and files a written statement in which for the first time the objection is taken that the suit could not have been proceeded with, inasmuch as plaintiff had improperly joined two distinct causes of action against two different individuals, the Court is not justified in reopening the whole case. Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, does not contemplate the setting aside of that portion of the decree in such a case, which refers to the other defendants. Section 58, Act X of 1859, treated as an authority by analogy in such a case; and Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, interpreted. Huro Krisnho Dass v. Notecchand Baboo, 1 W. R., 260.

Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, will not apply to a decision passed on appeal against a respondent. Omda Bibee v. Acoweri and others, 7 W. R., 425.

A party to a suit against whom a judgment ex-parte has been passed in regular appeal cannot prefer a special appeal from that judgment. He must first proceed under Section 119 of the Civil Procedure Code to get rid of the ex-parte judgment against him. Devappa Setti v. Ramanadha Bhatt, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 109.

Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, refers only to original suits, and is not applicable to the re-admission of an appeal struck off for default of prosecution. Ram Lall Chowdhry v. Surdaree Jhah, 3 B. L. R., 1864, Mis., 21.

An appeal will lie from an order of the Lower Court admitting an application made (after the time allowed by law) for an order to set aside an ex-parte decree under Section 119, Act VIII of...
An application, under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, to set aside an ex parte judgment decreeing possession of a puttee, &c., if made within thirty days from the date of the process enforcing the judgment, ought to be disposed of according to that section, and not rejected on the ground that, as the ancestors of the applicants were parties to the original suit, their application could not be entertained under Section 230. Doorgarvance Dossee v. Jadub Chunder Nakoor, 5 W. R., Mis., 11.

An appearance in person, or by pleader, without putting in any answer or written statement, is an appearance within the meaning of Section 119 of Act VIII of 1859, and the judgment pronounced thereafter is not an ex parte judgment, and therefore an appeal will lie. Galluckburr v. Bishonath Geree, Marsh., 32.

Where defendants summoned under Section 41, Act VIII of 1859, did not appear on the day fixed for them to appear and answer, and their reasons for non-attendance not having been considered sufficient, they were not allowed to appear in the case,—

Held that the Court of first instance was justified in disposing of the case in their absence, and that Section 125, Act VIII of 1859, contemplates a case in which a party appears by pleader who has appeared at the proper time. Joy Prokash Singh v. Meghraj Singh, 12 W. R., 207.

A defendant filed a written statement in a suit, and when the case was called on for final disposal an application was made by counsel on his behalf for an adjournment, but the application was refused, and no one appearing for him, the case was proceeded with, and a judgment was obtained by the plaintiff. The defendant afterwards applied for an order setting aside the judgment, on the ground that he was prevented from appearing when the suit was called on. Held, that the application was within Section 119 of Act VIII of 1859, and the Court had no power in granting the order to impose terms as under Section 111. Administrator-General of Bengal v. Lalu Dyardam Dossee, 6 B. L. R., 688.

Section 119 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1869) is made applicable to rent suits under Act VIII of 1869 (B.C.) by the provisions of Section 34 of the latter Act.

Section 103 of Act VIII of 1869 (B.C.) does not apply to applications for a re-hearing after an ex parte decree on the ground of ignorance of the suit. Musst Drabumuy Gyptia v. Tarachurn Sein, 7 B. L. R., 207, and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 17.

If a Judge makes an ex parte order, unless in cases in which he is expressly empowered to make such an order, the party who has not been heard has a right to apply to the Judge to set it aside, and if the Judge finds that such order was wrong he is at liberty, on hearing both parties, to recall it. Sheo Prosannoo Singh v. Bhulkheree Lall, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 325.

No appeal lies from an ex parte judgment where the reasons assigned for the absence of the defendant are wholly unsatisfactory. Nuseel Singh v. Ranee Sooneet Koore, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 349.

Where after an ex parte decree defendant appeared earlier than fifteen days after service of process, and swore that no summons had been served on him in the case which led to the ex parte decree, and that the contract under which the case had been decreed against him had been broken by the plaintiff himself, it was held that good and sufficient cause was shown for defendant's previous non-appearance, and a primâ facie case had been made out to lead to the conclusion that there had been failure of justice. Annund Moyee Dasssee v. Annund Soondur Messourdu, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 237.

It is not necessary that the judgment debtor should have special notice of any process for enforcing an ex parte decree; he is bound to seek the remedy provided by Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, within 30 days after execution of any process to enforce the judgment. Shumboo Chunder Holdar v. Ram Lall Ghose, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 436.

Where the Lower Appellate Court admitted an application under Section 119 for re-trial of a case which had been decided ex parte by the Moonsiff, it was held to have done right in sending for the record, in order that the case as a suit should be heard and tried by the Appellate Court; the object of the law being that a suit should assume a complete form and go to a full trial, and not be divided between different Courts. Khoole Lall Sahoo v. Shaikh Kudir Buksh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 431.

A plaintiff having taken out execution of an ex parte decree, the defendant applied under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, to have it set aside, and eventually succeeded. After this the case came on for hearing, and the suit was dismissed both by the Court of first instance and the Appellate Court. The plaintiff then came up in special appeal, contending that sufficient enquiry had not been made before the application for re-hearing was admitted.

Held (by Jackson, J., whose opinion prevailed), that it would not be doing justice, which the Court is bound to do in administering the law, to restore an ex parte decree which the two Courts had, on subsequent trial on the merits, found should not be renewed; and that the Moonsiff's order admitting the case to a re-hearing was not open to appeal. Boro Khosiah v. Juta Sirdar, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 315.

In an application for a re-hearing under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, made after the time allowed by that Section, where applicant alleged that the property which had been attached in execution was not her property, and that she had no notice of either suit or decree,—Held that she was entitled to an inquiry into the truth of the allegation as to attachment, and that if her whole plea were made out she would be entitled to a re-hearing of the case. Sooth Magee Dosssee v. Nurmoonul Dosssee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 210.

An order setting aside an ex parte judgment is final where the defendant proves that he was prevented from appearing by sufficient cause, and applies within thirty days after attempt to execute process. But an appeal will lie if the order is made without jurisdiction, or if the application was admitted after the prescribed time. Toolse Dosssee v. Doorga Churn Paul, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 175.

The parties to a suit appeared on the day fixed for the first hearing. On the application of the defendants' vakheel the hearing was adjourned in order to enable them to obtain certain documents from the Collector's office, and afterwards put in written statements. This they failed to do on the day to which the hearing was adjourned, and when the suit came on for final hearing they were still in default, and also failed to appear in person or by vakel. A decree was given for the plaintiff.

Held, that the decree of the original Court was not an ex-parte decree under Section 147 of the Code of Civil Procedure for non-appearance, but a decree under Section 148, and was therefore appealable.

The first hearing of a suit took place on the 16th November, when issues were settled, and the final hearing of the suit was fixed for the 22nd January following. On the 22nd of January the plaintiff changed her vakel, and applied by the new vakel for a summons for a witness, and on the 23rd, the new vakel stating that owing to the absence of his witnesses he was not prepared to go on with the case, the judge dismissed the suit.

Held, that under Section 148 of the Civil Procedure Code the judge was justified in dismissing the suit.

Section 119 of Act VIII of 1859 does not empower a judge to set aside a decree passed under Section 148 of the same Act.

Semble,—Section 114, as well as Sections 110 and 111 of the Code, have reference only to the first hearing of the suit, which may be either on the day named in the summons or on a subsequent day to which such hearing may have been adjourned.

(e) Right to Begin.

There being no distinction made under the Procedure of Act VIII of 1859 between suits in the nature of common law actions and those in the nature of equity suits, and the common law practice in respect of the right to begin having been hitherto followed by this Court, the common law practice is to prevail. S. M. Rungammony Dossee v. Brojo Ladd Day, Cor. Rep., 25.

Where a claim was made under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859, by a third party, to some timber which had been attached by a prohibitory order under Section 234,—Held per Peacock, C. J., Phear, and Macpherson, JJ. (Mitter, J., dissenting), the claimant must begin. The onus is on him to prove that the goods attached were his property, and therefore not in the possession of the judgment debtor. His evidence must be confined to proving his own claim, and he cannot be allowed to show a title in a third person with whom he has no connection.

Held (per Mitter, J.) that on the proper construction of the words, "proceed to investigate the same with like powers as if the claimant had originally made a defendant," the onus of proof as against the claimant is on the decree-holder. Nga Yha Yoh v. F. N. Burn, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 91; S. C., 11 W. R., F. B., 8.

(f) Production and Inspection of Documents.

S. K. D. sued to recover certain jewels, and one of her witnesses being examined by her counsel, with reference to a list of the jewels which was in his possession, the defendant's counsel objected to the document being referred to at all, as it had not been filed with plaintiff in compliance with Section 39 of Act VIII of 1859; and also that the document could not be used as evidence, because it had not been translated. Both objections were overruled.

Held that Section 39 of Act VIII of 1859 refers only to promissory notes, bills of exchange, and such documents as are in their nature the very essence of the case. That, by Section 128 of Act VIII of 1859, it is not necessary to file with the plaint all the documents that the plaintiff intends to give in evidence. That a document which is to be given in evidence need not be translated previous to the hearing of the case. Sreemunty Kameenee Dossee v. Sreemunty Hurromoney Dossee, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 91; 1 Cor. Rep., 151.

The terms of Section 39, Act VIII of 1859, that, on the plaint being presented, any written document relied on by the plaintiff as evidence of his claim must be produced, are imperative, and not permissive. Where, however, a plaintiff can satisfactorily show at the hearing that a document on which he desires to rely was not presented with the plaint, because he was ignorant of its existence at that time, it is discretionary with the Court to admit it or not. Ritchie, Stuart, and Co., v. Gladstone, Wylie, and Co., 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 125.

According to Section 39, Act VIII of 1859, a lower Court may receive, in evidence from the plaintiff, a document (e. g., a potah on which he relies) not filed with the plaint on being satisfied of its bona-fides and reliability. The potah being on plain paper does not render it invalid. Atta Oolah Mundle v. Sakeeooddeen Tanupdar, W. R., 1864, 271.

A document given to a witness as a script to refresh his memory is not "received in evidence" within the meaning of Section 39 of Act VIII of 1859, and need not therefore have been produced when the plaint was filed. Ramji Mudali v. Kangopa Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 168.

The Lords of the Privy Council do not, as a rule, disturb the concurrent decision of both the Courts below upon a question of facts, unless it very clearly appears there has been some miscarriage of justice, some mis-trial, or that the conclusion is very plainly erroneous.

Reception of documents under Section 39, Act VIII of 1859, by the Court of first instance cannot be a ground of appeal. The sanction of the Court receiving the documents clears the defect of their not having been tendered with the plaint. Gosain Tota Ram v. Raja Rukinibal/ab, 3 B. L. R., P. C., 34; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 32.

In a suit for wrongful dismissal of a servant of a gas company, in which the plaintiff alleged that the motive for dismissing him was his discovery of certain irregularities of the manager with regard to money matters,—Held that he was entitled to inspect the accounts which had been checked by himself while in the company's service, the press copy letter-book containing copies of correspondence regarding his own conduct while in the company's service, and the account of a particular item in respect of which he alleged he had made discoveries.

that he imputed to the manager as the cause of his dismissal. Mitchell v. The Oriental Gas Company, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 322.

Under Section 128, Act VIII of 1859, the parties, though not entitled as of right to adduce fresh documentary evidence after the issues in the case are settled, may yet tender such evidence, stating the grounds upon which it was not tendered at an earlier stage; and the Judge may receive or reject such evidence, but the grounds on which he acts should be stated on the record. R. Watson and Co. v. Kunhney Bakhoor and others, 9 W. R., 294.

Assuming that Section 128, Act VIII of 1859, is applicable to cases under Act X of 1859, it was held in special appeal that there appeared no reason why the lower Appellate Court should have thrown out, as evidence, a kubulet admitted after the first hearing and considered by the first Court. Bhoom Narain Singh v. Kurmoon Ali, 1 W. R., 198.

A Court cannot be said to have received documents as admissible in evidence when, for want of time to inspect and consider them, it orders them to be filed; nor would it be wrong in law in rejecting or returning them after proper inspection; the object of Section 129, Act VIII of 1859, being that papers should be produced in a regular manner, and inspected by a Court at its convenience. Soondukhina Chowdhry v. Raj Mokun Bose and another, 11 W. R., 350.

The mooktearnamah upon the authority of which this suit was brought being impugned by the defendant as a forgery, and as not executed by the party alleged to have granted it, the Court held that, notwithstanding its attestation in due form by the Mooniss of Muttra, the parties charged were bound to prove its genuineness; and as they failed to do so, the suit was dismissed, and the parties in whose name the documents, 116, held that when a proper application was made to a Judge under Section 138, Act VIII of 1859, to send for, from the records of his own Court, papers which would be evidence in the case before the Court, the Judge had no discretion in the matter, but that the section must be treated as giving a power which the Judge was bound to exercise,—the principle being that where a Statute confers an authority to do a judicial act in a certain case it was imperative on those authorized to exercise the authority when the case arose. Rughoonath Bose v. Oomd Ali, W. R., F., 177.

Held that declarations made in pleading, in suits instituted before the Code of Civil Procedure came into operation, are inadmissible as evidence of the facts stated therein. Held also that a Civil Court which inspects the records of another case under Section 138 of Act VIII of 1859, can only use as evidence such documents as are otherwise unobjectionable and admissible for or against either of the parties to the suit. Narappa Hegdi v. Gafoaybin Kapaya, 2 Bom. Rep., 361.

A Judge is not bound under Section 138, Act VIII of 1859, upon the application of any of the parties to a suit to send for the record of any other suit. Heeramun Roy and others v. Kasee Tawbur Enam and others, 7 W. R., 199.

Under Section 138 a Court is not bound to send for the whole record, but only for such papers as may be specially mentioned in the application. Missamul Tamee Beebee v. Shah Hafeebul Hossein, W. R., 1864, 272.

A Court ought to send for papers filed in another Court under Section 138, Code of Civil Procedure, instead of recording the objectionable and meaningless order, "Nutt shamil pesh." Romunissken Dey v. Shaikh Kadir Buksh, 6 W. R., 79.

Stamp duty is not chargeable on an application by a witness for the return of a document filed by him in obedience to summons. Anonymous, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 237.

A cazeem's book is not strictly an official record arising under the provisions of Section 138, Code of Civil Procedure, the Court must see whether it comes under the description of a public record. Jugernath Sahoo v. Syud Mahomed Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 173.

The great object of the Procedure Code in requiring a day to be fixed for the hearing of a case and all the evidence to be adduced on that day, is that parties may thus be confronted with each other, and the whole evidence on either side be at one and the same time before the Court. Where a party fails to produce his documents at the proper time, a Court commits no error in law in refusing to send for them subsequently, if not satisfied that they are necessary for the ends of justice. Sobber Thau v. Sassunath Thau, 15 S. W. R., 150.

In a suit to recover the balance alleged to be due on a partnership transaction, the first defendant who was examined as a witness for the plaintiff refused to produce certain accounts relating to the partnership which he was directed to produce by the civil Judge. Thereupon judgment was given against the first defendant under Section 170 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Under Section 196, though not every material evidence settled, may be withdrawn at an earlier stage such evidence should be struck out. v. Kunhye B

Assuming it applicable to the special appeal why the lower Court refused, as evidence and hearing and

Narain Singh, another, 11

A Court cannot take evidence as an ad interim time to inspect the papers and inspect the documents as ad interim time to inspect the papers should be filed; not or returning to the subject of Section 196. So odhukina, another, 11

The learned Magistrate referred the suit to the lower Court to prove the suit and inspect the exhibits prepared with the material of the case.

During the trial, the learned Judge Bishen Singh Coonwar...

The specific two grounds were that material was not examined; and, 2nd, the pending case by the Appellate Judge Kemp, J., refused, because the lower Court was justified in refusing it was unfair.

Norman, justifying the Court was not the document...
On appeal, the High Court, holding that the accounts were relevant and material evidence in the suit, and that the civil Judge was justified in requiring the first defendant to produce them, and being satisfied that the accounts were in possession or control of the first defendant, affirmed the judgment of the civil Judge. Kutakon Ven Kajaś v. Bhupalæem Pedda Moulasapppah, 4 Mad. Rep., 142.

_Held_ that the subordinate Judge was quite justified in citing a decree between other parties to explain an apparent inconsistency between certain statements in the plaint and in the evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses, on the ground of which inconsistency the Moonsiff had rejected that evidence; and that the non-filing of this decree in the first Court was a matter entirely within the discretion of the Judge, and ought not to be made a ground for reversing a judgment. Radhanath Dass v. Khellut Chunder Ghose, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 558.

The Court will not order a defendant to furnish the plaintiff with a list of documents till after the plaintiff shall have filed his written statement. John Ogłe v. Kumans, 2 Hyde's Rep., 279.

(g) Local Investigation.

A judgment debtor who fails to appear before an Ameen deputed to make a local enquiry as to the mesne profits, is not precluded from objecting to the Ameen's report, on the ground that the investigation was erroneous. Karoo Lall Thakoor v. A. G. Forbes, 7 W. R., 140.

Where a local enquiry is necessary, a Collector should cause such enquiry to be made by a properly constituted officer, according to Section 73, Act X of 1859. Shaik Bahadoor Ally and another v. Domun Singh and others, 7 W. R., 27.

It is within the discretion of a Judge to order or refuse a local enquiry. When in the exercise of a reasonable discretion he refuses such enquiry, his order should not be interfered with, unless very strong grounds are shown for the necessity of the enquiry. Rash Bekary Singh v. Sakeb Roy, 12 W. R., 76.

In a suit brought to contest a notice of enhancement, a Judge is not bound to order a local enquiry, merely because he incidentally states such an enquiry to be the best source from which to obtain reliable evidence upon the point of rates. Nor will a special appeal lie on the subject of the Judge exercising a discretion as to ordering or not ordering such an enquiry. Heralal Seel v. Gungadhur Sunnapurn, W. R., F. B., 19.

A taid-nuvees, or apprentice, who does occasional work as a copyist, is not an officer of Government who should be entrusted with the making of a local enquiry, and report under Section 73, Act X of 1859. Doorga Doss Chatterjee v. Gooroo Churn Mistree and others, 6 W. R., A. R., 81.

It was not the intention of the Legislature to allow witnesses to be examined out of Court by Ameens, except with reference to points for the determination of which local inspection is required. Skadhoo Singh v. Ramanograha Lall, W. R., 83.

In a former suit the ryot failed to set aside a notice of enhancement, it being held that the productive power of the land had increased; but it was left to a future suit to decide what those rates should be. This suit having been brought for that purpose, the plaintiff declined to adduce any further evidence than the judgment in the former suit, which being no evidence at all, both the lower Courts dismissed the suit. Held that the lower Courts were not bound of their own motion to order a local investigation. C. McDonald v. Munar Roy, 3 W. R., Act X, 153.

The Judge reversed the decision of the Principal Sudder Ameen, and ordered a remand and a fresh local investigation by the Moonsiff. The Moonsiff, being unable to go himself, was subsequently authorized by the Judge to appoint a suitable officer, and he accordingly appointed his Sheristadar to conduct the investigation. The Principal Sudder Ameen acted upon the report of the Sheristadar; and on appeal to the Judge the plaintiff objected to the report on the ground of partiality. Held that he could not now object to the report on the ground that the Judge had no authority to remand the case, or that the Moonsiff had no authority to substitute the Sheristadar for himself, or that the report of the Sheristadar was invalid and illegal. Mahomed Aujob v. Goarree Pershad Shah, 6 W. R., 62.

A party who refuses to appear before an Ameen at the time he holds his local investigation, is not at liberty afterwards to take any objection to the Ameen's report. Rumon Doss v. Brojo Kishore Mitter Mayoddar and others, 6 W. R., 130.

The ordering of a local investigation is purely a matter of judicial discretion. The refusal to order a local investigation is not a defect in law. Raj Kishen Mookerjee v. Huro Mohun Mookerjee, 5 W. R., 248.

It is wholly in a Judge's discretion to make further local enquiry. His exercise of that discretion cannot be interfered with in special appeal. Poorna Persad Roy v. Chunder Nath Chatterjee, 1 W. R., 249.

There are no limits to the powers conferred by Act VIII of 1859 on a Civil Ameen for the purpose of making an investigation. Mohon Lall Roy v. Urnapoorna Dassee and others, 9 W. R., C., 566.

Where clear instruction as to a local enquiry ordered by the Court is given to an Ameen in the presence of both parties, and no objection is made to it by either party then and there, they have no ground of complaint, after the Ameen has carried out his instructions, if the Court acts upon his report. Bissentor Roy and others v. Kanchun Roy and others, 11 W. R., 155.

The report of an Ameen as to a local enquiry upon a matter which no personal inspection on his part could decide, and in regard to which the depositions of parties acquainted with the place could afford proper information, was held to be in no way irregular, simply by reason of his having examined witnesses on the spot. Sheo Narain Bhuggut v. Boodek Singh and others, 11 W. R., 423.

Charges against a Civil Court Ameen (such as can be readily enquired into, and their truth either disproved or proved) ought to be fully enquired of several witnesses on both sides, and afterwards for further satisfaction recorded the statements of the way of their giving evidence on oath,—Held, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Dool Gobind Singh that his reports and the original deposition on oath were receivable in evidence under Section 180, Act VIII of 1859, to investigate the state of accounts between a debtor and a creditor, made his report, on which the judgment appealed against was founded, the High Court, on a regular appeal, refused to take a fresh account.

The Appellate Court will not enter into the details of the account of a Commissioner appointed under Section 181 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A party cannot be heard in the Appellate Court upon items to which he took no objection in the Court below. But where there has been error in the principle on which an account has been taken, the Appellate Court will correct such error, if excepted to in the Court below. Chinnamalayar v. Venkataram and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 418.

An Omedwar, or candidate for office, not being an officer of the Court, cannot be deputed for a local enquiry under Section 73, Act X of 1859, nor can his report be properly received as evidence. Tuckdharee Roy v. Mooraleedur Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

Clause 3, Note (b), Article 11, Schedule B of Act XXVI of 1867, which authorizes a Court to direct a local or other investigation as to the market-value or annual profits of any property, does not restrict the Court to an Ameen's report in the matter, but allows the Court the benefit of an Ameen's investigation, as is provided for in other matters in the Code of Civil Procedure. Modhoosoodun Chuckerbuttery v. Ryemoney Dassee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 415.

An error in the principle on which an account is taken is not a ground of special appeal. Ramdoss Koondoo v. Nilkanato Dhar and others, S. W. R., 6.

An error in the principle on which an account is taken is not a ground of special appeal. Ramdoss Koondoo v. Nilkanato Dhar and others, S. W. R., 6.

A part of a Commissioner appointed under Section 181 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is competent to an Appellate Court, under the powers conferred by Section 37 of Act XXXII of 1861, to examine the accounts, even if no exception has been taken to them in the Court appointing the Commissioner. Madras rulings dissented from. Ahmed Valad Nathubai v. Khusuji Valad Kurimbhai, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 149.

In a case in which plaintiff sued to recover some land, and in which defendant denied the power of plaintiff's vendor to sell the land claimed or a part of it, a local enquiry was ordered, to ascertain the boundaries of the land in dispute. Judgment of the High Court, upholding the decision of the lower Court, which dismissed the suit because plaintiff failed to appear or take proper steps before the Ameen at the local investigation, and because he omitted to give formal proof of his deed of purchase confirmed. Meer Mahomed Taque Chowdry v. Jadnautho Jhu, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 28.

An Ameen, when directed to make enquiry as to mesne profits, ought not, in the execution stage of a suit, to enter into enquiries as to dates of dispossession, which must be taken to have been determined by the decree. Bijoy Gobind Naik v. Kulu Prosmono Naik, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 294.
In a case where the issue is whether two persons bear the relation of man and wife, a Judge is not justified in going himself to the village where the parties live, in order to make enquiries among their neighbours; much less in holding such local investigation on a Sunday, and without due notice to one of the parties.

Section 180, Act VIII of 1859, does not warrant a Civil Court in deputing its functions to an Ameen, whom it sends to make a local investigation.

Specification of the points to which the Ameen’s investigation should be directed.

When an Ameen’s map is received in evidence by consent, and admitted by both parties to be topographically correct, the Court is entitled to look at the Ameen’s report as explanatory of the map. Mahomed Anwar Chowdry v. Raj Chunder Ghose, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 522.

An Ameen has no power to try the question of title or possession. Shiboo Soonduru Debi v. Ram Chunder Sircar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 469.

Held that the Ameen’s enquiry ought not to have been ordered in this case, where the question to be decided was one of disputed boundary, which turned chiefly on possession before the date of suit, and that the subordinate Judge would have been justified in disregarding the Ameen’s report, and trying the appeal on the recorded evidence.

Held also that the subordinate Judges having weighed the evidence with some indirect reference to probabilities was not an error of law. Kalee Dass Acharje v. Khetro Pal Singh Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 471.

An Ameen should be appointed to hold a local investigation only when it is necessary to inspect the land which is the subject of dispute, to take maps of localities, to obtain information with regard to the physical features of the place, to identify the land in maps with parcels which are the subject of the suit, and to identify the maps with one another with the aid of objects to be found in the land; and for these and similar purposes an Ameen may examine witnesses when the evidence which they have to give is of such a nature that it ought to be taken by him on the spot. Where, however, any fact can be proved by evidence taken otherwise than on the spot, that evidence ought to be taken by the Court itself in a regular manner, and not by an Ameen.

Quartz,—Whether, where an Ameen has in fact been, though improperly, deputed, and has examined witnesses, that evidence ought to be totally rejected. Bindabun Chunder Sircar Chowdroy v. Nobin Chunder Biswaas, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 282.

The report of an Ameen in a proceeding to make a partition, which is a judicial proceeding under Section 180, Act VII of 1859, must be treated in the same way as the report of an Ameen in an ordinary suit. The report and depositions are to be taken as evidence in the suit, and to form part of the record. The Court is not bound by the report, but ought to enquire further into the matter if there is any necessity for so doing, and to examine witnesses bona-fide tendered for execution. Azim Sarang v. Atimooden, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 270.

(k) New Trials.

A judgment-debtor in a Small Cause Court on the day (28th July) of her arrest in execution of an ex parte decree deposited the amount claimed, and gave notice under Section 21, Act XI of 1865, that on the next day of the sitting of the Court she would file her grounds for a new trial. The Court next sat on the 1st August, and she filed her application on the 2nd.

Held that the Judge of the Small Cause Court was right in proceeding to hear the application, instead of going through the formality of telling her to first give notice and apply again. Vaughan, L., v. Lal Chand Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 281.

A party who applies for a rule for a new trial and obtains it on particular materials, ought not to be allowed to go into fresh evidence with a view to strengthen his case when the rule comes on for hearing. If on hearing both parties the Court thinks further enquiry necessary, it can of course make such enquiry in such manner as seems most fit to it.

When new trials are moved for an allegation of facts, it would be very convenient that a practice should be introduced of requiring the facts to be stated by affidavit, and in like manner the answer to be supported by affidavit. Mudhopooudoo Koondoo v. Madhurum Sewlall, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 161.

VI.—PLEADINGS.

(a) Miscellaneous Rules.

Under the Civil Procedure Code parties are not bound so strictly to the pleadings as in an equity suit under the old procedure, if their being so bound would work injustice. Sreemutty Dossee v. Tarra-chand Coondoo Chowdry and others, Bourke’s Rep., A. O. C., 48.

The Courts in India are not governed by the technical rules of pleading which obtain in Courts administering English law. Pitumber Pyne v. Tooklee Dossee, 7 W. R., 39.

A party may have subordinate rights awarded when they arise out of the principal right which he pleads. But when a defendant pleads distinctly a jagheerdar’s proprietary right against a malik’s proprietary right, a Court cannot award a subordinate right of occupancy in no way arising out of a jagheerdar’s proprietary right, but out of a ryotee right never pleaded by the defendant, and in fact incompatible with his case. Pandy Bishonath Roy v. Bhyrud Singh, 7 W. R., 145.

Where, from the way in which the issues were framed and the pleadings worded, it was clear that there was no contention on the part of the defendant as to whether the terms of the deed on which the suit was based had been strictly complied with or not, but the factum of the deed itself was only put in issue by the defendant,—Held that this was not a case in which the defendant was entitled to fall back upon an alternative plea and raise the question of compliance. Shukochurunee Dossee and another v. Shendaminnee Dossee, 7 W. R., 306.

The mere omission of a defendant, on first starting his case, to specify the lands in dispute as an accretion, does not affect his right to them, when the fact of their being an accretion comes out in the course of the case. Oodo Poramanick v. James Simson and others, 6 W. R., 162.

When a defendant fails to establish a high-bite tenure as his title to certain land, he must not be allowed to set up another title not depending on any deed, but derived from a 12 years' occupancy of the land as a ryot within the meaning of Section 6, Act X of 1859. Maharajah Woodoy Narain v. Durriah Roy, W. R., 1864, 187.

In a suit to recover possession against an auction purchaser at a sale in execution, when the plaintiff fails to prove his special plea of a mourosee title supported by a potthah, he cannot be allowed to fall back upon his general rights as a kudeemee ryot. Ram Naffor Khara v. Digambar Chatterjee, W. R., 1864, 259.

The rule that when an admission is relied upon by a party to a suit as against his opponent it must be taken in its entirety, does not apply to pleadings. Brojo Raj Kishoree v. Bisnooath Dutt, W. R., 1864, 305.

A defendant impliedly admitting a liability if a fact is proved, must, if that fact is proved, be held liable. Gour Kishore Potedar v. Sheikh Chitto Bhopen, W. R., 1864, 28.

Where a decree for wasilat was given against the manager of an unregistered trading company, and the plea that the company was not a corporate body, and therefore not liable without a disclosure of the names of the parties constituting the company, was not taken until the execution stage,—Held that the plea was a technical one, and taken too late to be of any weight in a court of equity. D. R. Tripp v. Nursing Chunder Mitter, W. R., 1864, Min. 7.

Payment by a tenant under the landlord's directions to another, or for a special purpose, of a sum equivalent to the amount claimed as rent, is tantamount to a payment to the landlord himself, and is a sufficient answer to the landlord's suit for rent. Such a defence, being rather one of payment than of a set-off, is open to a defendant in a suit under Act X of 1859. Massamut Joy Kooer v. Furlong, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 112.

A tenant defendant pleaded that the land was his ancestral estate. He subsequently tendered evidence, then first obtained, to show that the land had in 1814 been mortgaged to, and in 1831 bought by, his father. Held that the evidence was receivable, notwithstanding the erroneous plea. Rangasami Ayyangar v. Krishna Ayyangar, 1 Mad. Rep., 72.

Where the Statute of Limitations was not pleaded in the original Court,—Held that it might be set up in the Appellate Court if evidence could be taken there in reply to such plea. On special appeal the Statute of Limitations cannot for the first time be pleaded, unless where the facts which raise the plea are admitted. Maruosee Reddi v. Krishna Padayache, 1 Mad. Rep., 358.

Where a plaintiff on certain alleged facts seeks relief, and is unable to obtain a trial of the facts by reason of certain conclusions of law which the Judge forms on the case in its then condition, the Courts are bound to proceed upon the facts as they are stated by the plaint, and upon the assumption of the truth of those facts. Nawab Sidhee Ali Khan v. Ojoodyaram Khan, 5 W. R., P. C., 83.

Where a suit at the time of institution within the jurisdiction of the Court in which it is brought has undergone a substantial change, and become a suit which by law requires the order of a superior tribunal for its hearing in the original Court, and such order has not been obtained, plaintiff cannot subsequently on appeal be allowed to revert to the original form of the suit for the purpose of upholding the lower Court's judgment as far as regards the original defendant. Buldeo Dass and another v. Buldeo Dass and another, 3 N. W. R., 199.

Where a plaintiff sued alleging that a certain deed of mortgage was executed by M. B. benam for the benefit of H. B. through whom the plaintiff claimed, and also alleging that H. B. had advanced the money for the mortgage out of her own money, it was held that if it could be shown that the money advanced was the money of M. B., who executed the mortgage, it was immaterial to consider who was the nominal mortgagee, as the plaintiff could not set up a title inconsistent with the title set up in the lower Courts. In the absence of proof sufficient to establish the title of H. B., and to show that the money was advanced by H. B., the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. Bhowun Doss v. Shaikh Hameedoollah, 15 S. W. R., P. C., 38.

Where a judgment-debtor desires to plead the counterfeiture of decree-holder by purchase, he should do so when she first seeks to execute the decree. Kirkby v. Luke Dillon, 1 N. W. Rep., Par. 9, p. 163.

A plaintiff can be allowed to amend his case only when he has an honest case; but either through mistake, or some misapprehension, he has not placed the real facts before the Court. Byrue Dut v. Massamut Lekhrane Kooer, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 211.

It is not competent to a Court to set up a defence not only not made by the defendant, but inconsistent with his own statement. Ranee Shurrill v. Soondery Debia v. Koomer Puresh Narain Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 464.

A plaintiff has no right to change the character of his pleading, and to obtain a decree on a cause of action not originally contemplated. Dhupi Suroy Roy v. Vellayet Ali, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 211.

A demand of costs, accompanied by a prayer that they should be enquired into upon a particular principle, does not imply an admission on the part of the depositor of his obligation to pay costs to the extent of the deposit. Rajah Leelannond Singh v. The Court of Wards on behalf of the Rajah of Durlihunga, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 387.

The mere fact of non-traverse of the plaintiff's allegation of heirship was held not to amount to an admission of title, especially (as in this case) where there was a general denial of the plaintiff's allegations including that of plaintiff's title, and where the real question at issue was to the share to which plaintiff was entitled. Shaikh Hameedoollah v. Genda Lall, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 171.

(2) Waiver.

The defendant objected to the jurisdiction in the first Court, but took no objection to the jurisdiction before the lower Appellate Court. Held that that objection to the jurisdiction was waived. Mohammed Hossein v. Raja Akhaya Narayan Pal, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 42.
A defendant is entitled to take in the Appellate Court an objection which he had no opportunity of making until the case was heard in appeal. Lowa Jha and others v. Biseshur Singh, 11 W. R., 6.

It is too late for defendants to object with effect to a suit on the ground of multifariousness after it has been fully tried and decided on the merits; but the objection is one which a defendant has a right to raise on the settlement of issues, or on a motion to take the plaintiff off the file. Ram Doyal Dutt v. Ram Doolal Deb, 11 W. R., 273.

A plaintiff obtained a decree to set aside an alienation of ancestral property effected by his father during his minority. Defendant objected in special appeal, first, that the suit was barred by lapse of time since plaintiff attained his majority; and secondly, that, under the Mitackshara law, the father had a right to alienate a share of the property.

Held, that as the first of these objections was entirely a matter of fact, and was the second, though essentially a matter of law, went to the substance of the plaintiff's claim, they should have been urged in the lower Courts, and could not be admitted for the first time in special appeal. Basant Puria Nich v. Doyandhee Bullor Singh, 9 W. R., 493.

Held that, where the question whether the alienation of certain property by the father without the son's consent was valid under the Mitackshara law, was not raised in the lower Courts, such invalidity could not be admitted as a ground of objection in special appeal, for it necessarily involved an issue of fact. Puria Dutt v. Brojo Kuwwar, 9 W. R., 302.

An objection to the effect that the Court of first instance had given judgment on the strength of a document which ought to have been registered, was not admitted in special appeal, as it had not been raised either in the first Court or in the lower Appellate Court. Joygopal Mosoomdar v. Thakomone Dabee, 11 W. R., 381.

Where plaintiff claimed as his inheritance what had been sold to defendants by his mother to liquidate debts due by his late father, it was held, first, that it was too late in special appeal to raise doubts as to his mother having been plaintiff's guardian when the objection had not been taken below at any stage of the proceedings; and secondly, that there was such an apparent necessity as would justify the purchase, and that the mere fact of the widow having been able to make a more advantageous arrangement would not nullify a sale to a bonafide purchaser for value. Pool Chundra Surmaiah v. Ram Joy Surmaiah, 10 W. R., 11.

Held that an objection that, as the plaintiff had not proved his claim to a kubuleut at enhanced rates, no decree for a kubuleut could be given which is founded upon law only, may be made by a party to the suit in the Court of Appeal, although it has not been made in the Court below. Dern Dyal Paramanick v. Surendra Nath Roy, 10 W. R., 77.

In a case in which plaintiff claimed, as lakahera, certain land situated within the share of his co-sharer, and, though his co-sharer was dismissed in the first Court, obtained a decree in the lower Appellate Court, it was held that, as defendant did not object in the lower Court to the admissibility as evidence of certain khusrah butvarra papers on which that Court relied, he could not be allowed to take that objection in special appeal. Chadee Singh and others v. Beharee Tewaree, 10 W. R., 91.

A plaintiff who had purchased a factory from the Official Assignee sued for the recovery of money on a bond alleged to have been an asset of his purchase, and obtained a decree. In appeal it was objected for the first time that plaintiff had not filed any evidence to prove that the bond formed part of the assets of the factory, and his suit was dismissed. Held that plaintiff ought to have an opportunity given him of adding the requisite proof. Chunder Coomar Roy v. Kuberrroothen and others, 10 W. R., 332.

An objection to the decree of a subordinate Court, founded on the improper valuation of the suit, is not such an objection as may be entertained when raised for the first time in special appeal. Kaladungooroo Bakus v. Raghojee and another, 1 Bom. Rep., 62.

Where a deposition made in another suit, to which special appellant was not a party, was admitted and used by the first Court without any objection on the part of the special appellant, it was held that he could not be allowed to object to it in special appeal.

Where the lower Appellate Court's judgment is good, and its adjudication of a plaintiff's right has been based on a sound principle, the High Court will not allow a new point to be taken in special appeal which was not taken in either of the Courts below. Waseer Jemadar v. Noor Ali, 12 W. R., 33.

When an objection is preferred and takes the shape of a suit under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, the question for determination is whether the objector has a better right to the possession of the property in dispute than the decree-holder who is executing his decree. The objector may be entitled to hold as dur-putneedar, and yet may not be entitled to khas possession of the property. Sheero Koomarsee Debia v. Kissub Chunder Bose, 5 W. R., 224.

Held, that as no objection to the omission of any of the usual ceremonies of adoption or the age of the adopted was taken before the lower Court, its decision was not open to those objections when taken on appeal. Kuwwar Dury Singh v. Kuwwar Kurin Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 31.

Where an objection taken in the grounds of appeal is not pressed at the hearing of the case, it cannot be raised again in special appeal. Nobokristo Sirce v. Kalsehnd Doss, 12 W. R., 470.

An objection to the reception of secondary evidence is properly made in the Court of first instance, but cannot be allowed in any Appellate Court. Kissen Kamencee Dossee v. Ram Chundra Mittra and others, 12 W. R., 13.

A decree-holder ought to urge before the lower Court, or make it a distinct ground of special appeal, that it is too late to take objection to the execution after the property has been sold. Tarines Churn Gangooly v. Tiluck Chunder Ghose, 6 W. R., Mis., 63.

The receipt of rent for fifteen years by the purchaser of a putnee talook sold for arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819, was held to be a waiver on his part of his right to evict the tenant under Clause 2, Section 11 of that regulation. Woomanath Roy Chowdry v. Rohgohonath Mitter, 5 W. R., Act X R., 63.
By the terms of a kule, rent not paid when due was to bear interest. The zamindar received rent for a period of ten years, without making any demand of interest in respect of arrears, and without claiming to apply any portion of the payments towards the discharge of interest. Having subsequently brought a suit for interest, the Courts below were of opinion that the zamindar had waived his claim to interest, and dismissed his suit. Held that there were facts justifying such an inference, and that their finding could not be reviewed in special appeal. Dinodiyal Porananick v. Pran Kissan Paul Chowdhry and others, Mar. Rep., 394, W. R., F. B., 117.

In 1267 the plaintiff obtained a decree in a suit to enhance the defendant's rent. Held that the acceptance by the plaintiff of the old rent from 1268 to 1271 was no waiver of his claim to the higher rent decreed to him. Lander v. Benode Lall Bahoo v. Ramdas Mowondar, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 92; 10 W. R., 132.

Where a defendant appears in person or by pleader, the fact that the defendant is not prepared to put in a written statement does not warrant the trial of a suit ex-parte. Sivarajadhan Pillai v. Kuppa Ganotu Punabi, 2 Mad. Rep., 311.

It is not the written statements of parties, but the issues framed under the Code of Civil Procedure, which ought to be the index of what has been and has to be adjudicated. J. P. Wise v. Juggobunder Rose, 12 W. R., 229.

A written statement is not a pleading in con-fession and avoidance whereby a defendant is bound by the confession, and so compelled to prove the avoidance. If used as evidence against a defendant, the whole statement must be taken together. Soolan Ali v. Chand Bihai and others, 9 W. R., 130.

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, a plaintiff cannot file a written statement after having seen that of the defendants, and by way of rejoinder thereto. Jadub Ram Deb Ram v. Lohun Muduck, 5 W. R., 56.

An application for leave to file an additional written statement allowed, and distinction made between such an application by a plaintiff and one made by a defendant. Sree Muty Dasmoni Dasi v. Sreenath Ghose, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 11.

Where a plea of limitation was set up in the defendant's written statement, and the first Court, considering the written statement to be prolix, directed the pen to be run through a large part of it, the defendant, dissatisfied with this proceeding on the part of the first Court, appealed to the Judge complaining that no adjudication had been given on the plea of limitation. Held that the power of a Court to deal with written statements which appear to contain irrelevant matter, or to be argumentative or unnecessarily prolix is regulated by Section 124, Act VIII of 1859; and that as the plea of limitation must be assumed to have been properly before the Judge, he was bound to adjudicate upon it. Boolee Singh and others v. Harobuns Naran Singh and others, 7 W. R., 212.

Objections to the written statement on the ground stated in Section 124 of Act VIII of 1859 cannot be taken when the suit is ripe for hearing. Smallwood v. Parry, Cor. Rep., 39.

Mere argument is (under Section 124 of Act VIII of 1859) inadmissible even in a written statement. Bishen Sahayee Singh v. Beer Kishore Singh and others, 8 W. R., 296.

A Court was held not to have done wrong in admitting a supplemental written statement which it had called for under Section 122, Code of Civil

A statement under Act VIII of 1859 is not in the nature of confession and avoidance as in English pleading, when the confession is considered as an admission of the party, and the avoidance has to be proved. The statement of one party, if used as evidence against him by the other, must be taken altogether, and not in part. Lallah Prohoo Doss v. Somanath Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X, R., 27.

The admission of written statements of the parties on various dates, unless expressly called for by the Court, is contrary to the provisions of Sections 120 and 122. Mirza Ali Nukee v. Mirza Torab Ali, W. R., 1864, 44.

A written statement filed by the defendant should be verified, but if admitted on the record without verification its allegation should be noticed and issues framed accordingly. Radachurn Roy v. Moran Co., 13 S. W. R., C. R., 342.

(d) Set-off.

Sections 121 and 195 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859) have not the effect of enlarging the right of set-off.

In a suit against the acceptor to recover the amount due upon several bills of exchange, the defendant sought to set-off a claim for unliquidated damages unconnected with the bills of exchange. Held, that defendant has no right to set-off his claim against the debt due to the plaintiff.

Semble,—The right of set-off will be found to exist not only in cases of mutual debts and credits, but also where cross-demands arise out of the same transaction, or are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover, and the defendant be driven to a cross-suit. Stephen Clark and others v. Ruthnavalo Chetti, 2 Mad. Rep., 296.

A. by deed of zuripesghi let certain lands to B. to secure a sum advanced by him to her and interest thereon, B. covenanting to pay certain dues annually to A. On failure by B., A. obtained a decree against him for the amount. In execution of a decree against B., C. purchased his interest in the sum secured by the deed of zuripesghi, and sued A. to recover the same. Held that A. was entitled in such suit to set off the amount of the decree obtained by her against B. Bhagawani Kunwar v. Lala Baijmath Prasad, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 85.

Under Section 121, Act VIII of 1859, a defendant cannot claim a set-off for damages in respect of an alleged breach of contract which have not been ascertained in a suit brought against him to recover the amount due on certain dishonoured honourdees. Ram Dayal and others v. Ramdhun Dass and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 43.

A Court cannot entertain the question of set-off if the amount claimed by the defendant exceeds the amount cognizable by it. When a defendant pleads a set-off and claims a decree, the subject-matter of the suit is no longer the mere claim of the plaintiff, but the cross claim of both parties. Ram Lal v. Lancaster, 3 N. W. R., 114.

Held, that a defendant may deny the plaintiff's claim, and also plead a set-off, and obtain a decree for it, although no sum may be found to be due to the plaintiff. Hayatkha v. Abdulakha, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 151.

Under Section 121, Act VIII of 1859, a defendant desirous of setting off against the claim of the plaintiff the amount of any payment made by him on plaintiff's account, is bound to tender a written statement containing the particulars of his demand. Poorno Chunder Roy v. Beharu Lall Mookerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 473.

(e) Issues.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession which he described as "maafee." Defendant denied the grant, and pleaded his right by inheritance from the original owner. The Court below found that the defendant's taking possession eleven years since was tantamount to resumption of the grant which defendant as zamindar was competent to do. —Held that the Court was not on its motion competent to determine a question which was not alleged, nor raised by the pleadings of the parties. But if the question was raised even on the day of the hearing of the case at any time before the decision of the case, the Court ought not to have rejected it because it was not raised by the written statement, but ought to have framed issues to determine the question. Dewan Dyashunkar v. Mahomed Ameenoood-deen Khan, 4 Agra Rep., 246.

Semble,—The Court will not add an issue or amend the plaint so as to raise a wholly different question to that upon which the parties have come into Court. Bisjee Bibee v. Monohur Doss, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 118.

A question not raised by the plaint ought not to be decided by the Court. Lali Ratanu v. Gungaram bin Tullaharam, 2 Bom. Rep., 184.

When the plaintiff's mooktear is unable to answer certain questions necessary for the statement of the proper issues, and the plaintiff himself refuses or fails to appear personally and reply to the Court's queries, the Court is competent to dismiss the suit. Maharajah Nimonee Singh Deo Bakadoor v. Ram Hurree Misser, 1 W. R., 161.

Where the Judge finally disposed of the case on the day fixed for the settlement of issues, without allowing the parties the opportunity to adduce evidence and fully ascertaining the facts,—Held, that his judgment was illegal and defective. Goolzar Shah v. Mehta Singh, 1 Agra Rep., 38.

All that can be done under Section 139, Act VIII of 1859, must be done at the settlement of issues; Section 141 gives the Court discretion to amend or add issues only if some new matter should turn up in the course of the case. Aga Syed Saduck v. Hadjee Jackarrah Mahomed, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 308.

A distinct suit for the recognition of an adoption having totally failed, the plaintiff is not entitled to fall back on his right by descent. Srirogbind Lall v. Odit Narian Singh, W. R., F. B., 4.

A plaintiff will not be allowed to set up one case, and having proved another, to ask for issues to be raised to suit the proof; but when a plaint and its proof necessarily lead to one or more particular issues, it is the duty of the Court, if these issues do not come by surprise on the defendant, to raise such issues, and to give the relief thereon to which the plaintiff is entitled. Obhoychurn Mullick v. Woomer Chunder Paul, 2 Hyd's Rep., 263. A Judge ought not to import his own private knowledge or opinion into a case, but ought simply to decide the issues before him and on the evidence before him. Meheroomissa v. Bhashaye Merdha, 2 W. R., Act X R., 29.

The issues fixed by the Court, and not the pleadings, ought to be the guide to the parties as to production of evidence. Iltro Soomondery Debia v. Ameena Begum, 5 W. R., Act X R., 72.

A party B sued A for enhancement of rent at a rate specified; but at the trial, failing to prove that proper notice had been served upon B, he claimed only rent at the rate formerly paid. No issue was recorded as to what the former rate had been until the last day of the hearing, after both parties and several of the witnesses had been examined in respect of the issues originally recorded; and the Collector, without adjourning the case for trial upon such issue, having examined two witnesses who remained for examination, gave judgment in the case.

Held, that under Section 65 of Act X of 1859 the case ought to have been adjourned, and a convenient day fixed for trial upon the new issue. Case remanded accordingly. Srihari Mundul v. Jadunath Ghose, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 110; S. C., 10 W. R., 169.

A suit having been decreed in favour of plaintiff in the Court of first instance, where it was tried on a certain issue, the decree was reversed in the Appellate Court, where it was tried on a different issue. Plaintiff upon this objected in special appeal that he had been misled by the issue framed in the first Court, and, but for it, would have adduced evidence to prove his case.

Held, that if plaintiff had any evidence to offer upon the issue tried in the Appellate Court, he should have moved the Judge to allow him the opportunity of offering it, and that there was no error of law in the proceedings of the lower Appellate Court. Esthan Chundra Stein v. Sheikhd Dhonye and others, 11 W. R., 61.

Plaintiff’s suit for rent against the ryots of certain lands, which belonged to a mouzah (Baboolee) which they had bought at an auction sale, having been dismissed in consequence of defendant’s intervention, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, they brought an action against her to recover possession. The defence was that the land in dispute did not belong to plaintiff’s mouzah, but to defendant’s mouzah, Gyrutpore. Both lower Courts found the mouzah Gyrutpore had been washed away some time ago, and decreed defendant’s suit.

Held that, though defendants were bound to prove their own case, and to show that the land belonged to their purchased estate (Baboolee), yet, as both parties had consented to have the case decided on the question whether Mouzah Gyrutpore was still in existence, the defendant could not make out his case in special appeal. Mouzah Bileev. Honoomanj Pershad and others, 11 W. R., 277.

A ryot cannot raise a direct issue as to the title of his zamindar. An issue between two co-defendants is also contrary to practice. Degumber Mitter v. Ketchur Mohun Mitter, 2 W. R., 45.

The issues of limitation and title should be separately, and not mixed up together. Umbika Sondoorsee Dossie v. W. Woodin, 3 W. R., 226.

When a plaintiff comes into Court relying on a potstah, the genuineness of which is disputed by the defendant, the Court is bound to adjudicate the issue, and to decide whether the lease is valid or invalid. Thakooranee Dossie v. Goluck Chunder Biswas, 5 W. R., 157.

In a suit to recover a quantity of land alleged to have been a part of a joint estate which had descended to plaintiffs and his brothers, and which was subsequently divided into separate shares,—Held that, on failure of proof of the allegation of partition, the plaintiff might obtain relief upon the first allegation; and the Court below was not debarred by law from framing an issue as to whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover to the extent of the interest which he had in the land, if found to be joint property. Fukeer Doss Poorohet v. Gopaul Mookerje, 12 W. R., 107.

Where a defendant in the lower Court pleaded limitation, but placed that issue upon the simple fact that he himself had possession for twelve years and upwards, which issue was found against him,—Held that it was too late for the defendant in special appeal to object that finding did not dispose of the issue of limitation. Kisco Mohun Kurmkar v. Nayan Tarn Dossie and others, 10 W. R., 389.

Held that, as defendant’s plea of purchase from the alleged shareholders of the putnee, in satisfaction of their ancestor Gobind Ram’s lien, had proved unfounded, if they were permitted to fall back on their title as gurudars, the plaintiff must be allowed to show that the debt “was realized from the usufruct of the tenure,” even though this had not been “established in a suit instituted for the purpose.” Boioust Bhund Bhudoor and others v. Tara Chunr Banerje, 11 W. R., 357.

In a suit for a kubuleut of twenty-five parcels of land, where the defendant alleged that he only held three, and that he was not the tenant of the plaintiff, but of a third party who intervened claiming the land as included in his half share of a part of a talook as being the person in receipt of the rents, the lower Appellate Court declared that as neither party had given any conclusive evidence of actual possession, and as the ryot’s holding had been found to appertain to the half share of which the intervenor had proved possession, the plaintiff was entitled to a kubuleut for a moiety of the plots held by the defendant.

Held that the ryot was entitled to be heard whether he paid the rents to the plaintiff, and whether he was bound to give the kubuleut asked for, and plaintiff was entitled to be heard whether the ryot held three parcels or twenty-five. Radhakishore Talookdar v. Goluk Chandra Roy and others, 11 W. R., 366.

In a suit for possession, where a second defendant is admitted (though improperly) upon the record, and both defendants claiming under different titles, issues are raised between the plaintiff and each of them, and the suit is dismissed, the decision on these issues cannot be regarded as a decision between the rival defendants. Kalte Kinkur Buchshyttu v. Kisto Mungle Bhultacharjee and others, 11 W. R., 462.

Held, in contravention of various rulings of the late Sudder Court, that a suit brought on alleged settlement of accounts, and balance struck and admitted, should not be dismissed merely on account of the plaintiff's failing to prove the alleged settlement and admission of balance by defendant; but that the Court, being competent under Section 141 of the Civil Procedure Code to amend or frame additional issues that may be necessary to determine the real question or controversy between the parties, ought to enter into evidence regarding the items composing the account, and decree the claim and not otherwise barred.

The plaintiff and parties to the suit have formed part of a joint estate which had descended to plaintiff and his brothers, but which was subsequently divided into separate shares, and the Court below was not barred by law from framing an issue as to whether plaintiff was entitled to recover to the extent of the interest which he had in the land, if found to be joint property.

The issues are to be framed from all questions of law or fact upon which the parties may be at issue, and are to be collected, not merely from the plaint, nor from the written statements, but may also be taken from the oral statements of their pleaders.

The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain lands said to have been included in a talooka potta, given him by the zemindar, alleging that the defendants were obstructing his possession. For the defence it was averred that these lands fell within a 9-annas share which belonged to one D., and that by process of sale they became the right of other parties under whom defendants held as lessees.

The issues are to be framed from all questions of law or fact upon which the parties may be at issue, and are to be collected, not merely from the plaint, nor from the written statements, but may also be taken from the oral statements of their pleaders.

CIVIL PROCEDURE–ISSUES.
Court of first instance, which was not made a ground of appeal to the first Court of Appeal, but was noticed and commented on by that Court, was held not to constitute a fatal mistrial of the cause so as to render a new trial necessary. Baboo Sewan Pershad v. Janku Pershad commented on. Musamat Mitha v. Soya Fuzulab, 6 B. L. R., 148, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 15.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages for breach of contract, alleging in their plaint that they had agreed to sell, and the defendants to purchase, certain indigo seed, but that the defendants had refused to take delivery, although the plaintiffs were ready and willing to deliver the same. Upon the evidence of the plaintiffs, it appeared that there was no contract as alleged in the plaint, but the contract, as stated by them, was that they (the plaintiffs) were to purchase seeds as agents for the defendants.

The Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their case as stated in the plaint. Held that the suit ought not to have been dismissed on that ground. The issues raised admitted of the true question being tried viz., whether under the circumstances the defendants were liable to pay the price of the seed; and if they did not, the Court ought to have amended the issues, or framed additional ones. The object of the plaint is merely to bring the matter in dispute before the Court, but it is for the Court, upon the statements before it, to determine the real issue between the parties. W. R. Arbuthnot v. C. D. Belts, 6 B. L. R. 273, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 181.

VII.—COSTS.

(a) Miscellaneous.

There is no foundation for the opinion that an Appellate Court has no authority to interfere with the discretion of the lower Court as to costs. To assess the defendant in a suit with the plaintiff's costs, when plaintiff's suit is dismissed for want of any cause of action, is irregular and unreasonable. Sri Dantuhrir Narayana v. Suruppa Raju, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 113.

Though the distribution of costs is, under the Civil Procedure Code, a matter within the discretion of the Court, yet there may be circumstances which will justify an appeal upon a mere question of costs. Chithayel v. Immurram, 3 Mad. Rep., S. I., 279.

A suit cannot be maintained for costs incurred by the plaintiff in registering a claim made by the defendant, under Section 246 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the greater part of which was disallowed. It is only when the costs are made a part of the order, and then by execution under it, that a party can in such cases enforce the payment of costs. Anonymous, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 341.

An improper exercise of discretion in awarding costs against which a regular appeal would lie, is no ground for allowing a special appeal, unless the award is contrary to some particular law on the subject. Amirsahib Habizulla v. Janshekji Rusanjee, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 41.

Held, in conformity with a Full Bench Ruling of the late Sudder Court, that special appeal lies from the order of the lower Courts in matters relating to costs, and that there is nothing in the law limiting or taking away the right to appeal specially from that part of a decree which relates to costs in any case where any legal ground for special appeal is shown to exist. Apa Ram and others v. Krishnecree Doss, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 90.

The decision of a Deputy Collector for rent below Rs. 100, involving no question of title, was reversed on appeal by the Judge. On special appeal, the Judge's decision was reversed as made without jurisdiction; but as this point was not taken before the Judge, the reversal was made without costs in either Appellate Court. Puddomonee Dossee v. Krishnendro Roy Chowdroy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 94.

Where a plaint had been rejected as having been filed against several persons who had different defences, it was held to be within the discretion of the Judge, in appeal, to dismiss the suit and saddle the plaintiff with the costs of all the defendants, notwithstanding that all the latter, except one set, admitted the claim, and retired from the contest. Kosella Koor v. Behary Patuck, 12 W. R., 70.

In the lower Court, vakeel's fees are allowable only once for all, whereas in the Appellate Court separate costs are allowable for every appearance entered on behalf of the winning party on remand or in review. Nawab Hajee Mahomed Khan v. Allanwazee Begun, 2 W. R., Mis., 29.

An order decreeing to plaintiff his costs in proportion, must be taken to mean as if costs were given in proportion to the amount decreed and disallowed; so that, except when there is a distinct order restricting costs to the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to his costs on the portion of the claim disallowed, although the order does not in words provide for it. Byknunth Chawdry v. Mohessurre, 4 W. R., Mis., 9.

An objection as to costs is a matter which should be raised in the shape of an application to amend or review the original decree, and failing that, by way of regular appeal against the decree, but not in the execution of the decree. Kureenath Banaerje v. Daybo Chunder Banerjee, 5 W. R., Mis., 4.

When a discretion is vested in a Court as to costs, the Privy Council will not allow any appeal against the exercise of that discretion, because no appeal lies against a mere decree as to costs. But when a Court has no discretion to exercise in the matter (as when a suit was instituted by parties who had no right to institute it, as the person in whose name and on whose behalf they instituted it was dead at the time), costs must follow the decree, when plaintiff's suit is dismissed for want of any cause of action. In taxing the costs of an appeal from India, the Privy Council will disallow all such costs and expenses as may have been unnecessarily occasioned by the inclusion, in the transcript sent from India, of matters which have been improperly introduced therein. Tarakant Banaerjea v. Puddomonee Dossee, 5 W. R., P. C., 63.

Case in which the Privy Council affirmed the decision of the Sudder Court; but, as there had been delay in suing, and as the case was attended with a considerable degree of suspicion, refused to the respondent before it all costs, and decreed further that the cost of the appeal to the Sudder Court should be disallowed. Baboo Ubruk Singh v. Bany Persad, 5 W. R., P. C., 77.
A. having brought an action against B., was allowed to withdraw, with leave to bring a fresh suit, and was also ordered to pay the costs. Held that the payment of the costs not having in terms been made a condition precedent to bringing a fresh suit, the Court had no power to stay proceedings, on the ground that the costs had not been paid. Held further that the Court of Appeal had no power to entertain the question, as the order was in the nature of an interlocutory one, and therefore not within its jurisdiction. Chuttoo Sheikh v. Kuju Major Hossein, 2 Hyde's Rep., 212.

In a suit to set aside a settlement, two accountants were employed at the plaintiff's instance, and not by order of Court, to examine the settler's books and give evidence. Held that the investigation being most useful to the Court, and adapted to the ends of justice, the Taxing Master was right in allowing their expenses. MacNair v. Hogg, 2 Hyde's Rep., 89.

When a suit is brought for the principal sum and interest due on a mortgage, the High Court will give costs, although the decree be for less than Rs. 1,000, as the Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction. Mirtunjay Dutt v. Kameenee Dossee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 95.

Where no appeal is made against the judgment passed on the subject-matter of the suit, the discretionary power of assessing costs given by Section 187 of Act VIII of 1859 should not, unless in a very exceptional case, be interfered with by the Appellate Court. Capppaooosmiyan v. Nanuwayan, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 74.

Where a plaintiff is entitled to save part of his claim, he ought not to be deprived of the benefit of the decree by such an order as to costs as would make him liable to the defendant for more than he would himself recover. Ram Chunder Chowdry v. Capt. Mariott, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 465.

An omission to award costs cannot be considered merely as a clerical error, but must be rectified by way of review within the prescribed time. Ram Sahey Singh v. Bhokoo Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 414.

Where a suit was decided after trial, and the decision being reversed by the High Court on appeal, the case was remanded with orders allowing the plaintiff to amend his plaint, but requiring him to pay all the costs of the first two hearings. Held that the stamp for the plaint was properly included in the costs of the second hearing in the Court below, and that, as the case was sent back for re-trial and not as a mere remand, the whole of the pleader's fees should be paid for the second trial. Madhuk Chunder Bera v. Ram Lockun Bera, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

Quare,—Whether the High Court can give costs in a case in which it has declined jurisdiction. Jardine Skinner v. Money, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 312.

Where the Privy Council reversed the decrees of three Courts in India with costs in each, and dismissed the suit with costs, specifying a sum as the costs of the appeal to itself,—Held that such sum did not include the costs of translation, incurred in the High Court. Mussamut Oomatool Fatma v. Ashur Ali, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 356.

The mere specification of costs in a decree without an allotment of responsibility, is not a sufficient compliance with Section 189, Act VIII of 1859.

Semble,—When an Appellate Court decrees an appeal and gives costs of its own Court, the costs of the first Court should be included in the decree. Sheik Mahomed Busseeroolah Chowdry v. Ram Kint Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 266.

A set-off cannot be allowed for costs not actually awarded, as where a decree of the High Court gave the successful appellant costs of that Court and of the lower Appellate Court, but omitted to award the costs of the first Court. Huro Pershad Roy v. Fool Kishore Dossee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 308.

A Court executing a decree has no jurisdiction to order a judgment-debtor to pay as costs any sum not mentioned in the decree which is in course of execution, or in any decree in force. It is a convenient practice for a Court to annex to every decree the costs incurred by both parties. Nobo Kristo Mookerjee v. Parbutty Churn Bhuttacharjee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 23.

In a suit against 34 defendants to recover 3,820 beegahs of land, 13 came in and defended separately, each in respect of his own portion of the land claimed. The suit was dismissed for multifariousness. Fixing a certain valuation (Rs. 5,440) for the suit so far as it was dismissed, the Judge allowed each defendant full costs upon that valuation, or a vakeel's fee of Rs. 257 to each defendant, being in many instances greater than the value of the property in dispute. Held that this could not be a just and equitable way of awarding fees, and that the best plan in the present case was to allow each defendant in respect of a plot exceeding 20 beegahs and not exceeding 40 beegahs, three gold mohurs; and of a plot less than 20 beegahs, two gold mohurs. Rajah Roduur Narain Roy v. Coomar Narain Patnuin, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 320.

(b) Liability to Costs.

The estate, and not the manager thereof, is held liable for the costs of a suit instituted in perfect good faith by the manager for the benefit of the property. Ram Kishore Acharjee Chowdry v. Luckee Dabea Chowhrain, 1 W. R., Mis., 1.

Where a party is made a defendant, without a cause of action being alleged, his co-defendant should not be made to pay his costs, which should be paid by the plaintiff. Ram Chandra Mittra v. Kisto Comuree Dossee, 10 W. R., 194.

A defendant who colludes with the plaintiff, and induces him to bring a suit for his benefit, may be ordered to pay the costs of his co-defendants in the Court below. It seems that he may also be ordered to pay the costs of an appeal by the plaintiff. Bharoo Kuoot v. Baboo Anoorodep De Narain Singh and others, Marsh., 608.

Government is not liable for costs when it has been made a defendant by the plaintiff in a suit for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, though it did not apply for such a certificate, nor oppose the suit. The Government v. Mussamut Sanoola, 3 W. R., 23.

CIVIL PROCEDURE—LIABILITY TO COSTS.

Where a special appellant to the High Court failed as to a portion of his appeal, the costs of that Court were decreed against him. Heera Ram Buttacharjee v. Ashraf Ali, 9 W. R., 103.

One of several judgment debtors jointly liable under a decree, having paid a larger amount than was due as between himself and his co-defendants, brought a suit to recover from them the excess paid by him. One of the defendants having paid more than his share, the claim against him was dismissed by the Principal Sudder Ameen, who, nevertheless, on the ground that it was necessary to make him a party, awarded him no costs. Hold that it was not necessary to make this defendant a party, and that costs should not have been refused. Hold also that the scale on which costs should be awarded to him, depends on what plaintiff claims against him, and that he is entitled to costs on the usual scale on the amount for which the suit was brought. Kasheknath Sein v. Chundermonoo Deboz, 9 W. R., 288.

Where the widow of a deceased proprietor, as the guardian of his minor son, put in a petition for a certificate under Act XL of 1858, in which she represented that she was in possession of the whole of the deceased's property, specifying a particular pargannah and its appurtenances,— Hold that, though she did not expressly ask for a certificate to manage the particular pargannah named, as her petition was so worded as to obtain, and had the effect of obtaining, a certificate of that tenor, she must be held liable for the costs of a party entitled to object to the grant of such a certificate, and appealing with a view to its amendment. Fedz Hossein v. Rance Khajooroonissia, 9 W. R., 459.

In a suit against several defendants to recover possession of land, one of them stated in defence that he had nothing to do with it, and made good his defence. The other defendants claimed to be entitled to the land, and proved their title. The disclaiming defendant appeared by a separate pleader, and incurred a separate set of costs. Hold that the Sudder Ameen rightly awarded a separate set of costs to him, and the Judge had not exercised a sound discretion in modifying the Sudder Ameen's decree, by awarding one set of costs only to all the defendants. Ramchandra Goswami v. Matital Bagchi, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 169.

A sued B., C., and D. for possession, and obtained a joint decree, and in satisfaction of his costs, attached B.'s property. B., in order to save her estate, paid the demand in full, and now sues C. and D. for contribution. Hold that, though the decree was jointly and equally against all three, yet C. and D. were liable to B. for a rateable amount of costs in proportion to what their interest in the property decreed to A. Kristo Coomar Chowdhry v. Anund Moyee Chowdhraun, 7 W. R., 300.

Where the plea of want of jurisdiction was taken in special appeal, each party was made to bear his own costs. Nobeen Kissken Mookerjee v. Shib Persaud Puttuck, 7 W. R., 490.

Where a decree, or half of the decree, had been enforced against a defendant, such defendant should be held liable for the costs of the enforcement, the defendant's surety is also liable for the costs of such enforcement. Thakoor Deen Tewarce v. Booker Lat and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 35.

Under Section 360, Act VIII of 1859 (which must be construed strictly), a judgment-debtor is only liable for the amount of costs which are specifically attached to the Judge's order. Thus, where certain suits were decreed with costs in the first Court and dismissed with costs on appeal, but there was no specification in the Appellate Court's decree that the plaintiff, the losing party, should pay the costs incurred by the other party in these suits in the first Court, it was held that the decree-holder could not take out execution for these costs. Humay Kishore Roy v. Muthoora Mohan Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 445.

Where co-sharers were made consenting defendants only in order to plaintiff's obtaining a complete decree for partition, it was held that plaintiff ought to pay the co-sharers' costs, which, however, should be a small sum, sufficient to cover the costs of their appearing. Rampaty Koore v. Kalee Churn Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 94.

M. C. M. and others took a share of a turuff in putnee by executing a kubooleut towards R. L. D. and others, which contained a stipulation that if a suit brought by a cester against the former and then pendying in the High Court were decided against the lessors, the lessees would pay whatever costs of suit might be payable by the lessors, and if decided in favour of the lessors, the costs awarded would go to the lessees. The case was decided against the lessors. Hold, on the construction of the kubooleut, that the lessees were liable to pay the whole of the costs paid by the lessors,—not only the costs to which they were justly liable on account of their own share, but also all costs that might be recoverable from them; but quare, whether the Small Cause Court Judge should provide for the lessees being enabled to use the rights which the lessors would have for recovering in a suit for contribution the costs which they had paid on behalf of the other parties to the suit. Raj Luckee Deboz v. Mokesh Chunder Mooonedar, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 191.

A suit for possession of land having been dismissed with costs, a motion was made on the part of the defendants, asking the Court to make A. and B., strangers to the record, pay the costs, on the ground that they were the real though hidden plaintiffs, and had executed a false lease in favour of the nominal plaintiff, who had brought the suit on the strength of such false lease. Hold by Phear, J., that the Court could not make the order applied for under Act VIII of 1859, as that Act does not authorize a Court to deal by its judgment in any suit directly with persons not before it in the case; but that the High Court had the same equitable jurisdiction which the Supreme Court had to entertain an application of this kind, and that as the facts showed that A. and B. were the real plaintiffs in the suit, and that the conveyance to the nominal plaintiff was fictitious, the order directing them to pay the costs of the suit should go. Hold by Peacock, C. J., and Norman, J. (confirming the order of Phear, J.), that A and B. were guilty of a contempt and abuse of a process of the Court when they put forward a sham plaintiff and a deed which they knew was fictitious, with a view to impose upon the Court; and that the Court had power to compel them, as the real plaintiffs, to pay the costs of the suit, although they were not named.
as parties in the original proceedings. Jointee Chunder Sen v. Anundo Lall Das, 14 S. W. R., A. O., I.

(c) Security for Costs.

An order was made by the Court (pursuant to an agreement between the parties after a decree for the plaintiff) that the defendant who had appealed should pay into Court, to the credit of the cause, a certain sum of money for decree, costs, &c., including a sum of money for costs to be incurred on appeal. On an application by the plaintiff that the case be struck off for default of deposit, and that the defendant pay costs already incurred at the time of the application, it was ordered that the defendant should deposit a sum to cover costs of the future appeal, and in default that the case should be struck off, although the summons to show cause was not in point of form to that effect. Elias v. Chuckerbully, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 223.

For an order for an appeal to be given by a defendant, whose suit had been dismissed, should furnish security for the costs of an appeal which he had instituted, the Judge, considering the merits of the case, made the order. Held that a single Judge has full power to make such an order; and that, if the merits of the case seem to be in favour of the respondent in an appeal, he is entitled to get security for costs of the appeal from the appellant. Cazez Muzhur Hossein v. Denabando Sen and others, Bourke's Rep., O. B., 119.

Cause being shown on a rule nisi for an order for security to be given by an appellant for the costs of an appeal (similar orders having been previously made in the applications of other defendants), it appeared that an unusual number of defendants had been joined in the suit, which had been withdrawn on a previous occasion when nearly tried out; and that the plaintiff, who sued as a relator, was poor and resided out of the jurisdiction, and had not paid interlocutory costs, for which an attachment had issued. The rule was made absolute.

Held that an appellant will not be ordered to give security for costs previously incurred. That the fact of similar applications having been granted in the suit, the poverty of the appellant, and the fact of his dwelling out of the jurisdiction, as well as the peculiar circumstances of the case, did not amount to non-payment of interlocutory costs, a former withdrawal of the suit, and the joining of an unusual number of defendants, are grounds for granting an order for security to be given by an appellant for the costs of an appeal.

That a relator suing to enforce a public right must give security for the costs of those against whom he proceeds. Cazez Muzhur Hossein v. Dino-bando Sen and others, Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 40.

On a rule nisi for security for the costs of an appeal to be given by a defendant, five twenty-fourths of the property in dispute having been decreed to him, but subsequently attached under a�, thereupon the Court was shown that the defendant had not jurisdiction, and that no reason for the application had been given. Rule made absolute.

Held that a single Judge is vested with all the powers of an Appellate Court, with reference to the costs of an appeal; that, when an appellant resides within the jurisdiction of the Court, he is amenable to its orders as to the costs of an appeal; that an appellant who has no available property must, if required, give security for the costs of an appeal before proceeding with it. Monohur Doss v. Khodram Begum, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 110.

The Court has no power to order a plaintiff resident in another presidency to give security for costs. Gahan v. Ousew, Cor. Rep., 11.

When it appears prima-facie that the defendant is going to leave India with intent to remain absent so long that the plaintiff will or may be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant, he will be ordered, unless he show good cause, to find security for the amount of the claim and the costs of the suit.

And "good cause" must be either (1) that he is not going to leave India, or not for so long a time as will obstruct, or be likely to obstruct, the plaintiff, should he succeed; or (2) that the suit is not a bona fide one; or (3) that even if it is, the institution of it has been vexatiously delayed till the defendant is about to depart from India in order to embarrass him. Spence's Hotel Company Limited v. Anderson and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 294.

Where a plaintiff leaves the country before the case is decided, the proper course for the defendant is to apply to the Court to take security for costs before the case is decided, and if no security be furnished, the Court will pass judgment against the plaintiff by default. But if the defendant allows the case to go to judgment, the Court on appeal cannot pass any order calling for security for the costs of the lower Court which must be left to be realized in execution. Re Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway Company, 8 W. R., 217.

Quere.—Whether a relator is entitled to security for the costs of an appeal (similar orders having been previously made in the applications of other defendants), in a case in which the appellant is not residing out of the British territories in India, the High Court has authority to demand security for costs from the appellant after the issue of summons—i.e., notice of the appeal. Hufazuttoolah Chowdhry v. Humedhur Kohman, 6 W. R., Mis., 123.

A security voluntarily signed existing upon the record, and even taken off the file, is a valid and subsisting security. The intentions and motives of the obligor in giving the security must be judged by what is mentioned in the instrument. The acceptance of the separate security of one surety is not invalidated by the acceptance of separate securities of five other sureties. Rajah Gopal Jiter Roy v. Rajah Jogor Nath Gurg, 5 W. R., P. C., 129.

Under Section 342, Act VIII of 1859, the High Court has discretion to demand security for costs from an appellant, if it sees fit to do so, at any time before the hearing of the appeal. If an assignee who has been substituted for the plaintiff under Section 106 declines to furnish security for the costs within such reasonable time as the Court may order, the defendant may within eight days after such neglect or refusal plead the bankruptcy or insolvency of the plaintiff as a reason for abating the suit. Heeralal Seel v. A. Carajeb, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

A plaintiff who resided out of India paid a sum of money into Court as security for costs, under Section 34 of Act VIII of 1859. He subsequently obtained

An order was made in Chunder Sef A. O., 1.

On application, the court directed that the respondent's costs of the appeal should be struck off, and that Chuckerbutty had been joined on a previous suit. The plaintiff was not in Chuckerbutty.

On application, whose suit had been joined on a previous suit, the court made the order for costs of the appeal to be struck off.

Held that the fact of striking off the costs of an appeal was not in the suit, as the peculiarity of intendment of interest of the suit, and of defendant security to be within the suit, to it.
a decree against the defendant, and the defendant appealed against that decree. Held that the defendant was not entitled to an order detaining in Court pending the appeal, the money which had been paid in under Section 34. Fleming v. Shearman, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 92.

(d) Right to Costs.

The plaintiff in a properly instituted interpleader suit is entitled to his costs, and has a lien for them on the fund. The Secretary of State v. Mir Mahomed Hossain and others, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 115.

At the settlement of issues, defendant paid money into Court, which plaintiff took out in part satisfaction of his claim, and raised an issue as to damages. The plaintiff subsequently accepted the sum paid in full satisfaction, and withdrew the suit. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to his costs up to and including those of the settlement of issues. Ardaseer Limjee v. Sorabjee Pestonjee and others, 1 Bom. Rep., 70.

A defendant who, although he has a good defence, has by his conduct induced the plaintiff to sue him, may be made liable for the plaintiff’s costs, though the suit be dismissed. Lalit Bhugwan Doss v. Syed Akbar and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 390.

When a suit is dismissed for want of jurisdiction, the Court will give costs. Punchanun Ghose v. Brijendranarain Deb and another, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 38, and Maharajah Juggeshur Buxworee Gobind v. Sut Chunder Sircar, Marsh., 375.

When a plaintiff has asked for a sum which is in excess of what the Court holds him entitled to, and to which a lower rate of pleader’s fee or of stamp duty applies than to the rest of the claim, the defendant, who succeeds in that part of the case, is entitled to recover the costs applicable to that particular part of the subject-matter (Bayley, J, dissenting). Bamasoondery Debia v. G. Rogers, 7 W. R., 127.

If a plaintiff claims in respect of two distinct matters, and succeeds as to one, and fails as to the other, the costs will be apportioned so as to give each party the costs applicable to that matter upon which he has succeeded. Tarachund Mookerjee v. Juddonath Mookerjee, Marsh., 79.

Ijmallee-holders, defendants, should be represented by one pleader and one set of pleadings, and are not entitled to separate costs. Brindabun Chunder Chowdhry v. Ram Coomar Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 139.

Where an action on a contract was brought in the High Court, and judgment was given to the plaintiff for Rs. 434-13-4,—Held that, as the amount so found due was less than Rs. 500, the plaintiff could not have his costs assessed by the judge who tried the cause certified that the action was fit to be brought in the High Court.

The 37th Clause of the Letters Patent constituting the High Court does not give the Court an uncontrollable discretion as to costs in civil suits. Act IX of 1850, Section 101, is not repealed. Subapati Mudaleyar Narayansvami Mudaleyar, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 115.

Members of the same family, and living in the same place, when sued together on a common cause of action, are entitled to only one set of costs.

Certain landed property, alleged to have been sold to an idol, and registered in the name of the vendee’s infant son as shebait, had, after the death of that son, been mortgaged twice by the vendee who succeeded to the office of shebait, and was mortgaged subsequently on the death of the vendor by his widow to pay off the charge created by her husband. The last mortgage was foreclosed, and the mortgagee obtained a decree for possession. In a suit for the recovery of the property by a descendant of the vendee claiming as shebait of the idol, it was held that the zamindar and the putneedar, who were both compelled to appear for the protection of their interests, and whose defences were not necessarily identical, were entitled to separate costs. Gobind Nath Roy Bahadour v. Ranee Lucknee Koomarjee and another, 11 W. R., 36.

It is not correct in law or justice to say that costs must be invariably awarded in proportion to the amount decreed and dismissed. The Court can exercise the largest discretion in the matter; but this discretion is to be exercised with special reference to all the circumstances of the case, including the conduct of the parties. Juddonath Tewaree v. Bissonath Tewaree, 9 W. R., 61.

Although the question of costs is within the discretion of a Court, yet the Court is bound to give some reasons for the exercise of that discretion. A party declaring all interest in a suit, and unnecessarily made a party to it, is entitled to costs. Shunit Buksh v. Lalla Nund Ram, 11 W. R., 48.

Appeal by defendant against whom the suit was decreed in the Court of first instance, which decree was confirmed on appeal by the Privy Council. The Privy Council held that the plaintiff had not made out his case below, and reversed the judgment, but awarded to the defendant costs in the first Court only, and not in either of the Appellate Courts, on the ground that the plaintiff, as respondent, was defending the judgment. Madho Row Chinto Punt Golay v. Bhookun Das Boolakie Das, 5 W. R., P. C., 33.

A Court is bound to award, as costs to a defendant, his pleader’s fees calculated according to the rules laid down in Section 15, Regulation XXVII of 1874. The plaintiff cannot take advantage of any private arrangement between the defendant and his vakheel. Umironath Jha and another v. Rughounath Pershad Roy, 6 W. R., Mis., 35.

Under a charge against several defendants for having jointly misappropriated property, one defendant is not bound to entrust his defence to the counsel for the others, but each has a right to defend himself, and is entitled to separate costs if successful. Nikanath Surma and others v. Sooselan Deb and others, 6 W. R., 321.

A, under a decree against B., took possession of B.’s estate, and continued a litigation which had been commenced by B.’s manager, and in which he was unsuccessful, and charged with the costs of suit. B. meanwhile, having appealed to the Privy Council, obtained a decree restoring her to possession of the estate. Held that A. could not recover the costs he was charged with from the estate. Huru Moyee, alias Huru Monde Debis, and others, v. Ram Kishore Acharjee, 6 W. R., Mis., 124.

When a decree in favour of an appellant describes a set-off costs as due by the appellant to the respondent, it means not that any sum should be actually paid to the latter, but that the costs in question should be deducted from the gross amount decreed, and the remainder only should be recovered under the decree. Issur Chunder Doss v. Munmo-hun Chowdhrv, 12 W. R., 308.

Where a Collector had been unnecessarily made a party to a suit in which damages might have been awarded against him he had not appeared, he was held entitled to his costs.

In his appeal from the Judge's order passed in favour of the plaintiff, and dismissing his own claim for costs, a defendant unnecessarily made a co-defendant a respondent. As this respondent could not be injured in any way in this appeal, it was held by the Chief Justice (Mitter, J., dissenting) that, although the appeal was dismissed, the co-defendant was not entitled to costs, simply because he had been present watching the case. The Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs v. C. J. Wilkinson, 12 W. R., 393.

A suit for an account of partnership transactions was compromised on the terms of the plaintiff buying the share of his partner for a specified sum. The plaintiff by his plaint charged that the defendant had not observed the terms of this compromise, and had dealt fraudulently with the assets of the partnership. The Court went into the dealing of the partnership. Subsequent to the compromise at the hearing, the plaintiff abandoned the bulk of his allegations of fraud, was defeated on others, and recovered only a trifling verdict. The defendant having, however, resorted to a fraudulent and unscrupulous defence, the Court gave the plaintiff a verdict with costs. Ranu Gopal Chatterje v. Rhoobun Mohun Boverjee, Cor. Rep., 126.

Where plaintiff had obtained a decree in the Small Cause Court, and execution had been issued, but defendant had not moveable property sufficient to satisfy the decree.—Held that a suit in the High Court, on the decree of the Small Cause Court, will lie for the balance, but costs will not be given to the successful plaintiff in such a suit, nor interest on the judgment be obtained in the High Court. Mohen-dranath Ash v. Beedobodun Dutt, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 220.

Each of two shareholders in a taluk sued separately for his share of the rent due from a tenant who held under one kuleet. Held that when both the shareholders were before the Court, though in different suits, the suits were maintainable, but that no more costs were to be awarded to the plaintiffs than if they had sued jointly. Pyari Mohun Singh and others v. Mirza Ghazi and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 337; S. C., 11 W. R., 270.

Where the defence is common and not separate, each of two shareholders in a taluk was sued separately. Rev. Francisco de Assis, Vicar-General of the Portuguese Mission in Bengal v. L. D. Augos, 17 W. R., C., 188.

Where a decree-holder came in, after the lapse of some three-and-a-half years, and when one of the Judges who made the order ceased to be a Judge of the Court, to ask for an amendment of the decree by allowing her the costs of all the remands that took place in the case,—Held that after such a delay the Court could not make such an order or even say whether the decree-holder was entitled to these costs. Ooday Tara Chowdrain v. Syed Jnab Ali Chowdhrv, 17 S. W. R., C., 358.

Costs are not consequential upon partial relief being granted in a suit involving a much larger subject-matter, a portion of which is still sub-judice, and cannot therefore be given by the High Court upon a decree of the Privy Council, if not provided for by the decree. Rajah Leelamung Singh v. The Court of Wards on behalf of the Rajah of Der-lagha, 14 S. W. R., C., 387.

Where a party's admissions and conduct induced the supposition of his liability for a claim, the Court refused him his costs, although the suit against him founded on such claim was dismissed. Sreenath Roy v. Goluck Chunder Seetin, 15 S. W. R., C., 348.

Where parties who have no interest in a suit are unnecessarily made co-defendants, the lower Court ought, as a general rule, to award them costs; but that, as by Section 178, Act VIII of 1859, the awarding of costs is left to the discretion of the Court, no appeal lies from its decision. The Collector of Dacca v. Kumulakant Mookerjee, 2 W. R., 33.

A. L. D. and others, having got a decree in a suit in which S. B. D., a purdah-nushin, was plaintiff, a rule nisi was obtained by them against J. C. S. and another, on the ground that he was the real plaintiff, and S. B. D. only a nominal one. It appeared that S. B. D. had no means of her own, but lived in the house of J. C. S., who could explain nothing of her circumstances, or why she was residing in his house; but he stated that she had purchased the former plaintiff's right in the suit against a decree, she having been previously uninterested in the matter, and the only reason suggested for her doing so was that a small portion of the premises in question would serve for carrying out a religious purpose said to be entertained by her. The Court found that S. B. D. was only a sham plaintiff, and that J. C. S. was the real one, and the rule was made absolute. Held that the words "another party" in Section 187 of Act VIII of 1859, should be read as if identical with "another party to the suit." Held also that the Court cannot, by its judgment in any given suit, deal directly with persons not before it in that suit.

That the Court has the same power of directing that the costs of any party to a suit for the recovery of land shall be paid by a person who is not on the record, as the late Supreme Court had, and as the Courts at Westminster still possess and exercise.

That the recovery of costs from the real plaintiff in a suit in which the plaintiff on record is only a sham one, is not a step in the proceedings in any particular suit, nor can it be made the subject of a separate plain't, but is of the nature of a substantive proceeding in personam, and is within the equitable jurisdiction of the Court.

That if the plaintiff on record in a suit be only a sham one, the defendant may proceed against the real plaintiff for costs.

That the real plaintiff in a suit, in which the one on record is a sham plaintiff, is liable for the costs. Sreeventy Bama Sundary Bose v. Anundollah Doss and others, Bourke's Re. O., 44.

The High Court has no power, under the Civil Procedure Code, to award costs to the defendant.

After notice served upon, and appearance made by, the defendant, it appeared that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction, but that the suit ought to have been instituted in the Revenue Court. Held that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to order the defendant his costs, and that as he had been unnecessarily brought before the Court, it ought to order him his costs. Gopal Chunder Ghose v. Dhurmud Rai, Marsh., 311.

(f) Interest on Costs.

Costs generally carry interest without any distinct order, being required to that effect. Digambaree Dabee v. Nundrapal Banerjee, 1 W. R., Mis. 1.

The Court in executing a decree, has no power to allow interest on costs when not mentioned in the decree. The proper course for obtaining such interest is to apply to the Court which passed the decree to amend it. U/futumnissav. Mohan Zaksul, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 33.

Interest cannot be allowed upon costs when the decree of the Privy Council is silent on the subject. Maharanee Brojo Soonduree Debio v. Aumud Mazu Debia, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 302.

Interest cannot be allowed on costs awarded by a decree of the Privy Council when the decree is silent on the point. There is no provision of the Civil Procedure Code authorizing a Court to call upon a defendant to appear in Court and produce property decreed to plaintiff. Bhoza Kughbar Singh and others v. Bhoza Roy Singh and others, 3 X. W. R., 319.

Where the decrees of the Sudder Court and of the Privy Council made no provision for interest on the costs awarded in these Courts, the lower Court cannot in execution allow interest in such costs. Rajah Leclanund Singh v. Maharajah Joy Mungle Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 335.

Held that the principle of the Full Bench ruling, reported at page 109 of Sutherland's Weekly Reporter, vol. vi. (Miscellaneous Rulings), is as much applicable to interest upon costs as it is to interest upon mesne profits not awarded by the decree, and must be applied to all decrees passed, either before or after the date of that judgment. Rajah Leclanund Singh v. Rajah Ram Narain Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 415.

(F) Pauper Suits.

Leave to institute a suit in formá pauperis refused, on the ground that the applicant (by petition) had no case on the merits. Chunder Chunder Paul v. Ram Narain Sen, Cor. Rep., 8.

There is no necessity for an enquiry whether an alleged representative of an admitted pauper is a pauper or not. The Court, if satisfied that he is the legal representative, ought to admit him to carry on the suit. Bhogut Doss v. Bularam Doss, 3 W. R., Mis., 20.

Where a respondent is allowed in the lower Court to sue in formá pauperis, the High Court will not set aside that order on motion, on the ground that it has been improperly obtained. In the matter of the petition of Khodjoonisav, 7 W. R., 486.

Held that a pauper suit commences for the purpose of limitation on the day when the petition to sue in formá pauperis is presented to the Court, under Section 299 of the Code, and not on the day when the application being granted, it is numbered and registered under Section 30. Dhavle v. Samval, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 39.

Held that Section 301 of Act VIII of 1859 requiring the petition for permission to sue in formá pauperis to be presented by the petitioner in person is imperative, and must be held to control the provisions of Section 17 of the same Act. Ex-parte Devgir Gurd Shumbohagir, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 91.

When a day is fixed, under Act VIII of 1859, Section 305 for receiving evidence of the pauperism of the plaintiff, the Court will not, under Section 306, entertain any objection of the defendant other than on the single question of the pauperism of the plaintiff. Shiponessa Bibee and others v. Kaminee Bibee and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 121.

Enquiry, under Sections 305 and 306 of the Civil Procedure Code, should be made by the Judge himself, and not by the Sherista of the Court. In the matter of Eknath Bin Madhoba, 1 Bom. Rep., 102.

Under Sections 308 and 309 of Act VIII of 1859, a pauper cannot claim exemption from liability to pay any further stamp duty or penalty in respect of a document on which he relies, and which, owing to a defect in the stamp, is inadmissible as evidence in the suit.

It is not the duty of a Civil Court to receive and submit to the Board of Revenue an application from a pauper plaintiff for remission or mitigation of penalty under the Stamp Law; the pauper should himself make timely application under Clause 6, Section 15, Act X of 1862. Golam Guffoor v. Ekram Hossein Chowdhyri, 10 W. R., 357.

There is no appeal open to a pauper when his application to sue as pauper is rejected for default. Rajah Bhoj Singh v. Ranee Maha Koonwer and others, 3 Agra Rep., M. R., 1.

An appeal lies from a decision in a suit heard in formá pauperis. A separate formal application for enquiry into the pauperism of applicant need not precede an application for leave to appeal in formá pauperis. Kunrod Poory v. Ske Poory, 1 N. W. R., par. 11, 167.

An Appellate Court has no power under Section 370, Act VIII of 1859, to annex to its order the condition that the party allowed to appeal should give security for costs. The provisions in Section 342, which make it discretionary in the Appellate Court to demand security for costs, is not applicable to appeals in formá pauperis; and therefore the order of the Judge in this case requiring security for costs from the petitioner after his appeal had been admitted, and after the Judge on enquiry had found that the appellant was a pauper, was set aside. Nussruradun Biswas v. Ujjul Biswas, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 68.
Plaintiff sought to recover land sold by the first defendant, the widow of an undivided member of a Hindu family, and part of the consideration was the amount of a mortgage deed executed for the purpose of supplying the necessities of the husband of the first defendant. In special appeal a decree fastening the amount of the mortgage money upon the land was asked for. Held, that such a decree ought not to be made, the plaintiff not having sought for that relief, and the suit having been so conducted that the genuineness of the mortgage instrument, though disputed, was treated as a subordinate matter. Madan Naiakan v. Appau Naikan, 2 Mad. Rep., 394.

In a suit for the recovery of land upon an alleged lease found to be not genuine, the defendants set up a sale by plaintiff's father. The lower Court found that there had been a sale in fact, but held it to be invalid according to Hindu law, as having been without the concurrence of the plaintiff, the son of the vendor. Held, that the decree was erroneous, the validity of the sale not having been questioned by the plaintiff, who had rested his case on entirely different grounds, and no issues having been raised as to the validity of the sale. Palanquati Condon v. Mutteesamy Condon, 2 Mad. Rep., 441.

Plaintiff sought to recover the amount of a bond executed by the father of the defendant, and prayed for a judgment against certain land which belonged to the defendant's father and the right to which passed by succession to the defendants.—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for payment by the defendants of the amount of the bond out of any property which passed to them as the representatives of their father; the plaintiff, in execution of the decree, being at liberty to proceed in respect of the immovable property, if there should be no moveable property left, or if it should prove insufficient when sold to satisfy the decree. Royappa Chisti v. Ali Sahib, 2 Mad. Rep., 333.

A creditor suing under a contract of hypothecation of land must prove that there was an actual pledge, and that the land was part of the debtor's estate at the time of the pledge. The decree will then be for sale of the property hypothecated, unless the debtor pay the amount due with interest within a period to be named by the Court. Chitl Gondon v. Saudurmri Pillai, 2 Mad. Rep., 57.

Where defendants infringed plaintiff's legal right, and the lower Court dismissed the suit with costs, on the ground that plaintiff had given no evidence that he had sustained substantial damage,—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled at least to a decree for money damages and costs. Callista Kundan v. Vayyapuri Condon, 2 Mad. Rep., 442.

In a decree to put plaintiff in possession, leave cannot be reserved to defendant to remove buildings, &c., unless they were created by defendant in good faith. Ramdhone Bhuttalatjee v. Ishanee Baber, 2 W. R., 123.

A decree declaring plaintiff's title in a suit under Act X of 1859, not having been executed within the period allowed by law, was held to be no longer a decree, and to be no evidence against the fact of an intervenor in the suit having actually received the rents due. Ram Soonder Tewaree v. Sreenath Deswasi, 10 W. R., 215.

Where a decree ordered a defendant to give in certain accounts within a specified period, and the defendant survived the period without any proceeding being ever taken against him, it was held that the decree was binding upon him, personally, and could not, after his death, be executed against his widow and representative. Bidhoo Mookhee Dossee v. Rajah Bejoy Keshub Roy, 12 W. R., 495.

Act XI of 1861 does not apply to decrees which were not in force at the time of the passing of Act XIV of 1859. Shamee Mahomed Sircar v. Brinda Mundul, 11 W. R., 100.

In execution no new directions (e.g., an order for mesne profits) can be imported into a decree. Juggob Narain Singh v. The Court of Wards, 3 W. R., Mis., 9.

The officer passing a decree is the most suitable person to construe it afterwards, should any doubt arise as to its meaning. Thus, where the suit was for Nizamut lands, and the claim was decreed according to the plaint, the officer passing the decree on petition by the other side after issue of proclamation, declared the decree to give rights over mokudumee lands, and this interpretation was upheld. Sheikh Besharuf Ali v. Shah Golam Nazut, 4 W. R., Mis., 9, Mis., 13.

A Judge is bound to construe a decree as it stands, and not to go beyond it, or to incorporate anything into it. Ool/utoonissa Beebee v. Akbur Ali, 4 W. R., Mis., 20.

A decree for possession of land is of the nature of immoveable property, and a Judge has no jurisdiction to interfere with the order of a lower Court setting aside the sale of such a decree. Mohkoonissa v Dewan Ali Mistree, 4 W. R., Mis., 22.

Where a plaintiff sued, while his lease was still running, to recover possession of certain julkurs, and the lease expired after action brought, but before decree,—Held, that the decree, instead of directing actual possession to be given, should have merely declared his right to possession up to the date on which his lease expired. Umanund Roy and another v. Sreekissen Banerjee, 7 W. R., 248.

A decree in a suit upon a bond, against the heir of the deceased obligor, awarded to the plaintiff the amount of the bond from the property of the ob- ligor, and directed that “the defendant be released from the claim in this suit.” An order for execution of the decree was set aside by the Principal Sudder Ameen, on the ground that the decree did not warrant the issue of an attachment, since it was not directed to any person. *Aeld that the decrees passed by the Recorder's Court in the four unappealed suits are good decrees, on which execution may be issued in the usual form, provided they be not altered on review. Nga Bike v. R. Snadden, 9 W. R., 276.

When an action is brought for a certain sum, on the failure of the plaintiff to prove his entire claim, judgment may be given for a smaller amount in accordance with the acknowledgment of the defendant. Eduljee Framjee v. Abdoolla Hoosey Cherak, 5 W. R., P. C., 58.

A decree for possession was construed to include mesne profits where the High Court was satisfied that such was the intention of the Court which passed the decree. Rasoonissa Begum v. Sharoda Soondur, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 25.

The ascertainment of the amount of damages is a necessary preliminary to a decree under Act VIII of 1859, Section 192, for specific performance of a contract and payment of damages as an alternative in case of non-performance. Kummasami Nayak- kan and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 341.

Section 192, Act VIII of 1859, only applies to suits for damages for breach of contract, and does not authorize damages for refusal of a mother to comply with an order of Court to deliver up her daughter. Musammet Raj Begum v. Nawab Reza Hossein, 2 W. R., 76.

(b) Judgment.

The rule which makes a judgment conclusive against parties, and those who claimed under them, is subject to certain exceptions which are the offspring of positive law, and the reason of the exception may be generally stated to be that the nature of the proceedings by which there is a fictitious, though not unjust, extension of parties, renders it proper to use the judgment against those not formally parties.

The rule as to judgments in rem, except in some peculiar cases, results from the nature of the proceedings; and before attempting to apply the rule in this country, consideration should be given to the question, whether there are Courts so proceeding to warrant the application of the doctrine of decrees in rem.

Mr. Smith's definition of a judgment in rem discussed and dissentied from, and the authorities in English and Roman law upon the subject examined and commented upon. Yarakalamma and others v. Anakala Naramma, 2 Mad. Rep., 276.

Where a decree of the Sudder Court was in general terms, viz., "that the appeal be decreed, with costs," though the judgment indicated a different intention,—Held, that the decree ought not to have been used to obtain execution for the whole of the claim, but restricted to that which it was the manifest intention of the Court to grant. Mirza Mehdee Bhy v. Telala Thakoor, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 530.

A copy of the judgment, with the schedule of costs appended, does not constitute a proper decree such as is required under Section 189, Code of Civil Procedure. Purmessuree Dutt Jha v. Jugmuth Thakoor, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 326.

The judgment of an Appellate Court should state clearly the reasons of the conclusions therein contained. Chunder Kant Chowdhry v. Hursh Chunder Chowdhy, 1 W. R., 214.

A judgment in another case is of itself insufficient evidence against a party who had no part in it, even though his interests may be of a similar nature to those of the parties then suing. Dost Mahomed Khan Chowdhy v. Soolochana Dabia, 1 W. R., 270.

The judgment of the lower Appellate Court is defective, if it does not state the opinion of that Court, but merely what had been the opinion of the Court of first instance. Ommutal Fatima Begum v. Mussamut Jamnee Khanum, 1 W. R., 295.

Parties to a suit are entitled to receive copies of the original judgment, not merely a translation. Vurjevan Runjee v. Ajee Dajee and others, 1 Bom. Rep., 165.

The plaintiff alleged in his plaint that the defendant had erected a hut or challa upon a ground to which he, the plaintiff, was separately entitled. The lower Appellate Court found that the land in dispute was the joint property of both parties, and that the defendant was not at liberty to erect the hut, without the express permission of the plaintiff, and ordered the demolition of the challa. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a judgment upon a ground which was inconsistent with the case set out in his plaint. Nabin Chandra Mitter v. Mohes Chandra Mitter, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 111.

The Appellate Court, as well as the parties to the suit, have a right to know the reasons that have led a Judge to his conclusion. His judgment should contain his reasons for the decision. Imrit Singh and others v. Koylashoo Koer and others, 11 W. R., 558.

A judgment should state not merely the finding of the plaintiff's or defendant's claim proved, but also what the evidence consists of, and in what way or for what specific reasons it proves the plaintiff's or defendant's case. Triolouck Dunn v. Isgen Chunder Chowdhy, 3 W. R., 176.

An alleged mokurruree pottah having been set aside by a judgment in rem, in a case between the shareholders of the plaintiff and the defendant, was held to be for ever ineoperative against the plaintiff also, although the plaintiff's suit was barred by limitation. Khoka Koomar v. Yugoo, 3 W. R., 192.

Where a judgment in one case governed other cases,—Held that the filing of that judgment was a substantial compliance with the requirements of the law, and that the filing of the short judgment referring to the other judgment was merely formal, and the delay excusable. Mothooram Chuckerbutty v. Kissen Mohun Ghose, W. R., 1864, Mis., 9.

In a suit for a share of joint ancestral property, where defendants claim under a will and deny that the property was joint, and the Court of first instance tries the question of possession, and dismisses the claim as barred by limitation, but the lower Appellate Court remands the case for trial on a different issue, the order of remand is not an interlocutory order, but a judgment from which an appeal lies. Gopal Chunder Chatterjee v. Raj Comaree Debi, 4 W. R., 101.

An order of a Deputy Collector refusing to entertain a suit, because the section of the law to which it relates was not cited in the plaint, is a judgment within the meaning of Section 160 of Act X of 1859, and an appeal lies from it to the Judge. Such an order ought not to state whether the suit is dismissed, or the suit rejected, and under what sections respectively. Sheikh Golam Ekya v. Lalita Doorge Dyal, 3 W. R., Act X R., 17.

A judgment is not a judgment in rem because, in a suit by A, for the recovery of an estate from B, it has determined generally concerning the status of a particular person or family; it is a judgment inter partes. Kattama Nuchear v. Tha Rajah of Shingungha, 2 W. R., P. C., 31.

In appealable cases the lower Courts should, as far as it is practicable, pronounce their opinions on all the important points, for by forbearing from deciding on all the issues, joined, they not unfrequently oblige the Privy Council to remand a case which might otherwise be finally decided on appeal. Tarakant Banerjea v. Puddermonnee Dasse, 5 W. R., P. C., 63.

It is regular to add to a judgment once delivered when the effect of the addition is to alter the grounds on which the judgment proceeded.

Semble,—A Judge may append to his judgment additional reasons, merely to show more fully the correctness of the decision at which he has arrived, though such a course is not strictly warranted by the Civil Procedure Code. R. Snadden v. Todd, Findlay, and Co., 7 W. R., 286.

Remarks on the impropriety of a Principal Sudder Ameen, who, after hearing the evidence in a suit, was promoted in the same district from the second to the first grade, and refrained from giving judgment, but left it to his successor for decision. Quaee-per Markby, J.—Whether such decision is legal. Radha Nath Banerjea v. Judu Nath Singh and others, 7 W. R., 441.
CIVIL PROCEDURE—JUDGMENT.

Directions as to the manner in which a Judge should write his judgment. Syed Lutf Ali Khan v. Syed Velaet Ali Khan and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 115.

The determination in a cause should be founded upon a case, either to be found in the pleadings, or involved in, or consistent with, the case thereby made. Eshan Chunder Singh v. Sama Churn Bhuuto, 6 W. R., P. C., 57.

R. C. brought a suit against M. D., the widow of R. S., in which it was found by the Court that R. S. had been adopted by J. L., and that R. C. was therefore entitled as reversionary heir to R. S. The judgment was affirmed on appeal. R., who was no party to that suit, afterwards brought a suit against R. C., to have it declared that he, R., was heir to R. S., alleging that R. C. obtained the property by deed of gift from J. L., and not by adoption. Held that the judgment in the former suit as to the adoption was not a judgment in rem, and was not admissible as evidence against R. Kaunle Lall and Mussamut Soondur Koonwar v. Radha Churn and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 222.

A decision by a Court that a Hindu family is joint and undivided, or upon a question of legitimacy, adoption, partibility of property, rule of descent in any particular family, or upon any other question of the same nature in a suit inter partes, is not a judgment in rem or binding upon strangers (i.e., persons neither parties to the suit nor privies); and a decree in such a case is not admissible as evidence at all against strangers.

No judgment of a mofussil Court can be a judgment in rem.

Per Peacock, C. J. and L. Jackson, J.—By a decree brought by A. against a widow as heiress of her husband to set aside alienations by her, and establish A.'s right as reversioner, it was declared that A. was reversioner. Subsequently B. (who was not a party to the former suit) sued to have it declared that he, and not A., was the person legally entitled to succeed on the widow's death. Held that the judgment in the former suit was not (upon the ground of its having been made in a suit brought against the widow when holding the estate as heiress) admissible as evidence against the plaintiff B. in the second suit.

The suits to which the Privy Council intended to refer in the Shiva Gunga case (2 W. R., P. C., 31) are suits in which the title of the settler or the validity of the estate-tail has been in issue, and not suits against the tenant-in-tail in which a question has incidentally arisen and been determined as to who was the remainderman entitled to succeed upon the termination of the estate-tail. Konye Lall and others v. Radha Churn and others, 7 W. R., 338.

In a suit by A. against B., a mokurruree pottah, under which B. claimed, was declared to be a forgery. B.'s co-sharer, C., was not a party to the suit. C. brought his suit against A., to have his right declared under the mokurruree pottah. Held that the judgment in the suit declaring the pottah to be a forgery was not a judgment in rem and binding against C. Gundadhur Roy v. Wooma Soondary Dossee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 120; 7 W. R., 347.

It is the duty of Appellate Judges to act so far in conformity with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as is sufficient to show that the Court has dealt with each ground of appeal, and more especially to record distinct findings on questions of fact.

Where the Civil Judge, confirming a decree of the District Moonsiff, stated by way of judgment that he was of opinion that the decision of the Moonsiff was fair and equitable, the High Court on special appeal remitted the case to record a judgment in substantial conformity with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. 4 Mad. Rep. Rulings LV.

A Judge may at the close of the hearing of a suit state at once orally the judgment which he intends to record and deliver. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. VII.

The Civil Judge, in confirming a decision of the District Moonsiff, did not state the reasons upon which his judgment was founded, and the High Court remitted the case in order that the Civil Judge might record a judgment in accordance with the Civil Procedure Code. The Civil Judge had been appointed to another district; and when the case went down, the new Judge had the case reargued before him, and reversed the decision of the Moonsiff.

The High Court under the circumstances held that effect should be given to the first judgment, notwithstanding the irregularity. Krishna Reddi v. Srinivosa Reddi, 5 Mad. Rep., 174.

A Subordinate Judge wrote out his judgment in a case which had been heard before him, after he had been relieved from his office, and left the judgment to his successor to be pronounced in open Court. The judgment was pronounced in Court by the succeeding Subordinate Judge. An objection being taken in special appeal that the judgment read out by the succeeding Judge was not a judgment according to Act VIII of 1859—Held that the judgment was valid. Mussamutf Parbutti v. Mussamut Bhikun, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 98, and 17 S. W. R., C. R., 475.

Plaintiff, a younger son, failed in a former suit to recover possession of a Raj and of the property belonging to it from his elder brother on the ground that he, plaintiff, was legitimate, and his brother illegitimate. He proved the former, but not the latter ground. He now sues for the same object on the ground not only of his brother's illegitimacy, but also of his priority of right by reason of the superior nature of the marriage of his own mother; and the question was whether the judgment in the former case was not a judgment in rem. It appeared to the Privy Council very doubtful whether there existed in India (exclusive of the particular jurisdictions which are exercised by the High Courts in the matter of probate and the like, and which in the case of war might be exercised by Courts in the matter of prize) any ordinary Court capable of giving a judgment in rem; but without considering whether an ordinary Zillah Court could pass a judgment in rem determining the legitimacy of a party against all the world, they held that the judgment pleaded in bar in this case could not be treated as one of that nature upon any principles, whether derived from the English law or from the law and practice of India. Jugender Deb Roy v. Funinder Deb Roy Kut, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 105.

A Judge whose vernacular language is English, ought to write his decision in his own language.
Declaratory Decrees. (See Plaint.)

In a suit to establish plaintiff’s right to the reasonable use, for the purpose of irrigation, of water, the flow of which had been impeded by a bund erected by defendants,—Held that even though plaintiffs had not yet been damaged by the acts of the defendants, it was in the discretion of the Court, if they proved their right, to give them a declaratory decree recognizing that right, seeing that serious consequences might otherwise result. Wuzzerooden and others v. Sheo Bund Lall and others, 11 W. R., 284.

A Civil Court has no authority to make a declaration as to the validity or otherwise of a marriage where no question of property depends thereon. Ram Surn Mitter v. Rakhal Doss and others, 11 W. R., 412.

Plaintiff prayed for a declaration of title to and confirmation of, his possession of 17 beegahs, which he claimed through J. and five others. The lower Court found that of these persons, J. only ever had any interest in the 17 beegahs, and gave plaintiff a decree declaring that he had purchased the rights and interests of J., whatever they might be. Held that such a decree was bad, as not in any way declaring what interest the plaintiff had in the 17 beegahs, or whether he had any right, and that the Court ought to have decided what J.’s precise rights were which had passed to the plaintiff. Ram Phal Ahir v. Bhugwan Dutt, 12 W. R., 326.

A declaratory decree ought only to be passed where some injury appears so probable as to lead to the conclusion that, unless stayed by the declaratory decree, the indebito or threatened injury is inevitable. Parejojan Khatoon and others v. Bykunt Chunder Chuckerbutty and others, 9 W. R., 96.

An unsuccessful claimant to property about to be sold in execution of a decree is entitled, in a suit brought for the purpose, to a declaratory decree to the extent of his rights and interest in the property, notwithstanding that the property may be joint family property, and that the suit was upheld. Salgram Singh v. Lallul Lulet Ram Singh, 5 W. R., 130.

It is discretionary with the Courts to give a declaratory decree or not. Baboo Mote Lal and others v. Rane, 8 W. R., 64.

A decree declaratory of the plaintiff’s general right to enhance on future service of notice may be passed in a suit under Regulation V of 1812, where the plaint was for enhancement at a certain specified rate, and in which service of notice was held to be not proved. Ishur Chunder Mundul v. Shum Chunder Doss, W. R., 1864, 312.

In a suit for declaration of title, the mere fact that the Revenue Courts decreed the registration of the plaintiff’s vendor’s name as a joint sharer of the estate, and that no steps were taken during twelve years to set aside that decree, cannot operate as an estoppel. Nittenund Roy v. Bydonath Mohapathar, W. R., 1864, 350.

In a suit to obtain a declaration that the proceeds of a certain village ought to be appropriated to the maintenance of a ghatwal, and also a declaration that Government was entitled to appoint a ghatwal, where the only actual disturbance of the rights of Government (if it had any rights) took place 35 years previously, when the person who claimed to be ghatwal was rejected by a putneedar holding a lease from the zemindar, and where no new ghatwal had been appointed, though the ejected claimant had died 15 years before,—Held that the suit could not be maintained in accordance with the rules as to the grant of declaratory decrees without relief. Anund Koomaree and others v. The Government, 11 W. R., 180.

Where a defendant resists the plaintiff’s title, he cannot afterwards object that a suit for a declaratory decree will not lie. Shib Jaton Roy v. Panachan Bose, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 55.

a person to the membership of a soma (society), upon the allegation that the other members have excluded him from the soma. — Held, that as such exclusion neither deprived him of caste nor affected any right of property, it is not cognizable by the Civil Court. The members of a society are the sole judges whether a particular person is entitled to continue as a member or not. — Section 8, Regulation III of 1793, commented on. Sudharam Patar v. Sudharam, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 91; S. C., 11 W. R., 457.

A decree of the High Court declaring plaintiff's right to assess rent upon land held by defendant as lakkheraj, is a binding decision between the parties on the question of title, even though incapable of execution by reason of lapse of time, and should not be excluded from consideration by the Deputy Collector. Rasonnardy Debee Chowdhraun v. Ram Pershad Sadhoo and others, 8 W. R., 288.

Though a suit may be brought within one year from the date of a declaratory decree, yet that decree is not a cause of action for arrears which the plaintiff might have obtained in the former suit, and which are now barred by limitation. Hudly Roy v. Gooroodiss Biswas, 3 W. R., Act X, 19.

A declaratory decree that the defendant is holding at a certain rate of rent before any rent is in arrear, is not sufficient to compel payment at that rate when the rent becomes due, without a fresh suit. Boydonaun v. Ramjoy Dey, 9 W. R., 292.

No suit lies for a declaration of a right of occupancy unless there has been some act to disturb that occupancy. The mere fact of the landlord having given a talookee pottah to a third party, and of that party being in arrear against such third party a decree for arrears of rent, is not a sufficient cause of action to the occupant. Woody Chunder Mundle v. Ahmedoolah, 12 W. R., 467.

In a suit for declaration of right which existed at the time the suit was commenced, but which had ceased to exist pending the suit before decree, plaintiff is not entitled to a decree, and a declaratory decree of title will not be given when the plaintiff's claim would have been barred by limitation had he sued for possession. Nobokishore Dey and others v. Ramkishon, Mukurrit, and others, 9 W. R., 131.

A bona fide purchaser of a transferable tenure is entitled to sue for a declaration of title and possession, though he may not have registered his name in the zemindar's sherista. Hurish Chunder Mookerje v. Annud Chunder Chatterje, 9 W. R., 279.

In a suit by reversionary heirs to declare that the property standing in the name of defendant had been purchased by the ancestor in his name benamae, it was held that there was no ground for a declaratory decree. Rajmiss Lall v. Juddobs Sudhye and others, 9 W. R., 285.

In a suit for a declaration of title to lands which had been erroneously surveyed as part of defendant's village, — Held that although plaintiff's proper course was, in the first instance, to apply to the survey authorities to correct their map, yet, as defendant had claimed the land as his own, and the contention had been carried to the extent of the case being remanded for local investigation and disposed of on its merits after such enquiry, it was too late for the objection that plaintiffs had no cause of action. Sheebjethun Roy v. Punchanun Bose and others, 11 W. R., 466.

Where a plaintiff brings a suit for a declaration of title as owner, he is entitled to establish his title affirmatively. He is in the same position as any other plaintiff, and must make out his case; and the onus probandi that he is in possession as owner is upon him. Rasonada Royar v. Seetaram Pillar, 2 Mad. Rep., 171.

A suit ought not to be entertained where the plaintiff, who merely seeks for a declaration of title, is in possession of all his alleged rights, and is not in a position to bring an action. Padagaligum Pillar v. Shunnomgum Pillar, 2 Mad. Rep., 333.

Where property in dispute was found by the lower Court to be debutter land belonging to plaintiff, and not mál land included in defendant's putnee, it was contended in special appeal by defendant that plaintiff was entitled to one-fourth share only, as one of four brothers, it was held that plaintiff was entitled to a declaration that the whole land was mál land, and that he was entitled to a fourth share. Gunja Gobind Singh v. Joy Gopaul Panda, 10 W. R., 105.

Immediately before the British entered Bhootan, the Soobah of Mynagorie gave plaintiff a mourasee pottah of some jotes of land, and shortly after ran away. After the British entered, the defendants gave him kubuleuts and paid him rent. The British authorities also recognized his rights and received rents from him. Subsequently the defendants disputed plaintiff's rights, and applied to the Collector to have their own names registered as jotedars. Their applications having been successful, plaintiff sued for a declaration of his title under the pottah. — Held that as plaintiff's title had been acknowledged by the defendants and recognized by the British authorities, he was entitled to the declaration sought. See Kant Shaha v. Kaltoo Dos and others, 10 W. R., 135.

The mere fact of a widow making alienations during her life which are not binding on the rever- sioner after her death, does not entitle him to a declaratory decree. Brinda Dubee Chowdhrain v. Peary Lall Chowdhyr, 9 W. R., 460.

Declaratory orders ought not, as a general rule, to be made in cases which are wholly one-sided, and in which the decrees would not be binding upon the parties really interested, if the defendant should succeed in establishing his right. Brojo Kishoree Dassoo v. Sreenath Bose, 9 W. R., 463.

In a suit to obtain a declaration that two pottahs and a chittah which had been put forward in a butwarra were forgeries, it was held that, as no action had been taken on the documents in question, and plaintiff's rights were in no way prejudiced, the Court could not make any binding declaration of right. Sheo Lall Chowdhr v. Chunder Benode Gobathya and others, 9 W. R., 586.

Where a plaintiff sued for sole possession and a declaration of sole title, and the defendant admitted that he was in joint possession, but the plaintiff went on with his suit in order to get a decree that he was solely entitled and in sole possession, and failed to prove his case, he was held not entitled to a decree founded on joint possession. Lukhun Singh and another v. Nufftor Sing and others, 6 W. R., 311.
Where a decree is merely declaratory, and not capable of being enforced by delivery of possession, the remedy which the law gives by process of execution may, by lapse of time, be barred, and yet the right and the title decreed may exist, and be susceptible of enforcement by suit. Jagur Nath v. Bulnath, 1 C. R., 175.

After a Court of competent jurisdiction has exercised its discretion under Section 15, Act VII of 1859, and passed a declaratory decree, it does not lie within the power of a Court of Appeal, under Section 350 of that Act, to set aside the decree upon an objection which does not affect the merits, and which was not taken at the time when the decree of the first Court was passed. Ram Kanayee Chuckerbutty v. Prosseno Coomer Stein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 176.

(d) Cross Decrees. (See Execution.)

A. and B., having obtained a decree for a sum of money against C. and D., sold part of their interest therein to E., who afterwards sold the same to F. G. obtained a decree against F., and in execution attached and sold F.'s interest in the decree obtained by A. and B., and H. became the purchaser of the same. He applied for execution against C. and D. C. claimed to have set-off the amount of a decree obtained by his son 1. against G., and which C. alleged was held by 1. for him as a cross-decree within the meaning of Section 209 of Act VII of 1859. Held that the decrees could not be set-off. Held also that a special appeal lies from the set-off. Nzam Rama Bill's/W and aunt/M r v. S/umma M scrum, 16 W. R., 470.

A tenant obtained a decree giving him possession of his tenure with mesne profits, but directing him to pay the rent due to the zemindar, with interest up to date of realization. The tenant, who had kept alive his decree by intermediate applications for execution, having applied for further execution,—Held that the zemindar, who had made no attempt to execute his decree within the period of limitation, could not, when the execution of his decree was barred by limitation, be allowed to execute it in the shape of a set-off. Prosuno Coomar Glose v. Sham Lall Gunagopaadya, 5 W. R., Mis., 177.

A tenant obtained a decree giving him possession of his tenure with mesne profits, but directing him to pay the rent due to the zemindar, with interest up to date of realization. The tenant, who had kept alive his decree by intermediate applications for execution, having applied for further execution,—Held that the zemindar, who had made no attempt to execute his decree within the period of limitation, could not, when the execution of his decree was barred by limitation, be allowed to execute it in the shape of a set-off. Prosuno Coomar Glose v. Sham Lall Gunagopaadya, 5 W. R., Mis., 8.

A set-off is not admissible, except upon a cross-decree which the decree-holder is seeking to execute, and not upon a cross-decree incapable of execution by lapse of time. A cross-decree must be kept alive by the action of the party entitled under it. Anund Mohun Surma Mojoomdar v. Huro Chunder Bhaktacharjee, 5 W. R., Mis., 16.

The purchaser of a decree against which a cross-decree may be set-off, takes his decree subject to the set-off. Nundoomar Bakeshe and another v. Koochto Kishore Roy, 6 W. R., Mis., 73.

A judgment-debtor is entitled to set-off a decree whether the judgment-creditor may or may not intend to object on appeal to the judgment-debtor's decree. Hyro Pershad Roy Chowdry v. Shama Pershad Roy Chowdry, 5 W. R., Mis., 52.

A widow is liable for a debt contracted by her husband. Such debt may be set-off against a debt due to her. Gris/Hunder Lahoroy v. Koormapo Daha, 1 W. R., Mis., 23.

The purchaser of a decree held by A., against whom B. holds a cross-decree, takes it subject to a set-off on account of B.'s decree. Kaim Ali Jawordar v. Lakhikant Chuckerbutty, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 23; 10 W. R., F. B., 32.

A tenant obtained a decree giving him possession of his tenure with mesne profits, but directing him to pay the rent due to the zemindar, with interest up to date of realization. The tenant, who had kept alive his decree by intermediate applications for execution, having applied for further execution,—Held that the zemindar, who had made no attempt to execute his decree within the period of limitation, could not, when the execution of his decree was barred by limitation, be allowed to execute it in the shape of a set-off. Prosuno Coomar Glose v. Sham Lall Gunagopaadya, 5 W. R., Mis., 8.

In order to admit of a set-off being made when there are cross-decrees, the parties must be the same, and the sum due under each decree or decrees must be definite. Rezaadeen Hossein v. Fuuloonissa, 5 W. R., Mis., 12.

Before cross-decrees can be set-off the one against the other, it is necessary that they should be in the same Court for execution. East Indian Railway Co. v. Hall, 3 N. W. R., 104.

Section 209, Act VII of 1859 (allowing a set-off) refers not only to cases of decrees of the same Court, but also to decrees which are in the same Court for execution. Hadoo Sirdar v. Jadoo Men/Dosses, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 46.

It is not equitable to allow a set-off against a claim relating to a particular account, of a matter of another nature altogether. Kula Coomar Chuckerbutty v. Huro Chunder Chuckerbutty, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 177.

A decree of one Court cannot be set-off under Section 209 of the Code of Civil Procedure against a decree of another Court. Quer.—Whether the provisions of that Section are applicable to decrees passed under Act X of 1859. Ignatius Peter D. Silva v. Ameen Shaka, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 203.

decree comprehending only a part of the land embraced in the latter, each party may take execution and be entitled to receive wasilat separately. Annu Mohun Hajre v. Shibo Soudaree Dabee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 256.

Where two parties have to recover sums from each other under the same decree (not cross-decrees) the party entitled to the lesser sum cannot be allowed to take out execution against the party entitled to the larger sum, and the Court is bound to allow the party entitled to take out execution against the party entitled to the smaller sum. Kusimenissa Bibi v. Hills, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 125; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 125.

By mutual agreement two decree-holders entered into satisfaction in respect of their cross-decrees. The grounds upon which the application could have been entertained, as satisfaction had been entered. The grounds upon which the application could have been entertained were discussed. Gopinath Roy v. Dinabandhu Nandy, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 62.

(c) Joint Decrees.

Where plaintiffs with separate interests sue for and obtain damages, the decree should not be a joint one for a lump sum, but should apportion the damages. Trelokenhta Jha v. Hur Dutt Khurhare, 9 W. R., 299.

A suit against a co-sharer for a sum of money recovered by the plaintiff upon a decree which was joint may be brought in a Small Cause Court. Hur Mohun Roy v. Khettro Monee Dassee, 12 W. R., 372.

A joint-decree can be executed against any of the debtors whom the decree-holder may select. Krisho Kishore Chuckerbatty v. Ram Lochan Bardhun, 2 W. R., Mis., 49.

Though a decree-holder has a right to put joint and common decrees in force against one or all of the defendants in the order he thinks fit, the claim to be enforced must be limited to the particular lands or properties with which particular defendants are clearly shown to have been connected. The application for dividing the amount of a joint-decree should be made, and the order for such division obtained, at the time of the decree, but not afterwards. Bulwant Singh v. Sheo Sahaye Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 52.

A. and B. obtained a decree against C. A. obtained an order for execution of his share in the amount of the decree. C. pledged immovable property as security to A., who caused it to be sold. B. applied to the Court for her share of the sale proceeds. The Principal Sudder Ameen refused the application. On appeal,—Held that the order for execution ought, in express terms, to have reserved the rights of the other decree-holders to share in the proceeds of the execution. The case was sent back that the Principal Sudder Ameen might apportion the amount realized amongst all the decree-holders. Tarsasundari Burmoni v. Beharad Lal Roy, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 28.

One who holds a decree for possession of a two-annas share jointly with co-sharers to whom the remaining fourteen annas is bound to obtain exclusive possession of any specific portion of the lands covered by the decree. Jardine, Shinner, and Co. v. Rane Shama Soudery Debia, 6 W. R., Mis., 59.

Where a decree is a joint one, the right of one decree-holder to execute is kept alive by proceedings duly taken to put the decree in execution by his co-decree-holder. Jhieroossaissa Khatoor v. Amootoomissa Khatoor, 6 W. R., Mis., 59.

In the case of a joint-decree, any arrangement made by the decree-holders as to their relative shares in the amount of the decree would not alter its character, and bond-side proceedings taken by one of the number to execute the decree would keep alive the rights of all the decree-holders.

In the absence of any order in the decree awarding particular sums to each of the decree-holders, one decree-holder cannot be allowed to take out execution of such portion of the decree as he may consider due to himself. Maharanoo Inatoojeet Koonwar v. Mazum Ali Khan and another, 6 W. R., Mis., 76.

When once a joint-decree has been given, that decree ever after remains a joint-decree, any act in the conduct of one decree-holder notwithstanding. Juggurnath Singh v. Sheikh Ahmedoolall, 8 W. R., 132.

On an appeal from an order passed in execution of a decree for possession and mesne profits, the High Court laid down the principle that, though the decree was in words a joint and several decree for mesne profits, yet where it could be proved incontestably that out of a number of defendants any one had been in possession only of particular lands or a distinct mouzah or lease, his liability to satisfy the decree would in equity extend no further than to such particular land, mouzah, or lease, and for such land the decree-holder could take out execution as against lessor and lessee; the principle was then applied to the case under appeal. Held, in explanation of that opinion, that as the appellant was the lessee of one village, he could be held jointly and severally liable with the proprietors (co-defendants), and the decree-holder could proceed against him either severally or jointly with those defendants, and realize the wasilat due on that village. Guneth Dutt v. Bulwant Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 175.

A joint-decree remains a joint-decree, notwithstanding the acts of the decree-holder in realizing his money from one or more of the judgment-debtors separately, for he is entitled to realize his debt from any one of the debtors, and by proceeding against one he does not relieve the other debtors from their joint liability to him. Nunko Lal v. Musst Dhunesh Kooor, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 497.

Where some of the decree-holders in a joint-decree apply for execution, the application may...
refused or granted at the discretion of the Court, which is bound to see that injury is not done to the rights of absent decree-holders; but whether the Court does so or not, all recoveries in execution so made must be for the benefit of all the decree-holders. Shib Chunder Das v. Ram Chunder Poddar, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 29.

An application by one of two joint-decree-holders for execution of his part of the decree is irregular. Raja Pritam v. Bhandari Nandi, 2 N. W. R., 41.

In a suit against heirs inheriting equally, a joint-decree may be passed without determining the liability of each. Bhag Mist Brabo Ram Senuek, t’Agra Rep., Mis., 14.

When the judgment-debtors are jointly and severally liable to pay the decreed amount, the fact that one has paid his quota of an instalment will not modify his joint liability if default be made by the other judgment-debtor, and an order protecting the estate of the former from proceedings to realize the whole decreed amount is bound to see that in injury is not done to the rights of absent decree-holders; but whether the latter exonerated him from payment of any portion of a joint-decree. Doorga Minooe Dosse v. Doorga Minooe Boss, 2 W. R., 260.

One of several joint-decree-holders is not bound by the acts of another who has compromised with the judgment-debtor, and agreed to receive payment by instalments. Baboo Ram Sewuk v. Baboo Ram Senuek, t’Agra Rep., Mis., 14.

A decree-holder can execute his decree against one, or any, or all of the joint-judgment-debtors. If he has received any sum in part payment of his decree from one of the joint-debtors, and chooses to absolve him from further liability, and to proceed against the others, this will not affect the position of the debtors inter se, or their mutual responsibilities, or absolve the debtor who has paid from contributing, if he has paid less than he is liable for as between him and his co-debtors. Gopal Pershad v. Ramnandan Singh, 5 W. R., Mis., 9.

Joint-decree-holders are not entitled to apply separately for execution of the decree limited to what they consider their respective interests in it. Prannath Mitte v. Mothoonath Chuckeriotty, 6 W. R., Mis., 65.

In a suit for contribution, a decree cannot pass jointly against all the defaulters. It should specify the particular sums to be paid by each. Ramnandan Debia v. Munndumayee Debia, 3 W. R., 179.

Where several defendants submit to a joint decree, it is not competent to the Court in execution to treat the decree as a several decree against the different defendants in respect of their proportionate shares, however equitable such an order may be. Musumatt Om dissolved Khair v. Musumatt Somayee Bibee, 6 W. R., Mis., 40.

The splitting of the amounts of a decree into shares for the private convenience of the decree-holders, unless the judgment-debtor was a party to the arrangement, cannot enable him to plead limitation against any of the decree-holders who may take no active steps in enforcing the decree. As far as the debtor is concerned, the decree continues a joint debt, for the whole amount of which he is liable to all the decree-holders. Brijo Coo'mar...

and in consequence liable to be injuriously affected if the plaintiff proceeded to execute the decree which he had obtained in the lower Court. Held that the dana-pauna clause in M.'s deed of purchase from deceased did not make M. liable to pay so purely personal a debt of deceased as that which the decree created, and consequently M.'s only title to be the appellant's legal representative failed. Macleod v. Wilson, 9 W. R., 271.

Where a Civil Court refuses an application to execute a decree given on the terms of a petition embodying certain conditions of compromise, applicant's proper course is to appeal from the order of refusal, and not to proceed by a regular suit, though he has a right of action on his decree, Ruthnussur Chatterjee v. Gooroo Churn Chatterjee, 9 W. R., 296.

In the absence of proof of collusion between the purchaser and the decree-holder, the decree is binding against the heir in expectancy of the judgment-debtor. Gopau Chunder A/anna v. Gour Chunder R., 271.

A person to whom the ordering part of a decree given in a suit cannot be treated as having acquired any right in the decree, merely because he has by mistake been described in the heading as the purchaser of the decree-holder's rights and interests. Nawab Syed Zaynul Abdeen v. Phoolash Chunder Bethra, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 126.

Where a decree directed that plaintiff should obtain possession of land according to the boundaries given in the plaint, and also specified the quantities of land of which he was to obtain possession, and it turned out that those quantities were not strictly accurate, it was held that the decree should be interpreted as if it were a conveyance of land, stating the boundaries and then saying that it contains so many acres; and that the plaintiff was entitled to all the land contained within the boundaries stated in the plaint, the mistake in the quantities stated in the deed being merely a false description. Phulwun Singh v. Mohissur Buksh Singh; Maharajah Mohissur Buksh Singh v. Megburn Singh, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 5.

The misconduct of a decree-holder can be no ground for setting aside a sale in execution of decree. Rothbunjun Singh v. Mitturjeet Singh, 4 W. R., Mis., 9.

The sale by a decree-holder of the right to recover possession under one decree, does not affect his right to recover, under another decree, mesne profits collected during the time of the judgment-debtor's illegal occupancy. Seshal Chunder Shaha v. Brojo Noodhare Dosse, 4 W. R., 14.

Held that a decree-holder is entitled to execute his decree against any property devolving on the judgment-debtor before the decree has been fully executed, and this without reference to whether the property was hypothecated to him; and that the denial of the judgment-debtor that he is interested in the property which it is sought to make subject to execution can have no effect.

Held further that the property in the hands of a Hindu judgment-debtor was liable to sale in the same way and to the same extent as would the immovable property of a Hindu having sons be liable: and that the question of the extent of the right to be sold should have been left an open question for adjudication in a suit between purchasers and other persons claiming right. Deenoo Bukdeo Singh v. Dwaraka Dass, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 169.

A decree-holder applied in execution to make H., as the son and heir of the judgment-debtor, the representative of the latter. The Judge in appeal held that H. was not the representative, and gave him costs. Held that the proceedings in execution were of the character of those ordinarily taken in the progress of a suit towards final decision, and that the order of the Judge was not in the nature of a summary decision or award, such as an order under Act XIX of 1841, but in the nature of an order of a Civil Court having final jurisdiction. Mohun Lall Sookul v. Sreemutty Oofunissa, 11 W. R., 98.

A mortgagee decree-holder can proceed against any property belonging to the debtor; but by doing so he throws up his lien on the property pledged to him. Kutdha Coomar Singh v. Luchme Chund Marwara, 3 W. R., Mis., 16.

A private settlement, given to any of several debtors, will not justify a decree-holder in requiring from the remaining debtors an account of the share or shares so exempted or settled. William Foley v. Annie Kolonas, 2 W. R., Mis., 15.

In a suit for recovery of a sum of money expended towards improvement of a joint property, the Court passed a decree that, if the defendant would contribute towards payment of the expenses for the improvement, he would be entitled to a proportionate share of the profits, but in the nature of an order made under Section 208, Civil Procedure Code, to recover the decree; but on the application of the defendant tendering the amount due from him, and praying to be put in possession, the lower Courts restored the decree and passed an order in his favour. Held that the lower Courts had no jurisdiction to revise a decree at the instance of the judgment-debtor. Nilambar Sen v. Kali Kishor Sen, 3 B. L. K., Ap., 04.

A decree-holder failed on summary application in execution to have a deed of gift in respect of the lands in dispute set aside. In a subsequent suit a third party succeeded in setting aside the deed as not bonafide. Held that no second suit to determine the nature of that deed was necessary, but that the decree-holder may at once sell the property for the debts due to him. Sarangi Akim v. Champa Bibee, 2 W. R., 305.

Where S. obtained a decree for possession against D. P., the person in possession, and subsequently in a suit brought by J. P. claiming the property against S., a decree was passed in the terms of a compromise, whereby S. consented that J. P. should execute his decree,—Held that J. P. was entitled, under Section 208, Civil Procedure Code, to recover possession in execution of S.'s decree from D. P., although D. P. had not been made a party to the second suit. Donumy Prashee Singh v. Lalit Jugganath Pershad, 1 N. W. R., par. 1, p. 34.

In a suit to have it declared that a certain bowl was the property of W., plaintiff's judgment-debtor defendants contended that it had been the property... of another person, and that they had purchased it in execution of a decree against that person. The lower Appellate Court found for the defendants on the basis of a decree dismissing a suit by W.'s representative to have the property declared to be W.'s. Held that the decree could not bind the plaintiffs who were not parties to it. Goluckmone Debia v. Rammonne Bose, 12 W. R., 21.

In a suit for resumption of land, plaintiff obtained a decree for a portion of her claim, with costs in proportion. Subsequently, on application for a review, she obtained a further decree for the rest of her claim. The latter decree was reversed in appeal by the High Court, who gave defendants all costs of the proceeding in proportion. Plaintiff allowed more than three years to elapse from the date of the former decree, without applying for execution; but when defendant applied to execute his decree for costs, she petitioned for a set-off of so much of the costs as had been decreed to her. Held that these two judgments and decrees must be treated as if reduced to one, wherein judgment was given in part for the plaintiff, and in part for the defendant; and, before issuing a warrant of execution, the Court was bound to ascertain how much, on the whole case, was due to the party executing, and to issue a warrant for that sum and no more. Nubo Lall Khan v. The Maharance of Burdwan, 9 W. R., 590.

Held that a decree of the Court of Special Commission under Act IX of 1859, though adjudging a right to the plaintiff other than that sued for, cannot by this reason be treated as a nullity, and as one conferring no right; that the appropriation in satisfaction of the decree once made, a proprietary right in the assigned villages would arise in the plaintiff under the decree, of which she could not afterwards be lawfully deprived on any such allegation as that of incorrect valuation, the Government under the circumstances having no power of revision. Held further, that the suit having resulted from a new cause of action,—viz., the dispossession,—the plaintiff's remedy was by a regular suit, and not by execution of the decree, in which the plaintiff was liable for the debt decreed.

A decree (embodying the terms of a compromise) made in open Court, upon the consent of counsel duly instructed, is binding as between the parties to the suit, although the attorney of the defendant has no authority from his client to consent to such decree, or even though he is expressly directed not to compromise, provided such want of authority is not known to the other side.

Semel,—That such decree is binding, as between the attorney and his client, provided it embodies a reasonable and proper compromise, and is not made against the express directions of the client. Ingnamath Dus Gurubhathdias v. Rmadah Gurubhath and others, 9 B. R., 79.

Where a decree for a bond debt contained a clause to the effect that if the money due was not paid the property pledged in the bond might be sold, the clause was construed to mean that the property was liable for the debt decreed.

Held also, that the decree-holder could get at the property only in execution of the decree, in which case he would be in the position of any other judgment-creditor, and be bound by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, and the judgment-creditor would be entitled to the benefit of Section 243. Mehunt Rum Ruchu Dass v. Doonga Dutt Missar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 453.

A suit having been decreed, defendants appealed, but on both parties petitioning to the Court, to the effect that they had come to a settlement of their differences, the appeal was struck off the file. The plaintiffs now apply to execute the original decree.

Held, that as the Appellate Court did not reverse the decision of the first Court, the decree stands good, except so far as the plaintiffs, judgment-creditors, are debarred from executing it by their own agreement. Meva Singh v. Azecoodden Khan, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 31.

When a decree passed before Act VI of 1862 (B.C.) awarded costs, including Mooktear's fees (contrary to Section 71, Act X of 1859), the amendment of the decree in the execution stage by the Court executing the decree, instead of by application to the Court of first instance, was not interfered with, no injustice having been done thereby. Bangseram Shaha v. Jyegurnath Shaha, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 26.

A lower Court, in executing a decree of the High Court, has no authority to alter it: any amendment desired (e.g., the grant of interest) should be obtained by application to the High Court on the part of decree-holder. Messrs. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., v. Ranee Shama Soondery Debia, 10 W. R., 60.

Held that, after a decree of a District Judge is confirmed by the High Court in appeal, no subordinate Court has the power of making any alteration whatever in it. The proper course is to apply to the High Court itself to review its decree. Bhanashanker Gopalram v. Raghnathram Samalang, 2 Bom. Rep., 106.

Where a judge finds that a decree passed by his predecessor contains something or bears a construction evidently not contemplated by the judgment of that Judge, he is quite competent to alter the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment. Madoosudan Ghose v. Ramanath Ghose, 12 W. R., 65.

After a decree has been confirmed by the High Court on appeal, the subordinate Court has no power to make any alteration in it. Onraet v. Sankar Dutt Singh, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 60; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 26.

Where a decree is silent as to mesne profits subsequent to the institution of the suit, they cannot be awarded by the Court executing the decree. Chowdree Nain Singh v. Tonawheer Singh, 11 N. W. R., 167.

It is a power which all Courts possess to amend their record when there is anything to amend by. Consequently, when a Judge finds that the decree varies from his judgment, he can set the decree right. Toona and others v. Kureemun and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 31.

A decree should not be amended except in the presence of the parties concerned, or after service of notice on them to attend. Kishen Dyal Singh v. Sunkur Dutt, 2 W. R., Mis., 15.

When a decree is so uncertain that it is impossible to ascertain what is decreed, a plaintiff cannot be put into possession of any other thing by execution than that which the decree describes. Evidence cannot be given in the execution department to amend any uncertainty in the decree. The law allows certain matters to be ascertained in execution, but beyond those it is the duty of the Court of execution to decide what the Judge intended to decree. The necessity of certainty in decrees discussed.

Held that, when the not ordering the amount of the decree to be paid by instalments has arisen from any error or omission, or it is otherwise requisite for the ends of justice, the Court which passed the decree has power to review it, and to make an order for payment by instalments. Otherwise the Court has no power to make such an order subsequent to the decree, without the consent of the judgment-creditor. Revachand Dalichaud v. Motilal Narbheram, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 77.

A kistbundee is part of, or incidental to, the decree of the Court, and cannot be altered after the decree is finally given, unless for the purpose of the correction of errors. Lall Mahomed v. Shona Jolla Ghasee, 2 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 3.

Held, that a Court executing the decree of a superior Court has no power to alter the terms of the decree. Any error that may have crept into a decree can be corrected by that Court only which passed the decree. Semble.—Such a correction should be obtained by a review of judgment. Rto Oomrao Singh v. Lutun Lall, 1.6 N. W. R., 77.

(h) Reversal of Decree.

A decree against several defendants, one of whom alone appeals, cannot be reversed as against the rest when it did not order the amount of the decree to be paid by instalments. The necessity of certainty in decrees discussed.

When a lower Court, on insufficient evidence of a decree having been kept in force, orders execution, the Appellate Court should not summarily reverse the order, but should remit the case, that the decree-holder may give further proof of the fact. Nikkunt Chuckerbunty v. Sheo Narain Koonwar and others, 8 W. R., 276.

Where an application under Section 58 Act X of 1859 reversed a decree was made by a defendant long after the expiration of the 15 days prescribed by the section,—Held that the Collector, in entertaining such application, was acting without jurisdiction, and that his order was appealable, notwithstanding Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), Section 13.

In reversing a decree on appeal, the Court should state the relief which they consider the appellant entitled to.

A purchased a Government revenue-paying estate from B., but on going to take possession he found C., who claimed under a putnee grant also from B., in possession. A case was therefore instituted by B. under Act IV of 1849, but it was ordered that C. should be retained in possession. A. then brought a suit against B. and C. to recover his purchase-money. No relief was asked against C., nor had C. anything to do with the sale from B. to A. The suit was dismissed. On appeal, it was ordered merely "that the decree be reversed, and the appeal decreed with costs." Nothing was asked against C. in the grounds of appeal. In execution of this decree, C.'s property was seized and sold. C. petitioned the Principal Sudder Ameen, who held that he was not liable, but on appeal the Judge held that so was liable for the purchase-money, and his property had been rightly sold in execution for it. Held, on special appeal, that C. was not liable to refund the purchase-money. R. E. Bell v. Gurudas Roy, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 50.

A plaintiff obtained an ex-parte decree in an Act X (rent) suit, and took out execution. This decree was modified on appeal, the Appellate Court holding that the plaintiff was entitled to part only of the sum he had recovered in execution. Held, that the Collector before whom the case was originally tried should have ordered the plaintiff to make restitution of the surplus; and that on his refusal, the High Court, under its general power of supervision conferred by 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15, could order him to do so. Gobindo Coomar Chowdhry v. Kristo Coomar Chowdhry, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 199, 7 W. R., 520.

A regularly executed decree cannot be overridden or annulled by a miscellaneous petition. If the judgment-debtor wishes to proceed against the decree-holder, he must do so in a regular suit. Rajah Leclanund Singh v. Baneemadkub Singh, W. R., 1864, Mis., 31.

Distinction pointed out between a decree of an Appellate Court simply reversing the decree of the lower Court, and a decree which, reversing that decree, goes on to record judgment for the other party. Hurcekhishore Roy and others v. Kalekishore Sein and others, 8 W. R., 114.

Money recovered under a decree or judgment cannot be recovered back in a fresh suit or action, whilst the decree or judgment under which it was recovered remains in force. But this rule of law rests upon the ground that the original decree or judgment must be taken to be subsisting and valid, until it has been reversed or superseded by some ulterior proceeding. If it has been so reversed or superseded, the money recovered under it ought to be refunded, and is recoverable either by summary process or by a new suit. Doorga Pershad Roy Chowdry v. Tara Pershad Roy Chowdry, 3 W. R., P. C., 11.

(f) Setting Aside Decree.

The case of a judgment-debtor who alleges that a decree was obtained against him by fraud and personation, does not fall under Section 90, Act VIII of 1859 (which refers to attachments before judgment), nor under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861 (which relates to disputes as to the mode of executing uncontested decrees). The debtor's remedy is by a suit to set aside the decree as fraudulent and collusive, or he may apply to the lower Court to review its order and to direct an enquiry, not into the mere outward regularity of proceedings, but into the substantial regularity of the suit. Mustsamut Ramchand Koowamun v. Bhag-swattie Koowamun, 1 W. R., Mis., 29.
No appeal lies to set aside a sale of a decree under Act X of 1859, the only remedy being by regular suit, as prescribed by Section 104. Ram-sinnavattie Doss v. Hourend Doss Chevaidry,
W. R., 1864, Mis., 25.
The striking off of the execution case does not do away with an attachment once made, unless the attachment is expressly stayed by the party at whose suit it was issued. Mahabir Punddo Mah-tab Chund Bhaladun v. Surnomee Dossor, 15 S. W.
R., C. R., 222.
Where a plaintiff was declared by a judgment to be entitled to a share of the property sued for, and the decree on that judgment awarded the whole of the property to the plaintiff, but there was nothing to enable the Appellate Court to limit the decree to the share to which his right was established, the decree was entirely set aside, and the case was referred to ascertain that share. Chand Pudd-

Namay Chunn Sen v. Kunnomee Biche and others, 10 W. R., 152.

When a decree is sold, and the sale is admitted by the decree-holder in Court, the judgment-debtor cannot contest the right of the purchaser to execute it, except on the plea of payment to the original decree-holder. Sunnoonissa Khunum v. Meher Chund, 7 W. R., 313.
A Court is not bound to admit the assignee of a decree to execution thereof. If there is no dispute it may admit him, or if the dispute is one which it can decide it may try the point in dispute, and upon the result of that trial admit the assignee to carry on the decree. Bisidoo Chunn Bhosun v. Kishen
A party to a suit can enforce any decree he may get as a matter of right; but an assignee of such decree can only do so after obtaining the Court's permission, which depends entirely on the Court's discretion. An assignee, therefore, is not in the same position as the original decree-holder, and is not entitled to have the same privileges. Shuma Paddo Dutt v. Nobin Chunder Bose 1 15 S. W. R. C. R.
283.
The purchaser of an ex-parte decree strongly tainted with fraud cannot be allowed to profit by it.
When an ex-parte decree for rent has been sold by the decree-holder, there is no rule of law in Bengal which forbids the assignee from carrying on the suit instead of the landlord. Bimode Beharee Mon-

Satisfaction of Decree.
A decree for possession once satisfied by the plaintiff's being put in actual possession, cannot afterwards be revived or re-executed on the plaintiff being dispossessed. Khatoor Biche and others v.
Faniik Ali, 6 W. R., Mis., 168.

Each of the decrees held by several attaching creditors must be liquidated from the proceeds of the attached property according to priority of attachment. The holder of several decrees is not entitled to satisfaction of them first, because he first, in execution of one of the decrees, attached the estate. Kanai Loll v. Rajah Puddorna Bhoye Bhaladun, 1 W. R., Mis., 16.
A settlement between a decree-holder and his judgment-debtors who agreed to sell a share of a certain property, and to have the name of the decree-holder registered, was held good, the sale having been made by the judgment-debtors without the knowledge or consent of the others. Bhoornun Mundar v. Raddoo Singch, 1 W. R., Mis., 25.
A settlement with one of several decree-holders, without the knowledge or consent of the others, is not binding on them. Poonit Ghose v. Kishen Chunder Ghose, 2 W. R., Mis., 43.

Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859 (prohibiting settlements out of Court) is not applicable to decrees under Act X of 1859. Rajah Protap
Chunder Singch v. Kunayee Lall Doss, 3 W. R., Act
X R., 7.
A. had obtained a decree against B., C., and D., in execution of which the sheriff attached certain property belonging to B., C., and D., who were carrying on business in partnership. The property was sold, and the proceeds paid into Court, and by order of Court, A. received a sum in part satisfaction of his decree. Subsequently A., at the request of B., and without receiving any consideration, gave him a letter in Bengali, purporting to be a release to him of the remainder of his decree, but such adjustment was not made through the Court. A.
before applied for execution of his decree against B., C., and D., but his application was refused, the Court treating the letter as a release. A. appealed.
Held, on appeal, that the letter was not a release;
there was no consideration for it. The adjustment of the decree should have been made through the Court or certified to it, in accordance with Section
206 of Act VIII of 1859. Bhanoo Mohun Bonnerjee

1. Where the suit of interest was held bad, the court can order a reasonable sum.
A share of a decree was mortgaged by the decree-holder's vendor who sold his rights and interests to petitioner, who now seeks to execute the decree as against the judgment-debtor with reference to that share. The judgment-debtor having paid in the money by order of the Court, and the mortgagee having entered up satisfaction of this decree against the judgment-debtor,— Held that there was an end to that decree as against any person liable under it for the mortgagee's share. Kristo Dass Kreedoo v. C. J. Wilkinson, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 159.

Where a plaintiff obtains a decree with costs and interest upon the costs, the defendant being declared entitled to the set-off on account of costs, the interest should be calculated on the amount due to plaintiff after deduction of the set-off. Amunt Ali v. Munsamut Bendhoo, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 138.

Although the decree in this case did not specify the rate of interest before or after the decree, yet as it appeared that in calculating the amount then due, the Court gave 12 per cent., and that that was the usual rate,— Held that the intention of the Court, when it passed the decree, was to give the same rate. Synd Shah Abdoolah v. Meer Reasut Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 414.

Where a decree ordering payment by instalments does not provide for the payment of interest, the Court executing it is bound to refuse giving interest upon objection being taken thereto, even though on particular occasions interest has been claimed and allowed. Where interest is objected to in such a case, and the decree-holder is subjected to serious loss by delay in satisfying his claim, he is entitled to proceed at once against any property which may be liable under the decree to attachment and sale on default of payment of any of the instalments. Surno Moyee Dossee v. Kishen Koomear, 4 S. W. R., C. R., 324.

Where a Subordinate Judge, after the lapse of two years from the hearing of a case, altered his decree in respect of interest, he was held to have made a substantial alteration, and to have substantially, if not in form, granted a review; and some good ground for the delay ought to have been shown.

The grant of interest is in every case a matter for the judicial determination of the Court which grants the decree. Sheikh Abdool Ali v. Bibee Ashtriffour, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 62.

Where a decree does not provide for the payment of interest, it is not competent to the Court executing the decree to add to it by giving interest. Kappa Ayyar, petitioner, v. Venkataramana Ayyar, counter-petitioner, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 421.

A plaintiff cannot recover more than is clearly given to him by the decree, either in express terms or by necessary inference. Where the plaint prayed for interest up to the date of the suit, together with subsequent interest, and the decree purported to be an award in accordance with the prayer of the plaint,— Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to interest subsequent to the date of the decree. Prabhulanaadhu Pillay v. Pinnumswamy Chitty, 6 Mad. Rep., Rulings, 1.

It is within the province of a District Judge to know, and it is his business to declare if he knows, whether a decree, produced before him, of a Court within his district, was obtained in a proper Court. Bakshoolah Chowdry v. Hur Chender Chum, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 248.

When the plaintiff in a suit seeking solely the payment into Court of a fund for the relief of poor Armenian orphans, had no interest, except as a member of the Armenian community,— Held that the consent of the defendants, the trustees of the fund, to the decree sought by the plaintiff, would not justify the Court in making it. Satoor v. Satoor, Mad. Rep., 8.

The Court will not be deterred from making a decree by the difficulties to be expected in carrying it out. Purappovanavanaling Chetti v. Nallasivam Chetti and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 415.

The duty of Judges in seeing that decrees are properly drawn up pointed out. Rustom Aly v. Antar Aly Saudagar, 10 W. R., 487.

An insolvent defendant appeared and confessed judgment, at the suit of one of his creditors at the filing of the plaint. There were other suits filed by other creditors. The Judge (Recorder of Moulnemein) gave a decision for the plaintiff, but declined to sign judgment, pending a reference to the High Court, under Act XXI of 1863, Section 22, on the following questions:

(1) Is the plaintiff entitled to a decree as of the date on which the defendant appeared and confessed judgment?

(2) If he is not so entitled, on what principle are the priorities of the successive plaintiffs to be determined?

_Held_ that the Judge has a discretion when parties have come to a mutual agreement, or when the defendant has confessed judgment, to decide the suit at once, in accordance with such agreement or confession. He is not bound to do so till the time fixed for the regular hearing of the suit; and he cannot exercise that discretion where there is any doubt as to the good faith or identity of the parties.

The Court refused to entertain the question relating to the execution of the decree in the case referred, and to priorities of other decree-holders who were not before the Court. The Bank of Bengal v. R. Currie and others, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 306; S. C., 12 W. R., 432.

Where plaintiff prayed for a separation into two equal shares of the whole property to which she and the defendant were jointly entitled, and the lower Court decreed to her joint and undivided possession of her half share, and she also succeeded in the whole of her claim as before the High Court in special appeal,— Held, that as the separate possession by partition is a form of decree at the option of the plaintiff, the Court was in justice bound to grant her request, that the decree should be re-framed in such a manner as to award possession to her in severalty, without regard to any stamp fee. Bissonauth Chatterjee v. Madhubononee Dudee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 511.

A decree of a Court should, under Sections 196 and 197, Act VIII of 1859, state whether mesne profits are awarded or not, and it should distinctly state when it reserves any points for subsequent

Of two rival decree-holders against the same judgment-debtor, one (S.) attached a house in execution, and the other (L.) attached the house as well as the land appertaining to it. In apportioning the sale proceeds in the execution department, the Sudder Ameen did not give any portion to S., who accordingly brought a suit for the satisfaction of his claim from the proceeds of the house, on the ground that his had been the prior attachment. The first Court dismissed plaintiff's suit, on the ground that it was not satisfied as to the exact value of the house attached; but the Lower Appellate Court decreed it, ordering, however, that the value was to be ascertained by appraisement in execution.

Held that the Judge should have himself determined and adjudged the value of the house, and not referred that duty to the executive department. Lalla Mitterjint Singh v. Sonatun Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 124.

There must be a distinct finding one way or other on all the material issues in a case. Shurmo Moyee Dossia v. Joy Narain Bose, 8 W. R., 481.

(p) Proceedings to keep Decree Alive.

(See EXECUTION, LIMITATION).

Held that, in calculating the period of three years from the date when executory proceedings had last been taken to keep alive a decree, the period during which the decree had remained under attachment in execution of a decree against the judgment-creditor should be deducted. Chandi Prasad Nandi v. Raghunath Dhar, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 52.

The dilatoriness of the Court cannot prejudice a petition for revival of a decree, if filed in time. The appellantis not bound to remind the Court to do its duty by motion or petition. Rajah Sut- to Subro Ghossal Bahadoor v. Nobeen Chunder Doss, 5 W. R., Mis., 60.

*Held that the decision of the Full Bench (6 W. R., 98) that anything of whatever kind which can be fairly denominated a proceeding taken bona fide by the judgment-creditor is sufficient to satisfy the words of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859, applies to any bona fide proceeding, whether it is successful or not.

Resistance to legal proceedings taken by another person will count as a proceeding for the purposes of Section 20. Kalee Kishore Bose v. Prasoon Chunder Roy and others, 10 W. R., 248.

Steps taken towards placing the assignee of a decree in the position of the original decree-holder do not constitute proceedings to enforce, or to keep in force, the decree within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859. Brojo Lall Poramnic v. Ram Taran Gossain, 10 W. R., 127.

The receipt of the proceeds of a sale in execution of a decree is a proceeding within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859. The party who impugns the bona fides of a proceeding in execution is bound to furnish proof. Gunga Bisben Chand v. Maharajah Dhiraj Mahatab Chand Bahadoor, 10 W. R., 224.

The principle that persons who are not parties to a suit are not bound thereby, is not applicable to proceedings taken out to keep a decree in force; the law simply requiring that some such proceeding shall have been taken by one of the decree-holders within three years next preceding his application for execution. Khaja Abdool Guince v. N. P. Porese, 12 W. R., 436.

Service of notice under Section 216, Act VIII of 1859, effected by sticking up the notice on the judgment-debtor's house, instead of returning the notice to the Court under Sections 220 and 156, when it was found that the judgment-debtor was absent, may, even if the service was defective, be notwithstanding a bona fide proceeding to enforce the decree. Bhugobutty v. Mohun Chand Putte- dondo and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 97.

A plaintiff who seeks damages on the ground of an illegal omission to give him notice of the sale of his property in execution of a decree, in accordance with Section 216, Act VIII of 1859, is bound to show that there was such an illegal omission. Kassee Nath Roy Chowdhrv v. Hullodkur Roy, 2 W. R., 60.

A notice under Section 216, Act VIII of 1859, calling upon a debtor to show cause why a decree should not be executed against him, is a proceeding within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859, and the debtor's period of limitation for a new trial runs from the date of service of such notice. Obhoy Churn Dutt v. Modhoosoodun Chowdhrv, 9 W. R., 330.

When land is attached for sale in execution of a decree, the point of possession is the one which determines its liability to sale or not under Section 216. But in a suit brought to set aside a sale made under that Section, it is not the mere possession, but the actual right and title, which determines whether the sale ought or ought not to stand. Wooma Churn Chowdhrv v. Kurrale Churn Chowdhrv, W. R., 1864, 163.

Held that, in calculating the period of three years' arrears under a decreedirecting annual payment of money for a series of years, the petitioner, who had obtained a decree for an annual sum for maintenance during her life, was not required to be verified. Sunt Gopal Chunder v. Maharajah Jugat Indur Bumwarer Goibind, 8 W. R., 200.

Held (by Macpherson, J.) that, in the exercise of the discretion given by Section 221, Act VIII of 1859, a Court may properly refuse fresh warrants when it is not satisfied that the parties have made reasonable endeavour to execute those which have expired. Kalee Chunder Paul v. Thakoor Dass Biswas, 12 W. R., O. C., 7.

Process of execution cannot always be issued for three years' arrears under a decree directing annual payment of money for a series of years. The petitioner, who had obtained a decree for an annual sum for maintenance during her life, was not entitled to have process of execution issued within

An application to execute an aliquot part of a decree, though irregular and ineffectual for the purpose, must, if made bona fide under a misapprehension of the law, be regarded as a proceeding which keeps the decree alive. Kaylas Nath Ghose v. Nitya Shama Dassee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 449.

Paying tullubnama and taking out of process evince a sufficient bona fide intention of obtaining the fruits of a decree. In the matter of Kuladass Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 356.

Where a decree-holder is referred to a civil suit by the Court to which he applies for execution, and he accordingly carries on proceedings in order to get full relief under his decree, such proceedings must be held to have taken place in furtherance of execution, and as keeping the decree alive. Rudha Gobind Shaha v. Brojendro Coomar Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 207.

Where an applicant for execution did nothing beyond depositing tullubnama without indicating the mode in which execution was to be obtained, his proceeding was held not to be a bona fide proceeding keeping his decree alive. Moonshee Syud Ameer Ali v. Sahib Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 530.

Where parties to a suit which had been decreed entered after remand into a compromise, and filed a solehnamah, in accordance with which the case was decided,—Held that an application to execute the solehnamah was not a proceeding taken on the basis of the decree, and being, therefore, illegal, could not keep the decree alive. Preo Madhub Sircar v. Bissumber Sircar, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 514.

The Civil Judge rejected an application for execution of a decree, on the ground that it was barred by the Law of Limitation (Section 20, Act XIV of 1859). A prior application was made in 1864, and less than three years before the present application, but the Civil Judge treated the former application as nugatory, because it was not accompanied by a certificate which the applicant had been directed to produce by an order of Court made upon the petitioner’s application for execution in 1862. Held by the High Court that the applicant’s right to have process of execution issued was not barred. Kendiga Madi Chetti v. Soobbamma, 5 Mad. Rep., 453.

A decree was passed in June, 1851. Application was made for execution on the 21st July, 1861, and from that date, at various intervals, each less than three years, up to 1868. Upon different grounds all the applications were rejected, but the last order was reversed in appeal by the Civil Judge. Held that the last application was not barred by the Limitation Act. Karpuppan v. Muthunnam Serbe, 5 Mad. Rep., 105.

When a judgment-debtor is an inhabitant of a foreign territory, and has no property capable of attachment, bona fide on the part of the decree-holder, in taking all the steps in his power towards execution, will readily be presumed. Seeth Kissen Chand v. Kour Askunder Gir, N. W. R., 95.

Where an application to execute a decree as well as the service of notice took place within three years before the subsequent application, and it appeared that not merely was a notice issued and served, but the judgment-debtor had caajoled or amused the decree-holder with repeated promises to pay, and had thereby induced him to abstain from proceeding further, the proceedings of the decree-holder were held to have been bona fide. The Court ought to see that the notice is served on the right person, and should not be satisfied with the return of service upon a mere Mookteer, and not the recognized agent of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Procedure Code. Krislo Chunder Goopla v. Fuzul Ali Khan, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 389.

An application to arrest, which is not carried out, is a bona fide proceeding, taken with the intention of keeping the decree alive, only when the judgment-creditor can show that certain circumstances happened that rendered it necessary for him to proceed further against the judgment-debtor in execution of that process. Teykissen Shaha v. Bishoka Maya Chowdrey, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 355.

In this case certain proceedings of the Beerbhum Courts in 1866, appealed to and finally decided by the High Court in 1868, were held to be the proceedings that would, while they were being carried on, have prevented the decree-holder (respondent) from executing his decree, and therefore proceedings that prevented the bar of limitation from applying to the execution of that decree. Sreenuvair Mitler v. Moharaj Dhereaf Mahtab Chunah Bahador, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 72.

The Full Bench decision in 6 W. R. Misc. Rul., p. 98, cannot be cited in support of proceedings taken not against the judgment-debtor, but against parties who have nothing whatever to do with the decree (e.g., debtors of the judgment-debtors), and such proceedings cannot be considered as bona fide for keeping the decree in force. Javo Lal v. Radha Kissen Mitter, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

The issue of notice and for enforcement of the decree by possession is a proceeding to keep a decree alive within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859. Mookta Kashee Dahee v. Gundha Dass Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 483.

When a Court under a mistaken view of the law allows any of the holders of a decree to execute a portion of the decree, such execution cannot be excluded from the calculation when the question of limitation is raised. Shib Chunder Dass v. Ram Chunder Poddar, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 29.

Proceedings in execution, taken out bona fide and with the permission of the Court, even though irregular, e.g., execution of a part only of a joint-decree, are sufficient to keep the decree in force. Prao Kishore Deb v. Kishen Chunder Chowdary, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 267.

Where the original suit is pending in appeal, the decree-holder is not obliged to execute his decree for costs until the proceedings are set at rest by the Appellate Court; and if application is made for a review of the order made in appeal, an attempt made to support the original order must be regarded as proceedings to keep it alive. Shaikh Mahomed.
BUSSEEROOLAH v. RAM KANT CHOWDRY, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 266.

By SPANKIE and TURNBULL, JJ.—When the nature of a decree is such that it admits of execution, the decree-holder cannot, after allowing the limitation period to elapse without issuing process of execution, seek by a fresh suit to obtain the relief he should have sought by execution.

By TURNER, officiating C. J.—Although by reason of the Limitation Law process of execution may be barred, the decree is not altogether void. Its effect in ascertaining the rights of the parties is unaffected by any of the provisions of the Limitation Law.

In respect of landed property which has been the subject of a decree, a plaintiff need not necessarily found his suit on the decree. He may assert, as his cause of action, the continued trespass of the defendants subsequently to the decree, which gives him a new cause of action. RAM JUS RUC v. RAM NARAIN ET AL., 2 N. W. R., 382.

An act done in furtherance of a decree in which the decree-holder cannot in reason expect success, and which is not followed up by any other proceeding for more than three years, cannot be said to be done in good faith. An application for execution cannot be brought down to a later date than that on which it is made, by any agreement between decree-holder and judgment-debtor to postpone execution. MADHOMUTTY DEBA v. DHUNPAT SING, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 164.

It is the duty of the Court to issue process after application has been made for execution, yet the law fully intends that when the decree-holder sees that the Court has taken no steps to issue any process, he shall be diligent and move the Court from time to time, as required, to keep him within the period of limitation. GOEROO DASS DUPT v. WOJRA CHURU ROY, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 83.

The question as to whether proceedings which had been taken to execute a decree had been taken bonâ fide to keep alive such a decree, is a question of fact, and no special appeal lies from an order finding that the proceedings taken were bonâ fide. BHUBON MOHAN CHATTOPPPDDHYA v. SUNDARMINI DEBI, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 59.

In a case in which a certain sum was adjudged to five persons as an entire sum to which all of them were jointly entitled, but one moiety to three of them and the other moiety to the remaining two, — Held that the effect of the adjudication was the same as if two separate and distinct decrees had been pronounced, and that no action taken by the decree-holders to whom one moiety had been assigned could keep the decree alive to the benefit of the others. CHEERA SAKHO v. TRIPPOONA DUTT, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 244.

A declaration of plaintiff's right to assess certain lands as māl having been decreed, some of the defendants applied under Section 119 Act VIII of 1859, and prayed the Court to set aside the decree. The remaining defendants were made parties, and the decree was materially modified. — Held that as the decree-holder was taking steps for the purpose of preserving the original judgment intact, he was taking a proceeding to keep the decree alive. POORNANUND SURKHET v. HURO SUNDRA DEBI, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 208.

A precept to the Collector under Clause 2, Section 24, Regulation XLVIII of 1793, for mutation of names in the terms of a decree, is a process to enforce the decree, and cannot, under Section 20, Act XIV of 1859, be issued after a lapse of three years from the passing of the decree. MUSAMMUD NAUERBI KUNVUR v. MUSAMMUT KASTURI KUNWAR, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 158.

The service of a notice under Section 216 of Act VIII of 1859, if made bonâ fide with a view to take further proceedings, is sufficient to keep a decree alive. The question in this case was whether service of a notice under Section 216 of Act VIII of 1859 was a proceeding within the meaning of Act XIV of 1859, Section 20. MAHARAJAH DHIRAJ MAHAL CHAND BAHADUR v. LALBI BIBI, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 146.

A obtained a decree against B. on the 17th September, 1853. The decree was kept in force by sundry proceedings, the last of which was taken on the 30th December, 1864. On the 6th February, 1865, the parties filed a kistbundee, whereby they agreed that the amount due under the decree should be payable by instalments, the first instalment to fall due on 14th July, 1865; at the same time an existing attachment was given up. On 14th July, 1868, A. applied for execution of the decree in respect of six instalments due under the kistbundee. HELD (Mitter, J., dissenting), the Court cannot recognize any arrangement between the parties enlarging the period of limitation allowed by law for the execution of decrees, or which alters the terms of the decree. The filing of the kistbundee and relinquishment of the attachment were not a proceeding to enforce the decree or keep it in force.

Execution of the decree was barred by limitation. KRISHNA KUMAR SING v. HIRU SIRDUR, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 101, 13 S. W. R., F. B. R., 44.

Where a creditor has obtained a decree for money payable by instalments, the whole amount to become due on failure by the debtor to pay one of the instalments, he is, upon failure, entitled, notwithstanding Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859, to come into Court and certify to the Court, and prove payment of the earlier instalments, to show that execution of his decree is not barred. FAKIR CHAND BOS v. MADAN MOHAN ROSE, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 130, 13 S. W. R., F. B. R., 46.

Confirmation of a sale in execution of a decree by the Court, of its own motion, and drawing out the proceeds of sale by the execution-creditor, are not proceedings to enforce such decree, or to keep the same in force, within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859. MAHARAJA DHIRAJ MAHAL CHAND BAHADUR v. RAM BRAHMA MULICK, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 115, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 38.

A decree is not kept alive by the mere service of notice when the notice is returned because the judgment-debtor does not live in the place where it has been served, and the decree-holder makes no subsequent attempt to amend his mistake. MAHOONISHA BEEBEE v. FIEZEN BEEBEE, 4 W. R., Mis., 6.

Payments made otherwise than through the Court, in adjustment of a decree, cannot be recognized as keeping alive the decree. KEDARNATH MAHALA v. HERALD MUNDUL, 4 W. R., Mis., 21.

The presentation of a petition without any further active steps on the part of a decree-holder, is insufficient to keep alive his right to execute a decree.

By Section 2 of the Laws of 1827, the Court of the Civil Procedure Proceedings to Keep Decree Alive.

Section 26:

By Section 26 of the Laws of 1827, the Court of the...
A dispute between the purchaser of a decree and a third party, and the proceedings connected therewith, cannot be taken to be proceedings within the purview of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859. Acharjee Chowdhry v. Mohamaya Dabee Chowdhry, 10 W. R., 276.

A party (M.) having borrowed money on the security of land, obtained a decree against the borrower for principal and interest, execution being stayed for six months, and plaintiff's lien on the land maintained. A year after the decree-holder applied for execution, and the estate was attached with a view to sale. Thereupon one K. claimed the estate as his property, and, the claim being disallowed, commenced a suit in a Civil Court to establish his title, paying in shortly after, under protest, the sum which had accrued under the decree, and that money was taken out with the leave of the Court by the decree-holder (M.), and satisfaction entered upon the decree. Subsequently K. obtained a decree in virtue of which M. was ordered to refund the money. Held that the defence to K.'s suit by the decree-holder M. would not be a proceeding taken by him within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859. Sheik /doo v. Sheikh Besha, 2 Mad. Rep., A. C., 184.

A decree for possession of land and wasilat was made in 1843, but the decree-holder, though annually praying for execution, never applied to the Court to be put into possession, and in 1864 issued a notice to the judgment-debtors. Held that these proceedings were merely colourable proceedings; the notice of execution must be a bonâ fide notice; and that they were not sufficient in law to keep the decree alive. Tatur Singh v. Motoe Singh, 8 W. R., 306.

IX.—EXECUTION OF DECREES.

There may be a valid sale upon an execution in an action of damages for a tort, of the share of undivided family property to which, if a partition took place, the judgment-debtor would be individually entitled. Such damages in the costs recovered constitute a judgment debt, in respect of which the judgment-creditor's rights are the same as those upon any other judgment for payment of money. Viyasramii Gramini v. Ayyasrami Gramini, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 471.

Cross-decrees in the same Court may be set-off one against the other, whether they are originally decrees of the same Court, or are decrees sent to the same Court to be executed. But decrees of different Courts cannot be set-off one against another, unless when they are both in the same Court for the purpose of being executed. Greet Chunder Lahoury v. Fakeer Chand Khan, 6 W. R., Mis., 72.

After a debtor has been arrested in execution of a decree, and discharged at the request of the creditor, his personal property may be taken in execution under the same decree. Janosome Singh Roy v. Kaloo Mundle, 9 W. R., 178.

When the records of a case are destroyed, the plaintiff may prove his first decree, and get the execution of it; but on his inability to do so, he cannot bring a second suit for the same subject-matter. Mussumat Nazur Banoo v. Hussain Ali Khan, W. R., 1864, 378.

The holder of three decrees for rent against a joint took out execution and attached the jote for two of them. The purchaser of the tenure disputed the amount due on two of the decrees, for which the tenure had been attached, but paid nothing on account of the third decree. Held that the tenure bought by the purchaser was liable for all the three decrees. T. J. Keny v. Gofor Soudurce Dasso, W. R., 1864, 387.

Execution of a decree for enhanced rent should not be refused merely because the decree has been appealed against on a point of law. L. Theodorus M. Moutrie Abdul Barkat Amcoooloollah, W. R., 1864, Act X, 106.

The plaintiff purchased certain property at a sale under an execution upon a decree and paid the purchase-money. The purchase-money was applied partly in satisfying the decree-holder, and partly in satisfying other persons admitted by the decree to participate. The decree was afterwards reversed upon appeal, and the execution-debtor reinstated in his rights. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the purchase-money from the execution-debtor. Chhotun Singh v. Roy Mohanlal Miller, Marsb., 184.

Execution was issued upon a decree, and the proceeds of the execution paid over by the officer of the Court to the mookhtear of the execution creditor, and misapplied by him. A second execution was afterwards issued under the same decree in ignorance of the first. Held that, although his mookhtear may not have had authority to receive the proceeds of the first execution, the receipt of such proceeds by the Court officer absolved the execution-debtor from all further liability; and that the second execution was illegal, and the execution-creditor was responsible in respect of it. Purtaub Chunder Roovoo v. Bhaggobotty Dabee and others, Marsb., 59.

After a decree had been satisfied and the case struck out at the request of the decree-holder, he discovered that, by resorting to a different mode of calculation, he might have recovered more under the decree. The Court refused to re-open the matter, or to allow execution for the difference. Choonas and others v. Baburaw, Marsb., 211.

When a decree-holder who has acquiesced in an execution order for the sale of certain property, credits only a portion of the proceeds in satisfaction of the decree, he is not entitled to have his lien declared upon other property. Lutilah Behore Lal v. Moosheek Killy Pershad, 4 W. R., 67.

Execution cannot be issued upon a razinamah, unless the terms of it are embodied in a decree of the Court. Dharba Tankutta Satrty v. Virda Gangtia, 2 Mad. Rep., 305.

Execution against the person of a judgment-debtor is not a preliminary step necessary to entitle the judgment-creditor to proceed against the debtor's immoveable property under Section 11, Act XI, 11 of 1860. Venkatasamy Naik v. Vetamalai Gaundam, 2 Mad. Rep., 339.

Quare,—Whether the holder of a simple money-decree can follow the property stated in the bond to have been previously pledged to him by the debtor in security for the bond-debt, after the conveyance of such property to another party. Ramnath Ram v. Dhan Dyal Roy, W. R., 1864, 311.

Property substantially conveyed for the benefit and support of a judgment-debtor and his family is liable for his debt, even though it was purchased in the name of his son. Fakeroodeen Mahomed Aksan Chowdhrv. Kureem Buksh Chowdhrv., 5 W. R., 43.

An application for the revival of execution of a decree was made to the Principal Sudder Ameen in January, 1862. The Judge's permission for the Principal Sudder Ameen to try the case was asked for and given in June, 1864. Held that the sanction of the Judge legalized all the previous acts of the Principal Sudder Ameen; and that, in this view, execution was revived before the expiry of the three years allowed by Act XIV of 1859. Juggutdeo Narain Chowdhrv. Gour Mohun Dossor., 2 W. R., 12.

A Civil Court's bailiff, in executing a process against the moveable property of a judgment-debtor, has no authority to use force and break open a door or gate. Anderson v. McQueen., 7 W. R., 208.

Where, according to a will, until the testator's wife came of age, his mother had the beneficial interest in his property, and the rent which the mother recovered from the tenants was on her own account, and not as guardian of the wife,—Held that a decree obtained against the mother was consequently not as guardian of the minor, but personal, and that the property of the wife could not be sold in execution of a decree personal to the widow. Gooroo Doss Baboo v. Soundur Koormare Debia., 8 W. R., 217.

A decree was obtained against A., and on his death execution was taken out against his widows. B. came in, and alleging that A. was merely a benamee holder for B., applied to be substituted for the widows as defendant. Held that the Court was not right in exempting from liability A.'s heirs to the extent of any assets which might have come into their hands.

A judgment-debtor executed a kist-bundee agreeing to pay the decree-holder by certain instalments, and giving sureties for due performance; one condition being that if the debtor failed to make payment as agreed upon the decree-holder was to take out execution of the kistbundee. On this document and the surety bond being filed in the Court by the parties, the execution proceedings were struck off the file. Held that the kistbundee was in substitution of the decree, and having been executed in the presence and with the sanction of the Court, the judgment-creditor could only proceed on its terms; and the judgment-debtor failing to carry out its terms, could not require the judgment-creditor to bring a fresh suit to recover what had already been decreed to him. Taroo Biswas and another v. Kallee Doss Banerjee and others., 11 W. R., 86.

The manager of a factory, who had executed a bond in respect of sums owed by him on account of factory expenses, having left the service of the proprietor of the factory, an ex-parte decree was obtained on the bond against another manager. But as there was nothing in the decree to connect the judgment-debtor (the manager) with his principal (the proprietor), it was held that the decree could not be executed against the property of the principal. The Agra Bank, Limited, v. Dabee Pershad., 12 W. R., 208.

Where a judgment-debtor executed a kistbundee or instalment bond, providing for the satisfaction of the decree which had been obtained against him, and subsequently failed to pay according to the terms of the kistbundee,—Held that the decree-holder could enforce his claim under the terms of the kistbundee by proceeding in execution, and need not file a fresh suit. Tarif Biswas v. Kalidass Banerjee., 2 B. L. R., A. C., 223.

A judgment-creditor is entitled to prove payments made according to the terms of a kistbundee, for the purpose of showing that his right to sue out execution under the kistbundee was not barred by limitation.

Quere,—Whether part payments under a decree may not be proved, although they have not been made through the Court, or certified to the Court, under Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859. Bhawan-wari Debi v. Dinanath Sondal and others., 2 B. L. R., A. C., 320; S. C., 11 W. R., 232.

A Court executing a decree is bound to have regard only to the decree, and to any adjustment of such decree which the parties may agree to bring to its notice.

Where a compromise is set up, and disavowed by one of the alleged parties thereto, the other party cannot, by an application in the execution department, relying on the compromise, arrest the execution of the decree.

Whatever rights may exist under the compromise must be established by a new suit. Jhundoo v. Himmit., 3 N. W. R., 81.

A decree directing payment by instalments ought to be executed to the extent of the instalments falling due within three years before the application

Ex parte decrees must be adjudicated upon the actual merits, and not upon a petition of confession of judgment, and if it be established that the judgment was fraudulently obtained.  Sreecurj Bhushu v. Gopalcharan Samant, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 500.

Where a party applies, under Section 199, Code of Civil Procedure, to have an ex parte decree set aside, on the allegation that the decree was obtained upon a petition of confession of judgment put in by a person fraudulently employed to personate him, the Court is bound to enquire into the truth of the allegation, and if it be established the decree may be set aside.  Koroonamoyee Das see v. Nobo Kishore Sin  12 W. R., 36.

A defendant who appeared at the first hearing, but against whom in his absence at the adjourned hearing the case was decreed ex parte, is not debarred from appeal under Section 199, Code of Civil Procedure.  Kalee Churn Dutt v. Modhumuddan Ghose, 6 W. R., 86.

A decree for possession and mesne profits must, with reference to Section 196, Civil Procedure Code, be held unconditional, and put down to the date of delivery of possession.  Dhurum Naran Singh v. Ranthoo Ram, 12 W. R., 75.

Under Section 201 and other Sections cited of Act VIII of 1859, a judgment creditor has an uncontrolled option whether he will proceed in the first instance against the person or the property of his judgment-debtor; and by Section 15, Act XXIV of 1861, the Small Cause Court is bound to issue execution according to the nature of the application, if made in writing after the passing of the decree under Section 207, Act VIII of 1859.

The Court may, at its discretion, refuse execution against the person and property at the same time as against the same person when, under Section 13, Act XXIII of 1861, or under Section 19, Act XI of 1862, application for immediate execution is made verbally at the time of passing the decree.  F. Davis and Co. v. M. A. Middleton, 8 W. R., 282.

An award of private arbitration per se does not come under the provisions of Section 202 of Act VIII of 1859, so as to be set off against a decree of Court.  Dhuraj Singh v. Deen Dyal Singh, 11 W. R., 144.

Where persons by their own neglect have lost the remedy by process of execution to which they were entitled by an adjudication in a former suit, they cannot be permitted to revert to the position which they held prior to the institution of that suit, and bring a fresh suit.  Sheikh Golam Hussein v. Musammut Alta Rukha Bibi, 3 N. W. R., 62.

In execution of a decree a judgment-debtor cannot be ordered to pay a sum beyond what is stated in the decree, although he may, after the decree, have agreed with the decree-holder to do so.

CIVIL PROCEDURE—EXECUTION OF DECREES—MISCELLANEOUS.

The rule in the case of foreign judgments sought to be executed in our Courts is, that such judgments must finally determine the points in dispute, and that the defendant was not summoned, or had no opportunity of defence, or that the judgment was to be executed in our Courts is, that such judgments are not open to impeachment on the ground of want of jurisdiction, whether over the cause, the subject-matter, or the parties, or that the judgment was fraudulently obtained.  Sreecurj Bhushu v. Gopalcharan Samant, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 500.

Where a party applies, under Section 199, Code of Civil Procedure, to have an ex parte decree set aside, on the allegation that the decree was obtained upon a petition of confession of judgment put in by a person fraudulently employed to personate him, the Court is bound to enquire into the truth of the allegation, and if it be established the decree may be set aside.  Koroonamoyee Das see v. Nobo Kishore Sin  12 W. R., 36.

A defendant who appeared at the first hearing, but against whom in his absence at the adjourned hearing the case was decreed ex parte, is not debarred from appeal under Section 199, Code of Civil Procedure.  Kalee Churn Dutt v. Modhumuddan Ghose, 6 W. R., 86.

A decree for possession and mesne profits must, with reference to Section 196, Civil Procedure Code, be held unconditional, and put down to the date of delivery of possession.  Dhurum Naran Singh v. Ranthoo Ram, 12 W. R., 75.

Under Section 201 and other Sections cited of Act VIII of 1859, a judgment creditor has an uncontrolled option whether he will proceed in the first instance against the person or the property of his judgment-debtor; and by Section 15, Act XXIV of 1861, the Small Cause Court is bound to issue execution according to the nature of the application, if made in writing after the passing of the decree under Section 207, Act VIII of 1859.

The Court may, at its discretion, refuse execution against the person and property at the same time as against the same person when, under Section 13, Act XXIII of 1861, or under Section 19, Act XI of 1862, application for immediate execution is made verbally at the time of passing the decree.  F. Davis and Co. v. M. A. Middleton, 8 W. R., 282.

An award of private arbitration per se does not come under the provisions of Section 202 of Act VIII of 1859, so as to be set off against a decree of Court.  Dhuraj Singh v. Deen Dyal Singh, 11 W. R., 144.

Where persons by their own neglect have lost the remedy by process of execution to which they were entitled by an adjudication in a former suit, they cannot be permitted to revert to the position which they held prior to the institution of that suit, and bring a fresh suit.  Sheikh Golam Hussein v. Musammut Alta Rukha Bibi, 3 N. W. R., 62.

In execution of a decree a judgment-debtor cannot be ordered to pay a sum beyond what is stated in the decree, although he may, after the decree, have agreed with the decree-holder to do so.

Ex judicio compromise embodied in a decree was to the effect that defendant should pay to plaintiff the principal sum within a specified period, and that if he (defendant) were successful in another suit against a different party, he would also pay the interest. He succeeded in his suit in the first Court, but his suit was dismissed in appeal. The judgment-debtor subsequently paid the principal, but was afterwards arrested, and M. H. became surety for his production and for the payment of the interest, if the order of the Moonsiff releasing the judgment-debtor were set aside in appeal.

Held (by Markby, J.),—That the decree on the compromise was not one upon which execution could be carried out, at any rate for the sum which was only conditionally due, as the enquiry relative to the fulfilment of the condition could only be made in a regular suit; and that execution could not be taken out against M. H., the surety, the arrangement between him and the judgment-creditor not falling within Section 204, Act VII of 1859, which applies to persons who have become security for the performance of a decree or any part thereof.  Bolace Lall v. Mahomed Hossein Khan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 63.

S. brought a suit under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, obtained a decree, and took possession. After this B. applied under Section 230, Act VII of 1859, alleging that he had been in possession, and was dispossessed by S. in execution of a decree against another party. The Moonsiff decreed the case in favour of B. Held that the latter was not a proceeding under the former suit, and the decision upon it was appealable under Section 231, Act VII of 1859.  Brolno Moyee Dabee v. Barkut Sirdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 264.

In a suit for possession of certain plots of land, where plaintiff appeared to be in exclusive possession of other lands devolving by the same title, the Moonsiff compelled the plaintiff to alter her claim into one for a third of the whole of the lands on which she was entitled to a share, and gave her a decree accordingly. When she sought to execute the decree, the defendant objected that she sought first to execute it in respect of the lands in her possession which were alleged to exceed the one-third decree. Held that the decree-holder was entitled to execute her decree in respect of the lands in the hands of the defendant.  Radha Kristo Panjee v. Bamasondures Dossie, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 9.

In a suit for possession and wasilat, N. was originally the answering defendant; but when the suit had to be determined, U. intervened of her own accord, and her name was, at her own request, substituted in the decree for that of N. Held that U. was the person responsible for mesne profits and costs under the decree.  Umbka Dassia v. Chirnunj Pershad Bose, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 81.

A decree which is incapable of being enforced cannot be set-off against a decree which is alive.
(b) Rulings under the Code.

The property of sons is liable for a deceased father's debt, unless the sons prove, according to Section 203, Code of Civil Procedure, that they have not applied such property of the deceased as came into their possession. Moholkosher Dhubr v. Woomachur Bhattacharjee, 12 W. R., 233.

Where a decree is passed against certain parties as representatives of a deceased party, it can only be executed against the property of the latter, unless the defendants fail to satisfy the Court that they duly applied all such his property as came into their possession, in which case the decree may be executed against property belonging to the defendants to the extent of the deceased property not properly applied by them (Section 203, Act VIII of 1859).

The provisions of Act VIII of 1859 relative to execution against a living judgment-debtor are not applicable after his death. By his death his property passes from him, and if it is still liable for the debt, the transferee should be put on the record in place of the deceased, or irregularly sued. There is no ground for applying Section 246 to him as if he were holding benamee for the dead man. Sur-fun Bibe v. The Collector of Sarun, 10 W. R., 199.

Section 203, Act VIII of 1859, although it primarily refers to a party who has been substituted before decree for the original debtor, is equally applicable to a representative who has become representative of the original debtor in execution proceedings, his liability being limited to the extent of the property of the original debtor which may have come into his hands. Syed Jafar Hossein and others v. Hingun Jan and others, 8 W. R., 161.

A suity against whom the judgment-creditor is proceeding under Section 204, Act VIII of 1859, is not debarred by Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, from an appeal. Ghose Lal Jha v. Silva Naran Singh and others, 8 W. R., 24.

Section 204, Act VIII of 1859, applies to cases such as that of parties who become sureties under Section 76 or Section 83, but not to parties who become securities after a decree is passed. Baboo Ram Kissen Doss and others v. Hurkhoo Singh, 7 W. R., 329.

Where a deed is executed stipulating the grant of a regular maintenance payable from the grantor's estate, and recoverable, in the event of non-payment, from that estate, the allowance so granted is property which can be attached under the provisions of Section 205, Act VIII of 1859. Emart Hossein v. Najeebonissa Regun, 11 W. R., 138.

The right of a son to succeed by survivorship to his father's specific share of property cannot be sold in execution of decree, such right being too remote. Section 205 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which specifies the kinds of property which are liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree, makes no mention of contingent interests. The property must belong at the time to the defendants. Gour Sarun Doss and others v. Ram Sarun Bhikut and others, 8 W. R., 253.

Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, applies where execution is sought after that law of a decree passed before its enactment. Bykunt Ghose v. Kishen Chunder Ghose, 2 W. R., Mis., 43.

A decree-holder who was not barred by lapse of time in seeking to execute his decree, was opposed by the judgment-debtor, on the ground that the decree had been seized and sold by the Deputy Collector, in execution of a decree of that functionary's Court, and that he himself (the judgment-debtor) had become the purchaser thereof. Held that these proceedings amounted to an adjustment out of Court, which, under Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, could not be recognized by the Court, unless certified to by the judgment-creditor himself.

Held also that a Court charged with the execution of a decree has no other discretion with regard to noticing a transfer thereof than that which is given to it by Section 208, which only applies to cases where the transferee can and does come forward to claim execution for himself, instead of the original decree-holder. Bhurunt Chunder Roy, v. Nibob Nazir Ali Khan Bakadhoor, 10 W. R., 354.

Held that Section 206 (prohibiting settlements out of Court) does not apply to decrees under Act X of 1859. Rajah Pratap Chunder Singh v. Kunayelall Doss, 3 W. R., Act X R., 7.

Section 206 does not apply to Revenue Courts, and no rule of the Board of Revenue can justify a Deputy Collector's refusing to enquire whether or not a private adjustment of a decree has, as alleged, been effected out of Court. Ramchunder Roy v. Ramchurn Bakshe, 9 W. R., 372.

Under Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, a Court cannot recognize any adjustment of a decree unless made through the Court, or notified to the Court by the person in whose favour the decree has been made, or to whom it has been transferred. Bhia Bhopinath Salie v. Kishen and others, 7 W. R., 134.

The suing on a kistubdee in Court does not necessarily make it the instrument of a public adjustment through the Court, within the meaning of Section 206, Act VIII of 1859. Muddon Mohun Mittra v. Bibee Peer Bukshun, 7 W. R., 85.

A letter from a decree-holder to his vakeel to put in an acknowledgment into Court, is not a settlement out of Court certified to the Court in the manner required by Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, to warrant further investigation in the matter. Thakoor Lal Misree v. Kynpe Lall Tewari, 7 W. R., 515.

A petition signed and filed in Court by a judgment-creditor certifying payment of the amount due to him by his judgment-debtor, is a sufficient certificate of payment under the decree in the terms of Section 206, Code of Civil Procedure. Shuddolah Shuck v. Kaleckurn, 12 W. R., 358.

A solac a decree obtained by him under Regulation VII of 1799 to B., but after the sale realized the decree from the judgment-debtor. On application by B. for execution, on 2nd January, 1825, the fraud was discovered, and B. was referred by the Collector to the Civil Court. On 2nd October, 1866, B. brought his suit for recovery of purchase-money from A. Held that the period of limitation run from the discovery of the fraud. The suit was not barred. Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859 does not apply to decrees under Regulation VII of 1799. Gobal Chunder Day v. Penu Bibi, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 77; 10 W. R., 104.

Where several of the acts requiring to be done in execution of a decree are such as can be done through a Court, and where all of them are acts the doing of which may be certified to the Court by the person in whose favour the decree was made, the policy of Section 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to exclude the reception of evidence upon the point, or any question arising out of evidence before the Court. No adjustment can be recognized unless made through a Court, and where all of them are acts the Court below, this Court will not interfere. Dwarkanath Dass Biswas v. Unnodachtern Pass, 8 W. R., 319.

According to Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, no adjustments made out of Court are admissible by the Court in execution. Motte Lall v. Rui Dass, W. R., 1864, Mis. R., 38.

To give a meaning to the rule, under Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859, of a defendant's objection, in a Mofussil Small Cause Court, to the execution of a decree, on the ground that it had been adjusted out of Court, did not bar his right to bring a suit against the execution-creditor to recover the thing alleged to have been given in satisfaction of the decree. Gulawad Chandabhi v. Rathinatulla Jamiddabi, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 76.

K., an execution-creditor of C., applied to the Court by which the decree was passed, and caused it to be entered into a compromise upon certain terms with K. for the adjustment of the decree, and K. thereupon, but without certifying the terms of such adjustment to the Court, petitioned for the release of C., who was accordingly released.

Subsequently K. again applied to the Court to compel satisfaction of the whole amount of the decree against C.

This application was opposed by C., on the ground that an adjustment of the decree had taken place between him and K. The Judge, however, refused to enter into the question of the adjustment, as the terms of it had not been certified to the Court under Section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held that the Judge was in error; that it was the duty of K., on applying for the release of C., to certify the adjustment to the Court; that it would be unjust to allow him to take advantage of his own omission to do so; and that, not having done so, the presumption against him was that the decree had been satisfied in full; but that, under the circumstances, it would be the most equitable course to direct the Judge to enquire into the terms of the adjustment. Case remanded for that purpose. Chango Valad Dudha Mahidjan v. Kalecram Ninayandis, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 120.

Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859 forbids the recognition of adjustments not made through the Court between debtor and decree-holder. If the date of an alleged adjustment be prior to that Act, the adjustment must be considered. Prindabun Chunder Sircar Chowdhry v. Khooshal Chunder Dutt, 2 W. R., Mis. A., 2; Bykunt Ghose v. Kishen Chunder Ghose, 2 W. R., Mis. A., 43; and Kali Prashad Surmah Roy v. Kheturnath Shara, 4 W. R., Mis., 11.

Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, does not bar a suit brought to recover money paid into the Collectorate as Government revenue, although the person on whose behalf the money was paid had an Act X decree against the person paying the money, as the entire amount of the decree was eventually recovered by taking out execution of the whole decree. Mohima Chunder Ghose v. Nobinchunder Audhibar, 8 W. R., 449.

Where a judgment-debtor, instead of paying into Court, as prescribed in Section 206, Code of Civil Procedure, pays direct to the creditor, he does so at his own risk. Gaangi Gobindo Gooptho and others v. Mutlah Lall Hatac and others, 9 W. R., 362.

Where a judgment-debtor pays the amount decree to the officer of the Court under the authority and pressure of the Court's process, he is entitled to protection, the latter clause of Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, relating not to such payments, but to voluntary adjustment. Bindhoo Bibeve v. Keshub Chunder Baboo, 9 W. R., 452.

In execution of a decree against his judgment-debtor, the defendant caused the cattle of the plaintiff, a stranger, to be seized and taken. The plaintiff filed his claim under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, which was allowed. Subsequent to the admission of the claim, but before the order for release of the cattle, three of the bullocks died.

The plaintiff sued for damages, consequent on the seizure of the cattle, and for the value of the three bullocks which had died during the time they were in the custody of the officer of the Court.

Held that the defendant was liable to the plaintiff for damages sustained by him in consequence of the seizure and detention of the cattle,—i.e., for a sum sufficient to cover what would have been plaintiff's expenses for hiring bullocks to cultivate his lands.

That neither Section 214, Act VIII of 1859, nor Section 15, Act XXIII of 1861, contemplates any inquiry before the Court, whether the property belongs to the judgment-debtor or not; and that seizure of personal property, in execution of a decree, is not an act of the Court, but one of the party himself seeking execution, for which he is liable if any trespass be committed on the property of a stranger. Maysomott Sibhun Bibi v. Shekib Sariuttula, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 413.

A Court executing decrees, whilst giving effect to Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859, should also take reasonable care that its process is not about to be abused for fraudulent purposes. It may, by examining the judgment-debtors and others having knowledge, inform itself of the position of the decree, and whether it has or has not been satisfied. This, however, is merely an enquiry to inform the Court, and it need not frame and decide an issue. Parcheit v. Kegho Goorico, 2 N. W. R., 45.

H. sued B. to recover possession of a certain house. B. answered that the house was his own; that H. having fraudulently got possession of it, he (B) had filed a suit to recover possession; that a decree was passed in his favour in the lower Court, which, however, was reversed on appeal; that, pending a special appeal, a compromise had been entered into between him and H., in pursuance of which he (B.) was put in possession of the house. The terms of this compromise were not certified to the Court under Section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Heald that this compromise, having been effected after the decree in favour of B. had been reversed, did not come within the meaning of Section 206, and was, therefore, a good defence to the suit of H. Hari Sadi Shia Dikshit v. Bassi Bulan, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 78.

Payments out of Court may be certified to the Courts and proved by the decree-holder in order to avoid the action of the Law of Limitation, notwithstanding the provisions of Section 206, Act VIII of 1859, Jugnet Mohina Dassee v. Madhub Chunder Kur, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 66.

(c) Modes of Execution.

If money is brought into Court under process of execution, and the party entitled to it or his vakeel is present to receive it, the Court shall cause it to be paid over immediately. Muttuwela Pillay v. Sanu Pillay, 5 Mad. Rep., Ruling II.

The provisions of Section 229 of the Code of Civil Procedure are not applicable to the case of a person put in possession of land under a decree in the manner prescribed by Section 224 of the same Code. Gineesh Pershad v. Jyokshun, 17 N. W. R., 134.

In the execution of a decree for land passed prior to the enactment of the Code of Civil Procedure, in which the value of the produce of the land was given to the plaintiff up to the date of the decree, it is not competent to the Court executing the decree to grant further produce up to the date of execution. Chinnaiya Chetty v. K. Naranaupayya, 6 Mad. Rep., 15.

Delivery of possession under Section 264, Code of Civil Procedure, is complete as soon as the steps prescribed by that Section have been taken; and any subsequent act of resistance on the part of the claimant to the land is not the resistance or obstruction referred to in Section 236, and can in no way give the Court a right to interfere in the summary way provided by that Section. Synud Wajed Hossein Moultive Abdool Kadir, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 418.

Plaintiff having only partially succeeded in a suit against R., G., and others, for possession of certain land with mesne profits, appealed to the High Court, who gave him a decree with costs. Upon this, all the defendants except R. and G. applied for a review, and obtained a modification of the High Court’s judgment, such as left the lower Court’s decree standing against R. and G. alone. Plaintiff then applied for execution. Heald that the only thing that the plaintiff could do in these circumstances was to ask for delivery, in the mode prescribed in Section 224, Code of Civil Procedure, of the shares and interest of R. and G., but that the Court in execution was not authorized to make any enquiry into the extent or amount of these shares in relation to the other defendants. Anmoda Pershad Mookerjee v. Troylchenath Paul Chowdry, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 123.

A person executing a process directing a general attachment of moveable property, having gained access to a house, has a right to remove the lock from the door of a room in which he has reasonable ground for believing moveable property to be lodged. Kendavamm Pillay v. Kristna Swamy Pillay, 5 Mad. Rep., 189.

Where, by an arrangement sanctioned by the proper Court the terms of a decree were varied, and provision was made for its payment by instalments, for the payment of a portion of which instalments a surety executed a bond hypothecating his property,—Heald that the terms of Section 204 of the Civil Procedure Code are not applicable to such an arrangement. Chunder Dun v. Hossein Ali, 3 N. W. R., 88.

A party who obtains a decree enabling him to recover a mortgage debt by sale of two mortgaged premises, is entitled in law to proceed against both or either of the properties, as he thinks proper. Khorsked Ali v. Chowdery Wahid Ali, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 170.

Where a decree requires the judgment-debtor to render accounts, he can only discharge himself by accounting for all the moneys that have come into his hands, and it is always open to the decree-holder to show that this has not been done. Woomanauth Roy v. Sreenaugh Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 260.

Where a plaintiff had obtained a decree, declaring his right to erect a building,—Heald that it was not the business of the Ameen in execution to take any part in the erection, and that what was done by the Ameen at the instance of the decree-holder could not be regarded as the act of the Court. Kanpoo Lall v. Shaikh Munowur Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 271.

Where a decree is for the delivery of moveable property and states the amount to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had, the goods must be delivered if capable of delivery, but if not capable of delivery then assessed damages should be paid. Kashu Nath Koer v. Deb Krist Rumantu Dass, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 240.

Semble—A decree which is not a decree for possession cannot, under Section 223, be executed for the purpose of possession of property in the possession of a third party who has acquired a title subsequently to the institution of the suit. Amreeoonissu Khatoon v. Aboondeoissa Khatoon, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 307.

In the execution of a decree for the possession of land, if it is found that the boundaries described in the plaint are no longer in existence, it is allowable to take the evidence of witnesses to ascertain their former position. Kalee Dabee v. Mudoo Soodun Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 171.

If a bailiff breaks the doors of a third person, in order to execute a decree against a judgment-debtor, he is a trespasser if it turn out that the person or goods of the debtor are not in the house; and under such circumstances the owner of the house is not by obstructing the bailiff, render himself punishable under Section 183 or Section 186 of the Indian Penal Code. Reg. v. Gazi Koon A’ba Dore, 7 Bom. Rep., Cr. Ca., 83.

CIVIL PROCEDURE—APPLICATION FOR EXECUTION.

Under Section 233, Act VIII of 1859, a Nazir, authorized to execute a warrant by attachment of moveable property, has power to remove locks put by the judgment-debtor on the doors of godowns or other places where his property is stored, and put his own locks thereon, for the purpose of attachment and safe custody of the property. Sodanini Dutt v. Jagatwar Sur, 5 B. L. R., Ap. 17; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 339.

(d) Application for Execution.

Separate applications to execute the same decree do not constitute separate causes or suits. Thus, when a Judge, ex necessitate rei, executes the decree of a Principal Sudder Ameen, he is at liberty to carry out that execution to whatever extent may be necessary. Sharoda Moyee Burmonee v. Wooma Moyee Burmonee, 8 W. R., 9.

Every application made by one or more out of several decree-holders is an application made in the interests of all, and every proceeding taken by one is a proceeding taken for the benefit of all to enforce the judgment, or to keep it in force. Roy Preconath Chowdhry and others v. Prannath Roy Chowdhry, 8 W. R., 100.

It is held that, where one of several representatives of a deceased judgment-creditor applies for the execution of a decree, the general powers of attorney contemplated by Section 17, Clause I of Act VIII of 1859, are not necessary, but it is sufficient if the applicant is authorized under Section 115 to act for the other representatives.

Held also that, in executing a decree of a Court of competent jurisdiction, the Court executing it cannot question the validity of any portion of it. Its duties are only of a ministerial character. Anvita Mohun Babappo v. Himat Sing Haltumji, 2 Bom. Rep., 109.

Held, by Phear, J., that, under the Code of Civil Procedure, a Court is not bound to grant, as a matter of course, a second application from a judgment-creditor for execution, but ought always to require him to show why the steps previously taken did not lead to a full discharge of the debt, and ought not to grant its process a second time unless satisfied that the failure was not attributable to the applicant's own fault. Byjnath Pandit v. Kunhu Lal Pandit, I W. R., 537.

The holder of a decree for possession and wasilat is not obliged to apply for execution of both within three years from the passing of the decree. He may first apply for execution as to possession and costs, and then, within three years from the date of such applications, seek to enforce the decree as to wasilat. Barodakant Roy v. Ram Kishore Dutt and others, 8 W. R., 99.

An application for execution of a decree need not be accompanied with either the original decree or a copy. Gunga Golbind Goopla and others v. Mahkun Lall Halce and others, 9 W. R., 362.

When application is made for the execution of a decree of a Civil Court of the North-Western Provinces against property situated within a district under the Government of Bengal, the procedure of the Bengal High Court in the matter of execution should govern the case. Ali Mirsa v. Ram Narain Sein, 11 W. R., 430.

Under Act VIII of 1859, a decree-holder who applies for execution is not bound to file a copy of his decree, and when a professed purchaser of the decree applying for execution files a copy and the alleged deed of sale, no presumption arises, from his doing so, of the genuineness of the sale. Khet-ter Mohun Chattayodhya v. Issur Chunder Surma and others, 11 W. R., 271.

When a Judge (in reversal of an order of the lower Court) admitted the claim of a person representing himself to be the purchaser of a decree from the decree-holder to execute the decree,—Held that the Judge had no jurisdiction under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, as the applicant was not a party to the suit in which the decree was given, nor (as the lower Court had ruled) the representative of such party. Umap Lall Bajpye v. Sheoh Pershad Bajpye, W. R., 1864, Mis., 35.

The rule of law which forbids application for execution of part of a decree does not bar application for all that remains due upon a decree where the rest has been previously satisfied. Tej Narain Chatterjee v. Ram Tunnoo Mojamdar, 12 W. R., 370.

On intervention in the execution department, the application ought either to be dismissed or numbered and registered as a suit. Sahoo Gokul Pershad v. Muns. Zynuva, 1, 2, 18, N. W. R., 176.

No appeal lies from an order of a lower Court refusing an application by one decree-holder under Section 207 Act VIII of 1859 to execute the whole of a joint-decree to the exclusion of his co-decree-holder. Gooroo Dass Roy v. Ram Kungina Dossia, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 136.

No appeal will lie from an order of a lower Court refusing an application by one decree-holder under Section 207, Act VIII of 1859, to execute the whole of a joint-decree. Nor is an appeal necessary, for the Court is bound under that Section to protect the interests of any co-decree-holder not before the Court; so that if any application for execution has been preferred by the other decree-holders, the appellant is entitled to apply for leave to join in that application; or if there is no application now before the Court, the appellant is entitled to ask the Court, after calling upon the other decree-holders to join in executing the decree, and on their refusal or neglect to do so, to allow execution to proceed on his sole application. Othaya Perskad v. Mohadeo Dutt Bhandarce, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 415.

Where the decree to be executed is that of the Zillah Court, and that decree has been affirmed in appeal by the High Court, the party applying for execution should state whether or no a further appeal to the Privy Council has been preferred. Sounud Singh v. Poth Narain Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 205.

S. had against M. in the Rungpore Court a decree for costs which he removed for execution to the Court of Beerbhoom. On this M. applied to the latter Court, under Section 209, Act VIII of 1859, for stay of execution pending the decision of another suit which he had brought against S.

Held, that on the decision of the other suit, it ought to have been ascertained which party had a decree for the larger sum, and that execution should have been taken out by that party only, and for so much as should remain after deducting the smaller sum, which should have been entered on the decree for the larger sum. Sheikh Sunder Sirkir v. Juggut Indur Bunaware, 12 W. R., 212.

A. obtains a decree in a Court of the N. W. Provinces against B. C., taking the decree bond-fide by assignment, applies to execute it in the 24-Pergunnahs. B., who has got a decree against A. in the 24-Pergunnahs, applies to have the decree set off against the other decree in the hands of C. Held that, in such circumstances, Section 209, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply. Sheikh Rejoeooddeen v. Sheikht Fheanger, 5 W. R., Mis., 22.

The provisions of Section 209, Act VIII of 1859, apply only to cross-decrees of the same Court between the same parties, or to cross-decrees between the same parties, though of different Courts, which have found their way for execution to the same Court. Ram Cooonar Ghaos v. Gobind Sinndyal, 7 W. R., 480.

In a suit for resumption of land, the plaintiff got a decree for a portion of her claim, with costs in proportion. Subsequently, on application for a review, she obtained a further decree for the rest of her claim. The latter decree was reversed in appeal, but the decree passed in the Court of original jurisdiction was confirmed in appeal. Section 209, Code of Civil Procedure, could only be executed to the extent of the difference between the two decrees. Nobo Lal Khan v. The Maharavane of Burdwan, 9 W. R., 590.

When an application to stay execution of a decree is made to a Court in which a suit is pending against a decree-holder, the Court's competency, under Section 209, Act VIII of 1859, to grant the application depends on the decree being its own decree. An application of this nature ought not to be entertained, without an affidavit or satisfactory proof of the complaints alleged in it, without the Court calling for such proof. Miltun Beech v. Buzloor Khan and others, 8 W. R., 392.

Section 209 gives no authority to a Judge to receive an appeal from an order passed by a Collector in execution of a decree under Act X. Chunder Coomar Roy v. H. Mackenzie, 3 W. R., Act X R., 10.

When a decree in favour of an appellant describes a set-off costs as due by the appellant to the respondent, it means not that any sum should be actually paid to the latter, but that the costs in question should be deducted from the gross amount decreed, and the remainder only recovered under the decree. Section 209, Code of Civil Procedure, has no application in such a case. Issur Chunder Decree v. Munmohan Chowdhry, 12 W. R., 308.

When a suit is instituted, and a decree is passed against a person who was dead at the time the suit was instituted, the decree cannot be executed against his legal representatives. Section 210, Act VIII of 1859, contemplates only the case of a person who, being alive when the decree is passed, dies before execution has been fully had. The representatives of Griendro Nath Tagore v. Hurro Nath Roy, 10 W. R., 455.

No appeal lies from an order passed under Section 210, Act VIII of 1859, refusing application of a decree-holder to execute decree against the legal representatives of the person against whom the decree was passed. Syed Loothus Ali Khan v. Siddha Brat Parsad, v. W. R., 1864, Mis., 35. The representative of a deceased plaintiff in an abated suit is liable for costs of interlocutory orders in the suit. Syed Mahudde Allee Khan v. Peince Rohenmooddeen and others, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 154.

A Judge is bound to refuse to proceed upon an application to give notice to judgment-debtors when there is before him no application to execute drawn up in conformity with Section 212, Act VIII of 1859. Execution cannot proceed upon an application made with a view to execute an aliquot part of a decree.

And where, notwithstanding objection made, applicants persist in seeking execution of decree for their shares only, they cannot be allowed to amend an application which, after coming up to the High Court, they find it impossible to maintain. Poonnoo Chunder Mookerjee and others v. Sharoda Churn Roy, 11 W. R., 241.

Two out of several co-decree-holders applied to the Judge's Court to execute their share of a decree. Held that this was not an application upon which the Court would proceed in execution, and that it could not in appeal be changed into an application for an execution of their whole decree.

Although a Judge should, when necessary, direct notices to be served on judgment-debtors, he cannot proceed in execution on a mere application to issue such notices over the parties who are bound to apply under Section 212 of Act VIII of 1859. Parina Chandra Mookerjee v. Sarada Churn Roy, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 21; S. C., 11 W. R., 241.

Where an application for execution of a decree was defective in regard to many particulars required by the terms of Section 212, Act VIII of 1859, and asked also for execution of a share only of the decree, it was held not to be a proceeding within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859.

Where an application for execution by a party representing himself to be the purchaser of a decree was rejected on account of the applicant's failure to produce evidence, as he was directed to do, in support of his claim, it was held not to be a proceeding properly taken to enforce a decree. Godhey Chand Lusker and another v. Noboocoomar Foramance and others, 10 W. R., 428.

The words "otherwise as the case may be," in Section 212, mean that the mode of execution is to be adapted in each case to the nature of the particular relief sought to be enforced under the decree Denonath Ruchit v. Mutty Lal Paul, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 126; 1 Hyde's Rep., 158.

In attaching an estate paying revenue to Government, the attaching creditor must, in addition to the information required by the 1st Clause of Section 213, Act VIII of 1859, in respect of ordinary immoveable property, give also the 'specific information indicated in the latter clause of that Section.
that Section being cumulative in respect of estates paying revenue to Government. Ajodhaya Doss and others vs. Shro Pronso Singh and others, 17 S. W. R., 175.

The situation of Section 213, Act VIII of 1859, is that the description in a notice of attachment should be sufficient to identify the property, and in the case of an estate paying revenue to Government, that there should be a specification of the revenue. Lack Ram v. Mohes Dass, 12 W. R., 488.

Similarly, whether a judgment-creditor applies for a general warrant of attachment of all the defendant's property, he is not liable to such defendant's property under Section 214, and under it revenue. Lark Ram v. Molnar Dan, 12 W. R., 488.

In the case of an estate paying revenue to Government, the decree itself should be filed, but only requires that the estate should be recovered in execution of that decree. Joykalee Dassee v. The Representative of Chadamala, 9 W. R., 133.

Section 215, Act VIII of 1859, like Section 15, Act XXIII of 1861, does not make it essential that the decree itself should be filed, but only requires certain particulars specified in Section 212, Act VIII of 1859, on which the judge is empowered to pass orders for execution. Sufur Ali v. Mohesh Chunder Kang, 4 W. R., Mis., 16.

In execution, a decree must be construed by its own terms, and not by the plain. Where a decree is a joint-decree, execution cannot proceed upon an application made with a view to execute an aliquot part of the decree.

Where no interest is given in a decree, none can be recovered in execution of that decree.

When an application for execution is contrary to the terms of the decree, the High Court cannot in appeal allow the application to be amended, but the decree-holder must apply to the lower Court to be allowed to execute it according to its terms. Nobo Kiskore Majoondar v. Ahmad Mohun Majoondar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 19.

The application to execute the decree of an Appellate Court should be made to the Court which passed the first decree, upon or after the receipt by that Court of the copy of the decree certified by the Appellate Court; but where, whether execution should be allowed to issue upon a certified copy procured by the parties and presented to the Judge by petition. Soodun Singh v. Pokh Narain Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 205.

When a party applies to execute a decree on behalf of a minor, his representative capacity comes to an end by the death of that minor; and further steps in execution, or otherwise, must be taken by the legal representative of the deceased, whoever that may be. Holudhor Roy Chowdry v. Juddonauth Mookerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 162.

A decree-holder having applied for execution, the judgment-debtor applied for a re-hearing; but the latter application having been opposed was rejected. Pending the proceedings on the application for re-hearing, the application for execution was struck off, but very shortly after re-hearing was refused the decree-holder applied again for execution.

Held that the omission of the decree-holder to carry on execution proceedings pending the application for re-hearing, was no evidence of want of bona fide. Titooram Bose v. Tarinachurn Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 127.

A person is to be concluded by the contention that his application to execute is not bona fide, he should be given an opportunity of explaining fully and clearly all his acts. Sectanuth Mundelv. Annund Chunder Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 5.

A decree-holder is at liberty, under Section 210, Act VIII of 1859, to follow his deceased judgment-debtor's property in the hands of the parties in possession, notwithstanding a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 has been obtained by a third party. Durnut Sing Bankaor vs. Ramn Rajpura, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 476.

Where a Judge finds that an application for execution is within time, and there is no appeal from his finding, his successor is not justified in going behind his order.

An application for execution cannot be thrown out summarily as barred by limitation, because the decree-holder has failed to find any of his judgment-debtor's property, or been baffled in his endeavours to satisfy his decree. Maharajah Dheeraj Mahal Chand v. Moorcedhor Ghose, 15 W. R., C. R., 67.

It is not required by Section 212 of Act VIII of 1859, and Section 15, Act XXIII of 1861, that a copy of the decree should be filed when an application is made for execution. Madhoo Dossia Nobin Chunder Roy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 25.

Where a decree-holder applied for execution just one day before the limitation of three years had expired, and did nothing further in the matter, after notice had been issued and returned as served, it was held to be a just inference that his proceedings were not bona fide. Proof of actual service of notice is not requisite. Ram Dhingoor v. Gooroo Dassee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 40.

Where successive applications for execution had been made for years against a party merely as the representative of a deceased defendant, it was held that execution could not be taken out against him personally as one of the original defendants, even if he were liable in both capacities. Prem Lall Gossameer v. Hossecinooddeen, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 36.

An application for execution of the decree of an Appellate Court should be made to the Court which passes the first decree in the suit, irrespective of any previous order referring the case for execution. Ram Jadub Sircar v. Ameeroonissa Bibe, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 27.

On an application under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, in the investigation of the matter in dispute, the Court may go into the question of title. It is open to the applicant to give evidence of title beyond mere possession, and the decree-holder may prove his title to the property. Udha Pyar Debi v. Nobin Chundor Chowdry, 5 B. L. R., 708; 13 S. W. R., F. B., 80.

The word "issued" in the sentence, "no process of execution of any description whatever shall be issued," at the commencement of the 2nd Section of Act X of 1859, is to be interpreted to mean "sued out" or "applied for with success"; that is, no application for a process of execution shall be successful unless the application for it is made or it is sued out within the fixed time. (Bayley and Kemp, J.J., dissenting.) Khidey Krishna Ghose v. Koals Chundor Bose, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 82; 13 S. W. R., F. B., 3.

After A, a judgment-creditor, had attached property of his debtor under the decree, the Court, at the instance of the Collector of the district, ordered that, instead of selling the estate, a manager should be appointed, and the rents and profits applied in liquidation of the claim of A. and other decree-holders. Held that A. was entitled to some priority over the other creditors. The Court, finding that A.'s debt might be paid out of the proceeds of the estate in two years, and at the same time funds be left for the reduction of the other debts, ordered that it should be so.

Pearce Dabee v. Rajah Boydonath Baugh, Marsh., 413.

An application, under Section 230 of Act VIII of 1859, should be registered and numbered in the register of suits as a plaint in a regular suit, and the Court is bound to determine, upon regular issues as in an ordinary suit, both the right and title, as well as the possession of the applicant.

Where certain execution proceedings had been struck off the file, and the decree-holder applied that they might be restored, his petition containing not one of the particulars set forth in Section 207 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it was held that his application was not an application to execute the decree within the meaning of the Procedure Code.

Three persons obtained a joint-decree. Two of them took out execution, and realized each his own share. The third applied for execution within three years from the time of the last proceedings taken by the other two, but after a lapse of three years from the last proceedings taken jointly by all three. Held, that under Section 209, Act VIII of 1859, it is not essential that a certificate should in every instance be obtained by a representative before he can be allowed to apply for execution.

Raja Gopal Singh Deb v. Gopalchundra Chuckerbhuty and others, 7 W. R., 393.

An application for execution of a decree for possession, asking for the eviction of the defendant, is quite different from an application for possession under Section 224, Act VIII of 1859. Although the lower Court rightly refused to grant the former application,—Held that there were no grounds for refusing the latter application, except as to that part in which the decree-holder asked for an order to issue to the ryots to pay rent to him, which order would be beyond the purview of that Section.

Where the security offered by a judgment-debtor, with a view to execution against her being stayed, until the decision of a suit for an account which she had brought against the decree-holder was rejected by the lower Court, it was held that the order of rejection could not be interfered with by the High Court under Section 15 of the Charter Act. Held that the most obvious course in such a case is that suggested by the latter part of Section 209 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which directs that whenever a suit shall be pending in any Court against the holder of a decree of such Court by the party against whom the decree was passed, the Court may, if it appear just and reasonable, stay execution either absolutely or on such terms as it may think just, until a decree should be passed in the pending suit.

Jodoony Doness, 11 W. R., 494.

Section 208, Act VIII of 1859, puts a party to whom a decree is transferred, into the position of the original decree-holder, and entitles him to have the decree executed, as if application were made by the original decree-holder.

Shamanand Surma v. Sumboochundra Dass and others, 7 W. R., 205.

Procedure to be observed where, while execution of decree is going on against immovable property, the decree-holder alleged that he is obstructed in getting possession of certain lands included in the decree.

Brojo Mohun Sutputty v. Shooda Monee Dabee and others, 8 W. R., 79.

In a suit for possession and wasilat, the first Court awarded wasilat, but the lower Appellate Court, considering that no evidence had been given by the plaintiff of the wasilat which he was entitled to recover, allowed him up to date of suit only the amount which he had paid as Government revenue upon his mehal. Held that the Court executing the decree was not prevented from ascertaining the amount of wasilat which had accrued between the date of decree and the date of possession.

Sheikh Mahomed Bushroollah Chowdhry v. Hedaef Ali Chowdhry and others, 8 W. R., 42.

Held that the words used in Section 20, Act XIV of 1859, do not necessarily require that the proper warrants for execution of decree should issue against the person or property of the judgment-debtor. It is enough if the judgment-creditor has taken such steps to set the Court in motion as would indicate sufficiently on his part a desire to execute the decree, and if the Court has proceeded in accordance with his request, it is not necessary to prosecute them to a termination, but can be withdrawn when it appears useless.

Kullyan Singh and another v. Bahadur Singh and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 163.

After execution has once gone out under a decree of the High Court, subsequently appealed to Her Majesty in Council, it is beyond the power of the High Court, and not within the scope of Section 4, Regulation XXI of 1799, to set aside the execution.

Jyoyunnar Patter v. Russeck Mokun Banerjee, 8 W. R., 144.

Held that a question raised for the first time between the parties to a decree at the time of its execution, although not expressly reserved in that decree for determination at the time of its execution, may be enquired into and determined by the Court executing the decree under Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861.

Held that if a defendant who appears in a suit chooses not to raise the plea of want of jurisdiction, he must be taken to submit to the jurisdiction; and that any decree which may be pronounced against him cannot, when it is sought to be executed, be objected to by him, on the ground that the Court...

Where one of two defendants appeals against a decree, if the decree be joint and several, and the appeal imperils the whole decree, the time for execution will count from the date of the decision in appeal. Chedoow Lall v. Nund Coomar Lall and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 60.

Every Court is bound to execute its own decree, if it can, by process (when necessary) issued against the property or person of the judgment-debtor; it is held that, as it cannot be executed within the jurisdiction of the Court whose decree it is that it may be sent to another Court for execution. There is no intermediate procedure between these two executions. The Maharajah of Burdwan v. Sree Narain Mitter, 9 W. R., 346.

A judgment-creditor obtained a decree on the 31st August, 1859, and took out proceedings in the following order of time: First, on the 20th August, 1860, when an effectual notice was served on the judgment-debtor; secondly, on the 13th September, 1865, when a similar notice was served; and thirdly, on the 13th August, 1866, when application was made to arrest the person of the judgment-debtor: Held, that as the execution of the decree was barred by limitation when the application of the 13th September, 1865, was made, the last application, on the 13th August, 1866, was within the terms of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859, barred. Bisseshur Mullick v. Maharajah Mahabab Chunder Bakhadoor, 10 W. R., 8, F. B., 8.

An arrangement to pay by instalments came to since the passing of a decree, between the decree-holder and judgment-debtor recognized by the Court, and incorporated with the decree, may be enforced without the necessity for a new suit. Yankee v. Sreeramath Roy Chowdhry, 5 W. R., Mis., 19.

Where the holder of a decree for maintenance is opposed in execution by the heir of her judgment-debtor the questions arising between them cannot be determined in execution, but must be tried in a regular suit. Quere.—If the original judgment-debtor were alive, could the decree-holder enforce her claim for maintenance by execution, without a fresh suit for each instalment unpaid? Premoo Bibee v. Dasoo Debia, 10 W. R., 93.

In taking out execution, a decree-holder is not bound to produce his original decree or even a copy thereof. Ram Dhun Rukhtit v. Punchanan Chukratty, 10 W. R., 144.

Decree-holders seeking to obtain khas possession of property which is already in possession of a sub-burakar under order of Court, should apply for his removal to the Court which appointed him in the matter of the suit in which he was appointed. Hurris Chasto Doss and others v. Mutty Chand, 10 W. R., 444.

Where a party applies for execution and neglects to deposit tullubana, his neglect is evidence to be taken into consideration in deciding whether the application was merely colourable or for the bona fide purpose of enforcing the decree. Bharath Debia v. Koroonamoye Dossee, 10 W. R., 229.

In authorizing (Section 19, Act XI of 1865) immediate execution of a Small Cause Court decree, by the issue of a warrant, either against the person or against the moveable property of a judgment-debtor, the Legislature never intended that the debtor should be protected from arrest until he had had a reasonable time for returning home. G. A. DePenny v. Debendronath Moityer, 9 W. R., 549.

Held, by Loch J. (Mitter, J., dissenting) dismissing the appeal, that an order of Court restoring an execution case to the file is no guarantee of the bona fides of the decree-holder, and, if it be proceeded with no further, will be no better protection against limitation than the petition on which it is based. Raja Shutoo Churn Ghosal v. Bhurub Chunder Brohmo, 9 W. R., 565.

Where a decree had been obtained in a Zillah Court, and sent to Calcutta for execution, the Court made an order directing a notice to issue, calling on the defendant to show cause why the decree should not be executed by the High Court. On appeal the order was upheld. Ramdass v. Lallah Nundocoomar, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 189.

In executing a decree for mesne profits, a Court does right in excluding from the account lands of such a nature as would, under ordinary circumstances, yield no profit, regarding which it has been shown that the judgment-debtors had opportunities of disposing of them for a profit. Becharam Dass v. Brojonath Pat Chowdhy and others, 9 W. R., 369.

Proceedings held by the Revenue Courts in execution of their own decrees are final, and cannot be interfered with by the Civil Courts, unless on some special ground, like that of fraud. Bhoojungo Thakoor v. Luchme Narain Sahee and others, 9 W. R., 80.

Execution cases in which a sale or other proceedings are stayed for a fixed period at the request of the debtor, and with the consent of the decree-holder, should not be struck off till that period has expired; and if struck off for the convenience of the Court, by an order which provides for the continuance of the attachment, sale may follow within the said period without a fresh attachment. Chunmun Lall Chowdhy v. Domun Lall and others, 9 W. R., 205.

Execution under process of a Civil Court is not ipso facto legal, e.g., when taken against those who were not parties to the decree, or are distinctly exempted from the operation of the decree. Urmit Lall Bose v. Soorinbee Dasse, 2 W. R., Act X R., 86.

Where there has been a decree in favour of applicant for special possession of his wife, and application made for execution, the process under the ordinary sections will not be enforced. A mere misconstruction of a section of the Act which does not materially affect the case is no ground for appeal. Akharrally v. Hassain Ally, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 101; S. C., 5 W. R., Mis., 29.

The High Court should not, in the exercise of its extraordinary powers, give an appeal in a case where the law provides none.

Nor should the Court, in the exercise of those powers, interfere when such interference would have the effect of working an injustice.

A District Judge has power to review an order passed by him on appeal in an application in the execution of a decree. Narayanbhah Labhai v. Ganganikshara Ballerishna and another, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 87.
A District Judge having held that an application to execute a decree did not prevent the operation of Section 20 of Act XIV of 1859, it having been struck off because the application did not pay bat; the High Court reversed the order, and directed the Judge to determine whether the former application to execute the decree was bonâ fide, notwithstanding bat; was not paid. Dalni v. Lakshman Hari Patil, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 86.

Plaintiff owed defendant a judgment debt. He paid the debt, but not through the Court. Defendant then fraudulently applied to the Court to execute the decree, and the Court being debarrd by Section 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure from recognizing payments made otherwise than through it, executed the decree by making the plaintiff pay again the sum decreed. Plaintiff sued to recover the amount overpaid. Held by the majority of the Court (Scotland, S. J., and Innes, J., dissenting) that such a suit is not maintainable. Anuvellachell Pillai v. Appavu Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 188.

When a decree does not provide for the payment of interest, it is not competent to the Court executing the decree to add to it by giving interest. Kappa Ayyar v. Venkataramana Ayyar, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 421.

One of several judgment-debtors who purchases a decree against himself and his co-debtors cannot issue execution against his co-debtors, and recover from them the whole amount of the common debt. His only remedy is to sue them in a regular suit for contribution, and compel them to pay him their shares of the amount for which the decree was purchased.

An appeal under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, against the order for execution would not affect a purchaser at a sale under the execution. Sresopa Chunder Hajrah v. Trosylokhan Roy, 9 W. R., 230.

The decision of the Full Bench (10 W. R., 8, Full Bench Rulings), that a decree once barred is always barred for the reason that no proceedings in execution can be valid if instituted after three years from the date of the last proceeding, was held to apply in a case where the admissions of a judgment-debtor were pleaded in confirmation of the decree-holder's laches in executing his decree. Bhupati Lalit Tewarce v. Sookee Seckhar, 12 W. R., 255.

The Code of Civil Procedure gives no power, in an ordinary suit for damages, to direct the amount to be assessed in execution, as it does with regard to wasilat. Bheunck Singh and another v. Sugar Singh and another, 10 W. R., 299.

A summary order of an inferior Court for the execution of a decree may be conclusive as between the decree-holder who obtained it and those against whom it was made, but is not necessarily so against the latter as between themselves only. Such an order has not necessarily the same effect so far as contribution is concerned as if it were the original decree in the suit. Nund Coomer Singh v. Gungra Prishad, 3 W. R., 207.

In a case of execution of decree of 12 years' standing, the defendant is not bound to prove service of notice, but the Court may presume that notice has been regularly served, unless the party alleging irregularity can produce evidence to the contrary. Kasse Kant Talookdar v. Gopal Kisto Moilto, W. R., 1804, 314.

After the striking off of an execution case, the omission to re-issue the processes required by law on the admission of a third party as decree-holder is not a material irregularity in the case. Bishen Dyal Singh v. Sreemuth Khudemut, W. R., 1864, 359.

A suit may be brought by a decree-holder to obtain the assistance of the Court in the removal of an obstruction (e.g., setting aside fraudulent conveyances by the debtor) to the execution of his decree against his debtor's property. Takhurowdeen Mahomed Eshan Chowdry v. Kurinbut Chowdry, 3 W. R., 20.

Where a Deputy Collector executes a decree against a party holding another decree from his own Court he ought, instead of selling that other decree, to appoint a manager under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859 to realize the judgment-debt due thereon. Ramchunder Roy v. Ram Churn Bukshie, 9 W. R., 372.

The ruling of the High Court (6 W. R., 51) which lays it down that a Judge must execute his own decrees, refers entirely to execution under Act VIII of 1859, but not to proceedings before that year, when Judges were competent to refer cases of execution to the Principal Sudder Ameen. Nil Komul Ghose v. Nobin Chander Bose, 9 W. R., 463.

The splitting of the amount of a decree among the decree-holders, unless the judgment-debtor was a party to the arrangement, does not enable him to plead limitation against any one of the decree-holders who may have slept over his rights. As far as the debtor is concerned the decree continues a joint debt, for the whole amount of which he is liable to all the decree-holders. Brio Coomer Mullick v. Ram Buksh Chatterjee, 1 W. R., Mis., 1.

The Court executing a decree has no discretion to order the decree-holder to proceed first against one debtor, and afterwards (if his debt should remain unsatisfied) against the other debtors. Ram Coomer Chowdry v. Ram Mohun Chowdry, 5 W. R., Mis., 44.

When a case is transferred by the Court which passed the original decree to another Court in order that the decree may be executed, and the proceedings on the application for execution have been struck off the file for default, the proper Court to apply to for a fresh issue of execution is the Court which passed the original decree, and not the Court to which the case was transferred to be executed. Rajah Bhoop Singh Baha- door v. Sunkar Dutt Jha, 6 W. R., Mis., 47.

Zillah Courts ought to refer to the High Court parties applying for execution of decrees which have been appealed to England. Hubbeboolah Khan v. Khloy Gourier Aiy Khan and others, 7 W. R., 225.

The recovery back of money taken in execution of a decree which is afterwards reversed on appeal is not the subject of a new suit. The matter must be enquired into by the Court which passed the decree as a question arising between the parties relating to the execution of such decree.

The Zillah Court decreed a suit in plaintiff's favour. On appeal the High Court reversed the judgment, and remanded the case, making no order as to the costs of the appeal. Against such remand an appeal was preferred to Her Majesty in Council. The Zillah Court, however, proceeded with the case, and eventually dismissed the whole suit, and the defendant applied to execute the decree for his costs.

Held, that, in such circumstances, the High Court was not competent, under Section 4, Regulation XVI of 1797 (the last-mentioned decree not having been appealed to it), to suspend execution of decree, or to direct the taking of security. Qweroop Chunder Moorkerjee, petitioner, 6 W. R., M., 45.

A obtained a money-decree against B. declaring certain properties belonging to B. liable to be sold in satisfaction of it. Other decrees were subsequently obtained against B., in execution of one of which certain of these properties were sold (subject to the lien), and purchased by A. himself; and in execution of another, certain others were sold also (subject to the lien), and purchased by C. On A. proceeding to execute his own decree against B., C. sought to have it declared that satisfaction should be entered upon it to the extent of the value of the property purchased by A. Held that C. was not entitled to appear in the execution proceeding following upon a case to which he was not a party. Groota Bhosun Mittra v. Kiskhen Kishore Ghose, 6 W. R., 224.

If execution has once been duly issued against a person as representative of one who is deceased, this person cannot dispute his representative character on the occasion of any subsequent issue of execution against him as representative. Maharaj Dheraj Mahatab Chand Bahadoor v. Mussammam Peerce Dossee and others, 6 W. R., Misc., 611.

It is contrary to general principles and a senseless addition to all the vexations of delay in the course of procedure to hold that, when, for any reason, satisfactory or not, the execution of a final decree in a suit fails or is set aside, and the proceedings as regards that execution are taken off the file, the whole suit is discontinued thereby, and the further proceedings for the same purpose are to be considered as taken in a new suit. Rajah Moteek Narain Singh v. Khishramund Misser, 5 W. R., P. C., 7.

In a suit in which an appeal to the Privy Council from a decree of the High Court has been admitted and is still pending, the Court of original jurisdiction which made the decree first appealed from has power to issue execution. But such Court, if it has notice of the appeal to the Privy Council, should stay its hand until the parties have had an opportunity of applying to the High Court, under Section 4, Regulation XVI of 1797. J. P. Wise v. Raj Kishen Roy and others, 6 W. R., Misc., 84.

An intimation to the Court of a contemplated satisfaction of the decree by arbitration, on which intimation the execution case was removed from the file, would not preclude the decree-holder from suing out execution again, unless it be proved on enquiry that the result of the private arbitration was a satisfaction of the decree in the mode contemplated by the parties. Choonee Lall v. Doorga Pershad, 3 Aga Rep., 252.

The striking off of a case from the file, while pending in execution, does not release a property from attachment. Sheikh Golam Aabeya v. Musateem Sama Sundari Khuari, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 134; S. C., 12 W. R., 142.

A decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Moorshedabad was sent to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Rajshahye for execution, and certain property was attached in that district. A claimant of the attached property then obtained from the former Court an order on the second Court to send the record back again to Moorshedabad, for the purpose of executing the decree there, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had property in that district, and also on the allegation, unsupported by oath, that the property sought to be attached in Rajshahye was his. Held that the Subordinate Judge of Moorshedabad had acted without jurisdiction, and the record must be sent back to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Rajshahye for execution.

Held also that the claimant had no locus standi in the Moorshedabad Court to make such application. In the matter of Indra Chand Dugar v. Govap Chundra Chetia, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 161; S. C., 11 W. R., 557.

Where there were cross-decrees, and one of the decree-holders was, by an order of the Court, made with the consent of both parties, bound in executing his decree to set-off the amount of the decree against him,—Held that it would be inequitable to allow the other decree-holder to obtain execution in full, without setting-off the amount decreed against him. A decree cannot be executed, nor can it be seized and sold, in portions. Haro Sanker Sandyal v. Tarak Chundra Bhuttacharjee, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 114; S. C., 11 W. R., 488.

Held by Peacock, C. J., that even although a Judge may have a discretion, under the Code of Civil Procedure, as to issuing warrants for the execution of decrees, the fact that the decree-holder has not used the utmost possible diligence in executing a previous warrant is not a sufficient ground why a fresh warrant should be refused. Kalee Chunder Paul v. Thakoor Doss Biraun, 12 W. R., A. O., 7.

Where, under colour of a decree in course of execution, the decree-holder gets possession of land not included in the decree, otherwise than through the officer of the Court, this possession and the question relating to it are separate from the questions relating to the execution of the decree, and may be made the subject of a separate suit. Surut Soonduree Dahee v. Pirsh Narain Roy, 12 W. R., 85.

In 1827 S. commenced a suit against B., and, before judgment applied for and obtained, under Regulation II of 1806, an attachment of certain immoveable property belonging to the defendant. In 1828 S. obtained a decree, upon which he did nothing immediately; but in 1844 he sold the attached property in execution, and purchased it himself. Thirteen years after B. commenced proceedings to set aside that sale, and in 1860 obtained a final decree reversing the sale, restoring to him the possession, and awarding him mesne profits. The mesne profits were ascertained, and a third party (R.) attached the decree in respect of a judgment debt due to himself from B. Upon this S., after trying ineffectually to stay R.'s proceeding, brought a suit claiming to set-off the amount of the decree of 1828 against the decree of 1860. Held that whatever equitable right S. might have in consequence of the situation of the parties, it should have been urged in the suit before decree, and not in execution when rights of third parties had accrued, and that what R. sought was not the mesne profits attached by S. under the decree of 1828, but the amount decreed to be paid by S. to B. Ram Coomar Ghose v. Gobind Nath Sandyal and others, 12 W. R., 391.

The object of Section 3, Act III of 1870, B. C., is that a person against whom a decree is passed shall not be harassed by two sets of proceedings in execution simultaneously carried on in two different Courts. Mudden Mohun Biswas v. Puddo Monee Dassee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 139.

A claim for damages for injury to certain goods belonging to plaintiff, but attached by the defendant in execution of a decree held by him against the plaintiff, arising out of the alleged negligence of the defendant, is a matter which should be determined by a separate suit, and not by the Court executing the decree under which the goods are attached. Luchman Dass v. Hura Lal, 3 N. W. R., 187.

The Judge's order directing a precept to be sent to the Subordinate Judge, upon which precept the latter stayed execution of the decree, was set aside as made without authority; and the Subordinate Judge was reminded that a person against whom a decree is passed shall not be harassed by two sets of proceedings in execution—McDowall v. McHugh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 341.

A Judge is not bound, under Section 243, Act VIII of 1859, to allow a judgment-debtor a year's time to pay his decree, without the debtor assigning some good or sufficient reason for the delay, e.g., that the money due to the judgment-creditor could be raised equally well in some other way than by immediate sale, and that the creditor would not by immediate sale be likely to get any part of the debt. B. Ram Coomar Ghose v. Gobind Nath Sandyal, 12 W. R., 391.

A party who had obtained a farming lease for a period of years on the understanding that he was to receive his portion at a time fixed, was not entitled to recover the whole sum due. Issur Chunder Sen v. Kinaram Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 463.

Sums paid in execution in excess of what was due, must be refunded, and not by a separate suit. Kusku Kishore Roy v. Kishen Chunder Sandyal, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 160.

Where a decree-holder pays into Court sums of money for the purpose of issuing notices of attach-

A judgment-debtor executed two kistbundees in favour of parties interested in the decree, making provision for the payment of certain instalments on these terms, that if one of the kists fell due the party to whom it was to be given might claim the whole amount with interest, and realize it in execution of the decree. Held that the decree was not satisfied by the taking of the kistbundee, and that the payments made in pursuance of the kistbundee were made towards satisfaction of the decree, and the remedy of the decree-holder under the decree continued although he agreed, so long as he received the instalments under the kistbundee, not to execute the decree. Bishto Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Woomeesnauth Roy Chowdroy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 459.

While a special appeal was pending the decree-holder took out execution, and realized a sum in execution when rights of third parties had accrued, and asked for execution of his decree is entitled to the whole sum due. Held that the decree substituted another means of recovery for the one previously given, and if he chose to recover the greater part of his due under a decree, which in the place of his farming lease gave him power to sell the property leased to him, he could not retain his former status as well. Issur Chunder Sen v. Kinaram Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 463.

When money has been taken in execution of a decree which is subsequently reversed or modified, no fresh suit will lie for its recovery; the matter must be enquired into by the Court which passed the decree as a question arising between the parties relating to the execution of such decree. Saligram Sing v. Gobind Sahai, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 64.

In execution of a decree, seven out of nine judgment-debtors, with the consent of the decree-holder, filed an instalment-bond, agreeing to pay the amount of the decree with interest thereon in two instalments. The decree-holder neglected to take proceedings to keep alive the decree, and his application to execute the decree was disallowed. In a suit brought by the decree-holder against the persons who had executed the instalment-bond for the amount of principal and interest due thereon,—Held that the suit was maintainable. Ashiiahari Chowdry v. Jageshur Kumar, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 32, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 430.

B. sued his brother C. for possession of certain lands. B. and C. came to an amicable settlement, one of the terms of which was that C. during his life should retain possession of certain of the lands, and that after his death they should pass to B. A decree was given in accordance with the terms of the compromise. On C.'s death, his widow refused to put B. in possession of the lands. B. sought to obtain possession of the lands, with mesne profits, by executing the decree under the compromise against C.'s widow. Held that he ought to proceed by regular suit. Tara Muni Dasi v. Rudha Jiban Mustaph, 6 B. L. R., Ap. 142; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 485.

Where a judgment-debtor, under pressure of a process of arrest, deposited in Court the money claimed by the judgment-creditor, making at the time but one objection, he was held not to have been thereby debarr'd from making any other objection previous to the money being paid away to the decree-holder; payment into Court, under such pressure, in no way affecting the right of the parties. Prasunonath Mukerjia v. Binode Ram Stein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 29.

Where a plaintiff sued defendant as a trespasser, in possession of the land, and two other persons who resisted the execution of the decree, the question of possession of the defendant, and as to the latter, according to Section 224. Ranee Sama Soondery Debea v. Jardine, Skinner and Co., 7 W. R., 376.

Where plaintiff sued defendant as a trespasser, the prayer in the plaint being for khas possession, and the defendant set up an adverse title, the decree given against the latter for possession was held to give the judgment-creditor the possession sued for,—i.e., legal possession as provided by Section 223, Act VIII of 1859. Raj Mungul Roy v. Sreemutty Anindimoyee, 11 W. R., 63.

A person who has obtained symbolical possession under Section 224 of Act VIII of 1859, may subsequently ask for actual possession under Section 223, if the terms of his decree warrant such possession being given. J. Robson and Co. v. Maseyk, 3 W. R., Mis., 2.

Where a decree-holder who had received possession under Section 224 of Code of Civil Procedure, and gave the usual acknowledgment, was refused khas possession of part of the land which defendants claimed to hold as ryots, it was held that his proper course was an application under Section 223, although the case had been struck off the execution file, and that defendants' allegation of purchase (their sole plea at the trial) having failed, they could not afterwards set up a ryotee title. Ranee Muhoton v. Gopale Bhuggat, 12 W. R., 282.

Where a suit was preferred for the purpose of recovering possession of defendants' lands, for possession of which plaintiff had already obtained a decree against the same defendants and others, the suit was held to be barred, as the cause of action was not different from that which had been previously determined. Instead of asking for delivery of possession under Section 224, plaintiff's proper course would have been a resort to the provisions of Section 223 of the Procedure Code. Rum Sur Moonsoon and others v. Jinnonath Bhuggat and others, 10 W. R., 396.

Where compliance with the formalities prescribed by Section 224, Act VIII of 1859, and a legal receipt for possession, are found as facts, they give such a right under a Civil Court's decree as will prevail over one founded on mere actual receipt of rent. Kheteronath Roy v. Durbash Moonshier, 9 W. R., 358.

A proclamation of 30 days is necessary when the property is first advertised for sale, not when the sale is postponed for the convenience of the debtor. Section 225 relates to a re-sale, and not to a postponed sale. Budree Nath Shutt v. Rajah Chunder Shekur Man Singh, Sree Chunder Moradraj Boimaray Roy Bahadoor, 1 W. R., Mis., 3.

On a complaint by a decree-holder, under Section 226 of the Civil Procedure Code, against a mortgagee in possession of the land, and two other persons who resisted the execution of the decree, the Mooniff passed an order for delivery of possession, but without having numbered and registered the claim as a suit, as directed by Section 229 of the Code, which, in his opinion, did not apply to the... claim of a mortgagee in possession; and the senior Assistant Judge, though of opinion that the Moonsiff was in error in not proceeding under Section 229, ruled that there was no appeal from his order, as the claim had not been numbered and registered, and investigated.

Held that the irregular procedure of the Moonsiff should not prevent the Court from correcting his error; and that his order, which could only have been made under Section 229, was subject to appeal under Section 231, and should therefore be reversed, and the case remanded, that the claim might be numbered and registered as a suit, and an order passed thereon after the investigation, as directed by Section 229 of the Code. Musabhi v. Shranudin Hismuddin and others, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 35.

In the event of execution of decree being obstructed, it is optional for the decree-holder to take action under Section 226, Act VIII of 1859, but it is not imperative on him to do so, and the omission to take it would not preclude the decree-holder from bringing a fresh suit for recovery of possession against the same person against whom the decree was passed, if he was ousted after his formal institution in possession of the right then adjudged to him.

A suit should not be dismissed at the last stage of the proceedings in regular appeal for want of sufficient distinctness in the plaint, but such defect may be cured by examining the plaint or his pleader on that point. Jugmohan Travee v. Needle Maich and others, 3 Agra Rep., 162.

Where the order of remand directs the lower Court to ascertain from the settlement chittahs the situation of the lands in dispute, and the chittahs were found not to give the expected information,—Held that the Judge should, when the Ameen’s investigation was objected to, have proceeded under Sections 226 and 227 of Act VIII of 1859, and allowed both parties to adduce proofs of their claims. Shadtoo Surun v. Bhusoo Lall, 12 W. R., 98.

In order to bring a case under Sections 226 and 227 of the Civil Code, it must be shown that obstruction has been offered, arising from the circumstance that lands have been taken which were not included in the plaint. Pranath Roy Chowdry v. Prenath Roy Chowdry, 8 W. R., 398.

The procedure prescribed by Section 229 is applicable to a case in which, though the decree was passed before the enactment of that law, execution was taken out after its coming into operation. Under that Section a bond-fide claimant other than the defendant, obstructing the execution of the decree, instead of being looked upon as an intervener, must be regarded as one of the substantial parties to the suit. Makarajah Dhraj Mahatabchand Bahadoo v. Naddooronissa Bebee, 4 W. R., 82.

The provisions of Section 231 are not applicable when the proceedings are not conducted according to the provisions of Section 229 of the Procedure Code. Chugjo v. Doong Doss and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 223.

Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, does not authorize the registry as a suit of objections by defendants or purchasers from defendants dispossessed of immoveable property in execution of a decree, and disputing the right of the decree-holder to be put into possession of such property. Huro Persand Roy Cannoongee v. Ram Lockun Mundul and others, 6 W. R., 148.

The first Court gave a decree to the plaintiff for possession of land against A., the original defendant in the suit, but exempted land in the possession of B., an intervenor whom the Court had made a co-defendant. The Appellate Court reversed so much of that decree as adjudicated on the claim of the plaintiff and B., and confined its decree for possession against A., but awarded costs against B. Held that B. continued to be a defendant in the suit, and that he was not bound to come in under Section 11, Act X of 1861, and that he was not bound to come in under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859. Hurree Kishore Roy and others v. Kalee Kishore Sein and others, 8 W. R., 114.

Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, is applicable to a case in which the defendant in the original suit, was legally other than the defendant as regards the particular portion of land in dispute in execution.

Where an Ameen was appointed to measure and give possession of land in execution of a decree, the one month allowed for preferring a claim under that Section must be calculated from the date when the Ameen gave over possession, and not from the date of his final report. Kaheenath Doss v. Bhowanee Dosser, W. R., 1864, Mis., 18.

To entitle a party to come in under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, by petition, and have his case tried in like manner as if he had paid full duty on a regular plaint, he must prove that he was in possession of the land in suit, and was dispossessed by another party, alleging the land to form part of land decreed to him. Nool Madhub Dutt v. Radha Mohun, 3 W. R., 205.

In a case under Section 230, the plaintiff (i.e., the person dispossessed of immoveable property who disputes the right of the decree-holder to be put into possession of such property) must not only show possession, but the question of title should also be enquired into. Nungudur Chunder Ghose v. Ram Comut Mundul, 3 W. R., 213.

An objector who does not claim to be in possession “on his own account, or on account of some person other than the defendant,” but whose sole ground of intervention is that he holds a bond-fide title derived from the defendant, is not entitled to be heard under Section 230. Eusuf Ali Khan v. Shib Shunkur Shuhaye: Kurin Bushk v. Shib Shunker Shuhay, W. R., 1864, 384.

Where an objection takes the form of a suit, under Section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the real question to be tried is, whether the objector has a better right to the property in dispute than the decree-holder. Mussumatt Sheru Coomaree Dabe v. Keshur Chunder Bose, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 188.

Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, does not refer to decrees obtained in possessory actions, but to executions in regular suits where judgments have been pronounced on the merits, and cannot be introduced into a case determined under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859. Gobind Chandra Bagdee v. Gobind Ghosh Mundul, 3 W. R., 171.

Four persons made separate applications to the Court, under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, alleging that the defendant having obtained a decree against Government for possession of fisheries in a suit to which they were no parties, had in execution dispossessed them of fisheries, of which they were severally in possession. On enquiry it appeared that each and several of the four applicants claimed possession of the same portions of the fisheries. The lower Court holding that it was impossible for each of several parties setting up adverse claims to the same property to show that it had been bond-fide in his possession and that he had been dispossessed from it, referred all parties to a regular suit, —Held that the Judge should have tried each case by itself as between the applicant and the decree-holder. Saradamayi Chowdhrian v. Nobin Chundra Roy Chowdhy, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 333; 11 W. R., 255.

D. having sued to recover possession of certain lands, P. intervened, and D.'s claim was decreed without prejudice to P.'s rights. In execution of that decree D. took possession, and thereupon P. applied to be heard under the provisions of Section 230, Act VIII of 1859. Held that having been a party to the decree, P. had no remedy under that law. Ramee Chowrani v. Chuckerbutty v. Poonochunder Banerjee, 12 W. R., 475.

Where, in an application professedly under the provisions of Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, plaintiff affirmed that he was in possession and sued to have his rights affirmed,—Held that as plaintiff was not dispossessed he had no cause of action, and that he was not entitled to be heard; nor had the Court jurisdiction to hear and determine his cause under the extraordinary provisions of that Section. Kale Narain Singh v. Protpachunder Burooah, 12 W. R., 231.

A party dispossessed of land under colour of a decree to which he was not a party, applying to a Judge under the provisions of Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, is entitled to an investigation, and, if his title is established, to a decree. Hassau Aly v. Naib Ahmed and another, 11 W. R., 146.

A decree-holder in execution having got possession of certain property, application was made for an investigation under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859. The Moonsiff, without going into evidence, rejected the application, and the Judge, in the same manner, reversed the Moonsiff's judgment and gave the applicant possession. Held that the question still remained for decision, whether the property was bond-fide in the possession of the applicant on his own account or on account of some person other than the defendant. Woomesh Chunder Roy v. Bidkoo Mookhee Dassee and others, 11 W. R., 197.

Where a decree-holder sought to execute his decree against an under-tenant which had been sold for arrears of rent, and the purchaser objected on the plea of limitation,—Held that the purchaser being no party to the suit, was not entitled to contend that execution was barred. He could only be heard under Section 229 or Section 230, Act VIII of 1859; and if under the former, a very wide discretion could be exercised by the Court. Moheshchunder Banerjee v. Chundra Money Debut, 9 W. R., 326.

Whether or not an appeal lies from the decision of a lower Court rejecting an application by a party other than a defendant, under Section 230, Act VIII of 1856, disputing the right of the decree-holder to dispossess him, the High Court may, under the 15th Section of the Charter, compel the lower Court to exercise its jurisdiction. Golucknarain Dutt v. Bistooyna Dassee, referred to and questioned.

Planting a bamboo, and making proclamation to the occupants of an estate that it has been adjudged to some other, is sufficient dispossess of a landlord to warrant him in applying to the Court under Section 230. The Collector of Bogra v. Krishna Indra Roy, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 501; S. C., 11 S. W. R., 191.

There is no appeal from an order passed under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, rejecting an application by a person, not a party to the suit, alleging that he is being dispossessed by the Court Ameen in execution of decree. Kellutt Chunder Ghose v. Prosunnomooye Dossee, W. R., 1864, Mis., 24.

Where a lower Appellate Court found that a suit falling substantially under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, which had been received and numbered as such, had been subsequently dismissed by the Court of first instance upon a point which did not properly arise under that section,—Held that it should have remanded the case to the first Court for trial and decision under that section. Sahir Khan v. Ram Luchkee Chowdhrian, 10 W. R., 438.

Where an application was made to the Civil Court, alleging that execution was barred. He could only be heard under Section 229 or Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, if brought within twelve years from date of cause of action. Kishen Soondar Talookdar v. Fukeroodeen Mahomed, W. R., 1864, 61.

There is no discretion allowed to a Civil Court to extend the month allowed for applications under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, even though the Court is closed, or the Judge absent, the whole of that period. Dewan Ali v. Munsoor Aly and another, 11 W. R., 259.

Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, only gives an applicant the right, without instituting a separate suit, of contesting the decree-holder's right to dispossess him, but does not exempt the applicant from the onus of proving his case. Mahomed Awur and others v. Prohash Chunder Shra and others, 8 W. R., 8.

Where an application was made to the Civil Court, under Section 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, by the petitioner disputing the right of a decree-holder to dispossess him of certain immovable property and the Civil Judge rejected the application.—Held that Section 231 of the Civil Procedure Code did not give the petitioner a right of appeal to the High Court. Strinamasimmu Charyur v. Narusimmu Charyur, 5 Mad. Rep., 183.

Where an application, under Section 230 Code of Civil Procedure, has been registered as a suit, the Court is bound to investigate it as an ordinary regular suit, and to try not only the question of possession, but also that of title, and its decision will be final and complete for both purposes. Mussumut Ekan Khatoon v. Ramnath Sin Lushkur, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 327.

When an application is made by a party on the ground that he was in possession and that he has been dispossessed in execution of a decree in a suit in which he was not a party, the proper order to be made under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, is in the first instance to examine the applicant. Obhoy Chunder Roy v. Rajendraooomar Ghose, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 288.

_Held_ that the principle of the Full Bench ruling, that a suit under Section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be treated as an ordinary suit for the recovery of property, and that the whole question of title between the parties ought to be gone into, is equally applicable to a case under Section 230. Meer Aboo Sobhan v. Brahma Deo Narain, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 140.

A. and B. obtained a decree against their father, C., for possession of their share of ancestral property. In execution they dispossessed D., who held under a mortgage from C. On an application, under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859.—Held, upon proof of such holding, the Court ought to have gone into the question of the validity of the mortgage against A. and B. Jadunath Singh v. Kaliprasad, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 55; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 358.

_Held_ that the Judge need not have gone into the question as to whether the petitioner was entitled to relief under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, when the parties were agreed that the defendant had dispossessed the plaintiff under colour and in execution of a decree which he had obtained; it being immaterial whether that dispossesation was affected by a Court officer or not, and whether the land in question was comprised in the decree or not. Jadoo Kapalu v. Issurchoo Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 375.

Where a party complains, under Section 230, Civil Procedure Code, of having been dispossessed in execution of a decree to which he was not a party, and there are reasonable grounds for thinking that his claim is bond fide, it is the duty of the Court to treat the case as a regular suit between the claimant as plaintiff, and the decree-holder and judgment-debtor as defendants. Luleet Narain Gossamee v. Keshub Deb Gossamee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 209.

Possession by receipt and enjoyment of rent is as good as law as actual occupation, and Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, is not restricted to cases of personal occupation. Bhuryub Sircar v. Sham Manjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 70.

In order to a legal possession being given under Section 224, Act VIII of 1859, is it essential that all the requirements of that Section be carried out. Court of Wards v. Burra Lall Opendronath Deo, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

_(g) Execution by Court other than that by which Decree was Passed._

On April 5th, 1857, some property of a judgment-debtor was sold in satisfaction of a decree. On December 31st, 1861, an application was made to execute, and notice was then upon served on the judgment-debtor, but, nothing further having been done, the execution was struck off. On March 23rd, application was made for the transmission of the decree under Section 284, Act VIII of 1859, to a different District (Dinagepore), and the decree was transmitted without any notice to the judgment-debtor. The Court of Dinagepore then ordered the notice to be sent, but the decree-holder failing to deposit tullubana, it was not served, and the proceedings were struck off the file. On March 25th, 1867, another application was made to the Dinagepore Court, upon which the judgment-debtor appearing in both Courts pleaded limitation. The Judge of Dinagepore allowed the objection. The Judge of the other Court (Beerbhoom) would not allow it.

_Held_ that the Court of Dinagepore had no jurisdiction in the matter, having once struck the case off the file, and no fresh reference having been made to it by the other Court.

_Held_ that the Court of Beerbhoom had no authority to determine the question of limitation, as the proceedings were not before it at the time. Brendro Naran Roy v. Benode Ram Sen and others, 11 W. R., 269.

Where a decree of the High Court is transmitted to a Judge for execution under Section 284, Act VIII of 1859, and the judgment-debtor contends that the balance due on the decree is less than that for which execution is sought, the Judge has no jurisdiction to enquire into the question, but may, on cause shown under Section 290, stay execution, pending a reference to the High Court. Kishchun Jander Paul Chowdhry v. Khelat Chunder Ghose, 9 W. R., 361.

Where a case is decreed in one district, and property is attached and sold in execution in another district, without application made by the decree-holder to the Court of the latter district, and without the certificate and other papers being obtained from the former district, as laid down in Sections 284 and 285, Act VIII of 1859, the proceedings must be held to be without jurisdiction. But (held by Jackson, J.) where the certificate alluded to in Section 284 was sent, whether asked for or not, the execution proceedings are legal, even though the process of attachment was issued by the Court, instead of (as it should have been) on the direct application of the decree-holder.

_Held_ (by Jackson, J.) that a particular form being prescribed in law for a certificate, under Section 284, if it contains all the information which it should contain, it is a good certificate, even though wanting in precision. Mooktakshi Dabea v. Lachneyat Singh Doogar and others, 10 W. R., 14.

CIVIL PROCEDURE—EXECUTION OF JOINT DECREES. 125

Court to which the decree is transmitted has jurisdiction to determine whether or not execution of the decree is barred under Act XIV of 1859. T. Leake v. W. Daniel, 10 W. R., F. B., 10.

Where a decree of one Court has been transmitted to another for execution under Section 284 of Act VIII of 1859, the latter Court has jurisdiction to entertain an application to cancel its own order for striking off the case, whatever "striking off" amounts to. J. G. Bagram v. J. P. Wise, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 91; 18 W. R., F. B., 46.

The attachment of immovable property by a Court other than that which passed the decree before the decree had been sent to it for execution, vitiates the sale subsequently made of that property, as not being made in strict observance of the procedure prescribed by Section 285 of Act VIII of 1859. Shurutollah Merdha v. Gooroo Churn Doss, 8 W. R., 310.

A decree-holder applied to the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen at Kishnagore, under Section 285 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that a copy of a decree with a certificate should be sent to the Court at Burdwan, to enable him to apply to the latter Court for execution. The Court at Kishnagore did nothing until it was removed to Santipore, where, after proclamation, the case was struck off.

Held that the law did not require the decree-holder, after the application had been made, to take any further steps in the Court at Kishnagore, nor could his application be considered as not bona fide because that Court neglected to do its duty. Kripa Moyee Dosseeand others v. Poorun Chunder Roy and others, 11 W. R., 403.

The transmission by the Court of one district to the Court of another of a copy of its decree, and a certificate under the provisions of Sections 285 and 286 of Act VIII of 1859, with a view to execution in that other district, is a "proceeding" within the meaning of Section 20, Act XIV of 1859, William Francis Leake v. William Daniell, 10 W. R., 337.

When attachment is sought of property situated out of the jurisdiction of the Court to which the application is made, the Principal Sudder Ameen should proceed in the manner prescribed by Section 285 of Act VIII of 1859, and base the petition to apply to the Court within whose jurisdiction the property is situated for execution in due form. Bawun Doss Mookerjee v. C. S. Hogg, 2 W. R., Mis., 56.

A Principal Sudder Ameen is competent, under Section 296, Act VIII of 1859, to allow the stay of execution of a decree of the High Court on its original side, for a sufficient time to enable the judgment-debtor to make his application to the High Court for a new trial, on the ground that the decree had been obtained ex parte without his knowledge. Miroonjooy Chuckerbutty v. John Cohran, 8 W. R., 202.

A decree wrongly drawn up must be corrected by the Court passing it. Indur Chunder Dogur v. Gopal Chand Satia, 11 W. R., 230.

A joint-decree can be executed against any of the debtors whom the decree-holder may select. Krishto Kishore Chuckerbutty v. Ram Lockun Burdhun, 2 W. R., Mis., 49.

One out of several decree-holders cannot execute a decree in respect of his own separate interest, or otherwise than the decree as a whole. In this case, however, the decree-holder was allowed to amend his application to execute the decree for his own share, and to convert it into an application to execute the whole decree. Jadunath Roy and others v. Ram Buksh Chittagongee and others, 7 W. R., 535.

A judgment-debtor cannot object to the share which one or more decree-holders may claim. Maharajah Sutesh Chunder Roy v. Saroda Pershad Mookerjee, 5 W. R., Mis., 58.

A joint-decree was passed against two debtors.
On the application of one of them, execution was ordered to be taken out against the other only. The decree not being satisfied, the creditor applied for and obtained an order for attaching the property of both. Held that, as the property of the one was not shown to be sufficient to cover the amount of the decree, the creditor was entitled, notwithstanding the previous order, to attach the property of the other debtor, the property of the former being sold first. Mustis Pursh Mone v. Kisoree Misser, 1 W. R., Mis., 14.

Though one of two or more decree-holders may, with the permission of the Court, take out execution of a joint-decree under Section 207, the execution must be for the whole decree, and not for any fractional share to which the decree-holder may consider himself entitled, the Court making such orders as may be necessary for protecting the interests of other decree-holders. Thakoor Doss Singh v. Luchmeput Doogur, 7 W. R., 10.

A joint decree is sufficient to keep the decree alive in its entirety, and a partial execution by one or more decree-holders operates for the benefit of all parties interested in the decree. Neet Lall and another v. A. B. Miller, 11 W. R., 421.

A Joint decree the execution creditor is at liberty to proceed against all or any of his judgment-debtors as he may choose. If a landlord and his gomastah are declared jointly liable, the decree-holder is not wrong in law in proceeding against the gomastah in the first instance. Srerath Ghose v. Sake Ram, 12 W. R., 305.

Where one or several holders of the same decree wishes to take out execution, his proper course is to apply under Section 207, Act VIII of 1859, to execute the whole decree, and the Court, if it sees sufficient cause, may admit the application, passing such order as may be necessary for protecting the interests of the other decree-holders. Indro Coonar Doss v. Mohina Mohun Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 159.

An appeal was inadvertently decreed against four shareholders instead of against five, the Court which executed the decree was held to have erred in recovering the entire amount decreed out of the shares of the four. Hills, J. v. Wooma Meyer Burmena, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 545.

The fact of a decree-holder giving a release to one or more of the judgment-debtors who were jointly and severally liable, cannot prevent his proceeding against the others for the balance due. Shoo Churn Lall v. Runn Surun Saha, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 49.

On the application made to the Privy Council, an order was made to the effect that the decree not be executed in part, and that the decree be obtained in its entirety. However, it was not shown that the decree would benefit the other debenture holders first.

Mr. W. R. M.

Though the question of the joint execution of the decrees is of importance, the question of the respective interests of the parties is of greater importance. In the case of Singh v. v. Pyari Ap., 43, it was held that the decree for the benefit of the plaintiff should not be executed for the benefit of the defendant.

Where the parties wish to apply to the court for the execution of a joint decree, it is necessary to prove that the execution of the decree is necessary to protect the interests of the parties. In the case of Doss v. v. Pyari, 45, it was held that the execution of the decree was necessary to protect the interests of the parties.

Where the court has erred in the decree, it is necessary to apply to the court for the execution of a joint decree. In the case of Moyee v. v. Pyari, 15, it was held that the court had erred in the decree, and that the execution of the decree was necessary to protect the interests of the parties.

The parties have erred in the execution of the decree, and it is necessary to apply to the court for the execution of a joint decree. In the case of Sheo C. v. v. Pyari, 41, it was held that the court had erred in the decree, and that the execution of the decree was necessary to protect the interests of the parties.
A judgment-debtor, who had been permitted to retain possession of disputed property pending an appeal to England, on furnishing security for mesne profits and costs, deceased, and the widow offered her life-interest in his estate as security. Held that as her interest was only temporary, it could not be accepted as competent security; and that as she was under no legal necessity to carry on that as her interest was only temporary, it could not bind her life-interest in his estate as security. Held that she was under no legal necessity to carry on that as her interest was only temporary, it could not bind her life-interest in his estate as security. Held that any sum in excess of the amount for which security is given. Mussamut Molka v. Mussamut Sumput Koonwar, 6 W. R., Mis., 62.

(k) Stay of Execution.

According to Section 338, Act VIII of 1859, the non-expiry of the period of appeal is not sufficient reason for staying execution of a decree. The Deputy Collector of the Sonthal Pergunnahs v. Binode Ram Sein, 5 W. R., Mis., 53.

A party wishing to stay execution, under Section 338, Act VIII of 1859, of a money-decree, is bound to show sufficient grounds to the Court for staying it, and the rule is equally applicable to decrees for immoveable properties and to other decrees.

When an order is made for the execution of a decree against which an appeal has been preferred, the Court, under Section 36, Act XXIII of 1861, may, if it thinks fit, require security to be given. In the matter of Ranee Ismaid Kooer, 9 W. R., 448.

The granting of a judgment-debtor the indulgence of a temporary stay of the warrant of execution issued to enforce his decree, does not prejudice his right to execution at a subsequent time. Butcher, M. v. Rayuddy, 5 Mad. Rep., 285.

A party who has applied to the Privy Council for execution, may, if it thinks fit, require security to be given. Dwarkanath Roy v. Woomaasanduree Dassee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 329.

A decree-debtor, who has appealed to the Privy Council from another decree against himself, if the holder of the decree which is appealed against attempts to execute it. Dwarkanath Roy v. Woomaasanduree Dassee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 329.

The Court declined to stay the execution of a decree (1) because the applicant has not shown, as he was bound to show, something beyond the mere fact of an appeal having been preferred against it, and (2) because there seemed to have been great delay on his part. Leslie v. Land Mortgage Bank of India, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 160.

Execution will be stayed only on security being given. Sagore Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Sheebonnet, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 103.

The Court will not interfere to stay execution upon the application of a person not a party to the suit, who claims immoveable property liable to be taken under the decree. The remedy of such a person is under Section 230 of Act VII of 1859.

When an appellant to the Privy Council applies to the High Court to stay execution of the decree on giving security, and action is taken by the Court on such application, a Principal Sudder Ameen has no authority, without the direction of the High Court, to make an order on an application to execute the decree, though the judgment-debtor should have failed to give security. Debee Pershad v. Umurth Nath Chowdhry and others, 8 W. R., 275.

The mere issue of notice in execution does not necessarily suffice. If the notice is not served, or if endeavours had not been made to serve it, that would indicate mala fides on the part of the decree-holder, and enable the judgment-debtor to plead that no bond-fide proceedings had been taken within three years so as to bar the execution. Kisto Kant Bural v. Nistarince Debia and others, 8 W. R., 268.

The attachment of property in execution of a decree, although attachment is afterwards set aside, is a sufficient issuing of process or execution within the meaning of Section 21, Act XIV of 1859. Kalee Pershad Singh v. Jankee Deo Narain, 7 W. R., 9.

A decree-holder took out against the moveable property of his judgment-debtor execution of a decree passed in December, 1859, in a suit for damages on account of illegal distraint and sale, instituted before Act X of 1859 came into operation. His decree remaining still unsatisfied, he sued in the Civil Court for a declaratory decree against the immoveable property of his judgment-debtor. Held that the plaintiff's remedy, if his claim was not barred by limitation, was, under Section 109 of Act X of 1859, to apply to the Collector for execution against the immoveable property of his judgment-debtor. Jadub Paul Potedar v. Radha Lal Chatterjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 67.

A decree-holder having sold a portion of his debtor's property, his case in execution was stricken off the file on the 27th July, 1865. On 9th September he again applied for execution, and was told to file a list of his debtor's property. This he did not do; but on 21st September he filed a petition, alleging that he had received two small sums from persons owing money to his judgment-debtor. On the 31st October the case was struck off the file. On the 21st August, 1868, he again applied for execution. The lower Court holding that the realizations made in September, 1865, were not made through the Court, and therefore not in execution, declared further execution barred by limitation.—Held, on appeal, by the High Court, that it was material to enquire whether the petition of 9th September, 1865, was bond-fide presented with intention to proceed under it, and whether the moneys were really paid as alleged. Gunga Narayan Chowdhry v. Phul Mahmood Sirka and others, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 45.

An application for execution of a decree need not be accompanied by a copy of the decision of the first Court. An application for execution was made by a Mooktear, and admitted by the Judge, who ordered a notice to issue to the judgment-debtor. Held that such application cannot afterwards be set aside for irregularity, and that it is sufficient to keep the decree alive. Dhunput Singh v. Lilanund Singh, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 18.

Upon an application for execution being made the judgment-debtor executed in Court an instalment-bond, by which he bound himself to pay his debt by half-yearly instalments in the months of Magh (January and February) and Bhadra (August and September) of each year, and it was stipulated that, on failure to pay a single instalment, the whole of the bond might be realized by execution. A decision was given accordingly, and the instalment-bond was filed.

The judgment-debtor did not pay the instalment due in August and September, 1864, till a few days after the expiry of that month. He did not pay the instalment of January and February, 1865, at all, but subsequent payments were made and accepted accordingly.

In December, 1865, and January, 1868, the decree-holder applied to execute the decree, and realize the whole amount of the bond. The lower Appellate Court, holding that time ran from the first default in August and September, 1864, dismissed the application. Held, by the High Court on appeal, that the application was not barred, and that the time ran from January and February, 1865. Opentra Mohun Tagore and others v. Takali Bepan and another, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 345; S. C., 11 W. R., 570.

An application was made on the 13th February, 1862, for execution of a decree, and was struck off on the 31st January, 1864. A fresh application was made on the 9th August, 1865, and certain property was then attached by the decree-holder. Held that the Judge should have enquired whether the former applications were bond fide and sufficient to keep the decree alive, if not proceedings under the latest application would be barred by limitation. Case remained accordingly. Golam Ashgur v. Lachi muni Dabi, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 24.

Plaintiff as decree-holder applied for execution, and the property attached was sold. Intermediately another decree-holder attached and sold other properties belonging to the same judgment-debtor. Subsequently plaintiff applied and obtained an order to share ratably in the proceeds of this sale, and did receive them. Eventually, on the application of the other decree-holder, plaintiff was ordered to refund the money which he had obtained as his rateable share. Plaintiff then applied for the execution of his decree.

Held that there was no failure on the part of the plaintiff to take effectual proceedings in furtherance of the execution of his decree. Ram Soodar and another v. Ram Canto and another, 11 W. R., 8.

Where a mortgagor, having obtained a decree for possession of the mortgaged property, on condition of his depositing a certain sum in Court, applied for execution, and then brought a suit to recover wasliat from his judgment-debtor, on the ground that the money had been paid by the usufruct, and that a surplus was due to him and obtained a decree, his latter proceedings were held to be bond fide, keeping the original decree alive. Tuffuzzil Hossein Khan v. Bahadoor Khan and others, 11 W. R., 205.

Where the representatives of a deceased decree-holder applied for execution of his decree, and were directed to furnish proof that they were the representatives of the deceased, and did so, and then their execution case was struck off the file,—Held that the steps taken by them were bond fide steps taken to keep the decree alive. Adina Bibi v. Sub-unissa Bibi, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 142.

As between judgment-debtors and the decree-holder, the purchase of a decree by one of the debtors operates as a satisfaction of the decree, which cannot, after such satisfaction, legally be executed. Digumburru Debia v. Eshan Chunder Sein, 15 S. W., R., C. R., 372.

Case in which it was held that, before summarily deciding that the claim of the decree-holder was barred, and the proceedings taken by him from time to time, apparently with the view to enforce the decree, were not bond fide, the Judge ought to have given the decree-holder an opportunity of proving that his proceedings were bond fide. Udoyo Churn Sahoo v. Rum Jum Roy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 297.

(m) Resistance to Execution.

A Civil Court cannot make over a case of simple resistance of its process to a Magistrate for trial; Section 25, Regulation IV of 1793, being still in force. Re Chunder Kant Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., Cr. 63.

The resistance of process of a Civil Court is punishable, under the Code of Criminal Procedure, by a Court of criminal jurisdiction. Queen v. Khai gat Duffidar, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 21.

A. and B. obtained a decree for possession of land against C. On their proceeding to execute their decree, D., who was in possession, presented a petition to the Moonsiff, complaining that they were thereby attempting unlawfully to interfere with his possession. The case was tried, on remand from the Judge, as a suit under the provisions of Section 229 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, by Jackson, J., that as the decree-holder had not complained that the officer of the Court had been obstructed or resisted by the claimant, the case did not fall within Section 229 of Act VIII of 1859, and that the Court had not jurisdiction to take summary cognizance of the case. Per Mitler, J.—This objection, taken for the first time on special appeal, did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. Bullub Singh Chowdry v. Behary Lall, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 206; 10 W. R., 318.

X.—Attachment in Execution.

A plaintiff, before judgment, attached defendant's property, but the suit was dismissed by the High Court on appeal. He filed an appeal to the Privy Council; and on his application the High Court held that it could not continue the attachment over the defendant's property pending the appeal of the plaintiff to the Privy Council; nor could it call on the defendant, respondent, to give security for the value of the property attached before being allowed to remove it. In re Ditta Harakman Singh, 3 B. L. R., F. B., 45; S. C., 12 W. R., F. B., 16.

sessment or resumption during the period of attachment following the dispossessions of the proprietor. — Held that the Government must be regarded as a wrong-doer for the whole period, and must account to the proprietor for all the collections made by its officers up to the time of the restitution. Ram Surnomoyee v. The Collector of Ruangpore, W. R., F. B., 4.

As to movables property, process of attachment and sale may be issued successively or simultaneously. In regard to immovable property, process of attachment and sale should be issued successively; but if issued simultaneously, and the attachment has been made bond-fide, and the sale proclamation issued as required by law, with an interval of thirty days between it and the sale, such an irregularity is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the sale, as no material injury can accrue to the debtor thereby. Huro Soundury Debha v. Brojo Gobind Shaha, 4 W. R. Mus., 12.

A Court which cannot attach primarily in execution of its decree, cannot attach in anticipation of it. Marthamnua v. Kittu Sheregara, 6 Mad. Rep., 91.

Where property is under attachment, the mere fact of the execution case being struck off the file does not put an end to the attachment. Ingobando Sein v. Bhuwana Chunder Doss, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 15.

Held that the lower Court was right in giving a plaintiff a decree for the damages sustained by him in consequence of defendant's wrongful attachment, and in awarding half costs to plaintiff under the circumstances. Kangalu Chunder Shaha v. Koonieswree Nurtaku, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 150.

An execution-creditor attaching an estate paying revenue to Government is not obliged to insert in the notice of sale the names of all appurtenances, such as aslee and dakihlee mouzils. Zerkau Koer v. Lalla Doorgaa Persand, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 149.

A suit will lie by a prior attaching creditor to compel a decree-holder, whose attachment is subsequent in date, to refund money obtained by him under an order of the Judge of a Subordinate Court, in contravention of the provisions of Section 270, Code of Civil Procedure, but it must be a suit to set aside the Judge's order. The Court having jurisdiction to adjudicate the conflicting claims of attaching creditors is the Court in which the attached money is deposited. Wooma Morye Burmôngia v. Ram Buksh Chittungu, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 347.

The law requires the issue of attachment after judgment, although a plaintiff may have already obtained attachment before judgment. Mussamut Satbhaow v. Sahoo Banarasee Doss, 2 N. W. R., 365.

Section 244 of Act VIII of 1859 admits only of a temporary alienation of land, and not of an arrange- ment by which possession is left with the judgment-debtor, subject to a payment by yearly instalments. Kashe Lal v. Musumud Ameer Jtan, 2 N. W. R., 347.

Section 243 of the Civil Procedure Code does not authorize an order in the execution department having the effect of staying the sale of certain property for one year. Fyaz-ood-deen v. Girand Singh, 2 N. W. R., 1.

Before an attachment can be relied on under Section 240, Code of Civil Procedure, for the purpose of invalidating any subsequent alienation, it must be shown to have been duly made by a written order issued and published, viz., the prohibitory notice prescribed by law. Dwarkannath Biswas v. Ram Chunder Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 136.

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, property may be attached without view to immediate sale. The process for attachment and the order for sale must be distinct and separate, and there may be a complete execution of a decree under attachment without any order for sale.

Where lands are situate in other zillahs, the Code contemplates the issuing of separate orders, subsequent to the attachment, for the sale or other disposition of them. The Code, instead of preventing the transmission of a decree with certificate to several Courts concurrently for execution, allows of it, and of its being done most beneficially for the creditor, and without injustice to the debtor. At the same time, the Privy Council considered that in any case it would be a right exercise of the discretion of the Court not to act on the power, and to refuse to send a decree for concurrent execution into several places, or at least to impose terms on decree-holders that they should not proceed to sale under all the attachments at once.

Assuming that if no copy of the decree was sent the attachment made in this case would be invalid, and without determining that point, the Privy Council held that the onus lay on the respondent to prove non-transmission; and as the Judge had acted on the certificate by the attachment and sale of the lands, the maxim omnia praesumunt rite esse acta must prevail until the contrary were shown. Saroda Prosad Mullick, Manager of the person and estate of Sreenath Sannayal, a lunatic, v. Luchmeput Singh Doggar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 289.

A decree-holder who has executed a decree of a Civil Court confirming him in his title, must be considered by a Collectorate to be in possession. Sreenath Ghsal v. Joynaran Kavar, 3 W. R., Act X R., 11.

When a person to whom property is pledged for a debt obtains a simple money-decree against his debtor, he cannot execute that decree against the property pledged to the prejudice of a subsequent bond-fide purchaser. Gopenath Singh v. Sheo Sahoye Singh, 1 W. R., 315.

A decree-holder cannot first sell a decree and then sue out execution upon it. Sceetaan Sahoo v. Mohun Nunder, 3 W. R., 99.

(b) Effect of Attachment in Execution.

An attachment once legally made is revived upon the reversal of the sale in execution. Guno Singh Baboo Mudduan Mohun Singh, W. R., 1864, 26.

The attachment of a property is adverse possession, causing limitation to run against the party in possession of the property. Brojo Rajkishoree v. Bishanauth Dutt, W. R., 1864, 305.

Where an attachment previous to decree had been obtained against the property of the defendants, it was held that attachment did not give to the plaintiff any licence in respect of the property attached as against the assignee of the defendants, notwithstanding their insolvency having occurred.

When a party attaches property, he also attaches the profits thereof; but if, when attaching the property, he allows the original owner to remain in possession and enjoy the profits, those profits cease, from the moment they find their way into the pockets of the owner, to be specifically liable for the judgment-debt under the attachment. Ram Coomar Ghose Gobind Chunder Samyajal and others, 2 W. R., 391.

Where a judgment-debtor raised a sum of money by a sale of part of the attached property, and devoted some part of that money to a payment on account to the judgment-creditor, and the judgment-creditor thereupon withdrew from the execution and from the attachment of the property,—Held that the attachment would not invalidate the sale. Prannath Mittra v. Sunbboo Chundra Nath, 7 W. R., 430.

P. having attached R. M.'s property, and obtained a decree against him, subsequently had him adjudicated an insolvent. The Court ruled that the attachment was unaffected by the adjudication. In re Emmanuel Miller, an insolvent, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 339.

An attachment cannot subsist when the suit has been struck off for neglect to pay in the tulubana for the service of the necessary sale processes. Purboob Doss v. Gomu Bhusun Singh, 5 W. R., Mis., 4.

The attachment of property by a judgment-creditor ceases on his execution case being struck off the file, and he is remitted to his former position of a simple judgment-creditor, and must begin de novo and re-attach the property before a sale at his instance can take place. Baboo Luchunnoput and others v. Baboo Lekraj Roy, 8 W. R., 415.

Held that attachment issued after suit supersedes the attachment order obtained during the pendency of the suit, and that the former was taken off the property when the sale proceedings were struck off the file.

The second attachment ought to have continued till it had been ascertained whether the judgment-debtor fulfilled his promise of payment within the month. The sale could have been postponed, and the interest of the judgment-creditor protected. Ram Jeawun v. Ram Lall, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 190.

Certain property having been attached and advertised for sale in execution of a money-decree, the decree-holder asked the Court to stay further proceedings for six weeks, as the debtor had made part payment, praying that the attachment might be considered to be still in force. The execution case was accordingly removed from the file.

Held that the order striking the case off the file for the convenience of the Court did not put an end to the attachment. Held (Jackson, J., dissenting) that the attachment continued in force, notwithstanding a year's delay on the part of the judgment-creditor in applying again for execution. J. Da Costa v. Kalee Pershad Singh, 12 W. R., 260.

If property is once attached, the attachment will subsist, if not expressly abandoned by the party at whose suit it was issued, until an order is issued for its withdrawal, even although no further steps are taken on the attachment within a reasonable period.

If an execution case is struck off with the consent of the judgment-creditor, or in such manner as the law provides, or if the judgment-creditor subsequently applies of his own accord for a second attachment, treating the first as non-existent, then the first must be deemed to have been abandoned.

If, on the contrary, the judgment-debtor did not intend to abandon his first attachment, and takes out the second attachment merely because the Court insists on his beginning de novo, then the first attachment remains in force, notwithstanding the issue of the second. Jotibho Sahoo and others v. Ramchurn Roy and others, 11 W. R., 517.

Where land is attached under Section 319, Act XXV of 1861, the attachment must remain in force until the right of possession has been decided by a Civil Court in a regular suit. A certificate to collect the debts of the estate under Act XXVII of 1866 gives no right to obtain possession. Kristhundra Mahata v. Missamut Obinasse Dabe, 11 W. R., 532.

Where a suit was for Rs. 3,000, and the plaintiff, who was declared entitled to Rs. 677, without sufficient grounds attacked the defendant's property to the amount of Rs. 3,000, the defendant was held entitled to compensation. Sheikh Mahomed Rozooden v. Hossein Buksh Khan, 6 W. R., Mis., 24.

Property of A. was attached under a decree obtained by B. After the attachment, but prior to the sale, A. was adjudicated an insolvent, and the usual vesting order was made. On the following day the agents of the Sheriff, by the order of the Official Assignee, sold the property attached for the recovery of the amount of B.'s decree, &c., and the proceeds of the sale were handed over by them to the Official Assignee. Subsequently the petition of the insolvent was dismissed. Immediately thereafter, on the same day, C., another execution creditor, attached the proceeds of sale in the hands of the Official Assignee. B. applied to the Court to order the Official Assignee to hand over the proceeds to the credit of his cause. On the same day A. filed a fresh petition in the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, and a second vesting order was made. C. claimed that the proceeds of sale were entitled to be handed over to him. Held that B. was entitled to have the proceeds paid to him. Winter v. Gartner, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 79.

Where an estate is attached under Regulation II of 1806, the attachment includes its mesne profits. Ramcoomar Ghose v. Gobindo Nath Samyajal and others, 9 W. R., 450.

If property is once attached, the attachment will subsist, if not expressly abandoned by the party at whose suit it was issued, until an order is issued for its withdrawal, even although no further steps are taken on the attachment within a reasonable period.

A mere striking of the execution case off the file by the Court, of its own motion, without notice to or consent of parties, will not invalidate an attachment. Jhantibahlu v. Bobo Rama Charan Lal, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 68.

Held that no appeal lies to the District Court from an order made by a Moonsiff compensating a defendant for loss of property attached before judgment under Section 4 of Act VIII of 1859. Trilok Govardhan v. Dullalh Kuber, 2 Bom. Rep., 389.
CIVIL PROCEDURE—EFFECT OF ATTACHMENT IN EXECUTION.

A. and B. borrowed money from D., with C. as their surety, mortgaging their house to C. to secure him from loss. The same house having been previously given to D., C. had to pay the debt to D., but the house was attached by E. in execution of a decree against A. and B. C. sued D. and E. to raise the attachment. Held that the action did not lie. Shirotail bin Kohuband v. Balaantra Vinaik, 2 Bom. Rep., 75.

If the Collector was holding charge of property which came under attachment by an order of the Civil Court, under Section 6, Regulation V of 1812, as modified by Section 3, Regulation V of 1827, was held to have taken and retained charge on behalf of the parties entitled, and unless and until anything could be shown to have changed the state of things during such attachment. Purchasers subsequently put into possession by the Civil Court, who took from the Collectorate rents relating to an antecedent period, did not thereby exercise rights of ownership for such period. Soochana Dayee v. Durr Narain Bose, 12 W. R., 95.

If the debt to secure which an attachment has been made is satisfied, a subsequent alienation of the property is not void, merely because the attachment has not been formally withdrawn.

The right of attachment after judgment exists for the purpose of realizing sums actually due under a decree, and not for that of securing property, so that it may at some future period become available for the realization of moneys not yet due, but to become payable under the decree. Ramdhun Mitter v. Koylaasunduth Dutty, 12 W. R., 457.

An attachment of property before judgment places it in the custody of the law, but does not alter the property in it. An order, therefore, vesting the property of an insolvent in the Official Assignee, vests in that officer property of the insolvent which has been so attached. In the matter of Gocool Dass Soonderje, an insolvent; and Petumber Mundle v. Gocool Dass Soonderje, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 327; Bourke's Rep., O. C., 1240.

Where property has been attached in execution of a decree, and the parties applied that the sale might be postponed, the Court executing the decree ordered the sale to be postponed, and the "case to be struck off the file." Held by the majority of the Court—the Chief Justice and Roberts, Turner, and Spankie, J.J. (Ross and Pearson, J.J., dissenting)—that inasmuch as there was no order passed directing the removal of the attachment, but on the contrary it appeared that it was the intention of the Court and of the parties that the attachment should continue, the direction that the case should be struck off the file of pending cases did not operate to remove the attachment. Ahmed Hossein Khan v. Mahomed Azim Khan, 1 N. W. R., par. 1, p. 51.

An alienation of property attached in execution of a decree, made for the bond-fide purpose of satisfying the decree in respect of which the attachment has been made, and where the consideration for the alienation is applied to, and is found to be sufficient for, the satisfaction of the decree, is not invalid under Section 240 of the Code of Civil Pro-

A judgment-debtor satisfied a decree under which attachment of his property had been made. He reported the satisfaction to the Court, and on the following day he executed a mortgage of his property. The day after the execution of the mortgage the attachment was removed by the Court. Held that the mortgage if bond-fide was not null and void under Section 240 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Bulbul Singh v. Kannada and others, 14 N. W. R., 71.

The implied withdrawal of an order of attachment, even though such order was not formally withdrawn, and was understood to be withdrawn by the decree-holder, bars objection against validity of alienation of the attached property by mortgage or otherwise. Jagun Nath v. Ghosaram, 1 N. W. R., par. 1 p. 32.

An alienation of property while under attachment is not absolutely void for all purposes and as to all persons, but voidable only, and capable of confirmation. Synd. Mahomed Ali v. Gokul Chand, 1 W. R., par. 1 p. 32.

The plaintiff sued to recover certain land which had been hypothecated to him in 1843, and subsequently to him in 1868, while under attachment in execution of a decree in a suit brought by the plaintiff to establish his hypothecatory claim. The 3rd defendant claimed under a mortgage prior in date to the hypothecation to the plaintiff, and under a sale prior in date to the sale to the plaintiff, made to the 3rd defendant whilst the land was under attachment in execution of the decree to the plaintiff. Held that the sale to the 3rd defendant, which was made not under any agreement with the plaintiff for the satisfaction of the decree, through the Court, was invalid by reason of Section 240 of the Civil Procedure Code; but that the alienation to the plaintiff, the decree-holder, during the attachment to satisfy the decree, which was duly sanctioned by the approval of the Court, which issued the process of attachment, was valid. Annabundaban v. Tsasawny Pillalili, 6 Mad. Rep., 65.

Section 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure renders an attachment before judgment ineffectual as a bar to process of execution against the property attached in satisfaction of a decree in another suit, whether obtained before or after the attachment. Referred Case, No. II of 1871, 6 Mad. Rep., 135.

The Privy Council affirmed the judgment of the majority of the Full Bench, by which it was held that a private alienation of property during the continuance of an attachment was null and void only as respects the attaching creditor and those who claimed under or through the attachment. Annund Lal Dass v. Julladhur Shan, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 313.

A deed of sale conveying property, if executed while the property is under attachment, cannot afterwards be made valid by the release of the property. Maharajah Dheeraj Mohantuband Bahadoor v. Swarnamoyee Dassee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 222.

Where one judgment-creditor has been diligent and has secured attachment of certain property, his judgment must be satisfied before the proceeds can be available in satisfaction of a later attachment by another creditor. The mere fact of a property...

Where landed property is attached in execution of a decree, the party attaching is bound by a lease obtained for it prior to his attachment. Fegredo, J. v. Mahomed Muedussur, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 75.

A debtor may, prior to attachment, give priority to one creditor over another, notwithstanding judgment may have been obtained against him. Doorga Tewaree v. Naipal Aheer, 2 N. W. R., 224.

Where an attachment of money in the hands of a Deputy Collector was made by a Civil Court, without any such direction as is enjoined by Section 237, Civil Procedure Code, that the money should be held subject to the further order of the Court, it was held that the attachment ceased to be binding when once the suit was dismissed. Luchmeeput Singh Doogur v. Humphrey, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 101.

An alienation which is null and void because made whilst an attachment was subsisting, cannot be validated by the removal of his attachment. Ramp Churn Lall v. Thubboo Sahoo, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 25.

This case follows and explains the Full Bench decision, cited, that a private bond-fide alienation of property during the continuance of an attachment is not null and void against the whole world, but only against the attaching creditor and those claiming under him. Bal Mokund Mohunt v. Ramhit Dass, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 134.

In execution of a decree, A., the judgment-creditor, obtained an order for the attachment of certain property of B., the judgment-debtor, but it was not executed as required by Act VIII of 1859. The property was however advertised for sale, and B. obtained an order staying the sale, on a petition alleging that A. had agreed to give him time on condition that the attachment should remain good, and declaring that he (B.) would not alienate the property until the whole of the decree was satisfied. Subsequently B. mortgaged a portion of this property to C., assigned his decree to D., upon whose application the property was attached and sold, and E. became the purchaser. C. having taken steps to foreclose the mortgage, E., to prevent such foreclosure, paid the amount into Court. Held that E. could not maintain a suit against C. to recover the amount so paid by him. The mortgage by B. was not an alienation null and void under Section 240, Act VIII of 1859. B.'s petition did not create a condition that the attachment should remain good, once the suit was dismissed. Luchmeeput Singh Doogur v. Humphrey, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 101.

Arrears of maintenance are liable to attachment in execution of a decree obtained under Act XXIII of 1838. These enactments are not impliedly repealed by Sections 205 and 237 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

A. was liable to pay B., a widow, a monthly allowance for maintenance. A. obtained a decree against B. as heir of her husband for a debt of her husband. Held that he was not entitled to attach the maintenance under the decree. Koomkurrun v. Michael, 6 W. R., Mis., 64.

The stipends allowed by Government to the members of the Mysore family cannot be attached. Hazoe Mahomed Ruzulbash v. Shazada Mahomed Buseroodten, 7 W. R., 169.

Since the passing of Act X of 1859 there is no law authorizing the attachment of an under-tenure for arrears of rent, except express power to do so be reserved in the lease. When a remitter has collected all that is due to him up to hand, if he still continue to hold possession after that he cannot claim anything on account of those arrears of such subsequent period. Mussamut Beebee Coolsom and others v. Dhupput Singh, 7 W. R., 293.

The pay of an officer of the Small Cause Court will be set aside by an order of the High Court, in satisfaction of judgment obtained in that Court. Koomkurrun v. Michael, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 259.

Salaries or other debts due from the Railway Company to any of its servants can be attached in satisfaction of a Small Cause Court decree under Act VIII of 1859. Section 237. The attaching Court must make a written order to be fixed up in some conspicuous part of the Court-house, and a copy is to be delivered or sent registered by post to the debtor. The registered letter should be addressed to the agent of the Railway Company, at the head office of the Company. It need not be sent through the High Court, although the head office is within the jurisdiction of the High Court. In the matter of J. Hollick and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 100; 10 W. R., 447.

Arrears of maintenance are capable of being attached as a debt due to a widow in execution of a decree against her. Hoymobutty Debia Chowdhurain v. Koroona Moyee Debia Chowdhurain, 8 W. R., 41.

Arrears of maintenance are liable to attachment in execution of a decree, although the right to future maintenance is not so liable. Kasthurbree Debie v. Greesh Chunder Lahoree, 6 W. R., Mis., 64.

The stipend of a Carnatic stipendiary is not liable to attachment in execution of a decree obtained against the stipendiary, it being one of the description of personal grants expressly protected from attachment in satisfaction of any decree or order of a Court by Section 3, Regulation 1V of 1831, extended by Act XXIII of 1838.

These enactments are not impliedly repealed by Sections 205 and 237 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The stipend of a Carnatic stipendiary is not liable to attachment in execution of a decree obtained against the stipendiary, it being one of the description of personal grants expressly protected from attachment in satisfaction of any decree or order of a Court by Section 3, Regulation 1V of 1831, extended by Act XXIII of 1838.

(c) Liability to Attachment.
A. was liable to pay B., a widow, a monthly allowance for maintenance. A. obtained a decree against B. as heir of her husband for a debt of her husband. Held that he was not entitled to attach the maintenance under the decree. Koomar Chowdhry v. Meer Munaf Ali, 5 W. R., Mis., 21.

Although a Court will not allow account books to be attached, and brought to sale mere waste paper, yet, to prevent a judgment-debtor from making away with his books, and defeating a decree-holder, it will be competent to a Court executing a decree, if execution is applied for by attachment of debts, to require the judgment-debtor to produce his books in Court, and leave them in the custody of the CIVIL PROCEDURE—LIABILITY TO ATTACHMENT.

There is nothing in Act VIII of 1859 which exempts from attachment property to be found in the zenana of a judgment-debtor. Doorga Churn Mitra v. Hurn Mohun Googo, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 86.

Execution of a decree against the civil pay of a non-commissioned officer is entirely in conformity with law. Cohen v. McCarthy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 231.

It is not illegal for a judgment-debtor to dispose of all his property before attachment, provided the transaction is an actual conveyance and not merely nominal. Digumbarree Dassee v. Baney Madhub Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 155.

The fact of A. obtaining a declaration of his lien under certain property for an amount of debt, is no bar to B.'s attaching and selling that property, but the purchaser will be bound by that lien. Monobur Pal v. J. P. Wise, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 246.

Where a decree declares a decree-holder's lien on certain property without distinctly declaring his right to sell the same, it may be executed as against that property specially; but the usual course of attachment and of the sale on one hand, or of attachment and of the sale on the other hand, must still take place. Nuddyabasher Dass v. Rezu Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 337.

A money-decree cannot be executed against a judgment-debtor's property after such property has passed by purchase into the possession of a third person, without such third person being made a party to a suit to enforce the supposed lien.

All that can be sold under a money-decree is the judgment-debtor's right, title, and interest. Maharajah Dheraj Mahish Chund Bahadoor v. Hurdeo Narain Saddo, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 119.

The whole salary of a peon in the service of a Mamladar under Government is liable to attachment as it becomes due. Tejram Jagurpruji v. Kusaji bin Gangi et al., 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 110.

Articles of such a perishable nature that they cannot be kept for fifteen days and sold, according to the Civil Procedure Code, ought not to be taken in execution. Suddashia Moreksvar v. Hanso bin Sarkaraj, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 156.

Where a person deposited upon the works of another certain materials to be used in carrying out a contract with such second person, and the latter had recognized and accepted such deposit by the advance of the value thereof,—Held that such materials had vested in the person with whom they were deposited as a purchaser, and were not liable to attachment under a decree against the depositor. Small Cause Court Reference, 2 N. W. R., 337.

The right of the Hindu law, expectant on the death of a widow in possession, is not property, and therefore not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree under Section 205 of Act VIII of 1859. Ram Chandra Tautra Das v. Dhuorno Narayan Chuckerbutty, 7 B. L. R., 341, and 15 S. W. R., F. B., 17.

Under Section 205 of the Civil Procedure Code, sums to be attached must not be inchoate, but existing and definite, and although liquidated demand must be in nature definite and certain, though sub lite and unproved may be seized, a mere expectation or a mere right of suit cannot be attached: the attachment must operate at the time of attachment, and not be anticipatory, so as to fasten on some future state of property in which the suit may result. A claim which may accrue under a pending award cannot be sold in execution. Syed Tuffa Zul Hassein Khan v. Raghunath Prasad, 7 B. L. R., 86.

A decree of Court falls within the description of "other property" in Section 205 of the Civil Procedure Code, and is therefore liable to attachment, which should be made under Section 237. Prince Gholaam Mahomed v. Intra Chand Jathuri, 7 B. L. R., 318, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 34.

The plaintiff permitted B. to erect a thatched dwelling-house with mud walls on a piece of land belonging to the plaintiff, and B. dwelt in it for more than forty years. Held that B. had an assignable interest in the house and land, which could therefore be seized and sold in execution of a decree against B., and that the purchaser who had obtained possession could not be dispossessed at the suit of the plaintiff. Durgaprasad Misser v. Brindubun Sookul, 7 B. L. R., 159, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 274.

Where a judgment-debtor was possessed of a decree entitling him to maintenance from a third party, held that his judgment-creditor could attach the amount before it accrued due, by prohibitory order妨碍ing such third party to pay the judgment-debtor, and directing him to pay to such person only as the Court might direct; or an arrangement might be made for the collection, or administration if necessary, of the amount of maintenance. Manisuwur Das v. Baboo Bir Pertab Sahu, 6 B. L. R., 646, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 188.

A decree-holder in execution attached and seized certain property which belonged to the judgment-debtor in partnership with another person, who alone at the time of attachment was in actual possession. Held that such property was the subject of attachment in execution of the decree against the one partner, but such attachment must be limited to his share, and the attachment should be by prohibitory order, not by actual manual seizure. Thama Sing v. Kalidas Roy, 5 B. L. R., 386.

K. D., a Hindu widow, by deed appointed R. S. to be her general moontear, for the conduct of certain suits in her name, which were pending in respect of the estate of her deceased husband. By this deed, dated September 25th, 1858, she covenanted to re-pay him within two months of the successful termination of the suit, "all moneys properly disbursed by him on her account," and also to pay him an additional sum as remuneration to himself. R. S. entered on the conduct of her business, and advanced certain moneys on her account, and in October, 1859, K. D. executed in favour of a second deed, by which she mortgaged to him her share in the estate of R. H., deceased, which was in the hands of his executors, "and my decrees 24 and 25 in the Zillah Court, and the decree in the Supreme Court, and the right and interest of all the said decrees and all other real and personal properties belonging to the said estate." By a decree of the High Court of 28th July, 1862, in one of the suits brought by K. D., the estate of R. H. was declared to consist of a share of a certain talook, of a share of a house in Calcutta.
and of a certain sum of money; and K. D. was declared to be entitled to one moiety thereof. K. D. afterwards obtained an order for possession, and held possession of the said talook until August, 1866. R. S. continued the conduct of K. D.'s business, and advanced more money on her account, in respect of which, on May 31st, 1865, he brought a suit against her, and on September 21st, 1865, obtained a decree in his favour. Under this decree he attached the right, title, and interest of K. D. in the estate of R. H., and on the 25th June, 1866, it was put up for sale, and purchased by R. S. himself. In a suit brought by K. D. against R. S., among other things, for an account, held that R. S. was a trustee for K. D., in respect of her share in the estate of R. H., which he had purchased in execution of his decree.

A mortgage cannot, properly, in execution of a simple decree for money, the repayment of which is secured by mortgage, attach and sell the mortgagor's equity of redemption in the property mortgaged, but if he do so, and purchase it himself, he becomes a trustee for the mortgagor, against whom he cannot acquire an irredeemable title. S. M. Kamini Debi v. Ramchun Siricor, 5 B. L. R., 450.

A decree-holder, who was also a partner of the judgment-debtor, sought to attach, in execution of his decree, the share of the judgment-debtor in the assets of the partnership business, the business then being in the hands of the Receiver of the Court under a decree for dissolution and winding up. Held that such share of the judgment-debtor was not property within the meaning of Section 205 of Act VIII of 1859, and therefore not liable to attachment in execution. Abbott v. Abbott and Crump, 5 B. L. R., 382.

A. obtained a decree against B. for a sum payable by instalments. B. made defaults in payment of an instalment, so A. attached certain immovable property belonging to B. While under attachment B. sold the property to C. and out of the proceeds paid into Court the full amount of the debt then due, and for which the property had been attached. A. took out the money, but applied for and obtained an order from the Moonsiff that the property should remain under attachment, in order to satisfy any future sum which should fall due under the decree and in payment of which B. should make default. B. failed to pay a further instalment when due, and A. obtained an order for sale of the property. A. himself became the purchaser, and was put in possession by the Court, notwithstanding the claim of C., who had been in possession ever since his purchase. In a suit by C. to recover possession,—Held, the Court had no power to make the order continuing the attachment, the right of attachment being only for sums actually due, and the whole amount for which execution issued being satisfied out of the proceeds, the alienation of the property of C. was not void as against A. Ramdhan Mitler v. Kailas Nath Dutt, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 20; and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 457.

An annuity, the payment of which is a charge upon an estate, is property which can be attached under the provisions of Section 205, Act VIII of 1859, at the instance of the person who has inherited the estate from the grantor of the annuity, and by whom the annuity is payable. Maharajah Dhenj Mahatb Chund v. Sreemullee Dhun Cooomari Bice, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 254.

Attachment of certain property by plaintiff in satisfaction of her decree was found by the Court executing the decree to be wrongful, the attached property not belonging to judgment-debtor, and plaintiff was adjudged to be liable to the owner for the loss sustained. Held on plaintiff's suit that the order adjudging the liability passed in the Miscellaneous Department was illegal, and should be set aside. The question of the legal liability of several parties to the owner for the loss sustained can only be determined in suit brought by the owners for recovery of property or value thereof, and not in the present suit, in which they are not plaintiffs. Elizabeth Wright v. Setta Ram, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 105.

Where the Principal Sudder Ameer ordered sequestration of only a portion of the property attached by the decree-holder,—Held that such interference could only be warranted in cases where the decree-holder wantonly attached more property than was necessary for the discharge of his claim. Pursotam Doss v. Kajah Oodey Narain Mull, 1 Agra Rep., Mis., 3.

Where a defendant, against whose person an attachment in execution has been issued, absconded, a second attachment against his moveable property was granted, and the writ of attachment against the person was not recalled. Gregory v. Haffiy Essaff Coonjee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 244.

A decree-holder cannot attach his judgment-debtor's right to appeal, or his right to future maintenance; nor can the Court prescribe to the decree-holder what course he is to take for the realization of his claim, or what property he is to attach. Bipro Protap Sahu v. Deo Narain Roy, 3 W. R., Mis., 16.

A right of action is not liable to attachment. E. I. Drury v. Harudek Bhuttacharjee, 3 W. R., Mis., 8; Carapiet v. Ponnallal Seal, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 152.

(d) Priority of Attachment.

A creditor holding several decrees against the same judgment-debtor cannot take out simultaneous attachments against that debtor's property, so as to entitle him to have all his decrees paid in full, to the exclusion of other attaching creditors. He can only be regarded as first attaching creditor in respect of one of the decrees which he held. Radha Gebind Skaha v. Sheikh Tawkujemadar, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 100.

When property is attached by two different decree-holders, and sold at the instance of the one who made the second attachment, the claim of him who made the prior attachment must be satisfied first; but he cannot again sell the rights and interests of his debtor in the property. Onnoopoorna Dassee v. Gunja Narain Paul, 2 W. R., 296.

A. obtained a decree against the defendant on June 21st, and attached his property in execution on July 6th. B. attached the same property prior to decree on June 13th, and obtained his decree on

CIVIL PROCEDURE—PRIORITY OF ATTACHMENT.

July 9th. A's decree must be satisfied in priority to that of B. So long as a judgment subsists the Court will treat it as a valid judgment; and if a subsequent execution creditor desires to obtain priority, he must take steps to set the first judgment aside by showing fraud against himself. Lutchmeenarut v. Dogaree Kenaram Sen, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 393.

An execution creditor, who has delivered a writ of fi. fa. to the Sheriff in a suit under the old procedure, is in no better position than an attachment creditor under the new procedure.

Where, therefore, a plaintiff who had obtained a decree under the new Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859, &c.), and had attached the property of the judgment-debtor to be attached, and sold by defendant was an identical property to that of B. Manut Buksh v. Koonwar Roy, 2 W. R., 62.

There is nothing in Regulation II of 1806 which expressly or impliedly gives to the judgment- creditor who holds an attachment made prior to judgment, any priority whatever over any other judgment-creditor who has come in and got a decree and has attached the same property. Ram Coomar Ghose v. Gobind Nath Sanyal and others, 12 W. R., 391.

There is nothing in Regulation II of 1806 which expressly or impliedly gives to the judgment- creditor who holds an attachment made prior to judgment, any priority whatever over any other judgment-creditor who has come in and got a decree and has attached the same property. Ram Coomar Ghose v. Gobind Nath Sanyal and others, 12 W. R., 391.

Where one of several writs first reaches the Sheriff it has priority, and he has no power to deprive it of such priority and transfer it to another by first executing it. Dwarkanath Shao v. Prakrsto Paul Chowdhry, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 1870.

Where a person had by deed assigned his share to his wife in lieu of dower, and the assignee had been put in possession of the share so assigned to her under the decree of the Court,—Held that the reduction of shares by any subsequent decree would not affect the assignment, and if at all affected, she (assignee) would be entitled to have the same extent of land made up to her out of whatever other interest her husband or his heirs may have had in the estate; that her right would be prior in time and preferable to any that could be set up by a creditor under a decree subsequent to assignment, and that the plaintiffs who purchased from the assignee were consequently entitled to decree. Dhun Singh v. Ram Sihai, 1 Agra Rep., 39.

A judgment-creditor of the defendant, attached his property but took no further step. B, another judgment-creditor, subsequently attached and sold the property. Held that the decree-holder who first attached the property of the judgment-debtor did not forfeit his prior right to payment, under Section 270 of the Civil Procedure Code, by delaying to obtain an order for the sale of the property upon his attachment. Peter Pillai v. Kristina Ayyan, 6 Mad. Rep., 348.

An attachment made by a decree-holder prior to a vesting order in favour of the Official Assignee, must have preference to the claim of the Official Assignee. S. Narain Singh v. A. B. Miller, 17 S. W. R., 234.

Where one decree-holder attached the house, and another decree-holder attached the land upon which the house stood as well as the house, and both house and land were sold together, although the former had priority with reference to the sale proceeds, the latter was declared entitled to share pro rata on account of the sale proceeds of the land which was not attached by the former. Lalla Mitterjut Singh Chowdy v. Souatun Dass, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 474.

Where two separate attachments after judgment in execution of decrees are placed on property at the same time, the proceeds of the sale of such attached property should be distributed between the parties in proportion to the amount of their respective decrees; and the attachment obtained by one of the parties before judgment does not operate to confer on him a right to priority over the other in the distribution of the sale-proceeds, under Section 270 of Act VIII of 1859. Bukht Ram v. Masumut Buddamo, 2 N. W. R., 368.

A, a judgment-creditor of the defendant, attached his property but took no further step. B, another judgment-creditor, subsequently attached and sold the property. Held that the decree-holder who first attached the property of the judgment-debtor did not forfeit his prior right to payment, under Section 270 of the Civil Procedure Code, by delaying to obtain an order for the sale of the property upon his attachment. Peter Pillai v. Kristina Ayyan, 6 Mad. Rep., 348.

Plaintiff claimed priority under Section 270, Act VIII of 1859, asserting that the property attached and sold by defendant was an identical property which he had attached prior to defendant's attachment. Held that he was bound to prove the due attachment of the property, viz., by proof of having obtained a written order, under Section 235, prohibiting defendant from alienating the property by sale, gift, &c., and by the publication of the said order in the manner prescribed by Section 239. Kunkya Lal Pandit v. Dinonath Sircar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 23.

The decree-holder by whom the property in question is first attached, and not the decree-holder at whose instance the sale takes place, is entitled to be first paid out of the proceeds. Hurr Mohun Saha v. Panchoo Bepuri, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 89.
directed to sell the property so attached, and the sale was fixed for 1st December. On 30th November B. filed his petition in the Insolvent Court, and the usual vesting order was made. On 1st December the property was sold by the Sheriff under the order of 14th September, and the proceeds were paid into Court. Held, that the execution creditor was entitled as against the Official Assignee of 1866, upon a registered bond, against B., one of the original obligors, and C., the representative of another obligor, who had died before the institution of the suit. A. sued out execution, and caused certain property of B. to be attached. D., a judgment-creditor of B., sued out execution of his decree, which was of a subsequent date to the decree of A., and caused the same property to be attached. Subsequently D. applied to the Moonsiff, under Section 272, Act VIII of 1859, that he might be first paid from the proceeds of sale, as the decree of A. had been obtained by fraud and improper means. The Moonsiff held, as the decree was obtained upon a plaint where the value of one-fourth of the property is supposed to bear, it was obtained by improper means. On the application of A. to the High Court for an order that the order of the Moonsiff be set aside as passed without jurisdiction, —Held, that a mere error in the procedure did not come within the scope of the words "improper means" in Section 272, Act VIII of 1859, and that there must be some misconduct of the decree-holder to invalidate his decree under that Section.

(c) Setting Aside Attachment.

A Mufti Sudder Ameen may set aside an attachment in a suit issued from his Court, and no longer in force in the suit, although no express statutory power to do so exists. But on a petition to set aside such an attachment, he cannot also make a declaration as to the right to the property attached and claimed to have been acquired subsequently, and direct that possession should be transferred to the petitioner. Ex parte Chella Pperumal Pillai, 1 Mad. Rep., 135.

Certain hoondees, which V. A. and Co. had discounted for P., having been dishonoured by the drawers, V. A. and Co. sued P. for the value of the bills, and applying under Section 81 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to have certain property attached before judgment as belonging to P. An attachment having been ordered, M. and J. objected by petition that the property belonged to them, and not to P., upon which V. A. and Co. applied to have them made co-defendants in the regular suit which had been brought against P. on the ground that they M. and J. and P. were partners in trade. The decision in the suit released the property on the ground that there was no such partnership, and that the property belonged exclusively to M. and J. and then sued V. A. and Co. to recover damages sustained by their goods under the above attachment and profits foregone during the stoppage of their trade by the tortuous acts of the defendants.

Held, that as V. A. and Co. had made the attachment most carelessly and recklessly, and without sufficient or reasonable ground for assuming M. and J. to be partners of P., they were rightly amerced in damages.

Held, also, that their act having been done without a probable cause, was such as to evince a malicious motive on their part, and that damages in such a case should be in the nature of a penalty as well as of a compensation.

Held, further, that plaintiffs were not bound to release their property, and it was no defence to their pleading for an order of M. and J. to be set aside as passed without jurisdiction, so by giving security, nor could their declining to do so shift the responsibility of the illegal acts of the defendants. Valeat Ali Khan v. Matadeen Ram, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 3.

(f) Rulings under the Code.

Where, in a suit against certain putneedars and putneedar to recover possession of a share of an imjamee family talook, plaintiff obtained a decree, it was held that the Court executing was bound, under Section 233, Act VIII of 1859, to put her in possession of the immovable property adjudged, and, if necessary, to remove any person who might refuse to vacate; and that her having already been put in possession, under the provisions of Section 224, was no bar to her being put into the more direct and actual possession contemplated by Section 223. Adoremonee Dasse v. Premchund Mussamut and others, 9 W. R., 454.

S. G. obtained a decree against M. D., attached her property, and obtained an order for the sale of it, but the time of sale was subsequently postponed by order of Court. Meantime, while the sale was pending, and before the extended time had expired, R. and Co. obtained a decree against the same defendant, a prohibitory order touching the same property, and an order for the sale thereof, upon which the property was sold. S. G. now applied for an order that the Sheriff should pay the proceeds of the sale into Court to his account. The application was granted.

Held that the effect of a seizure is the same under any or either of the 233rd, 234th, or 235th Sections of Act VIII of 1859, namely, for the benefit of the decree-holder in the cause.

That the proceeds of the sale of property under a decree is to be held for the benefit of the decree-holder; that when property has been seized under a decree the Court cannot order its sale, so as to defeat the lien of the parties attaching it. In re Sumbonath Ghose v. Nohninmoney Dossie; Robert and Cherriol v. Nohninmoney Dossee, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 92.
To render an attachment of land or any interest in land effectual, so as to render a subsequent alienation void (with reference to Sections 235, 239, and 240 of Act VIII of 1859), the several processes prescribed in Section 239 must be gone through,—i.e., (1) the written order of attachment issued under Section 235 must be read aloud at some place on or adjacent to the land or property attached; (2) the written order must be fixed up in some conspicuous part of the Court-house; and (3) the written order must be fixed up in the office of the Collector of the zillah in which the land was situated.

Where an attachment is made under Section 235, Act VIII of 1859, the only further process required to bring the property to sale is the due issue of the proclamation of sale. If the property be not within and 240 of Act VIII of 1859, the several processes attached; (2) the written order must be fixed up in the office of the Collector of the zillah in which the land was situated. Indrochundra Baboo and another v. Hamilton Grant Dunlop, 10 W. R., 264.

Where an attachment is made under Section 235, Act VIII of 1859, the only further process required to bring the property to sale is the due issue of the proclamation of sale. If the property be not within the jurisdiction of the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, the course to be followed by the decree-holder is that prescribed in Sections 285 and following. Mookta Keshee Debe v. Kanuck Money Dabee and another v. IoW. R., 267.

On an application made to a Principal Sudder for the execution of a decree against a judgment-debtor's estate situated in a different district, that functionary caused a prohibitory order, under Section 236, Act VIII of 1859, to be issued through the Judge of the other district, after which, without further procedure, under Section 285 and the sections following, or further attachment, the property was put up for sale and purchased, no certificate under Section 259 being given to purchaser. Held that the sale was illegal, and that there had been an invalid transfer of right, title, and interest in the property. Saboo Chund v. Jeetum Singh and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 206.

A obtained a decree ex parte against B. Property belonging to B. was attached in execution. While under attachment B. sold the property to C. Afterwards B. applied for and obtained an order, under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, to set aside A.'s decree and for a new trial. Held that C.'s purchase was not null and void under Section 240 of Act VIII of 1859. Lala Yugat Narayan Tulsiram, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 71; S. C., 10 W. R., 99.

Held by Loch and E. Jackson, JJ., that a mortgage of any kind made after attachment is such an alienation as is contemplated by Section 240, Act VIII of 1858, and is null and void. Held also by Loch, J. (E. Jackson, J., dissenting), that such alienation is null and void, not only as against the creditor making the attachment, but also in regard to the whole world. Munno Lall v. Reet Bhungun Singh and others, 9 W. R., 544.

Held (Markby, J., dissenting) that the private bonâ fide alienation for value of property, attached under Act VIII of 1859, made during the continuance of the attachment, is, by Section 240 of that Act, null and void only as against the attaching creditor or persons who may acquire rights under or through the attachment, and not as against the whole world. Anando Lall Dass v. Radhamohan Shaw and others, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 49.

Where it is found that a judgment-debtor is known in the manner required by Section 239, Act VIII of 1859. Three days before the day advertised for sale the judgment-debtor put in a petition, reciting that the decree-holder had agreed to give him time on condition that the attachment should remain good, and agreeing not to alienate the property until the decree was satisfied. Shortly after this A. mortgaged a village in the estate to R.

Held that there was nothing in the order of attachment to prevent R. from acquiring a valid title under his mortgage, and that A.'s petition did not constitute a charge on the property. Rutnunser Singh v. Ram Tenot Share, 12 W. R., 491.

Held that the alienation of property cannot be declared void under the provisions of Section 240, Act VIII of 1859, where no attachment order was issued or notified in the manner prescribed by Sections 235 and 239 of the said enactment.

Where there was no attachment after the manner prescribed in Act VIII of 1859, but the property was advertised for sale, and the judgment-debtor encumbered the property with liens,—Held that the decree-holder can sell the property, but subject to liens which were not otherwise proved to be collusive. Saboo Chund v. Jeetum Singh and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 206.

A obtained a decree ex parte against B. Property belonging to B. was attached in execution. While under attachment B. sold the property to C. Afterwards B. applied for and obtained an order, under Section 119, Act VIII of 1859, to set aside A.'s decree and for a new trial. Held by Loch and E. Jackson, JJ., that a mortgage of any kind made after attachment is such an alienation as is contemplated by Section 240, Act VIII of 1858, and is null and void. Held also by Loch, J. (E. Jackson, J., dissenting), that such alienation is null and void, not only as against the creditor making the attachment, but also in regard to the whole world. Munno Lall v. Reet Bhungun Singh and others, 9 W. R., 544.

Held (Markby, J., dissenting) that the private bonâ fide alienation for value of property, attached under Act VIII of 1859, made during the continuance of the attachment, is, by Section 240 of that Act, null and void only as against the attaching creditor or persons who may acquire rights under or through the attachment, and not as against the whole world. Anando Lall Dass v. Radhamohan Shaw and others, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 49.

Where it is found that a judgment-debtor is known in the manner required by Section 239, Act VIII of 1859. Held that there was nothing in the order of attachment to prevent R. from acquiring a valid title under his mortgage, and that A.'s petition did not constitute a charge on the property. Rutnunser Singh v. Ram Tenot Share, 12 W. R., 491.

Held that the alienation of property cannot be declared void under the provisions of Section 240, Act VIII of 1859, where no attachment order was issued or notified in the manner prescribed by Sections 235 and 239 of the said enactment.

Where there was no attachment after the manner prescribed in Act VIII of 1859, but the property was advertised for sale, and the judgment-debtor encumbered the property with liens,—Held that the decree-holder can sell the property, but subject to liens which were not otherwise proved to be collusive. An application to a manager, Bhiram, 2 W. R., X. There was an appointment of the property for rejection of property. The facts were from the Daburuma R., Ap., 1864, 243. An application 243 of the property was rejected against the Prasad v. W. R., F. Section to a Court, property, debtor to it, when reasonable to the decree. Doogar v. R., 1864, 505. In appeal of VIII of discretion mora the decree equally save the Zukoora R., 505. In exec decree of attached; caused the spicuous to be deli decree was defendant appeal by sale was been serve order, had visions of and irrege Held the decree out but should manager. That a bid and decree, w tained up Prac cution of man Sin. When auction it been sold to it, and ord brought in 1861. Under the old law the time within which a suit might be brought on such a cause of action was 12 years. Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859 shortened the period to one year.

 Held, reversing the decision of the Civil Judge, that the plaintiffs' action was not barred.

The period of limitation contained in Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, is applicable only to a case in which the procedure prescribed by that section has been adopted. Venkatanarayana v. Akkamma, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 139.

The effect of the last sentence of Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, is to exclude a party to an investigation under that section from any other remedy than that expressly provided for him by that section,—viz., a regular suit to be brought within one year from the date of the order made against him, and such party cannot wait till the sale of the attached property has taken place and been confirmed, and then bring his suit within one year from the last date. Sethuraman v. Sarat Singh, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 220.

The day on which judgment is pronounced is not to be reckoned within the time allowed for bringing a suit under Section 246. Petersham Shah v. Kuttinoo Noyee Debba, W. R., 1864, 321.

In a suit by a landlord against his ryot for rent, in which he attached certain growing crops, under Section 16, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862 (the attachment being before judgment, and therefore according to Section 86, Act VIII of 1859), the claim of an intervenor ought to be investigated in the same manner as a claim to property attached in execution of a decree.

The course to be adopted in such a case is that pointed out in Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, and an order passed under that section is not open to appeal, though the party against whom it is made is at liberty to bring a suit to establish his right. Karthick Chundra Mookerjee v. Mooktta Ram Sircar, 10 W. R., 21.

Two several judgment-creditors attached certain property, which was released upon the claim of a third party, under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859. One of them sued the successful claimant, and obtained a decree for directing the property in dispute to belong to the judgment-debtor, and thereupon caused the property to be sold, and became the purchaser thereof. Thereupon an assignee of the other judgment-creditor sued him, alleging an earlier lien, and praying a sale in satisfaction thereof. The defence set up was that, as the plaintiff did not come into Court to set aside the order under Section 246 within a year from the date thereof, he was barred from bringing the present suit.

 Held that the omission to bring a separate suit for that purpose did not bar him from obtaining a declaration of his prior lien. Chintamani Seth v. Irwar Chandra, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 122.

Where, in execution of a decree, a property is seized as belonging to A. as representative of B., deceased, and A. claims the property as his own, and denies that it ever belonged to B. or to B.'s estate, A.'s claim must be dealt with under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, and an order under that section is not appealable, but can only be disturbed by recourse to a regular suit. Re J. B. Rainey v. Ishwar Chunder Bhattacharjee, 12 W. R., 333.

An Appellate Court is competent at any stage to allow objections to be taken to an apparent defect in the plaint.

 Held that a party against whom an order has been obtained under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, must, if he sue for its reversal, assert substantially the same right as that which has been contended for in the execution. Held, by Jackson, J., that in a suit for declaration of title, defendant must have given a cause of action, by impugning it antecedently to plaint filed, even though their written statement be hostile. Colvin, Cowie, and others v. Elias, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 212; S. C., 10 W. R., 45.

The provisions of Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, are prospective, and do not apply to proceedings in execution under the old procedure. Gocool Ram Deo v. Ram Soondur Surmah, 9 W. R., 292.

A party failing to establish his claim to attached property under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, on the point of possession, is not debarred from afterwards bringing a suit to establish title within the period allowed by law for bringing such suit. Rajah Bhishenprakash Narain Singh v. Baboo Misser and others, 8 W. R., 79.

In disposing of a claim under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, if the Court be of opinion that the property attached ought not to be sold, the proper order for the Court to make is a simple order to release the property from attachment. Bhyrup Lall Bhukut v. Meer Abdool Hossein and others, 8 W. R., 93.

Money paid to release an execution in execution of a decree cannot be made the subject of a claim under Act VIII of 1859, Section 246. Mostow Beg v. Juggernauth Das and Rogomath Doss; Claim of Omchund and Ramkarnnn, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 248.

When, under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, property which has been attached is ordered to be released, the order for release is made with reference merely to the particular claimant who has obtained the order. This order is not to be regarded as a general decision (of which all the world can have the benefit) that the property does not belong to the judgment-debtor. Musumut Imam Bandee Beg and others v. Naumohun Tukee Khan and others, 8 W. R., 27.

The purchaser from a judgment-debtor cannot take advantage of an order obtained by the judgment-creditor under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, to which he is an entire stranger. Gunja Narain Ghose and others v. Haradun Ghose, 6 W. R., 157.

Where a claim under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859 is dismissed, there is no appeal from the order of dismissal. Sheikh Bukhree and another v. Bugroshchour and others, 6 W. R., 45.

Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859 (relating to investigations of claims and objections to sales of attached property) is prospective, and does not apply to past proceedings in execution. Lokun Singh v. Deo Narain Singh, 3 W. R., 62.

Where a judgment-creditor seeks to attach and sell a decree on the allegation that the assignment of it was not a bond-fide conveyance, and the conveyance purports to be one of property specified in Section 265, Act VIII of 1859, it is the duty of the Judge, under Section 246, to enquire whether the assignee of the decree was or was not in bond-fide possession of the property. If the Judge enquires into the facts, no appeal lies from his order; but if he refuses an enquiry, the High Court, under its general powers of superintendence, can and ought to require him to make the enquiry. Chunder Lahor v. Kasheppure Debha, 8 W. R., 26.

In a suit to establish a right to property attached in execution under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, if the plaintiff fails to make out his claim of right, he is not entitled to a decree, on the ground that the order of attachment was made without jurisdiction. Hurris Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Bhooobun Moye Debha Chowdhraun, 4 W. R., 99.

Where a Civil Court attaches immovable property for sale in execution of a decree, and a third party comes forward and claims a portion, the Court need not, under Section 246, Code of Civil Procedure, hold any enquiry in the matter. The claimant should be treated as a defendant, and his proofs used, as they bear upon the question whether the judgment-debtor is in possession. Nito Kaler Debha v. Kripa Nath Roy, 8 W. R., 358.

A decree-holder caused the right, title, and interest of his debtor in certain land to be attached in execution. A claim was preferred, under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, against the attachment by a previous purchaser, but was rejected. The claimant then instituted the present suit for confirmation of his possession upon reversal of the said order. The defence set up was that the purchase was made by the father of the first defendant, and that the plaintiff was constructively a mere trustee. The Moonisfied for the plaintiff, and the Principal Sadr Amin reversed his decree because the suit was not brought within a year of a release of the property from attachment under a claim of the defendants, which attachment was made in execution of two decrees for money against the present plaintiff. It appeared that in the proceedings had for releasing the property from attachment, no notice was issued to the judgment-debtor (present plaintiff). Held that the decision of the Principal Sadr Amin was wrong. In the present case, the claimants in possession were not so according to any of the modes of derivation which Section 246 enumerates as authorizing the continuance of the possession and the dismissal of the claim. The possession was in the claimants, and there was nothing in the rights of the judgment-debtor which could make such possession his possession. This being so, even assuming that he was a party to the order made, such order could not be said to be against him, because his claim was one which could not have been determined by any order made under Section 246. The order so made was perfectly consistent with his present condition.

In order to maintain a suit under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, the plaintiff must be prepared to prove that the right which he put forward and is seeking to have declared has been investigated and disallowed, that it is still in existence, that it has been infringed, and that he is seeking compensation, or to recover possession. But it never was intended by the Legislature in that section that the time of the Court should be taken up with a perfectly useless inquiry into a dispute apart from any claim for compensation or possession, e.g., as in this case, where the plaintiff's object was to establish the truth of his assertion that the interest of a judgment-debtor, which was put up for sale, was that of a tenant only, and not that of an ususfructuary mortgage. Amjid Ali v. Kunkoo Sham, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 304.

A refusal to make enquiry as to whether an intervenor is in possession of the shares of attached property which he claims, or whether the judgment-debtor is in possession of the share only which the intervenor says the judgment-debtor is in possession of, is opposed to the principles of Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859. Issur Chunder Gangooley v. Mohina Mohun Dass, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 74.

If a plaintiff coming into Court, under Section 246 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside an attachment and sale shows, in proof of his title, that a deed of sale has been executed in his favour by the judgment-debtors, and that consideration-money has passed and possession has been given him, he starts his case sufficiently. If the defendant alleges notwithstanding that the sale was collusive and fictitious, it is for him to show that it was so. Digumburee Dassee v. Baneymadhub Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 155.

The only question proper to be decided under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, is whether the property attached is in the possession of the judgment-debtor or some person in trust for him, or whether it is in the possession of a third party not in trust for the judgment-debtor. Maharajah Dheraj Sahoo v. Niran Chuckerbutty, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 119.

Where a claim under Section 246, Civil Procedure Code, is dismissed or struck off without adjudication, a fresh claim by the same claimant within a reasonable time may be entertained, subject to the provisions of Section 269, and de novo investigation made under Section 269, and determination that as applicant's claim had been disallowed, under Section 246, he had no right to remain in possession. Held that this order was just and proper. Baneemadhub Roy, Petitioner, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 431.

In execution of a decree against A., "the moiety or half-share of A." in certain lands is attached. M. files a petition, under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859, in which he admits that A. has only a one-eighth share in the lands, but alleges that A. has only a one-eighth share, and that a two-eighths share belongs to himself, M. Held that this was a claim to property attached in execution under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859, which the Court under that section is bound to investigate and adjudicate upon.

In execution of a decree against A., "the right, title, and interest of A." in certain lands are attached. M. files a petition under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859, in which he admits that A. has a one-twentieth share, but alleges that A. is entitled to no more than a one-twentieth share; and that he, M., has a two-twentieth share. Held that, assuming the attachment of A.'s eighth title and interest to be an irregular attachment under Section 213, M., whose lands were included within such attachment, was entitled to come in and claim his own two-twentieths share, and the Court was bound to investigate his claim under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859.

Held, also, in both cases, that M. was entitled to have the attachment removed so far as his share was concerned.

Held, also (per Phear, J.), that in the first case M. was entitled to have the attachment removed so far as regards the margin in excess of A.'s actual share; and that in the second case he was entitled to have the whole attachment discharged. Cowar Rajkumar Roy v. S. M. Kadambini Debi, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 175; 13 S. W. R., F. B. R., 63.

A Judge has no jurisdiction to try the same objector's claim, under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, a second time as against the same attachment, or to re-open a question finally decided on the former occasion. Khelat Chuder Ghose v. Bhuggobutty Churn Mookerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 144.

An elephant having been attached in execution, it was released on the claim of one P., upon S. standing surety. It was finally declared to be the property of the judgment-debtors; but the decree having been satisfied from other sources, it was ordered that the elephant be returned to the judgment-debtors. It was then demanded from the surety; but he objecting, the claimant (P.) was served with notice to produce it. This not having been done within the period fixed, the Moonsiff ordered that it should be demanded from the surety, and (on his failure to produce its stipulated price) should be realized by attachment and sale of his property.

Held that the decree having been executed, the Moonsiff's subsequent proceedings as to the elephant were illegal, and that the right to it was open to a suit.

Held that the decree having been executed, the Moonsiff's subsequent proceedings as to the elephant were illegal, and that the right to it was open to a suit.

Where a plaintiff applied for attachment of certain property before judgment under Section 81, and a third party intervened, claiming to hold the property by purchase on his own account,—Held that such intervenor ought not to have been made a party under Section 73 of the Code, but that his objection should have been entertained under Sections 86 and 246 of the Procedure Code. Ram Rutnun Dass v. Gobind Dass, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 141.

(h) Limitation with respect to Claims.

The limitation prescribed by Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859 cannot be applied retrospectively to suits to question orders made before that Act came into operation. Dwarkanath Roy v. Sreemath Roy, W. R., 1864, 237.

A claim to property about to be sold in execution of a decree was made under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859, but the Court declined to entertain it, and passed an order under Section 247 disallowing the investigation. Hureda Sowder Som Choudhur v. Annundmath Roy Chowdhyr, 3 W. R., 8.

When intervenors claim a share of attached property, the Court should define the respective shares of the debtor and the intervenors, and sell the debtor's definite share only. If the Court omits to do so, and sells the undefined rights and interests, there is no decision under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, of which the purchaser, by lying in wait without possession for one year, can take advantage. Monohur Khan v. Troyluckho Nath Ghose, 4 W. R., 35.

Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, makes no distinction in favour of cases not decided on the merits, but makes it imperative on the party whose claim to attached property has been rejected, under any circumstances, to sue within one year. Shairik Khoda Bosksh v. Purmanund Dutt, 5 W. R., 214.

The limitation contemplated by Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, is applicable only to an order passed under that section, or to a suit brought to set aside an order passed under that section. Kally Mohun Paul v. Bhokanath Chakladar and others, 7 W. R., 138.

The plaintiff applied for the attachment of a property, and on the objection of the defendant the property was released from attachment, —Held that the plaintiff was bound, under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, to sue in the Civil Court to establish his right within a year from the order of sale. Nigkoal Lal Ghadhyr and others v. Musumati Zebhaloonissi and others, 7 W. R., 456.

The possession of an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree runs from the date of delivery, as provided by Section 246, Act VIII of 1859,—i.e., by publication of sale certificate and proclamation by beat of drum—and not from the date of his possession. Assudoolah v. Sheikh Akbar Ali, 7 W. R., 60.

Limitation, under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, is not applicable to an adjudication upon a petition disallowed on the ground that the section did not apply at all to the petitioner's case, and that the case was not a fit one for adjudication under that section. Radha Nath Benerjee v. Jadu Nath Singh and others, 7 W. R., 441.

The limitation of one year, in Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply to a suit for declaration of right and confirmation of possession. Wazar Jumadar v. Noor Ali, 12 W. R., 33.

Certain lands were attached under a decree against the ancestor of the plaintiffs; but on the intervention of the defendant, under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, they were released to him. —Held that was not an order made between plaintiffs and defendant, such as to make it necessary for the former to sue for declaration of title within one year. Nitta Kolita and others v. Bishnuman Kolita, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 49.

An objection not taken in cross-appeal before the lower Appellate Court cannot be taken in special appeal; but if the case be remanded for new trial, such objection may then be taken before the Court of first instance. On attachment of certain property, plaintiff and defendant preferred their respective claims thereto. The plaintiff's claim was disallowed; but the defendant's claim was allowed. The plaintiff, after the lapse of a year from the date of the order disallowing his claim, sued to recover possession of the said property. The defendant was that the suit was barred by lapse of time under Clause 5, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859, and Section 246, Act VIII of 1859. —Held that Clause 5, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859, and Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, do not apply to such a suit. Durgaram Roy v. Rajya Narang Dutt, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 254.

that the assets are sufficient to meet the means bad faith not only in respect of the applicahaving been ordered to serve as surety; and (on having been done) the property.

Held that Moonsiff's order to serve was illegal.

Where property was sold by purchase, intervenors under Section 246 of Act VII of 1862 objection was brought to set aside the order disallowing the objection.

Held that if the Judge's discretion is used in favor of an advantage it does not amount to attachment circumscribed.

The limit of a decree was beyond the creditors, that if the Judge's order was made after investigation, then, under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859, an appeal is barred; if it was an order refusing to investigate the objection, then the appeal is barred either by Section 247 or by Section 364, unless allowed by Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861.

Held also that the objector was not a party to the suit, and that he was not entitled to appeal under Section 11.

Section 223, Code of Civil Procedure, can have no bearing on this case. Narain Acharjee v. E. Gregory, 8 W. R., 304.

Property attached was, on the claim of a third party, released by the Court without proceeding under the provision of Section 246, Act VIII of 1859. The attaching creditor sued more than a year afterwards for a declaration that the property belonged to the judgment-debtor. Held that the suit was not barred. Tagghendhosa Bose v. Srimati Sachyi Bibi, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 22; 8 B. L. R., Ap., 39.

Where, notwithstanding that a claim under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, was rejected, the claimant, who was in possession, continued in possession until the execution proceedings were struck off for default and subsequently revived, and her property was sold under a second attachment.—Held that the claimant was not bound to sue within one year of the order rejecting her claim, which was in reality no decision under Section 246. Luckhee Prea Debia v. Khyroollah Kizze, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 367.

(j) Manager of Attached Property.

A Court executing a decree was held to have been justified in refusing to appoint a manager for attached property belonging to the judgment-debtor where it would have taken 20 years to pay off the debt from the profits of the property. But the High Court saw no objection to the appointment of a manager to dispose of portions of the property by sale, mortgage, and otherwise, under Section 243, Code of Civil Procedure, if the debt could thereby be cleared off in six months. Mohine Mohun Dass v. Ram Kant Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 322.

The fact of a manager having been appointed to realize the profits of a property with a view to satisfy certain decrees (even though the appointment should have been confirmed by the High Court) is no bar to a Judge, on the application of another decree-holder, enquiring into the state of the property, and passing proper orders, and should he find that the proceeds are insufficient to satisfy all the decrees within a reasonable time, causing the decree to be executed in the usual way. Dimy Lal v. Ram Rutten Neogy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 46.

Property cannot be put under a manager unless it has been attached, and the Court has no right to assume that the assets are sufficient to meet the claims of the creditors. Ajoodhya Doss v. Doorja Dutt Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 101.

Numerous decrees had been obtained against the judgment-debtor, part of whose property consisted of a village which was attached in 1859. The village was under the management of the Collector, whom the Courts below treated as a manager put in under Section 243 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The decree-holders received rateable shares in the nett income of the village in liquidation of their respective decrees. It appeared that it would take 15 years to pay off the various decree-holders. The petitioner applied to the Civil Court for an attachment of the village in execution of his decree. The application was refused on the ground that the village was already under attachment in satisfaction of other decrees.

Upon appeal the High Court ordered a sale of the village, the sale proceeds to be dealt with in accordance with the proper provisions of the Code, on the ground that it could never have been intended to give the Civil Courts for an indefinite length of time the management of the encumbered estates of the country, or to compel decree-holders to submit to such an unreasonable delay as 15 or 20 years before obtaining satisfaction of their decree.

Quære,—Whether Section 243 was intended to be applied to the case of more than a single decree-holder. Rednum Atchutaramayyru v. Khaja Mahomed Amin Khan, 5 Mad. Rep., 272.

XI.—Execution against the Person.

(a) Arrest.

The Code of Civil Procedure expressly preserves a distinction between arrest and imprisonment, and the immunity from further process is only generated by actual confinement. E. Chingalarazia Chetty v. W. Subbich, 6 Mad. Rep., 84.

Where a judgment-creditor had obtained a writ of attachment against the property of his judgment-debtor, but the debtor had no property to the knowledge of the creditor against which the attachment could be enforced,—Held (reversing the decision of the Court below) that he was entitled to an order for execution of the decree by attachment of the person of the debtor.

In an application for such an order the onus is on the judgment-debtor to show that he has no means of satisfying the debt, and that he has not been guilty of any misconduct, and not on the creditor to show that, by sending the debtor to prison, some satisfaction of the debt would be obtained. C. Seton v. A. S. Bijohu, 8 B. L. R., 255; and 17 S. W. R., C. R., 165.

No order for enforcing a decree by imprisonment under Section 200 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be made until the defendant has had an opportunity of obeying the decree, or has contumaciously refused to obey it. Umed Kiku v. Nagin Das Norotandus, 7 Bom. R. R., O. C. J., 171.

If a decree-holder can show that assets of a deceased judgment-debtor have come into the hands of such debtor's legal representative, and if the representative fails to satisfy the Court that he has duly applied such assets, the latter may be arrested in execution of the decree. Women of rank are exempted from arrest in execution of decrees. Rooknee Soondery Debee v. Heramote Debee, 2 W. R., Mis., 33.

It is not within the competence of a Judge to direct the re-arrest of a judgment-debtor without any petition or motion of the decree-holder to that effect. Shib Ram Mundle v. Rohenmooloolah, 15 S. L. R., C. R., 69.

A writ under civil process of a Mofussil Court on Sunday is legal in this country. 4 Mad. Rep. Rul. LXII.

A defendant, arrested in execution of a decree of a Small Cause Court, applied to that Court, under Section 273 of the Civil Procedure Code, averring that the only property which he had was immovable property, and he was willing to place it at the disposal of the Court.

He held that the judgment creditor is liable to be called upon to show cause for not proceeding against the property described in the application in execution of his decree. Shaw, J. C. v. Subramier, 5 Mad. Rep., 108.

(b) Commitment.

A writ of the Calcutta Small Cause Court commanding its “Bailiff to take the body of A., and " have him before the Court on the——day of —— " to satisfy B. in the sum of —— debt and costs, " ordered and decreed by the said Court on the " —— day of —— to be paid to the said B. with " costs of execution, and by virtue thereof to take " and convey the said A. to the Common Jail of the " said Court, there to be detained in safe custody " for —— weeks, or until he shall sooner perform " the said order of the Court," is in point of form a sufficient warrant to the jailer to receive and detain A., notwithstanding Act XII of 1865.

It is not necessary, in the case of commitment of a debtor to prison by the Calcutta Court of Small Causes, to bring him in the first instance before the Court, as under the provision of Act VIII of 1859, in order to have his subsistence-money fixed. In the matter of Meer Nawaub, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 315.

(c) Subsistence-Money.

On the 30th of September the plaintiff, a detaining creditor, paid to the jailer of the Calcutta jail subsistence-money for 30 days, for a prisoner confined at the suit of the plaintiff, the jailer then having a balance of 4 annas over from the subsistence-money for September.

A prisoner was arrested on August 4th, and committed to prison on the evening of the same day. Before his committal the execution-creditor paid into the hands of the jailer a sum sufficient for his subsistence-money for 27 days, at the established rate of 4 annas per day. On the 5th August a writ of habeas corpus was applied for to bring the prisoner up, and on the 6th a further sum of 4 annas was paid to the jailer to cover any deficiency in the former payment. He held that the requirements of Section 276, Act VIII of 1859, had not been fulfilled, and that the prisoner was entitled to his discharge under Section 278. Dutt v. Cornelius, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 79.

The discharge of a defendant from confinement in jail, in consequence of the plaintiff's failure to pay subsistence-money at the rate fixed by the Court, bars a second arrest and imprisonment in execution of the decree. Appiah Chetty v. Chengdoo, 4 Mad. Rep., 76.

Where the defendants were arrested through the Moonsiff's Court in execution of a decree, but were released at the request of the execution-creditor before they had been sent to the civil jail, it was held that the execution-creditor was entitled to a refund of the balance of subsistence-money advanced by him, that remained in the Moonsiff's hand at the time of his debtor's release. Section 10 of Act IV of 1865 (Bombay) is not applicable to such a case. Ex-parte Kaskhinalt Balok, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 84.

Unless subsistence-money is paid before the commitment the commitment is illegal. The jailer is bound by the words of the Act. It is for him, and not for the prisoner, to see that the money is paid. In the matter of Julius Thomson, a prisoner in the Great Jail of Calcutta, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 431.

D. M., a prisoner for debt, having been discharged for non-payment of subsistence-money, the execution-creditor applied for a rule nisi for his re-arrest, or for a new writ. Rule refused.

He held that a prisoner once discharged, on non-payment of his subsistence-money, cannot be re-arrested, nor can a new writ be issued against him for the former debt, and that the principle that no man shall be twice vexed on the same charge applies here.

Per Morgan, J.—That there may be a distinction between the words "release" and "discharge" in Act VIII of 1859, and that the arrest of the person is not the full satisfaction here that it is under English law. In the matter of Dwarkalall Mitteer, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 109.

Where a judgment-debtor, arrested in execution of a decree, applied for his discharge under Section 273, Act VIII of 1859, but while pretending to furnish a complete statement of his property was shown to have concealed a portion, the lower Court was held to have acted properly, under Section 8, Act XXIII of 1859; in ordering him to prison, Guha Gobind Mundle v. Benomalee Paul, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 54.

"Bad faith," in Section 281 of Act VII of 1859, refers only to bad faith in respect of an application under that section. In re Gurudas Bose, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 23.

A judgment-debtor, in receipt of a monthly stipend, is not entitled to obtain a discharge under Section 273 of Act VIII of 1859, unless he submits to place that stipend at the disposal of the Court, that provision may be made for satisfaction of the debt. Nawab Asafuddowlu Resu Hossein Khan v. Homin Siddowlee Abed Khan, 6 B. L. R., 575, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 204.

J. P. having been imprisoned on a writ of ca. sa., was brought up on a habeas corpus, and applied for his discharge, on the ground that his arrest and imprisonment were illegal, as no order for his allowance, under Section 276 of Act VIII of 1859, had been made. Sufficient subsistence-money, however, was paid to the Sheriff previous to the arrest, and he was kept amply supplied with it. Application refused.

Held that Sections 276 and 278 of Act VII of 1859 apply as much to the execution of a mofussil decree as to an arrest by writ of the High Court; that no one is to be imprisoned in execution of a decree unless subsistence-money for a month in advance be paid to the person to whose custody he is committed; that a similar payment must be received in advance every successive month pendant the imprisonment; that if any such payment be not made the prisoner is entitled to be released; that the "allowance" referred to in Section 276 of Act VIII of 1859 means subsistence-money of four annas per diem; that Section 276 of Act VIII of 1859 enacts only that the prisoner shall have an allowance of four annas per diem paid monthly, unless the Court shall especially fix a less amount; that an order for an allowance to the prisoner is not necessary, and is intended only as a relief to the execution-creditor; that the omission to have such order made does not render the arrest and imprisonment illegal; that in the absence of such order, Section 278 of Act VIII of 1859 ensures four annas a day as subsistence-money for the prisoner. Aga Ali Khan v. Jodydoyal Persaud, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 52.

S. H. D. M., and R. D., in the custody of the Sheriff on a ca. sa., appeared on a habeas corpus for the execution-creditor to show cause why they should not be discharged. S. H. had been arrested in execution of a decree in a suit which was begun under the old procedure in the Supreme Court, and the question was whether the procedure in his case should be regulated by Act VII of 1855 or Act VII of 1859. The grounds relied on by all three prisoners (besides the above in S. H.'s case) were, that no order for their allowance had been made by the Court, nor had they been brought before it for that purpose. S. H. was remanded, as his case was held to be affected by the old procedure only, under which there need be no order for allowance passed. The other two prisoners were discharged.

Held that proceedings in execution of a decree in a suit begun under the old procedure are regulated by Act VII of 1855.

Held also (Peacock, C. J., dissentiente) that a prisoner arrested on a ca. sa. must, within a convenient time, be brought before the Court to have his allowance fixed; that an "allowance" within the meaning of Sections 276 and 278 of Act VII of 1859 means subsistence-money fixed by order of the Court; that the Court must have the prisoner before them to exercise their discretion upon a matter which must be determined before he can be formally committed to prison, and which may be so determined as to entitle him to be discharged; that a decree must be carried into execution by and under the direction of the Court which pronounces it by means of a special application to the Court, and an order passed thereupon; that a jailer or other officer cannot lawfully receive a prisoner for debt under commitment unless the preliminary payment of subsistence has been made in compliance with the order of the Court; that the jailer cannot lawfully retain a judgment-debtor when the time limited for payment of any subsistence-money under the order of the Court passes without due payment accordingly; that the warrant empowers the Sheriff only to arrest the defendant in execution, and detain him for such reasonable time as is sufficient to allow of his being brought before the Court, and having an opportunity of applying for his discharge; that detention of such prisoner by the Sheriff after such reasonable time, without further authority of law, is illegal. In re Samboon Gourand Bobot, a prisoner for debt in the Jail of Calcutta; In re Durgaeans Katter, a prisoner for debt in the Jail of Calcutta; In re Rakhal Doss, a prisoner for debt in the Jail of Calcutta, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 59.

J. J. was arrested on the 30th of December on a ca. sa. dated the 24th of December, on which day the execution-creditor paid subsistence-money for thirty days. This failing on the 29th of January, the prisoner made a fruitless application to the Sheriff for more, and then applied to the Court for his discharge, upon which notice was directed to be given to the execution-creditor. J. J. was brought up on a habeas corpus, and all parties were represented by counsel. It was held that a prisoner had been left without subsistence-money by the execution-creditor, and he was accordingly discharged.

Held that the Sheriff need not specify in his return on a habeas corpus that the prisoner has been continuously in his custody; that no particular form of petition of discharge is required from a prisoner applying for his discharge for non-payment of subsistence-money; that subsistence-money must be paid in advance by the execution-creditor before putting a writ of ca. sa. in force; that the discharge by the Sheriff of a prisoner detained on a writ of ca. sa. is equally imperative on the happening of any of the contingencies specified in Section 278 of Act VIII of 1859; that a prisoner who has not been transferred by the Sheriff to the custody of the jailer by a separate warrant, and is brought up on the writs by the Sheriff, is to be considered as in the custody of the Sheriff; that on failure of subsistence-money the prisoner should be released, and further detention of him by the person in whose custody he is, is illegal. J. L. Khon Speyer and another v. Johan Janssen, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 28.
The Court will discharge a prisoner from custody when the jailer holds no warrant for his detention, although he has been properly in the custody of the Sheriff. In the matter of Shah Sahib, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 19.

R. D. applied for his discharge under Section 273 of Act VIII of 1859, and the Court not being satisfied of his inability to pay, and that he was honest and bonâ fide in dealing with his property, refused the application. Held that a prisoner for debt, if he be perfectly honest, without present means of payment, and has given every facility in his power to his creditors taking possession of his property, is entitled to release. That nothing short of this will entitle him to it. Chhet Ram v. Ramchunder Dutt and others, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 101.

The Sections of Act VIII of 1859 (273—280, &c.), which enabled a defendant, arrested or in prison in execution of a decree, to obtain his discharge, have no application in cases in which the prisoner has become insolvent, and the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors has his case pending before it; but they do apply where the petition in insololvency has been dismissed or otherwise fully disposed of. The acts of bad faith referred to in Sections 275 and 281 are not limited to acts of bad faith committed by the prisoner in his application for discharge, or for the purpose of procuring his discharge, but include acts of bad faith in the manner of incurring his original liability. In re Soopersaud, a prisoner, and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 91.

B. M. and several other prisoners in the custody of the Sheriff of Calcutta for debt, without having been brought up to have an order for their allowance made, on being produced for that purpose by the Sheriff, applied for their discharge under Section 273 of Act VIII of 1859. Preliminary objections were taken to the validity of the warrants on which the Sheriff arrested them, on the grounds that the time for execution was not specified in them; and that even had they been originally valid their authority had expired, owing to the delay in bringing up the prisoners. Both objections were overruled.

Held that a mere informality in a warrant, such as the omission of the time for execution, only renders it irregular, and does not invalidate it.

That advantage having been taken of such irregularity to prejudice the prisoner, affords grounds for an application to the Court to set the warrant aside.

That a mere delay in bringing the prisoner before the Court, after his arrest, if not for a considerable period, does not render his detention illegal. In re Bhutanath Mullick and others, prisoners in the Jail of Calcutta, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 96.

Held that the procedure, on an application for his discharge under Section 273 of Act VIII of 1859, by a person arrested in execution of a decree for money, is such a question as comes within the words introduced by Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, in addition to the original provision in Act VIII of 1859, Section 283; and the order passed thereon by the Court executing the decree, is subject to appeal, notwithstanding that orders as to imprisonment in execution of a decree are excepted from the operation of Section 365 of Act VIII of 1859, as this exception, there being no affirmative prohibition, is removed by the provision of Sections 8 and 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, which Act, as directed by Section 44 thereof, is to be read as part of Act VIII of 1859. Yeshawoo Amritrao Janin v. Ismail Ali Khan, 2 Bom. Rep., 99.

Sections 273 and 280 of Act VIII of 1859 do not apply to cases of insolvency where the whole of the debtor's property is vested in the Official Assignee, and cannot be handed over to this Court in the manner contemplated by those sections. Kisoramnath Chatterjee v. Kanny Lal Dutt, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 247.

Where a lower Appellate Court, from the replies of a judgment-debtor whom it examined, and from the circumstances of the case as set forth in the evidence, came to the conclusion that the judgment-debtor had not proved that he was not possessed of property, so as to be entitled to the benefit of Section 273, Act VIII of 1859, and Section 8, Act XXIII of 1861,—Held that there was no error of law in this finding. Abdool Rahman v. Abdool Sobhan, 12 W. R., 125.

A person in custody who has been guilty of bad faith in the transactions relative to which he is detained, but not with regard to his application under Section 280 of Act VIII of 1859, is entitled to his discharge. In the matter of a prisoner in the Great Jail, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 8.

Where a judgment-debtor applied for release from imprisonment under the provisions of Section 280, Act VIII of 1859, and the judgment-creditor adduced prima facie evidence that the applicant had wilfully concealed property, or rights and interests in property, which evidence was rebutted. The Judge was held to have done right in rejecting the application. When a party seeks the assistance of a Court in any case in which the best knowledge of the disputed facts is with himself, he is bound to place that knowledge before the Court with the sanction of an oath. Gnangamun Churn Dhar v. Kalingaga Seter, 12 W. R., 422.

A plaintiff imprisoned at the suit of the defendant for the costs of an unsuccessful action is not a proper object for the application of Section 281, Act VIII of 1859. In the matter of Beenanwose Doss, Cor. Rep., 123.

According to Section 283, Act VIII of 1859, no appeal lies from an order passed in execution of a decree. By Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, the power of appeal is restricted to cases in which the appellant was one of the parties to the original suit. Goburdhon Sahoo Mistree v. Issureen Nund Dutt Jha, 3 W. R., Mis., 23.

C. D. repaired P.'s ship on his express representation that the repairs would be paid for by a letter of credit which the owners had sent for that purpose. P. applied the funds to the payment of other creditors. C. D. sued him for the amount of the repairs, and obtained a decree, in execution of which P. was imprisoned. The Court having refused to give him his discharge under Section 273 of Act VIII of 1859, he appealed, but the appeal was dismissed.

XII.—SALES IN EXECUTION.

(a) Sales.

A Deputy Collector cannot set aside a sale in execution of a decree which he has once completed when there is no default on the part of the auction-purchaser. Adurmonce Dassee v. Kamince Soon- durce Debiah, 3 W. R., Act X R., 145.

Where an execution sale was set aside, on the ground of irregularity on the part of the Ameer and other officials,—Held that the judgment-debtor was not chargeable with the expenses of such sale. W. Hulse v. Luchmunn Dass, 1 Agra Rep., Misc., 1.

If in a sale under execution against A., B.'s property is sold, B. is not bound to reverse the sale to recover possession; nor will his asking to reverse the sale preclude him from recovering possession. Gunganarain Bhuttah v. The Collector of Midnapoor and others, 6 W. R., 47.

A sale in execution of a decree is illegal if made on a holiday, whether it is a fixed holiday of only a day on which the Courts are closed by order of the High Court. Haroon Jemadar v. Jadub Chunder Haldar, 3 W. R., Misc., 24.

A seizure and sale by the Sheriff of the amount of a legacy under a writ against the executor, declared invalid in the absence of proof of payment extinguishing the legatee's interest. Stephen Lazar v. Cilla Ragava Chitty, 5 W. R., P. C., 126.

It is no valid ground for impeaching a sale, otherwise good, to say that other sales which apparently might have been set aside had been conducted elsewhere. Kalee Koomar Mookerjee v. The Maharajah of Burdwan, 5 W. R., 39.

Under a sale in execution of a decree no property can be sold except that which belongs to the defendants in the suit. Accordingly, if under a decree in a suit against A. alone, for a debt for which B. is jointly liable, an estate be sold in which B. is entitled to an equal share with A., the interest of A. alone is acquired by the purchaser. Kisset Chunder Ghose v. Mussamut Ashoorun and others, Marsh., 647.

A, a Hindu, was possessed of an undivided moiety in certain property, and was also entitled to a reversionary interest in the other undivided moiety contingent on his surviving his mother. In a suit against A., the Sheriff, under a writ of fi. fa., seized and sold to B. the right, title, and interest of A. in the premises. In ex parte suit by B., asking for a declaration that he was entitled to the contingent reversionary interest of A., as well as to his present possessory right, Macpherson, J., gave a decree for the present possessory right, but refused to make any decree as to the contingent reversionary interest of A. Kisto Dhan Gangaooly v. Rabutty Dassee and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 324.

In a suit to annul the sale of an under-tenure in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859, which was subsequently set aside on the allegation that it had been obtained collusively and by fraud, it was found that neither the decree-holder nor the purchaser was guilty of any fraud. Held that the mere circumstance of the decree under which the sale had taken place having itself been set aside did not invalidate the sale, the plaintiff having failed to show that the purchaser was a party to the fraud which led to the decree and sale. Juggul Kishore Banerjee v. Abhaya Churn Surma, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 84.

To save a particular property from sale, a judgment-debtor must show the value and condition of other properties in her possession, and the Judge must consider how and by what arrangement such a disposal of different portions of such property may be made, so as to avoid the sale of the property already attached. Deb Kumari Bibee v. Ram Lal Mookerjee, 3 B. L. R., 107; 12 W. R., 66.

A party who bids for an estate in a sale in execution, knowing that he is not able to deposit the earnest-money, obstructs the business of the Court, and is guilty of contempt of Court, punishable under Section 228 of the Penal Code. Mohesh Chunder Mookerjee, appellant, W. R., 1864, Misc., 3.

A sale in execution of a decree made while that decree is under review, cannot stand if the decree is subsequently reversed. The party dispossessed under the decree is entitled to recover the land with mesne profits. Sheikh Bhoolloo v. Ramnarain Mookerjee, W. R., 1864, 129.

Property not attached and not advertised for sale cannot be sold in execution of a decree. The quantity and nature of rights and interests existing in the debtor at the time of attachment and advertisement alone pass by the sale in execution. Ram Onogroho Singh and others v. Mussamat Montorun Singh and others, 6 W. R., 223.

Where a decree directs the sale of A.'s property first, and then of B.'s, if the decree-holder is unable, from opposition, to sell A.'s property, and proceeds against B.'s, and cannot realize his decree therefrom, he has not lost his right to attack and sell A.'s property. Mary Eliza Stephenson and another v. Unnoda Dosser, 6 W. R., Misc., 18.

Where a sale in execution of a decree is postponed, a fresh proclamation and fresh notice ought to be issued. Shashee Mookhee Burmooiya v. Dwarkanath Biswas, 6 W. R., Misc., 84.

A sale in execution of a decree was set aside by a subsequent decree of 9th March, 1861, but was afterwards allowed to stand by an order of 7th May, 1862. As no suit was brought to set aside the latter order, it was held to be a final judicial proceeding, and the sale declared to be good and valid. Munoo Lall v. Choonee Shahoo, 7 W. R., 116.

A sale in execution of a decree for costs is not cancelled when that part of the decree which made the plaintiff answerable for the costs is set aside. Munoo Monee Dassee and others v. The Collector of Beverbroon and others, 8 W. R., 300.

Where there is a sale in execution, the latest act of the decree-holder to keep his decree in force is the sale which took place at his instance, not the confirmation of the sale. The Maharajah of Burdwon v. Luckhee Monee Debee and others, 8 W. R., 359.

A suit was brought against A.'s widow upon a bond given by A. In execution of the decree obtained against the widow, A.'s property was put up and sold. The advertisement of sale in one place said that the property to be sold was the property of the widow; and in another, the rights and interests of the debtor. Held that the property intended to be sold, and sold, was the rights and interests, not of the widow personally, but of the widow as A.'s representative. (Dissentient, Campbell, J., who held that a public sale carried only the rights which were expressed, and not those which ought to have been expressed, in the proclamation of sale.) Buksh Ali Sowdagur v. Essan Chunder Mitter, W. R., F. B., 119.

A decree-holder caused certain property to be sold by auction in execution of his decree, alleging it to be to the judgment-debtor. He advertised it himself, and set off the price against the amount of his decree, which was thus satisfied. It was afterwards found that the judgment-debtor had no interest in the property, and it was recovered by the real owner. Held that no fresh execution of the decree could issue against the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder could not recover his purchase-money. He was in no better position than a stranger. Sheikh Mahomed Basrulla v. Sheikh Abul, 4 L. R., Ap., 35.

A., in satisfaction of a decree against B., caused the sale of a tenure, styling it a jote-jumma. C., the superior zemindar, purchased the tenure as such for Rs. 900; but failing to pay the balance of the purchase-money, the tenure with the same description was re-sold, and purchased by C. for one rupee. A., on discovering his mistake in having advertised the property as a jote-jumma, when in fact it was a shamilat-talook (a more permanent and valuable holding), caused a sale of B.'s rights and interests in the shamilat-talook, and, having purchased them himself, was put into possession. A. then sued for rent under Act X of 1859, when C. intervened as in enjoyment of the rent, and A.'s suit was dismissed. A. now sues to establish his right to the shamilat-talook.

Held that A. was entitled to succeed, as he had acted bona-fide, and that C. could not be considered an innocent purchaser for a valuable consideration, but a purely speculative purchaser, as he must have known that no such tenure as that which he purchased under the denomination of jote-jumma had any real existence. Hora Nath Roy and others v. Motthoora Nath Acharjee, 7 W. R., 4.

No sale in execution of a decree can take place, either of moveable or immovable property, under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859, without previous attachment, and a sale without prior attachment is illegal. The words "attachment and sale" in Section 201 must be taken together, and not distributively.

The omission in a sale proclamation to mention particulars as to the numbers, value, &c., of Government promissory notes under attachment for sale, is not such an irregularity as will vitiate the sale, though the lower Court would have exercised a sound discretion, under Section 249 of the Code, if it had called for such particulars.

The sale of such notes through a broker is permissive under Section 248, and not obligatory.

The production of the notes in Court was not essential, as they were in the custody of the Collector; Section 238 applying to cases in which property is in the possession or power of the judgment-debtor. Luchmeeput and others v. Lekraj Roy, 8 W. R., 415.

A life-interest in the residue of the real and personal estate of a testator, after all the charges upon it have been satisfied and provided for, and after a full administration has taken place of the assets for the purpose of discharging these several dispositions, cannot be sold under an execution issued in the Supreme Court against the property of the testator. Biibee Tokai Sherob v. Daood Mullick Purreedoon Beglar, 4 W. R., P. C., 87.

The law of the moveable is the lex rei sitae at Sheriff's sales, and controls or modifies the English law as to execution and delivery. E. Brown v. Ram Comul Ghose, W. R., 1864, 179.

A decree-holder may attach property, and have it sold in execution of his decree, notwithstanding the existence of a previous attachment. A question might arise at the time of the distribution of the sale proceeds, whether a party having made an attachment under Regulation II of 1806 would be entitled to have his claim satisfied before the other decree-holders. Mahomed Kuzulbash v. Mahomed Jha, 12 W. R., 49.

Where the holder of two decrees attaches property in execution of one of the decrees, he has a right to state in the notification of sale that he is entitled to credit for the full amount bid for his property at the time of the first sale. Foobraj Singh v. Gour Buksh Lall and others, 7 W. R., 110.

A sale made of immovable property pending a suit against the vendors to recover a debt is valid, although the motive of the vendors may have been to prevent the land being attached and sold in execution. Pullen Chetty v. Ramulanga Chetty, Mad. Rep., 368.

Where the decree-holder is himself the purchaser at a sale in execution, there is no reason why he should not, instead of paying the price in cash, give receipts for the amount due to him under his decrees, supposing their value is sufficient to cover the amount for which the property is sold. Khelilt Chunder Ghose v. Keshtub Chunder Paul Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 46.

Where an execution-debtor is jointly interested with another person in immovable property which the execution-creditor seeks to sell in execution of his decree, the ordinary procedure for a Court executing the decree to adopt is, to put up for sale the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in his undivided share of the property to be sold.

Where the Court below adopted a different procedure, and, after partitioning the property, put up for sale the divided share of the execution-debtor, the High Court, in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, refused to interfere, in consequence of the laches of the applicant in neglecting to avail himself of an opportunity which the lower Appellate Court had given him, of showing that the partition...

In a suit for possession of a tank, on the allegation that plaintiff purchased it in execution of a decree against one S. D., and that, after being put in possession, she was subsequently ousted, defendant's plea being possession after prior purchase at an execution sale, a suit for possession was ordered to be dismissed, the claim of defendant was not barred by limitation. Anjum Khan v. Jalal Kharr Samundar, 16 S. W. R., 356.

A judgment-debtor having preferred various objections to the Court of the Subordinate Judge which was executing the decree against him, his objections were rejected, and the Court proceeded to sell the property attached in execution. The judgment-debtor then preferred an appeal to the High Court on the ground that no substantial injury was shown to have resulted from their regularity. Sonamonee Dossia v. Motee Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 385.

In a case wherein lands were sold in execution, notwithstanding intervention, under Section 246, Code of Civil Procedure, by a plaintiff who claimed under a hibba, which was held by the lower Courts to be false, the High Court refused to interfere merely because the action-purchaser had not appeared to give evidence. Syud Abdul Huq and others v. Syud Ambur Ali and others, 8 W. R., 209.

A judgment-debtor having preferred various objections to the Court of the Subordinate Judge which was executing the decree against him, his objections were rejected, and the Court proceeded to sell the property attached in execution. The judgment-debtor then preferred an appeal to the High Court against the order which threw out his objections, but without expressly objecting to the confirmation of the sale. Held that the judgment-debtor was entitled to deal with the case as an appeal against the sale which had taken place before the appeal was preferred, and no further appeal therefore lay to the High Court. Sonamonee Dossia v. Motee Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 385.

In a case wherein lands were sold in execution, notwithstanding intervention, under Section 246, Code of Civil Procedure, by a plaintiff who claimed under a hibba, which was held by the lower Courts to be false, the High Court refused to interfere merely because the action-purchaser had not appeared to give evidence. Syud Abdul Huq and others v. Syud Ambur Ali and others, 8 W. R., 422.

On the application of a decree-holder of a money decree for the sale of immovable property belonging to the judgment-debtor, certain parties objected that they had purchased the rights of the judgment-debtor therein. Subsequently some of the objectors who claimed a 14-annas share in the property compromised with the decree-holder, who then applied to the Court to have the remaining 2-annas in possession of certain parties adhered to, and that 14-annas share be sold. The lower Court ordered that the sale of these 2 annas should not proceed if the objectors who claimed them paid to the decree-holder a sum equal, rateably, to that levied from the 14-annas. Held, on appeal, that the decree-holder had not proceeded if the objectors who claimed them paid to the decree-holder a sum equal, rateably, to that levied from the 14-annas. Golbindung Persad v. Rajah Kum Purkash Singh, 9 W. R., 378.

In execution of a decree which merely declared that the right of a judgment-debtor in certain property extended to two-thirds of it, the lower Court divided the property before selling the debtor's share, - Held that as the decree did not specify that any particular portion of the property belonged to the debtor as his share, his right, title, and interest in the property could only be sold, and that the determination of this right must be left for future adjudication between the purchaser and the cosharer of the debtor, unless an arrangement could be arrived at. Atmārām Kulānandas v. Fátmd Begum, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 67.

The immovable property of A. at a Court's sale was purchased by B. with the money and on behalf of A. B. subsequently conveyed the property to C. for the benefit of A., - Held that the property could be taken in execution by the creditors of A.

Quære,—Whether but for the subsequent conveyance B., under the operation of Sections 259 and 260 of the Civil Procedure Code, would not have had a good title against the creditors of A.

(b) Irregularities in Sales.

A judgment-debtor whose right in the property in dispute was put up for sale under a previous execution, and purchased by the decree-holder himself, is in a position to contest the legality of the sale.

Smallness of price is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a sale, unless it be the effect of an irregularity in the sale proceedings. Reed Bhunjun Singh and another v. Mitterjet Singh, 6 W. R., Mis., 31.

Held that it was unnecessary to determine whether the omission to attach immovable property sold in execution could vitiate the sale where no substantial injury was shown to have resulted from the irregularity.

Quære,—Whether a sale in execution of a decree can be set aside by reason of an omission (entire or partial) to attach the property. Jowherooz Jamma Khun v. Bane Madhub Nundun and others, 11 W. R., 226.

Before a sale is confirmed, a party objecting to the irregularity of the sale proceedings, on the ground that the notification of sale and attachment has not been properly issued, should be allowed proof of non-service of or insufficient service. The misconduct of a decree-holder may be a good cause of action, but cannot be a ground for setting aside a sale. This can only be done summarily if irregularity in the sale proceedings resulting in material injury to the debtor be proved. Rethbhumun Singh v. Mitterjet Singh, 4 W. R., Mis., 9.

G. A. obtained a decree against M. Afterwards L. N., who had obtained a decree against G. A., attached the decree which he (G. A.) had obtained against M., and, upon sale in execution, became himself the purchaser of that decree. It afterwards appeared that the decree held by L. N. against G. A. was barred by limitation. Held that the execution of L. N.'s decree against G. A. being barred by lapse of time at the time of sale, the sale was invalid. Golam Asgar v. Lakhamani Debi, 5 B. L. R., 68 ; 13 S. C. S. W. R., C. R., 273.
A sale conducted by a peshkar, by direction of his Moonisf, who was indisposed, was upheld, no substantial injury being shown to have resulted.

Omur Chunder Doss v. Soormunissa Khatoon, W. R., 1864, 44.

When a sale was advertised to take place on the 5th Jeyt, 1269, which date was erroneously stated in the sale notice to correspond with Saturday, May 17th, 1862, whereas the 5th Jeyt was in fact Sunday, May 17th, and the sale took place on Saturday, the 4th Jeyt, the sale was held to be illegal, in consequence of its not having taken place on the 5th Jeyt, or any subsequent date to which it might have been adjourned after due notice.

A sale by a judgment-debtor to the special appellant of a portion of the attached property was declared void, because made after attachment taken out by the special respondent.

When a decree-holder sells, under a summary decree obtained ex-parte, which was ten years old at the date when he sought to enforce it, and of which the plaintiff who now sues to set aside the decree had no notice until the proceedings for the sale of his property at that date, it is incumbent on the defendant to prove the service of the necessary process by the clearest evidence.

In the case of moveable property, process of attachment and sale may be issued successively or simultaneously; but in regard to immoveable property, process of attachment and sale should be issued successively; but if issued simultaneously, and the attachment has been made bond fide, and the sale proclamation issued as required by law, with an interval of 30 days between it and the sale, such irregularity is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the sale, as no material injury could accrue to the debtor thereby.

Where a sale was announced to take place two hours earlier than the hour announced was alleged to be a material irregularity seriously prejudicial to the interests of the judgment-debtor, it was held to be the bounden duty of the Court to take evidence and determine whether bidders had been prevented from attending, and whether an irregularity of a material kind had occurred.

Where a portion of property pledged as security in execution of which the sale took place was legal or not. Even if the decree in execution of which the sale took place were a collusive one, the rights of the auction-purchaser would not be affected if he was no party to the fraud; and there would be no ground for setting aside the sale.

The inam village of Chundunpuri was sold by auction under a decree. The notice of sale stated that the sale would begin either at Maligam or Chundunpuri, and be completed at Maligam. Held that the notice of sale was sufficiently certain.

An auctioneer who sells under a decree has power to adjourn the sale from time to time (upon giving proper notice), but whether he does so or not is a matter of discretion. The practice of the kirkuns reading aloud notices of liens on property about to be sold by auction is objectionable, but, in the absence of proof that the value of the property has been thereby deteriorated, it is not such an irregularity as will vitiate the sale.

Where a decree merely ordered that an embankment be lowered to its proper height, and the nazir in addition caused breaches or holes to be cut in the embankment so lowered, because he thought them necessary for the protection of the bund from the flow of water over its surface,—Held that this was not done in execution of the decree.

Where the fact of an execution sale having taken place about two hours earlier than the hour announced was alleged to be a material irregularity serious prejudice to the interests of the judgment-debtor, it was held to be the bounden duty of the Court to take evidence and determine whether bidders had been prevented from attending, and whether an irregularity of a material kind had occurred.

Objections having been successfully raised, under Section 246, Act VIII of 1869, against a decree-holder's attachment of a tenure, as the property of his judgment-debtor, he brought a regular suit, and obtained a declaratory decree that the property belonged to his debtor. He then took out execution, attached, sold, and himself purchased the property in question. The objector in the meantime appealed to the Privy Council, and having obtained a decree reversing the declaratory decree, took out execution against the opposite party for costs and wasilat. The opposite party objected, but the Judge allowed the execution to proceed, and deputed an Ameen to ascertain the amount of mesne profits collected.

Held that the decree of the Privy Council could not be held to include restitution of everything that the decree-holder would have enjoyed had the property not been sold in execution.

Where certain properties (factories and lands) were numbered separately in the loothunde of sale, an irregularity was held to have been committed by their being sold in a lump. Held (Glover, J., dissentient) that such irregularity had caused damages to the judgment-debtor.

The defendant, being the holder of a decree, whereby a certain sum was declared due as a lien on two mouzahs therein mentioned, sold his decree to the plaintiff in the present suit, who had purchased the proprietary right in the mouzahs subject to the lien. Subsequently the defendant, who retained possession of the decree, sued out execution and realized the amount due under it, together with subsequent interest thereon. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover back the money paid by him as the consideration for the sale, together with damages proportionate to the loss sustained by reason of the subsequent improper execution of the decree, viz., the amount of subsequent interest. Rajah Goor Sahai v. Hur Sahai, 3 Agra Rep., 204.

The recovery back of money taken in execution of a decree which is afterwards reversed on appeal is not the subject of a new suit. The matter must be enquired into by the Court which passed the decree as a question arising between the parties relating to the execution of such decree. Nursing Chunder Sen v. Bidyadhara Das, 2 W. R., 275.

Money paid over at the instance of a judgment-creditor or under a wrongful order of Court may be recovered by means of a suit in the Civil Court. Chatter Singh shore Dass v. Bungshee Mohun Dass, 17 S. W. R., 152.

A sale in execution of a decree is not invalidated by the fact that the balance really due is overstated, there being no other irregularity in the publication and conduct of the sale. Chatter Singh v. Musit, Dhuran Koonswar, 1 N. W. R., par. 2, p. 1.

A decree-holder is entitled to prove, when his property has been sold without further notice on a date subsequent to that originally fixed, and especially when the execution-creditor is the purchaser for a very inadequate value, that he has been substantially injured by such sale. Kishen Prassona Mozoondar v. Nurduma Das, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 339.

Certain properties were to be sold in execution of decree. As to some, the sale took place as far as possible on the day fixed, but was publicly put off to the next day, when, no higher price being obtainable, it was concluded at the price bid on the first day; while as to the alleged inadequacy of the price, that was found to be owing to several claims being advanced, among them one by his own wife, against the right and title of the judgment-debtor. Held that there was no irregularity in the conduct of the sale which could prejudice the judgment-debtor; and that even if there were any, it was for the benefit of the judgment-debtor. Nuddeah Kishore Dass v. Bunghee Mohun Dass, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 210.

Held that the appellant could not complain of the order of the Subordinate Judge postponing a sale in execution of decree from the 25th to the 26th, unless he could show that he had suffered substantially by the postponement. But the attention of the Court was called to the importance of abiding by the date fixed in the proclamations of sale as far as possible, and not postponing sales without good reason. Sen Asuntaonissa Bice v. Sen Khudemoonissee Bibe, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 278.

Where the right, title, and interest of a party had been sold in execution, but possession was delivered to the purchaser more than fifteen years after the sale, such irregularity was held not to entitle the party first mentioned to a decree in a suit to recover the property unless he could prove possession for a period of more than twelve years before he was dispossessed. Attoram Dass v. Balaku Dass, 1 S. W. R., C. R., 357.

The silence of a judgment-debtor on a previous occasion is no bar to his being heard when he objects, alleging material irregularity, provided his allegation is made within the thirty days allowed by law. Syud Nuzmooddeen Ahmed v. Abdool Azeez, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 95.

Where objections to sale proceedings are presented by judgment-debtors, the Court ought to make a careful investigation into the circumstances attending such sale, and not rely on the mere report of a nuzir.

Each objection should be taken up separately and determined specifically, and the reasons for the finding duly recorded. Sookh Roy Singh v. Moofta Tuffaazol, 2 N. W. R., 142.

An auction-sale under a decree can only be set aside for some material irregularity by which substantial injury has been sustained.

Where a sale was fixed for the 21st November, but delayed until the 22nd, without any order of postponement, or any fresh proclamation of the day of sale, there is a prima facie case of injury to the party whose property was sold. Such a postponement is in contravention of the provisions of Section 249 of Act VIII of 1859, as, when a sale is postponed, there must be fresh proclamation of the sale and date when it is to take place. Sanwal Singh v. Makhun Pandey, 2 N. W. R., 143.

Where an irregularity in an execution-sale (e.g., a misstatement in the notification), produces a mistake, and the property is consequently sold at an inadequate price, the judgment-debtor is entitled to have the sale reversed. Khodeja Bibee v. Johud Rohun, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 320.

When an application to cancel a sale does not mention the specific grounds contemplated in Sections 256 and 257, Act VIII of 1859, the absence of such specifications does not take away the jurisdiction of the Court to enquire into the matter. Where a Judge in such a case sets aside a sale after finding material irregularity and substantial injury, his finding is final, and cannot be questioned by the High Court in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction. Sooknoor Singh v. Kushu Sing, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 250.

A obtained a money-decree upon a bond in a Small Cause Court against B, by which it was declared that certain landed property hypothecated by the bond was to be primarily liable for the debt. The decree was transferred to the Court of the Sudder Ameen of the same district, the property was put up for sale, and it was purchased by C. Prior to sale B alienated the property to D, who after sale preferred his claim to it, under Section 246 of Act VIII of 1859, which was disallowed. More than a year after this D brought this suit against C to recover possession. In special appeal it was held that the decree of the Small Cause Court being on the face of it without jurisdiction, the suit was not barred, and the case was remanded, to be tried on the merits. Lala Gunday Lal v. Habibunnissa, 7 B. L. R., 235; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 311.

The mere fact of the decree-holder having bid and purchased at the execution-sale, without having obtained the license of the Court, does not, ipso facto, invalidate the sale. *Veerapah Chetty v. Ipa.
Under a decree passed by a Court which had no jurisdiction to try the suit, the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor, A., in a certain property was sold, and purchased by B. The decree was after the sale set aside as having been passed without jurisdiction. In a suit by A. against B. for property was sold, and purchased by B. The decree was about to take possession of the property under the purchase,—Held that the sale in execution was a nullity, as the decree had been passed without jurisdiction.

When property is advertised to be sold in separate lots, and is afterwards sold in a lump, this is an irregularity, but the person who wishes to set aside the sale on the ground of such irregularity must show affirmatively, to the satisfaction of the Court, that substantial damage has, in fact, been sustained by him on account of such irregularity. Where, therefore, such damage had not been distinctly proved,—Held that the sale could not be set aside on the ground of the irregularity complained of.

The conduct of a vakeel, who having acted in that capacity on behalf of a judgment-debtor in certain proceedings in execution of a decree, subsequently became partner with the decree-holder in the purchase of the property remarked upon.

Quaers,—Whether, under such circumstances, the purchase by the vakeel, or the purchase by the decree-holder in conjunction with him, could not be set aside. Roy Nandiput Mahata v. Uraghurt, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 181 ; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 200.

The plaintiff sued to establish his right to and to recover certain lands in the possession of which he had been obstructed by the defendant. The plaintiff purchased the lands at a sale held in execution of a decree obtained against the 1st and 2nd defendants in the Court of the district Moonsiff of Tripassore. The sale was directed by the district Moonsiff of Tripassore. Between the date of the decree and the sale, the village in which the lands were situated was transferred from the jurisdiction of the district Moonsiff of Tripassore to the district Moonsiff of Conjeeveram. Held, that the sale was a nullity and conferred no title upon the plaintiff; but that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the 1st and 2nd defendants the amount of the purchase-money paid by him. Narayana Saway Naick v. Saravan Mudaly, 6 Mad. Rep., 58.

(c) Stay of Sales.

Where a judgment-debtor proved that a sale in execution might be stayed, as material injury would otherwise be caused to him from the circumstance that the day fixed for the sale was so near to the latest safe day for the payment of the Government revenue,—Held that good and sufficient cause was not shown for staying the sale. Re Ahmed Reza, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 281.

While a decree for money was being executed by the sale of immoveable property, the judgment-creditor petitioned the Court to stay the sale for two days, as the defendants, the judgment-debtors, had entered into a razinamah with him. On the same day the judgment-debtors petitioned the Court to continue the sale for three days. Two days afterwards the judgment-creditor presented a petition to the Court, stating that the judgment-debtors had executed a note in his favour for rupees 8,500 in part payment of the decree, and promising to execute a deed of sale on a stamp; but a sum of rupees 9,600 having been subsequently offered, the judgment-debtors failed to execute the deed of sale; and he prayed that the judgment-debtors might be examined in respect of the sale for rupees 8,500, and that the sale to him be confirmed.

The Civil Judge made an order refusing to accede to the prayer of the judgment-creditor. Held (Innes, J., dissenting) that the order of the Civil Judge was right. A. Venkata Narasimha Apparao v. K. Venkatarama Rama, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 90.

The provision contained in Section 256 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that applications to set aside a Court's sale of immoveable property must be made within thirty days from the date of the sale, relates only to applications to set aside the sale for irreality, and not to cases in which there has been a fraud committed by the officer of the Court who conducts the sale. Vir Singhdipa bin Basiingdipa v. Sadu Shikwdd Appa Golchudd and Anantachandra bin Hari Acharya, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 74.

(d) Rulings under the Code.

There is nothing in Section 248, Act VIII of 1859, which restricts claims under it to titles derived from the judgment-debtor, or out of the estate. It comprises all claims or objections to the sale of lands in execution of decrees. Horish Chunder Roy v. Brojo Soondar Mouzon, 6 W. R., 164.

In Section 248, Act VIII of 1859, the words "whom the Court may appoint" apply not only to the words "any person," but also to the officers of the Court. In the absence of the Subordinate Judge it is not competent to the Judge, because he is a superior officer, to perform the duties required by Section 248. Judoonath Roy v. Ram Buksh, 12 W. R., 238.

The object of the proclamation under Section 249 is to give notice to intending purchasers, not to the judgment-debtors. Luck Ram v. Mohesh Doss, 12 W. R., 488.

When a sale in execution of a decree is postponed indefinitely, it is necessary to issue a fresh proclamation under Section 249, Act VIII of 1859, giving notice of the time and place of sale. Okhoy Chunder Dutt v. Erskine and Co., 3 W. R., Mis., 11.

The law (Section 252, Act VIII of 1859) provides that no irregularity in the sale of moveable property under an execution shall vitiate the sale, but that any person injured thereby may recover damages.

Under a decree jurisdiction to the rest of the property was sold, was after the sale without jurisdiction confirmation of the purchase, a nullity, as the jurisdiction.

Jan Ali v. Jadu Nath Kundu, 6 B. L.
When property rate lots, and if there an irregularity, must show that in the sale an irregularity, must show affidavit to the sale, that the sale was sustained by him. Where, therefore proved, must show that the sale was sustained.
The court must show that the sale was sustained, that the sale was sustained.

The conduct of certain parties in the proceeding became the purchase.

The plaintiff to recover compensation had been plaintiff purchase execution of and 2nd def Moonsiff of the district of the date of the decree. The lands were jurisdiction of to the district to the title upon the entitled to recover the amount.

Narayana, 6 Mad. Rep.

Where an execution may otherwise be the day latest safe determined, not shown to that the sale of immoveable property, the judgment any person injured thereby may recover damages.
by suit, but it does not follow that the right and interest of the judgment-debtor in such property may not be challenged and contested by any claimant within the period allowed by Clause 3, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859. Mussamut Hirdey Beebe v. Beshesper Pershad and others, 3 Agra Rep., 175.

The sale of moveable property belonging to one man, under an execution of a decree against another, is not a mere irregularity within the meaning of Section 252, Act VIII of 1859. Mussamut Hirdy Beebe v. Beshesper Pershad and others, 3 Agra Rep., 175.

When a sale of moveable property belonging to one man, in execution of a decree against another, becomes absolute under Section 251, it transfers only the rights and interests of the debtor; and the owner of the property so sold is entitled to sue either for the restoration of the same specifically, or for damages. If he makes an alternative claim, it is in the option of the Court to award him either, according to its own view of the justice of the case.

A plaintiff is not debarred by reason of the failure of an application under Sections 256 and 257, Act VIII of 1859, from suing to set aside a sale on the allegation of fraud in connection with the irregularities first complained of; such fraud forming a distinct cause of action. Kund Lall Doss v. Dalwar Ali and others, 11 W. R., 244.

Before a sale in execution can be set aside, under the provisions of Section 256, Act VIII of 1859, on the ground of material irregularity, the applicant must prove that he sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity. Abdool Mahommed v. Shibi Doolaree Tewaree, 11 W. R., 114.

Where a property is advertised to be sold in execution of a decree made after its confirmation, and after the expiry of thirty days from the date of sale, is inadmissible under Section 256, Act VIII of 1859. Ishan Chunder Dutt v. Mothooranath Doss, 6 W. R., Mis., 122.

Objections by the judgment-debtor to a sale in execution of decree being made absolute, can be raised and disposed of only under Sections 256 and 257 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A bid for a property put up to sale in execution of a decree held by B., and the lot was knocked down to him. The next day the property was sold in execution of a decree held by C., who had a previous lien on the estate, and A. consequently refused to pay the purchase-money. The property having been re-sold under Section 254, Act VIII of 1859, for a sum less than that bid by A., he was held liable for the difference. Sooraj Buksh Singh v. Sree Kishen Doss, 6 W. R., Mis., 126.

The provisions of Section 253, Act VIII of 1859, were held applicable in a case where the re-sale did not forthwith take place on the day of the sale, but on a subsequent date. It is only on failure of a purchaser to pay in the balance of the purchase-money, under Section 254, and not in failure of the purchaser to make the deposit required by Section 253, that the purchaser can be compelled to pay up the difference between the first and second sales. Ajodhad Persad v. Gopal Dutt Misser, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 271.

A decree may be enforced against the representative of a deceased person only to the extent of the property inherited by the former from the latter. An objection by the representative that he has taken nothing by inheritance, however valid, is not an irregularity contemplated in Section 256, Act VIII of 1859, and must be raised before the sale in execution of the decree has taken place; otherwise the objector must seek to set aside the sale by suit, under the Civil Code 35, Act XXIII of 1861, to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity, under which a sale can be set aside, on the ground of substantial injury by reason of such irregularity. Abdool Mahommed v. Shibi Doolaree Tewaree, 11 W. R., 114.

Directions as to the payment of the purchase-money at sales in execution of decree, arising under Section 254, Act VIII of 1859, are to be dealt with as provided by that section, and do not fall under Sections 256 and 257.

Directions as to the payment of the purchase-money at sales in execution of decree, arising under Section 254, Act VIII of 1859, are to be dealt with as provided by that section, and do not fall under Sections 256 and 257.

A default under Section 254 is not an "irregularity in conducting the sale" under Section 256, Binda Deobe Dossie v. Gopee Soondery Dossia, 6 W. R., Mis., 82.

On an application to set aside a sale of immovable property in execution of a decree under Section 256, Act VIII of 1859, before ascertaining whether any substantial injury has accrued to the debtor, the Court must come to a distinct finding that there has been an irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. Mussamat Parbatty v. Giridharcha Lalli, 6 W. R., Mis., 125.

Held that Section 256 refers to objections by judgment-debtors, and not to third parties purchasing at a sale, conducted regularly and with all formality, property which had been previously purchased at an illegal sale. Luckmeput Singh v. Mooktakashee Debia, 9 W. R., 388.

A being mortgagee of two properties, M. and P., obtained a decree under which both were attached and lotted for sale; P. to be sold first, and M. afterwards. On the application of the judgment-debtor, the Principal Sudder Ameen sold M. first, and P. afterwards.

After the sale a person who claimed M. under a conveyance by the owner, subject to A.'s mortgage, applied to set aside the execution sale as irregular. Held that he could not come in under Section 256, Act VIII of 1859 (dissentiente, Seton-Karr, J.). Fogenarain Singh v. Bhughano, 2 W. R., Mis., 13.

Where the lower Court allows an objection and makes an order setting aside the sale, such order, according to Section 257, Act VIII of 1859, is final. *Held that the defendant was debarred, not only by Section 256, but by the general provisions of the Act, from pleading that the plaintiff, the certificate purchaser, purchased, not on his own behalf but on behalf of the defendant. Such defendant must show a transfer of title to him from the person who has received it. Jokhee Lah and Buhoree Lall v. Muss. Juggnath Singh v. Lall Aoddar, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 11; S. C., 12 W. R., F. B., 8.

Under Section 258, Act VIII of 1859, when a sale of immovable property is set aside the purchaser is entitled to recover back his purchase-money. *If the Court reversing the sale omit to restore such order, the purchaser may sue for the money from the person who has received it. Greesh Chunder Potter v. Sookhoda Mouye Deb, 1 W. R., 55.

Section 258, Act VIII of 1859, only applies to cases where a sale of immovable property has been set aside under circumstances which would, under Act VIII of 1859, authorize such a proceeding. The fact that the party whose right, title, and interest were sold had no interest at all, or less than was supposed, is no ground for setting aside the sale. Rajib Lochun v. Bimulamon Dasi and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 83.

No appeal lies from an order refusing to grant possession, under Sections 259 and 263, Act VIII of 1859. Gopal Chunder Ghose v. Raj Chunder Dutt, 2 W. R., Mis., 9.

The purchaser of immovable property, sold in execution of a decree of a Civil Court, got a certificate under Section 259 of Act VIII of 1859, and subsequently sued for possession of that which he had purchased. *Held that the defendant (who was in possession) was by Section 260 debarred from pleading that he himself was the real purchaser, and that the purchase was made benemée for him in the name of the plaintiff, the “certified purchaser.” Jokhee Lall and Buhoree Lall v. Muns. Huns Koor, 10 W. R., 167.

Held that Sections 259 and 260, Act VIII of 1859, did not apply, as the sale was made before that law came into operation. Lloddar Ali v. Mohned Tukee and others, 9 W. R., C., 438.

A purchaser of immovable property, sold in execution of a decree, obtained a certificate under Section 259 of Act VIII of 1859. He then sued in ejectment to recover possession of the property purchased. Held (dissentiente, L. S. Jackson, J.) that the defendant was debarred, not only by Section 260, but by the general provisions of the Act, from pleading that the plaintiff, the certified purchaser purchased, not on his own behalf but benemée for him, the defendant. Such defendant must show a transfer of title to him from the purchaser, in whom alone, under the certificate, the title of the judgment-debtor was vested. The object of Section 260 is to prevent any enquiry between the purchaser and any person on whose behalf he is alleged to have purchased.

A suit purchased at a Sheriff's sale, in the name of his son, the interest of a mortgagee in certain property, and, before Act VIII of 1859 came into operation, instituted a suit in his own name to recover the possession of the mortgaged property.

Held that the suit was rightly brought, if the son's consent could be shown.

Suit between the benamieedar and the beneficial owner are alone referred to in Section 260, Act VIII of 1859. Seetanath Ghose v. Madhub Narain Roy Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 329.

Suit for possession of certain property alleged by plaintiff to be joint, but which defendant asserted was self-acquired. Held that, if any portion of ancestral property is found to be in the plaintiff's possession before the death of a third party, the defendant's allegation that the third party had virtually abandoned his own property, and divided it among his heirs, and that consequently properties in dispute, though acquired prior to a partition, were not brought in to be partitioned by reason of being self-acquired by the defendant, would become greatly confirmed whether the partition was effected by the deed produced by the defendant, or otherwise. Section 260, Act VIII of 1859, is not applicable to such a case. Achumbet Roy v. Sulbat Roy, 5 W. R., 160.

Suit for partition, to which there is no appeal. Section 260 of Act VIII of 1859 does not preclude a person purchasing benamee, from setting up his title against a person not being the certified purchaser, or claiming through him. Mussamut Shorosutty Dassee v. Gopessaundary Dassee and others, Marsh., 423.

Suit for possession by purchaser from certified purchaser at an execution sale. Defendant in possession not only denied plaintiff's title, but that of his vendor, whose purchase was clearly fraudulent, being made in collusion with the judgment-debtor to defraud creditors. Held that Section 260, Act VIII of 1859, did not prohibit a defendant under such circumstances from questioning the plaintiff's title; that it provided for the dismissal of a suit brought to question the title of the certified purchaser, but did not prohibit a defendant from questioning that title when the auction-purchaser sought to oust him. Mirza Khyrat Ali and others v. Mirza Syfulah Khan and others, 8 W. R., 130.

Held that the Moonsiff had jurisdiction to issue an order for khas possession under Section 263, Act VIII of 1859, although in the first instance he had ordered possession to be given under Section 264; and that the petitioner, if he was wrongfully dispossessed in the course of executing the Moonsiff's decree, had his remedy under Section 269. Where a second decree-holder is himself purchaser of a property sold in execution of his own decree, and instead of the money being deposited in Court, an order is obtained allowing the decree-holder to have a right to be paid first out of the proceeds of the purchase, such order is not open to appeal under Section 270, Act VIII of 1859. Roja Ram Chowdhry and others v. Scetola Buksh Misser and others, 7 W. R., 113.

No suit or appeal will lie for a refund of the proceeds of sale realized in execution of a decree, paid to a wrong party by order of a competent Court under Section 270, Act VIII of 1859 (dissenter, Levinge, J.). Hurish Chunder Sinor v. Asimoddow Shaha, 5 W. R., 180.

Priority of attachment does not give a decree-holder a right to set aside a sale made by another decree-holder on a subsequent attachment, but merely, as provided in Section 270, Act VIII of 1859, a right to be paid first out of the proceeds of sale. Lalla Jougit Kishore Lall v. Bhukla Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 243.

The decree-holder by whom the property is first attached, and not the decree-holder at whose instance the sale takes place, is the party entitled to be first paid under Section 270, Act VIII of 1859. Kartick Chunder Singh v. Gogaram, 2 W. R., Mis., 48.

Under Section 270 of the Code, the judgment-creditor, whose attachment subsists at the time of sale, is entitled, according to priority of date of attachment, to be satisfied first; and where the attachment of A. under Clause 1, Section 5, Regulation II of 1866, of the Government promissory notes subsisted up to the date of sale, and the attachment of B., though prior in date to that of A., subsequently fell to by his case being struck off the file, it was held that A. was entitled to the whole of the sale proceeds of the notes. Baboo Luchmeepul and others v. Baboo Lekraj Roy, 8 W. R., 415.

Section 270 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to a case in which property has not been sold in execution of a decree. Bishek Chunder Surma Chowdry v. Mun Mohinee Dabee and others, 8 W. R., C. R., 501.

An action will lie in the Civil Court by a decree-holder against the holder of another decree, in order to obtain a refund of money which has been paid to the latter under an order passed in the execution department, in contravention of the provisions of Section 270 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is for the Court to decide whether, having regard to all the equities between the parties, the plaintiff is entitled to recover or not.

Held that Section 270, Act VIII of 1859, applies only to rival decree-holders claiming under different decrees, and not to persons claiming under the same decree.

Where more persons than one are interested in a decree, any one or more of them may apply for execution of it under Section 207, but the Court, in passing an order in execution of such decree, ought to protect the interests of other decree-holders, and such other person ought not to apply for second attachment of the same property under the same decree, but should apply to share in the proceeds realized by the sale in the execution which has been ordered. Mirza Abid Ali and Mirza Jafar Ali v. Munnoo Byas, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 183.

A manager may be appointed by the Court under Act VIII of 1859, Section 279, without the consent of the decree-holder.

The Court has no power to order that the manager shall, out of the proceeds of the estate, satisfy the claims of persons other than decree-holders. Thakoor Chunder v. Chowdry Choto Singh, Marsh., 261.

A Court may try the issue of fraud under Section 272, Act VIII of 1859, without any charge of fraud against the decree appeared from. Jooraum Singh v. Messamut Joota, 2 W. R., Mis., 29.

W. got a decree against M. in the Court of the Sudder Ameen, and in execution attached certain property of the judgment-debtor: J., who had a decree against the same judgment-debtor in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen, applied to the Court of the Sudder Ameen to stay its proceedings on the ground that W.'s decree had been obtained by fraud. The Sudder Ameen refusing the application, J. appealed to the Judge, who saw no ground for the imputation of fraud.

Held that, under Section 272, Act VIII of 1859, J.'s application should have been made to the Court which gave him the decree, i.e., the Principal Sudder Ameen's Court.

(f) Confirmation of Sale and Possession.

The mere formal confirmation of a sale by the Court, after the expiration of 30 days, when no objection has been preferred, is not a proceeding for the purpose of enforcing a decree such as will keep execution alive. Shib Ram Dey v. Banee Madhub Mitter, 11 W. R., 117.

have it sold in execution, objection was made to the sale by the judgment-debtors, who claimed it as their property. Their objections were overruled, and two out of three parcels of the property were sold. The objectors appealed to the High Court, but before their appeal came on the sale was confirmed. The Court, in ignorance of the confirmation of the sale, remanded the case, with a view to a determination of the objector's title. The Subordinate Judge passed no order as to the two parcels sold, but declared that evidence might be gone into as to the third. From this decision an appeal was laid.

Held that the sale having been confirmed it could not be set aside, but that before the third parcel was sold, the issue referred to the lower Court by the remand order should be tried. Footnote Begum v. Maharaniess Jindy Jee, 12 W. R., 201.

If when a judgment-debtor's rights and interests in property are sold the property is lawfully in the possession of tenants, the proper course is not to dispute their lawful possession and occupation, but to place the purchaser in a condition to receive from them the rents in the place of the judgment-debtor. Unenconvenanted Service Bank v. Palmer, 2 N. W. R., 456.

Where the decree-holder takes no step whatever to cause an execution sale to be confirmed, the confirmation of the sale by the Court cannot be regarded as a proceeding on his part towards enforcing the decree. Mullitc Enae Ali v. Waped Ali, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 315.

(g) Rights of Purchaser.

The title of an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree accrues from the date of sale, and not from the date on which he may obtain his sale certificate. Kalee Dass Nogee v. Hur Nath Roy Chowdhr, W. R., 1864, 279.

Purchasers of the property of a judgment-debtor at a sale in execution of a decree do not become parties to the suit, or acquire a right of appeal regarding the sale.

A decree-holder is not prohibited at the time of sale from releasing a portion of the property advertised, should he have grounds for doing so. Bist Bhnunj Singh v. Fowkwr Doss, 4 W. R., Mis., A., 17.

Where rights and interests are sold in execution, with notice of claims of previous purchasers of a portion thereof, and such previous purchasers are afterwards dispossessed by the heirs of the original owner, the purchaser in execution may sue such heirs for return of the property recovered by them, with mesne profits. Deonarain Singh v. Toklim Singh, 5 W. R., 30.

Where the rights and interests of a judgment-debtor are sold in execution, the purchaser takes the land to which they relate subject to such mortgages and leases as may be existing. Oosigour Roy and another v. Ram Khelawon Singh, 10 W. R., 384.

A sale by the Sheriff to a bond-fide purchaser for valuable consideration will not be set aside on the ground that the judgment-creditor had communicated with the Sheriff, and desired him to stay the sale.

The purchaser need not trace back his title beyond the fi-fa. *Note.—The suit was originally brought in the late Supreme Court.] Kamincee Dotsee v. Gourmoney Dotsee and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 359.

Semble—A purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree has no greater rights than a purchaser under a decree in Chancery, whose rights are liable to be defeated by a re-opening of the biddings by order of the Court. Madhub Chunder Duttt v. Jofy Kissen Mookerjee, W. R., 1864, Mis., 29.

The purchaser at a sale in execution of the original proprietor's rights in a certain property pledged for the debt for which the decree was obtained, cannot be held bound by any encumbrance created by the proprietor subsequent to the pledge. Bhugoban Chunder Doss v. Ladda Thakoor Pershad, W. R., 1864, 359.

Property purchased in execution of a decree is not subject to any lien in favour of a person claiming under a bond and deposit of a hibbanamah pledged as security for a loan. Syed Woosze Ulbul Hassenee Chowdhry v. Mussamut Luckhee Bibe, 1 W. R., 143.

Where a purchaser at a sale in execution was named in the sale certificate as "mother and guardian of her infant son," the title to the property was held to be vested by the certificate in the minor absolutely. Hemanginee Dotsee v. Jegendro Narain Roy, 12 W. R., 236.

The purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree founded upon a bond which mortgaged the property was held not to have a preferential title over a prior purchaser because the liability of the property under the mortgage was not declared in the decree, which was only a money-decree. Bromo Gopal Adikaraee v. Bholanath Poddar, 10 W. R., 309.

A purchaser of property sold under a decree in favour of a mortgagee cannot claim to set aside, as prejudicial to his rights, a tica pa tptuk granted by the mortgagee, when those rights were not in existence. Banee Pershaud v. Reet Bhnunj Singh and others, 10 W. R., 325.

A purchaser at a Sheriff's sale takes only such right, title, or interest as the judgment-debtor may possess in the property sold. Bhaeebown v. Bhaeejee Prag, 1 Bom. Rep., 19.

Purchasers at a Sheriff's sale cannot be bound to take notice of a suit against the execution-debtor in a Court which had no jurisdiction over them, or over or in respect of the lands purchased by them which were the subject-matter of the suit, except by consent of the execution-debtor. Dhurundro Chunder Mookerjee v. Sreemutty Annund Moyee Dotsee, 1 W. R., 103.

An auction-purchaser of the judgment-debtor's rights and interest cannot seek to recover what his judgment-debtors could not have recovered. Zaltim and others v. Chooonee Lalti, 3 Agra Rep., 194.

When there was a sale of a specified share belonging to judgment-debtor,—held that the auction-purchaser was not entitled to claim property which had before sale descended to the judgment-debtor. Mussamut Azaddee v. Mussamut Ajmere Koonwar, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 282.

An auction-purchaser can question the fraudulent acts and alienations of the old proprietor in fraud of the decree. Sheik Baitchoo and others v. W. Howard, 3 Agra Rep., A. C., 15.

Held that a purchaser at a Sheriff's sale is not... entitled to compensation under Act XI of 1855, if he had relied solely on the bill of sale. Bhoyrumbhunath Khettry v. Doyalchunder Lahai, Bourke’s Rep., O. C., 159.

In a sale of immovable property made by a Civil Court in execution of a decree, there is no implied warranty by the execution-creditor of the title of the judgment-debtor, the maxim “caveat emptor” applying. Dhondu Mathuradas Naik v. NavMahad Hanumant Kakdu, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 114.

Held that an auction-purchaser of the ryot’s right and interest in his house in a village could not acquire more title than could have been transferred by private sale. It is necessary in such cases to enquire whether, according to the village custom, the ryot was competent to alienate the house, with its site, without the permission of the zenindar. Shib Lall and Pershad v. Lokchun Singh, 3 Agra Rep., 7.

Held that when an auction sale is set aside for the reason of property sold being not saleable in execution, a fresh suit by the auction-purchaser would lie for refund of consideration-money, and the fact that the former decree failed to provide for refund thereof would not bar the auction-purchaser from claiming refund by a separate suit, notwithstanding that he was a party to that decree.

If a sale takes place in execution of a decree in force and valid at the time of sale, the property in the thing sold passes to the purchaser.

Per Norman, J.—If the decree or judgment be afterwards reversed, the reversal does not affect the validity of the sale, or the title of the purchaser. Chunder Cant Siromak, talookdar, and another v. Besseshur Surma Chuckerbutty, 7 W. R., 312.

Where a purchaser in execution claims more than the share of the person whose rights and interests he has purchased, his suit should be decreed to the extent to which those rights and interests are found to exist, and not be dismissed altogether. Rhada Binode Dutt v. Kootabode Mundle, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 363.

When an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree buys the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property sold in execution, and it is subsequently found that the judgment-debtor had no right, title, or interest whatever in the property, no suit will lie against the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to recover back the money which the auction-purchaser has paid.

Although a purchaser, under Section 258 of Act VIII of 1859, recover his purchase-money, it is only when the sale is set aside for irregularity under Section 257. Saudamini Chowdrown and others v. Krishna Kisher Poddar, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 11; and 12 S. W. R., F. B., 8.

M. divided her estate among her children, retaining for herself one-seventh, which was afterwards increased by a portion of what had been given to one of the sons, who deceased. R.’s rights in the estate were sold in execution to B. B., who sold them to R., who sold them to B. K. brought a suit against certain parties, who held the estate in zur-i-peshgeer from M. and her family, for possession of the whole estate, but obtained a decree for one-seventh only, giving him possession conditionally on his paying to the zur-i-peshgeers M.’s proportion of the loan. This decree was confirmed on appeal, and K. made liable for the costs of those defendants in respect of whom his claim had been dismissed. Meantime B., an old judgment-creditor of R.’s father, took out execution against R., and applied for sale of K.’s rights on the estate, which were accordingly sold, the purchaser being B. himself. Subsequently one of M.’s daughters, a successful defendant in the suit brought by R., took out execution of her decree for costs, and put up R.’s rights for sale. The sale was opposed, under Section 246, Civil Procedure Code, by a son of B., whose claim was summarily rejected, and R.’s rights were bought by one M. A. B.’s son then brought a suit within one year to set aside the sale, and to have his own title declared. The suit was against the purchaser and against the representatives of the zur-i-peshgeers; but on the petition of L., one of M.’s heirs, his name was added to the list of defendants. The first Court gave plaintiff a decree, but the Lower Appellate Court found that his claim was barred by limitation against L., on the ground of non-possession within twelve years, and in respect of the zur-i-peshgeer because R.’s decree had lapsed by delay in execution. Held that L. was interested in the result of the suit, and the lower Courts committed no error in law in admitting her to be a defendant under Section 73.

Held that there was nothing in Section 246 to prevent a defendant in such a suit as that of B.’s son from pleading that whatever title plaintiff might have had at some previous time it was extinguished by his having had no possession for twelve years preceding the suit.

Held that what B. had bought was not K.’s right of suit which as against a mortgagee would be governed by a limitation of 60 years) but a right fixed and determined by a decree under Section 16, Section I, Act XIV of 1859, did not apply.

In a suit under the latter portion of Section 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, brought by the owner against the purchaser of property which had wrongfully been attached and sold in execution of a decree, the execution-creditor is properly made a party, the object being to restore all parties to the position which they occupied previously to such attachment and sale.

When a sale is set aside by reason of the execution-debtor having no interest in the property sold, the purchaser of such property is entitled to have back his purchase-money as on a consideration that has failed. Bank of Hindostan, China, and Japan v. Premchand Ratichad; Ahmad bhai Habib bhai v. Premchand Ratichad, 5 Bom. Rep., O. C., 83.

A purchaser at a Court auction sale (not set aside under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure) who has been ejected from the property he has purchased, cannot recover back the purchase-money from the judgment-creditor, there being no warranty on the part of the latter that his judgment-debtor had any interest in the property sold.

As a purchaser at an auction sale held by a Court only acquires the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property sold, a plea of limitation that would be good against the judgment-debtor is good also against the purchaser.

With a personal fame to establish the prescriptive title in a suit in which he is plaintiff, it does not follow that the defendant is entitled to recover the subject-matter of such suit in an action brought by him. Sridhur Vinayak v. Babjibin Tivoji, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 220.

Held that the rule laid down in Ganput Rajashet Khandu Changshet v. Khandu Changshet, "that an unregistered mortgage without possession is not valid against a purchaser with possession," does not apply to a purchaser at a Court's sale, whose instrument of purchase is not registered. Mathurkishus Rundoddas Kallu Khushil, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 24.

A purchaser at a judicial sale is in a position different from that of a mere representative of the old proprietor, or of one who comes by a voluntary sale made by the latter.

A judicial sale transfers to the purchaser the property of the judgment-debtor against the debtor's will, and places the purchaser in a higher position than that which the judgment-debtor, by any prior alienation, could concede on him.

Such a purchaser is competent to defend his possession and title, by showing that the charge which it is sought to establish against the estate is fraudulent and collusive, and therefore void. Omrao Singh v. Shimboo Nath, 2 N. W. R., 38.

It is not compulsory upon an auction-purchaser under a decree, when resistance is offered to his taking possession of the property purchased, to proceed under Section 269 of the Civil Procedure Code. It is open to him, whose instrument of purchase is not registered, to adduce the testimony of witnesses who had collected the rent due on the pollah and paid it to the grantor, i.e., plaintiff's mortgagor, thus establishing the bona fides of the transaction, against which the plaintiff, it was held, had failed to bring forward evidence of a rebuttering character. Ram Soondur Sahoy v. J. P. Descevy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 25.

The purchase of property of the mortgagee in the property sold, a plea of closure pending in the High Court at the time of sale, to which the purchaser was not a party. The possession of a purchaser at a sale in execution of decree, without notice of a mortgage of the property, is adverse to the mortgagee, and a suit to disturb his possession must be brought within twelve years of the commencement of such possession. Srimati Anand Maji Dass v. Dhanda Chand Mookerjee, 8 B. L. R., 122, and 16 S. W. R., P. C., 19.

Where the plaintiff purchased at an auction sale under decree the rights and interests of a person and his minor brother in certain property, and the decree was subsequently set aside as far as it concerned the minor brother's share,—Held that the purchaser was entitled to a refund of a proportionate share of the purchase-money, and that a decree for the same against the wrongdoers, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor jointly, was a proper decree. Neel Kunth Saha v. Asmun Mathoth, 3 N. W. R., 67.

(h) Liabilities of Purchaser.

A purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree is liable for damages caused by re-sale consequent on his not making the required deposit. An appeal lies to this Court from the order of the lower Courts absolving the purchaser from liability. Sree Narain Mitter v. Maharajah Mahatab Chand Bahadoor, 3 W. R., 3.

A purchaser in execution of a decree of a Civil or Revenue Court is not bound by any admission made by his execution-debtor, nor ordinarily by a decree against such person. Rungo Mone Debia v. Raj Coomar Bebee and another, 6 W. R., 197.

At a sale in execution of a decree, when the sale of any lot is completed, the purchaser should then and there be required to make the deposit prescribed by Section 253, Act VIII of 1859, failing which the lot should at once be put up to sale at the risk of the first purchaser. The decree-holder, if the lot is knocked down to him, is as much bound to make the prescribed deposit as any other auction-purchaser. Chukhoo Dutt Jha v. Rajah Leelawond Singh, W. R., 1864, Mis., 30.

In a case of purchase after a decree, where the vendor is only a benameeedar, and the vendor's husband (supposed to be the real owner) wrote the deed and received the purchase-money (thereby making himself a consenting party), the onus lies on the plaintiff to prove that he is a bona-fide purchaser for value, exercising due care and diligence. Man Tumninginee Debtee v. Boistub Churn Bhudder, 1 W. R., 110.

An auction-purchaser at a sale in execution is bound to satisfy himself of the value and quality of the thing sold, just as much as if he were purchasing the same under private contract. Jummal Ali v. Tirbhee Lall Doss, 12 W. R., 41.
When a claim was made for rent by a purchaser of interest in lands sold under execution, he must prove that the judgment-debtor previously possessed such claim. Trannauth Chatterjee v. Prem Chund Sirkar, 1 Ind. Jur., 184.

A purchaser of another's rights and interests is bound to show what may be properly comprised under that denomination. Ram Nath Roy v. Saleem Ahmed Khan and others; Jadoo Nath Roy and others v. Saleem Ahmed Khan and others, 3 N. W. R., 188.

A purchaser at an execution sale having defaulted to pay in the purchase-money, the property was ordered to be re-sold. Before, however, the re-sale took place another sale of the same property was effected at the instance of another judgment-creditor, but at a lower price than on the first occasion.

Held that there was no re-sale such as is contemplated in Sections 253 and 254, Act VIII of 1859, and that the first purchaser was not liable for the difference between his bid and the price obtained at the same sale. Bishoka Moyee Chowdrain v. Sonatun Dass, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 14.

(j) Certificate.

Plaintiff purchased in execution of a decree the rights and interests of a judgment-debtor in a share of a mouzah, and was entitled to possession of that share. The sale certificate set forth what title passed to him and also the boundaries of the mouzah. Held, that the Judge, instead of dismissing the suit because the sale certificate did not prove the boundary and the plaintiff had not proved the boundary, ought to have enquired whether the boundaries as stated in the sale certificate included any land other than the mouzah in question, and to have decided accordingly. Raj Bullub Mitter v. Bheem Denshu, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 344.

Where a joint-decree for contribution which had been passed against a Hindu widow and the reversioner was executed against the latter as the sole surviving judgment-debtor, by the sale of his rights and interests in the property, the joint property was held to have been passed even if the sale certificate omitted the word "property." Chowdhry Zahooorl Huq v. Gooroo Churn Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 329.

In construing a sale certificate, the Court must not merely look to the words of the certificate, but must endeavour to ascertain what was intended to be sold: a mere mis-description would not defeat the purchaser's rights. W. B. Mansin v. Golam Kebria Moonshree, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 490.

A certificate of sale of immovable property of the value of more than one hundred rupees must be registered, and the fact of sale cannot be proved except by the production of such certificate.

The ruling of the Full Bench in II W. R., p 16, F. B. R., that a banamee purchaser is debarred from setting up his title in opposition to a certified purchaser, was held not to apply in a suit in which the plaintiff was a certified purchaser who had bought at a sale for arrears of revenue under Act 1 of 1845.

It is not a principle of law that the issue to be framed in such cases is,—From what source the purchase-money came; though that is an excellent criterion and test for determining the character of the purchase. Brijo Beharee Singh v. Shash Wazed Hossien, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 372.

A mere general description of boundaries in a sale proclamation, or a sale certificate, does not of itself confer on the purchaser such a conclusive title as can be rebutted by no proof to the contrary. Balul Dass v. Nimey Chunder Sircar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 511.

A sale certificate which in express terms passes to the purchaser the rights and interests of a father, does not necessarily transfer to him the interests of his minor sons. But if the minor sons have benefited to any extent by the decree or by the sale in execution of that decree, to that extent, the purchaser has an equitable claim against the minor sons. Sirdar Dyiul Singh v. Ram Budden Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 454.

The valuation of an appeal must be according to the Act in force at the time of its presentation, and the original valuation under a law obsolete at the period of appeal can have no influence in the decision. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. XLIV.

Held, nem. com., that in a case where an appeal to the Privy Council has been admitted against a regular decree made in appeal, such proceedings, as applications for review of the judgment and the order of the Court thereon, ought not to form part of the records to be transmitted to England. Raa Enaat Hossein v. Rane Koushan Jahan, 10 W. R., F. B., 1.

Whenever a memorandum of appeal is rejected under the discretionary power vested in the Court, a judicial order to that effect and the reasons for the same, ought to be recorded. Lalla Jugset Sahoy v. Kassenath Sein, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 121.

If the period within which an appeal is required by law to be filed expires while the High Court is closed for the vacation, parties are allowed to file their petitions of appeal on the first open day after the vacation. Luchmun Chunder Singh v. Kalechurn Singh, 12 W. R., 293.

Where an appeal on paper insufficiently stamped is admitted and heard, the Court is bound to deal with it on its merits, and cannot limit its relief to so much of the subject in suit as seems to be covered by the amount in respect of which the stamp was given. Boloram Sircar and others v. Ram Narain Banerjee and others, 10 W. R., 242.

Where a petition of appeal had been filed, time allowed for the issue of notice, and a day fixed for hearing, it was held to be the duty of the Judge, under Section 31, Act VII of 1859, on finding that the petition was inadequately stamped, to give to the appellant an opportunity of filing the proper stamp. Nusserat Aly Chowdhry and others v. Mahomed Kano Sirdar and others, 11 W. R., 541.

A petition of regular appeal was rejected by the Civil Court, because it did not state what amount of quit-rent was payable to Government on the lands in dispute, and therefore did not contain the particulars required by the order of the High Court, dated 26th June, 1867. Held by the High Court, that the order of rejection was wrong. The utmost which the old rules justified was the non-receiving. Arabi Shâ Shâ Chellam Appa Ram v. Râmaya, 6 Mad. Rep., 422.

An appeal must be presented to the Judge, and not to the Moonserah.

The placing a petition on a table when the officer is not present is not a presentation to him. Taj Udâlîn Khan v. Mussamut Ghûfoor-ul-nissa, 3 N. W. R., 341.

It is sent pursuant to an appellant appealing from the final judgment and decree, to include in his appeal any legal grounds of objection against a prior decratal order of remand. Mussamut Mizajool Nissa v. Bunshee Dhur, 1 N. W. R., p. 193.

When the last day for presenting an appeal falls upon a Sunday or close holiday, an additional day is to be allowed for the presentation of the memorandum of appeal. Krishnu Padhe, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 50.

The appeal which had been preferred to the Judge was withdrawn the next day through another pleader. Shortly after an application was made to have the appeal restored, on the ground that the second pleader had no authority to withdraw the appeal. The Judge refused the application.

Held, that no special appeal lay from the last order which was passed on an application for review of the former order.

Held, that as the only ground on which the Judge was asked to proceed was a petition said to have been sent to the petitioner's pleader by post, the Judge could not be directed to take further action in the matter. Moðhoomutty Debîa v. Dhûnpût Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 167.

Per Norman and Hobhouse, JJ. (Bayley, J., dissenting), held that, in the present case, the defendant had not either in the written statement filed by him or by his statements in examination raised the question, whether he was entitled to the benefit of Section 4 of Act X of 1859.

In a suit for possession and wasilat, plaintiff obtained a decree declaring his right to possession upon the death of his father. Defendant appealed. Held that as the decree had given consequential relief, i.e., relief from the operation of conveyances and mortgages, which on the face of them affected the plaintiff's interest, an appeal from the decree should bear an ad valorem stamp duty. Miller v. Akkhor Ram, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 412.

(8) Who may Appeal.

The circumstance of the High Court calling up an appeal from the Court below, and trying it as a regular appeal, does not entitle the parties to appeal directly to the High Court in the proceedings in execution. Ramaônarga Sahoy v. Byjû Nath Lâli, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 164.

No one but a party to a suit can appeal under Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 against an order passed in such suit. Caemmerer v. Birch, 1 Mad. Rep., 8.

An appeal by the alleged representative of a deceased plaintiff ought not to be admitted without an order of Court allowing the name of the representative to be entered in the register of suits. Jipuô Lâli v. Lâli Bhûtôn Lâli, 5 W. R., 132.

One of two defendants may appeal as respects the whole, and not half, of the property in dispute, in the absence of proof that they owned the pro-property in two equal shares.

Persons not parties in the original suit are not entitled to have themselves added as appellants in the Appellate Court. K. Watson and others v. Kurne Sarmunyoe, 9 W. R., 259.

An auction-purchaser of property sold in execution of decree, is "a party to the suit;" he is not therefore entitled to appeal from an order passed as to the execution of the decree. Lachnun Nuraon v. Dinaro Pershad, 1 Agra Rep., Mis., 5.

One defendant cannot be allowed to appeal as against his co-defendants; but if he is allowed, and the appeal is decided against him, it does not lie in him to ask that the decision may be set aside on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction. Keish Chandra Roy v. Srimannty Durza and others, 11 W. R., 410.

A suit having been decided by the first Court after an intervenor had been made a party under Section 73, Code of Civil Procedure, it was remanded on the appeal of the intervenor, whose name was ordered to be expunged from the record. The suit was decided again in favour of the plaintiff, but the decision was reversed in appeal. Helif that the fact of the defendant having, in the first instance, allowed the intervenor alone to appeal, did not debar him, after the case was re-opened by remand, from appealing in his own person. Buka Sibak v. Mirza Mader Ali B., 15 S. W. R., C. R., 522.

(c) Where an Appeal Lies.

A summary appeal does not lie from an order rejecting a plaint; nor is a miscellaneous or a special appeal admissible on an insufficient stamp. Abou Bibe v. The Collector of Zilla Jessore, 1 W. R., Mis., 25.

Though the distribution of costs is, under the Civil Procedure Code, a matter within the discretion of the Court, yet there may be circumstances which will justify an appeal upon a mere question of costs. Chethrayi v. Irumanum Kittu Kanhamath Haji, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 279.

Held that an appeal lies to the High Court from the decision of a Judge in a Division Court rejecting a document tendered in evidence under Section 17, Clause 1 of Act X of 1862, on the ground that there had been an intention to evade the payment of stamp duty.

The point upon which the decision of the Court is to be final, under Section 17 of the Stamp Act, is as to what is the proper amount of stamp duty which the document ought to bear, and not as to whether the Court ought or ought not to receive the document in evidence.

A Court to which a document is entered in evidence, under Section 17, ought not to reject it, unless it clearly appears that there was an intention to evade the payment of stamp duty. Royal Bank of India v. Hormasji Khorsedji, 3 Bom. Rep. O. C., 153.

The winning party is at liberty to appeal, if the decree of the Court has placed him in a worse position than he was before. Soroop Chunder Paul v. Durup D. Dombal, 1 W. R., 72.

An appeal lies to the High Court from an order of the lower Court absolving a purchaser from liability for damages caused by a re-sale consequent on his having done so. Maharajah Mohatul Choud Bahadur, 3 W. R., 2.

Objectors (whose claim to a moiety of the property sought to be taken in execution has been admitted by an order of Court) are in a like position to decree-holders against the original decree-holder, and may therefore appeal from an order passed in execution of decree. Motar Singh v. Rajah Lachum Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 7.

When the execution of a decree is made over to a Court other than that which passed the decree, the Court executing the decree has authority to hear all objections, and to pass such orders as if it were executing its own decree; and an appeal will lie from any order so passed in the usual course to the Judge. Munglo Pershod v. Guvooee Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 17.

An appeal will lie from an order passed by the High Court in the Miscellaneous Department, in a case of execution of decree, in which the amount or value involved exceeds Rs. 10,000, as well as in any other case in which the Court shall admit an appeal when the amount or value is below Rs. 10,000. Mussamut Valeday Begum v. Ruggonath Pershad, 8 W. R., 147.

An order relating to a question between the parties to a suit, arising in execution, comes under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, and is appealable. Channan Roy Chowdry v. Preonath Roy Chowdry, 8 W. R., 298.

An appeal lies under Section 13, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), from an order rejecting an application to set aside a judgment passed ex parte against the defendant. Chuttur Karan Roy v. Gopaull Lall Tagore, 5 W. R., Act X R., 95.

An appeal lies to the High Court in cases above Rs. 5,000 relating to measurement of land. Khaja Abdel Gione v. Rajah Sutto Churn Ghosal, 2 W. R., Act X R., 86.

An appeal lies to the Judge in a suit for rent below Rs. 100, when the first Court has determined a question as to the right to receive the rent. Noor Mahomed v. Khatreja Beon; Sheikh Oojer v. Khatreja Beon, 4 W. R., Act X R., 34.

An appeal will lie from the order of a Moonsiff dismissing a suit as beyond his jurisdiction because it was under-valued. Mussamut Bebee Johan Buksh and others v. Mussamut Meher Bebee and others, 7 W. R., 183.

lower Appellate Court (in reversal of that Court's judgment) remanded the case for trial on its merits.

—Held that an appeal lay from the lower Appellate Court's order of remand. Mussantud Karoma unsud Beke and others v. Gooroo Persaud Shah and others, 7 W. R., 331.

A suit for possession having been decreed in the absence of the defendants, they applied for a re-hearing, and their application was rejected. They then, after the time allowed by law, applied for a review of judgment, which was granted, without any determination as to the goodness and sufficiency of the cause of delay. Held that the order granting the review was illegal, and that an appeal lay as to the sufficiency of the cause for the delay.

Krismo Gobind Jouardals v. Triggubandoo Sirak, 12 W. R., 94.

Where a Civil Judge, upon a petitioner applying under Section 18 of Act XX of 1863 for leave to institute a suit, made an order disposing at once of the matter in dispute, and his successor, reversing the former order, decided by an order upon the rights of the parties,—Held that, though both orders were made without jurisdiction, that fact does not give the High Court an appellate jurisdiction in the matter. Kawiraja Nanda Martya Pillai v. Nalla Naikan Pillai, petitioner, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 93.

An appeal lies from the decision of a Court upon the hearing of a cause that it has no jurisdiction on the ground that the suit has been instituted in the wrong district. Maharajah Dheraj Mohalab v. Mudoodooon Mookerjee and others, Marsh., 572.

Where an enquiry has been held under Section 299, Code of Civil Procedure, and a regular appeal lies to the High Court under Section 231, a miscellaneous appeal cannot be entertained. Gooroo Doss Roy v. Punchannun Bose and another, 9 W. R., 337.

A lower Appellate Court may entertain an appeal as to matter in respect of which the first Court rejected a review of its own order. Motherannath Dutt v. Oondermonee Debe, 4 W. R., Mis., 17.

An appeal lies to the Judge from an order of a lower Court deciding that execution of a decree is barred by limitation. Kebul Kishen Sein and others v. Obhoya Churn Doss, alias Titoo Ram Doss and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 36.

An appeal lies from an order in such a case, Section 254, placing the decree-holder and the defaulting purchaser in the position of parties to a suit. Biboo Sooraj Buksh Singh v. Sree Kishen Doss, 6 W. R., 193.

In a case remanded to the lower Appellate Court for trial, by the Court of first instance, of the issue of limitation, which the appellant had not been allowed the opportunity of meeting, it was ruled that, upon the decision of that issue, it would be open to the parties to appeal upon the whole case, notwithstanding the appeal already had. Rughoo Nund Prasad Singh v. Chuttaral Singh and another, 10 W. R., 335.

Where at the time of granting an application for review of judgment, the Court proceeded to dispose of the whole matter at once as on a re-hearing,—Held that so much of the order as granted the application for review was final and not open to appeal, but that so much of it as went to dispose of the case finally as on a re-hearing was a distinct order and open to appeal. Ahmoo Hossein Jan v. Mussantud Trevisv, 6 W. R., 189.

According to Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, no appeal lies in a case of private dispute among the heirs of a deceased decree-holder as to their respective rights. The order of the Judge in appeal was accordingly reversed, and, by virtue of Section 35 of the same Act, the proper order passed, allowing the sons of the deceased decree-holder to represent him as his sons, without any determination of the genuineness of an alleged will by which different shares were allotted to the several sons, or of the extent of their respective shares. Rajtindor Roy Chowdury v. Gooch Chunder Roy, 5 W. R., Mis., 45.

The purchaser of a decree has a right to appeal, even though not a party to the suit. Tara Chand Hazard v. Doorja Churn Hazara and others, 10 W. R., 205.

The fact of a defendant having, in the Court of first instance, disclaimed any right or interest in the land in a suit, does not deprive him of the right to appeal, if a judgment is given against him with costs. Nund Coomar Singh and others v. Gunga Persaud Narain Singh, 10 W. R., 94.

When a Moonsiff acts without jurisdiction, the question may be the subject of an appeal to the Appellate Court of the district. Allat Hosein v. Gooch Chunder Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 556.

Where an application for review is disposed of as upon a re-hearing on the merits, an appeal lies from the order so passed.

Where an application is made to correct an error in a proceeding in which interest was calculated, the order passed on the application is open to appeal under Section 11 Act XXIII of 1861. Amanat Ali v. Mussantud Bendku, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 138.

(d) Where an Appeal does not Lie.

After obtaining a judgment for possession, the judgment-creditor sued for wasilat. After decree an enquiry was made into the amount of wasilat, and on the report of an Ameen, the decree-holder being present and the opposite party not appearing, the Court made an order for the payment of the sum therein mentioned. Subsequently the judgment-debtor appeared and petitioned that the award might be corrected by deductions to which he was entitled. On his application being refused, he appealed to the Judge, who remanded the case with a view to its being ascertained whether any and what amount should be deducted. Held, that the Judge should not have interfered with the award of wasilat, which was a final award so far as the Appellate Court was concerned. Punchanun Bose v. Oomnean Roy Chowdury, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 160.

An appeal will not be allowed after the time for appealing has expired, merely because a judgment altering the view of the law which prevailed at the time of the decision of the original suit has subsequently been given by the High Court. Makhun Ndikih v. Muaunchud Ladhabhui, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 107.

An appeal does not lie from an order passed under the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), but the party dissatisfied with the order may seek to set it aside by a regular suit. Khudear Singh v. Sham Singh Poojoo, W. R., 1864, Mis., 25.

An appeal lies to the High Court from the order of a Small Cause Court in execution. Mutee Lall v. Ram Doss, W. R., 1864, Mis., 38.

There is no appeal from the order of a lower Appellate Court remanding a case a second time, on the ground that the former order of remand had not been carried out. Radhaballub Surma v. Anundamoyee Debia, W. R., 1864, Mis., 39.

A. filed a memorandum of appeal, but failed to deposit the sum required to defray the cost of issuing the usual notice on the respondent. When the case came on for hearing, it was found that, in consequence of A.'s failure to deposit, no notice had been served on the respondent; and the Judge dismissed the appeal under Section 6 of Act XXIII of 1861. Within 30 days after this, A. presented a petition explaining the reasons of his default, and praying that, on payment of the tulubana, the appeal might be restored to its place; but the Judge, without considering the reasons which A. had given in his petition, disallowed his prayer. Held that no appeal lay from the order of the Judge rejecting A.'s petition, which was of the nature of an application for a review of judgment. Held also that Section 37 of Act XXIII of 1861 does not apply to cases where the subject which is being dealt with by the Court is not the actual appeal itself, and cannot therefore be rightly treated as standing in an analogous position to that of the original suit itself; and, further, that the same section has not the effect of making an appeal from the order of a Collector refusing to execute a decree on the ground that the decree was barred by the Law of Limitation. Nobo Kishore Roy v. Huro Soondery Dossee and others, 9 W. R., 278.

No appeal lies from the order of a Judge dismissing an appeal case to the Court below against A., he being no party to the appeal. A Moonsiff's order rejecting an application for review is not appealable. Jewan Bibee v. Buddha Mundul and others, 9 W. R., 489.

An appeal will not lie against an order for execution merely on the ground that there is an error in the decree, and that the decree should have been in terms other than it is. Mussamut Busseerun v. Mussamut Alfun, 6 W. R., Mis., 74.

When a sale in execution was set aside, and the order directing the return of the purchase-money did not also direct the payment of interest therein. Held that there was no appeal from the order of the lower Court refusing to give interest. Bishonath Doss v. Ahmed Ali, W. R., 1864, Mis., 19.

The parties contemplated by Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, are both the opposite parties to the suit or their representatives, but not one of the original parties divided and subsequently represented by two or more other individuals between whom a dispute may arise as to their respective shares or rights in the decree. Any order passed by the Judge in execution as between them cannot be the subject of an appeal, but their rights must be determined, as in the case of strangers, by separate suit. Mirza Ally Hossein v. Dhunput Singh, W. R., 1864, Mis., 19.

No appeal lies from the order of a Judge rejecting an application for a review of his order dismissing an appeal for default of prosecution. Chowdury Ruttun Persad v. Huwomun Bah, W. R., 1864, Mis., 20.

In a suit against A. and B. for the recovery of the possession of property, the Court gave a decree against A. and in favour of B. The plaintiff appealed from that part of the decision which was in B.'s favour. Held that the Judge on appeal had no jurisdiction to reverse the decision of the Court below against A., he being no party to the appeal. Hurro Chunder Roy v. Lallchund Banerjee, Marsh., 256.

No appeal lies from an order passed after decree in and execution thereof. Kishoo Bullub Mohun v. Konessur Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 33.

No appeal lies from an order of a Judge refusing to recognize the position of a purchaser of a decree. Lalla Ojhee Lall v. Syed Loft Ali Khan, 2 W. R., Mis., 32.

An appeal is not open under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, to the person who is found by the Court below not to be a bonâ-fide purchaser of a decree for valuable consideration. Chunder Per shad Misser v. Rajah Nilamund Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 38.

No appeal lies to the Judge in a dispute between rival decree-holders in respect to the proceeds of property sold in execution of a decree. Afooloo nissa Bogum v. Parbutily Koowwar, 2 W. R., Mis., 41.

No appeal lies to an intervenor whose objection has been disallowed by the lower Court. Roghoo dossee v. Bungseemohun Doss, 3 W. R., Mis., 28.

An appeal does not lie to an objector who is not one of the parties, i.e., who is neither the decree-holder nor the judgment-debtor. Luchmoo nath Narain Singh v. Ram Churn Sahoo, 2 W. R., Mis., 48.

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order obtained by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, who was not a party to the original suit. Bhoomdour Mul v. Giunga Pershad, 2 W. R., Mis., 50.

An appeal does not lie to an objector who is not one of the parties, i.e., who is neither the decree-holder nor the judgment-debtor. Luchmeenput Singh v. Lekra Roy, 2 W. R., Mis., 56; Gossain Jhoom Poore v. Anund Mayee Dossee, 3 W. R., Mis., 9; Sudder Ameen Dossee v. Brojonath Mosooddar, 4 W. R., Mis., 14.

No appeal lies from the order of a Court releasing a property from attachment, on the ground that it is in the possession of the judgment-debtor, not on his own account, but on account of, or in trust for, some other person. Radha Kissen and others v. Shah Ameeroodeen, 11 W. R., 204.

Certain property having been attached in execution as belonging to the judgment-debtor, a portion was claimed by a third party and released from attachment. Held that no appeal by the judgment-debtor lay from the order of release. Sham Soonder Koowwar v. Rughoosnaath Sihaye, 11 W. R., 264.

No appeal lies on the part of a decree-holder against the order of a Judge vesting the official assignment with the property of a judgment-debtor. Nett Lall and another v. A. B. Miller, 11 W. R., 420.

An appeal will not lie solely on a question of costs. Choonceloll Misser and others v. Patroo Deo and others, 6 W. R., 19.

No appeal lies from an order passed in execution of a decree between either of the parties to the suit and the third party, but a regular suit may be brought to set aside the order. Gobindnath Sandyal and others v. Ramcoomar Ghose, 6 W. R., 21.

Quære,—Whether, when a lower Appellate Court reverses a decree of a lower Court on the plea of limitation, and remands the case to be tried upon the merits, such decision is an order prior to decree from which no appeal will lie. Mahomed Anjob v. Gource Pershad Sha, 6 W. R., 61.

There is no appeal from the order of a Principal Sudder Ameen setting aside as a nullity the order of a Judge who, acting for him in his absence, had admitted an appellant as legal representative of the original plaintiff, who had died pendente lite, the Judge having no jurisdiction to make such substitution. Birpo Chunder Joobraj v. Ramlochun Deb, W. R., 1864, 121.

Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 does not give an appeal from an order made under Sections 270 and 271, Act VIII of 1859, as to the application and distribution of the proceeds of property sold in execution under a decree of a rival decree-holder. Misree Koowwar v. Maharajah Moheshur Buksh Singh, W. R., F. B., 116.

When a suit is thrown out by the first Court, on the ground of limitation, and the decree is reversed in appeal, and the suit decreed by the Appellate Court, no appeal lies on the merits from the Appellate Court's decision. Seetaram v. Juggobundo Bose, 2 W. R., 168.

One of several co-mortgagors cannot appeal against a foreclosure decree when the equity of redemption has been sold before the institution of the suit. Kottale Uppi v. Kalleayti Pano Kunne, 1 Mad. Rep., 7.

No appeal lies from an award of compensation or release of attached property. Hurosooduree Dossee v. Bungseemohun Doss, 3 W. R., Mis., 28.

No appeal lies from an order passed at the instance of a third party for excluding a particular property from sale in execution of a decree. Beebee Sahab Jehan v. Syad Shah Asudoollah, 5 W. R., Mis., 28.

An appeal will not lie from the separate determination of an isolated issue of law or fact before the taking of evidence on the remaining issues. Petition of the Court of Wards, as representing the estate of the late Rajah Pertaub Chundra Singh, appealing against an order of the Judge of 24 Fergannahs, W. R., 222.

No appeal lies from the order of a Court refusing an application to review its judgment. Mohamund Mookerjee v. Durpo Narain Mahata, 5 W. R., Mis., 58.

An appeal will not lie from the separate determination of an isolated issue of law or fact before the taking of evidence on the remaining issues. Petition of the Court of Wards, as representing the estate of the late Rajah Pertaub Chundra Singh, appealing against an order of the Judge of 24 Fergannahs, 7 W. R., 222.

One of several co-mortgagors cannot appeal against a foreclosure decree when the equity of redemption has been sold before the institution of the suit. Kottale Uppi v. Kalleayti Pano Kunne, 1 Mad. Rep., 7.

No appeal lies from an award of compensation or release of attached property. Hurosooduree Dossee v. Bungseemohun Doss, 3 W. R., Mis., 28.

An appeal will not lie from the separate determination of an isolated issue of law or fact before the taking of evidence on the remaining issues. Petition of the Court of Wards, as representing the estate of the late Rajah Pertaub Chundra Singh, appealing against an order of the Judge of 24 Fergannahs, 7 W. R., 222.

No appeal lies from the order of a Court refusing an application to review its judgment. Mohamund Mookerjee v. Durpo Narain Mahata, 5 W. R., Mis., 58.

An appeal will not lie from the separate determination of an isolated issue of law or fact before the taking of evidence on the remaining issues. Petition of the Court of Wards, as representing the estate of the late Rajah Pertaub Chundra Singh, appealing against an order of the Judge of 24 Fergannahs, 7 W. R., 222.

No appeal lies from the order of a Court refusing an application to review its judgment. Mohamund Mookerjee v. Durpo Narain Mahata, 5 W. R., Mis., 58.

An appeal will not lie from the separate determination of an isolated issue of law or fact before the taking of evidence on the remaining issues. Petition of the Court of Wards, as representing the estate of the late Rajah Pertaub Chundra Singh, appealing against an order of the Judge of 24 Fergannahs, 7 W. R., 222.
at the instance of an intervenor, under Section 246, Civil Procedure Code, and retained in his possession, the decree-holder has no right of appeal. Re Ajodhya Dass, 12 W. R., 354.

The Court will not interfere with a decree proceeding on a mistake as to the applicability of a law when such error does not affect the decision of the case. Kareem Khan v. Sheikh Mufonz, W. R. 18, 1862. An appeal does not lie from the order of a Judge dismissing an appeal before him for default of prosecution. Shatikh Mahomed Tan v. Massamut Amecrun, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 180.

The purchaser of the right, title, and interest of a defendant in a suit in and to the land, the subject-matter of that suit, has no right as such to appeal from a decree passed against the defendant. Gagadhar Prasad v. Ganesh Tewari, 7 B. L. R., 149, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 485.

(e) Practice and Procedure in Appeal.

If a party presents an application for review of judgment within the ordinary period limited for appealing, the time occupied by the Court in disposing of such application will not be reckoned among the number of days limited for appealing; but will be added thereto, and a memorandum of appeal presented within such extended period will be received as put in within time. Petition of Brojendro Coomar Roy Chowdry, 7 W. R., 529.

Held, with reference to the decision of the Full Bench reported in 9 W. R., 181, that inasmuch as a new statement of the law by the High Court is not a sufficient excuse for delay in applying for a review of judgment, it is still less an excuse for delay in appealing against a judgment. Moore Bawa v. Saorudasrunath Roy, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 184; 10 W. R., 178.

There is nothing in strict law to prevent a party acting for himself or through his guardian, from appealing against a decision in his favour. Mary Eliza Stephenson and another v. Umadee Dossee, 6 W. R., Mis., 18.

Under Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 an appeal lies from the order of a lower Appellate Court rejecting an appeal in an execution case as presented out of time. If the period within which an appeal ought to be filed expires on a Sunday, the practice is to admit the appeal on the following day. Gopeenath Roy v. Gofeenath Chatterjee, 6 W. R., Mis., 160.

The High Court has the power of extending the time for the presentation of an application for the admission of a special appeal (misjoinder). Trevor, J.) Kasinath Roy v. Mynaoben Chowdry W. R., F. B., 149.

The appellant filed an appeal against the judgment of the Court of first instance without a copy of the decree. Subsequently the decreee of the Court of first instance was filed within the time allowed for appeal, and accepted by the Judge. Held that the irregularity was cured, and the appeal should not have been dismissed on the ground of such irregularity. Latiee v. Ram Pershad, 1 Agra Rep., 35.

Where the appellant has neglected to file his memorandum of appeal within the time specified, the appeal will be dismissed with costs. Mathomd Dhurmusey v. Bhanjeet Topun, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 96.

An appellant must not make unnecessary delay by asking for copies of judgment and decree on different dates. The time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment must be excluded from the reckoning of the period for appeal. Nursing Nat rain Singh v. Rudhay Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 38.

An appellant whose time for appealing expires during holidays, may put in his appeal on the first day the Court opens after the holidays. Mozurul Ali Chowdvery v. Jawonenath Odhictaras, W. R., 1864, Mis., 40.

Petition of special appeal to the High Court at Bombay on its appellate side must be stamped according to the scale contained in Clause II of Schedule B. of Act XXVI of 1867. Desai Kalyanrai Hukumratree et al. ex-parte, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 145.

A petition of appeal is presented in time if presented within the time limited for appealing, exclusive of the time during which the application for a review of judgment was pending. The petition of appeal should be presented immediately after the application for a review is rejected. Nobho Kissen Singh v. Kaminde Dossee, 2 W. R., Mis., 35.

The rule which requires pleaders to certify that the grounds taken in special appeal are good, also requires them to see that the grounds are full. Ramkristo Deb and another v. Rajchandra Sermah and others, 11 W. R., 240.

A mere plea of sickness is no cause for interference with an order of a Judge rejecting an appeal not filed within time. Mozurul Ali Khan v. Pashoo Bibee, 1 W. R., Mis., 23.

The time for rejecting an appeal is when it is presented, and not after it has once been admitted. Googpe Bullub Roy v. Golkuck Prashad Bose, W. R., 1864, 135.

An appellant has no right to withdraw an appeal which has been regularly registered without the permission of the Court.

Where the appellant had given notice of the withdrawal of the appeal before the day of the hearing, and notice of withdrawal had been given to the respondent, but not until costs had been incurred,—Held that the appellant was not at liberty to withdraw the appeal, and the Court ordered that the appeal be set down for hearing. Kareem Bee v. Esteeem Bee, 5 Mad. Rep., A. C., 368.

On appeal by the defendant, the Court allowed the objection to be raised that the suit was brought for a cause of action in respect of which the plaintiff had already obtained a decree in a former suit, notwithstanding this motion had not been pleaded in the Court below. Kytashnath Chund v. Monnanee Dossee, Marsh., 276.

An appeal from an order rejecting a plaint for misjoinder is a miscellaneous appeal; and if it is rejected an appeal from the order of rejection is also of the nature of a miscellaneous appeal. Knalia Keer v. Beliary Pattee, 12 W. R., 70.

Where a suit was dismissed by a Moonsiff for want of evidence on the side of the plaintiff (the plaintiff's pleader having stated that he had no instructions, and that he could not proceed with the case in the absence of his client),—Held that a regular appeal ought to have been preferred to the Zillah Judge from the judgment dismissing the case. Kooraram Chuckeralty v. Shama Sondery Deha and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 129.

If the defendants, by making the real defendants, who did not appear, respondents as between themselves, cannot open out that portion of the case which, as between the plaintiff and the non-appealing defendants, has not been appealed against. Gadadhar Banerjee v. Mussamat Monomohine Dossea and another, 7 W. R., 366; Sreenutty Khemunikure Dossee v. Nilambur Mundal, 2 W. R., 227.

The High Court will not, on the application of the defendant, stay all proceedings in the appeal, on the ground that the plaintiff has no interest in the suit, that being a question which can more properly be raised in the suit or appeal itself. In the Matter of the Petition of Khdeooinisa, 7 W. R., 486.

A defendant who did not appear, although his interests are identical with those of the plaintiffs, who have not appealed, cannot appeal against the judgment passed in favour of his co-defendants. Jugganath Chatterjee and others v. Gordon, Stuart, and Co., 6 W. R., 36.

Where, on the appeal of one of several judgment-debtors, the bond on which the plaintiff sued is found to be false and not binding at all, all the other parties to the bond are also released, notwithstanding that they did not appeal. Sufir Ali Sowdagur v. Susseerolla Sowdagur, 6 W. R., 323.

The omission to appeal against an order of remand does not preclude a respondent on appeal from taking an objection to the order of remand as erroneous. Kishenchunder Gaen v. Siveshdhar Khatlah, 8 W. R., 208.

A Judge can, on the appeal of one defendant, reverse an order against two defendants for a joint obligation. Shibrum Chunder v. Porachunder Bagdee, 2 W. R., Act X, 31.

Pleaders will ordinarily be restricted to their written grounds of appeal, and not allowed to infer separate points from vague generalities. T. P. Mackintosh v. R. Watson and others, 3 W. R., Act X, 123.

A certified copy of the Judge's notes not having been filed, and there being no certificate from the Prothonotary that security had been given for costs, the appeal was dismissed for non-compliance with the rules of the Court. Bhimji Gridhar v. W. J. Morgan, 3 Bom. Rep., O. C., 63.

An entire decree cannot be reversed on the appeal of one defendant having only a part interest in the decree. Woomesh Chunder Bose v. Matunginee Debic, 2 W. R., 170.

Where the plaintiffs could not recover on a policy for a partial loss, except as for jettison, and that point was not taken in the Court below, the point could not be raised in appeal. Mackintosh and others v. Duculas, Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 153.

Where the Statute of Limitations was pleaded for the first time in a petition for a review of the judgment of the lower Appellate Court,—Held that the review being part of the proceedings in regular appeal, the question was whether the statute may be pleaded for the first time in regular appeal; and that where upon the admitted facts it is clear that the statute is a bar, it may be pleaded for the first time in regular appeal. Sarasvati v. Pachanna Letti, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 258.

Where there were two suits separately instituted in the Collector's Court for partition of two mouzahs, and defendants appeared in both cases, but preferred only one appeal relating to both mouzahs, instead of appealing separately,—Held that the Collector's decision as to one mouzah, of which no notice was taken by the Judge, must virtually be deemed as unappealed. Aliup Rai and others v. Sdeo Pyal and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 142.

An Appellate Court has authority to permit an appeal to be withdrawn. Ram Pershad Ojha and others v. Bhuroda Koowar and others, 9 W. R., 328.

The appellant being entitled to appeal specially from an order of the lower Court in the Execution Department, instituted a regular suit to set aside the order. Having elected that remedy, his present application to file a special miscellaneous appeal out of time was rejected. Kaleckishore Sen v. Nilamber Sen, 2 W. R., Mis., 35.

The mere preferring of an appeal against a judgment does not bar the admission of a review of that judgment. Rash Behari Singh v. Kooonj Beharee Singh, W. R., 1864, Mis., 31.

It is not a condition precedent to the reception of further evidence by an Appellate Court that the reasons for doing so should be recorded. W. Chardon v. Ajeet Singh, 12 W. R., 52.

The order of an Appellate Court rejecting an application to re-enter an appeal struck out for default is final. Fuzzoo Khan v. Issur Chunder Sircar, Marsh., 30.

When an appeal is barred by law an Appellate Court cannot interfere in any matter legitimately arising out of the case, unless there is want of jurisdiction. Kumar Chose Kuleek v. Huree Molaan Ghose, 2 W. R., Mis., 45.

In order to satisfy the High Court that a point which the Judge omitted to notice was actually taken in the oral pleadings, a party may put in either an affidavit of some person who heard the point raised, or a copy of the petition to the Judge drawing attention to the omission with his order. Yusoof Ali Chodrody v. Mussamat Piyoonissa Khatoon Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 256.

A decision passed on an appeal from a decision of a Moonsiff by an Assistant Judge, subsequent to the date on which Act XIV of 1869 came into operation (14th March, 1869), and prior to the date on which the Assistant Judges in the Bombay Presidency were invested with appellate powers under the Act (4th April, 1869), is not illegal, as the Act did not alter the procedure as regards appeals against decisions passed by Courts constituted under the old Regulations, under which the Assistant Judges had power to hear appeals.

Also, when the parties neglect to get an error of law in a decree of the High Court corrected by a revi-w, the High Court will decline to correct it when the case comes up before them again in a N. sued to set aside the sale of property which M. had attached in execution of a decree against N.'s husband’s brother, plaintiff alleging that it belonged to her husband (though the latter’s objections under Section 246, Civil Procedure Code, had been rejected), and asking for a declaration of her right and title. N. obtained a decree, and both M. and the auction-purchaser appealed to the Judge in forma pauperis. Held that M. had good ground of appeal if he could prove that the property belonged to the judgment-debtor. Moskovola Khan, In the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 445.

In a suit by a Hindu widow for possession and declaration of title,– Held that defendant could not appeal if he could prove that the property belonged to the judgment-debtor. N. obtained a decree, and both M. and the auction-purchaser appealed to the Judge in forma pauperis. Held that M. had good ground of appeal if he could prove that the property belonged to the judgment-debtor. Moskovola Khan, In the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 445.

When an appeal had been preferred by the plaintiff to the Judge which ought to have been preferred to the Collector, the Court made an order giving the plaintiff thirty days within which to prefer his appeal to the Collector instead. Maharani Adhikari Narain Kumari Rajraje of Barowan v. Purvikhi Rawtra, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 15; S. C. 15 S. W. R., C. R., 426.

(7) Where Special Appeal Lies.

A finding of fact by a lower Appellate Court may be disturbed in special appeal, if, as in this case, the reasonings and the views upon which that finding is based are erroneous in law. Juggurmath Deb v. Mahomed Mokium, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 161.

A finding of fact arrived at upon purely speculative amounts to a mis-trial, which can be set aside by the High Court in special appeal. Mahomed Aizadai Shaha v. Shaffi J, 8 B. L. R., 26.

Suit to set aside sale by Hindu widows.— Held by Peacock, C. J., that the High Court has the power in special appeal, but the remaining a case, to see whether there is any evidence on the record, which would warrant a contrary finding to that already come to by the Judge below, and that it would be worse than useless to remand the present case to the Judge to find whether any necessity existed for the sale, when the Court sees that there is no evidence on the record to prove the existence of such necessity, and when the Judge has found that there was no necessity, if he were to come to a contrary finding on the evidence, as it stands, his judgment would be reversed upon appeal as being a finding without any evidence in support of it.

Held, contra, by Bayley, J., that, under Section 372, Act VIII of 1859, the Court in special appeal cannot try facts on the evidence on the record, or whether the evidence is sufficient to enable the Court to come to a conclusion of fact on the question of legal necessity, and that the case should be remanded to the Judge for a clear finding on that question. Ram Pershad Sookal v. Rajunder Sahoy, 6 W. R., 262.

In a suit for arrears of rent the defendant pleaded payment and filed receipts. The Collector distrusted the receipts, and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff, saying that, as to three of the receipts evidence had been given which he did not believe; and that with respect to the other receipts no evidence had been offered. The Judge on appeal reversed the decree, and gave a decree in favour of the defendant, expressing an opinion that the distrust of the evidence in support of the three receipts was without sufficient reason. Held that, with respect to the receipts in support of which no evidence had been offered, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the rents to which they applied, and that the finding of the Judge that such rents had been paid without any evidence having then been given of such payments was an “error in the investigation of the case” which had produced error in the decision of the case upon the merits, within Section 372 of Act VIII of 1859, and was therefore ground of special appeal. Mohun Chunder Dhur and others v. Kidge, Marsh., 381.

Where the Courts below have avowedly abstained from examining into a plaintiff’s claim of title to land, the subject of the suit, on the ground that the plaintiff was a party to the deed under which the defendant claims, when in fact the deed shows he was no party to it, this constitutes a defect “in the procedure and investigation of the case producing error in the decision of the case upon the merits” within Act VIII of 1859, Section 372, and a special appeal will lie. Abdoos Salam v. Mussamut Imroonissa Bibee, Marsh., 6.

A special appeal lies from an order dismissing an appeal under Sections 5 and 6, Act XXIII of 1861. Indur Chunder Baboo v. Ooozer Ally Khan, 7 W. R., 38.

A special and not a regular appeal will lie from an order rejecting a respondent’s application for the re-trial of an appeal heard in his absence. Sreedhurchurn Nundee v. Juggobundoo Paul, W. R., 1864, Mis., 37.

A special appeal lies from an order passed under Sections 5 and 6, Act XXIII of 1861 (dissmissing an appeal for non-service of notice in consequence of failure to deposit the cost of issuing the same). A special appeal also lies from an order under Section 347, Act VIII of 1859 (re-admitting an appeal dismissed for default of prosecution). Dinobundoo Anterage v. Beharree Lal Mookerjee, 3 W. R., Mis., 23.

A special appeal, and not a new suit, should be brought to contest a legal point involved in an adverse decree. Bheem Rukheet v. Sartook Chunder Rana, W. R., 1864, 55.

A special appeal lies from an Appellate Court’s judgment in which the decree of the Lower Court is reversed for any reasons given for differing to facts. Sheikh Goburdhun v. Sheikh Sadhoo, 1 W. R., 244.

Special appeal will lie from an order rejecting an application to set aside an ex-parte decree passed under Act X of 1859. Suderooddeen v. Huronath Stein, 8 W. R., 87.

to be established, is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court; and consequently a special appeal is not barred in such a case by Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861. Maharajah Mahatab Chand Bahadoor v. Brojonath Mitter, 8 W. R., 111.

Every Judge of a question of fact is bound to take into consideration all the allegations and proofs upon the record bearing upon that question, as well as the material presumptions arising therefrom, and to overlook them is a defect in law. But before such defect can constitute a good and valid ground of special appeal, it must be such a character that it may have caused an error in the decision of the case on the merits. Gunee Bisuau v. Sreegopal Paul Chowdhr, 8 W. R., 395.

Section 2, Act XIII of 1860, refers to appeals, and also to suits, and as the suit of the special appellant, which had been decreed in the Court of first instance, was dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, the special appellant was held entitled to a revival of his suit.

Section 378, Act VIII of 1859, refers to applications for review of judgment, but this was not an application for revival of the suit under Section 2, Act XIII of 1860. Special appeal does lie in the latter case. Bungsheekhur Mundul v. Puddo Le-\\n Uns sectional appeal lies from a decision passed in appeal from an order relating to the execution of a decree. Mohamed Hussain v. Sheikh Afzul Alley, W. R., F. B., 83; Marsh., 296.

A special appeal lies to the High Court from an order passed under Section 346 of the Civil Procedure Code, dismissing the appellant’s regular appeal for non-appearance of the appellant in person or his pleader. Devappa Setti v. Ramanandhu Bhatti (3 M. H. C. Report 109), commented on; Chinnappa Chetti v. Nadiaraja Pillati, 6 Mad. Rep., 1.

A Judge is bound to give full effect to the terms of a sale certificate; and when he proceeds to limit the effect of that certificate by certain inferences and conclusions drawn from other documents he does that which he is not at liberty to do, and commits an error of law which is in the power of the High Court to remedy on special appeal. Mookhya Harreckraj Joshee v. Ram Lall Gomashta, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 435.

Where a Subordinate Judge held, from the fact of one person carrying on a business firm and appearing to the world to be the only person carrying it on, that there could be no other person in partnership with him, he was considered to have committed an error which materially affected his decision on the merits, and was a good ground for special appeal. Soobul Chunder Kullalek v. Koylas Chunder Mat, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 23.

Special appeal is not barred in the case of a claim for money due under a bond for less than 500 rupees, where the property pledged under the bond was liable. Tripura Soodhure v. Roylas Chunder Bose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 265.

Where, in a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, in order to determine the question at issue between the parties, it was necessary for the Court of Appeal in the first instance to determine a question of title to land (which had been raised by the Moonsoor).—Held that a special appeal lay to the High Court, though the Court below had omitted to determine such question of title. Kisandrám Valad Hirá Chaund v. Jethirdám Valad Mugairám, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 57.

Where a question of title arises in a suit of a nature triable by a Small Cause Court, which must be determined before plaintiff can get a decree, and the lower Appellate Court fails to determine it, a special appeal is admissible. Pachoo Kiree v. Goporo Churn Doss, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 556.

(g) Where Special Appeal does not Lie.

Where a lessor sues to recover leased premises on the ground of breach of condition, viz., sale of tenure, and lessee allows judgment to go by default, the vendee defending as intervener, neither lessee nor vendee has a right of special appeal. Mookta Dossia v. Shama Churn Ghose, 3 W. R., Act X R., 164.

In a suit for a declaration of the right of user over the water of a tank, which right was denied, the finding of the lower Appellate Court, from the evidence of witnesses adduced by plaintiff, that plaintiff had used the water for many years, was held to be not open to special appeal, evidence being sufficient to prove a continuous and uninterrupted user on the part of the plaintiff. Toolsee Doss Kobercar and others v. Bhryub Lall Tewarre and others, 8 W. R., 311.

Held that, as the bona fides of the grantor was before the Court, or might have been if defendant’s pleader had examined him, defendant could not appeal specially on the ground of the want of finding on the pottah. Ram Sunkur Sein v. Nilkant Bheats, 9 W. R., 392.

A father having executed a deed conveying certain ancestral property to two persons (D. and B.), who alienated it to several others, his son sued to have the conveyances by D. and B. to be set aside, on the ground that the deed given by the father was namee, and that D. and B. never had possession. The suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts.

Held that, as plaintiff went to trial in the Courts below upon one issue only, viz., whether D. and B. were ever really in occupation, he was not entitled in special appeal to complain that evidence had not been taken as to the passing of consideration-money.

Held that, as no issue was raised in the lower Courts which could have been the foundation for a declaration of right, the non-decision of a claim to such a declaration could not be made a ground of special appeal. Puriag Dutt v. Brojo Koonwar and others, 9 W. R., 503.

In a suit for damages on account of false charge and consequent arrest, in which the Court of first instance found that there were probable and reasonable grounds for bringing the charge, and the lower Appellate Court took a different view of the evidence, it was held that the difference of view was not a subject for special appeal. Hera Chand Banerjee v. Bance Madhub Chatterjee, 10 W. R., 164.
No special appeal lies on a suit for damages below 500 rupees, whether the damages are on account of moveable or immovable property. Bhelung Lall Mahaloo v. Rung Lall Mahaloon and others, 11 W. R., 369.

Where a Court of special appeal finds that a lower Court has really gone through the evidence, and has come to the same opinion as that of the Court of first instance for the same reasons, it is no ground of special appeal that the Judge has not written these reasons on his own account. Kolamuttta Koore and others v. Jowahir Lall and others, 11 W. R., 318.

As a matter of law, the decision of a lower Appellate Court cannot be said to be erroneous or fit to be reversed because the Judge has not, in reversing the decision of the Court below, categorically met and refuted the reasons on which that decision had proceeded; but such an omission may form a good ground for an application to the High Court to require the lower Appellate Court to set forth the reasons on which its judgment proceeded. Golum Hossein v. Ram Doyal Ghose, 12 W. R., 152.

No special appeal will lie on a ground relating merely to the weight of the reasons given by the lower Appellate Court for the conclusion arrived at. Doorga Churn Sett v. Shumanund Gossain, 12 W. R., 376.

No appeal lies against an order rejecting an application for the re-admission of an appeal under Section 347, Act VIII of 1859. Amiruddin v. Jiban Biber, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 101; 10 W. R., F. B., 39.

The widow and heiress of a deceased person sued the defendants to recover personal property, valued at Rs. 200, said to have been taken by them from deceased in his lifetime. Held that a special appeal was barred by Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861. Khoji Bawa v. Keshram Kuch, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 23; 11 W. R., 93.

In the absence of any statement that the case had been decided ex parte by the Deputy Collector for want of the defendant’s appearance, the Judge on appeal by the defendant dismissed it on the merits. Held that no special appeal will lie on the ground that the Judge should have dismissed the appeal without going into the merits. Gholam Eshak v. Hyder Moollah, W. R., F. B., 46.

The Judge decided that the plaintiff was barred by limitation, but his judgment did not disclose the grounds on which he held that plaintiff was not entitled to deduct, in calculating the twelve years’ limitation, the time occupied by certain suits brought for the same property, in which he was not sued. Held that it was no ground of special appeal that the judgment was silent on the subject of the claim to deduction, and that whether the point was urged in the lower Court or not, the plaintiff had no ground of special appeal in respect of omission of all notice of it in the judgment. Ramsooner Dass v. Mahomed Abbud, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 102.

Held that the suit to recover Rs. 200 paid in respect of the purchase of land which was not completed, was a suit of the description cognizable by the Small Cause Court, and special appeal would not lie. Khooob Chunv v. Hazaree Lall, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 275.

Held that a suit for division of debts due to the deceased’s estate (the sum being ascertained) was cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and no special appeal lies to the High Court. Mussamut Oodey and Choonce v. Gopal, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 234.

Where a suit was brought for the recovery of the value of the fruit of certain mango trees alleged to have been misappropriated by the defendants,—Held that, as the suit was of the nature of a suit cognizable by Courts of Small Causes, a special appeal would not lie. Shamabund and others v. Nandkumar, 4 Agra Rep., 290.

A special appeal will not lie against an order of the Judge refusing to admit a regular appeal presented after the expiration of the time provided for preferring appeals. Mussamut Pëlilkkare v. Bisheksur Perishar, 4 Agra Rep., 301.

The decision of an Appellate Court, on a preliminary issue of fact, which was not at the time appealed against, and which on a subsequent special appeal was not altered* or noticed by the Special Appellate Court, is conclusive between the parties, and the issue determined cannot be re-opened on a second special appeal.

An award of the late Rajah of Satara, founded upon a deed of consent, set aside on proof given that the consent had been obtained by duress. Subhanjee Bin Bhujaee and another v. Bhowar ee Bin Anandrao and others, 1 Bom. Rep., 173.

The refusal of a Court to award damages under Section 2, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), is not a ground for special appeal. Maharahaj Dhecaraj Mahatoab Chun Bahadoor v. Debender Nath Thakoor, W. R., Act X, 1864, 68.

Suit by a creditor holding a decree against a Mahomedan husband regarding property standing in the name of his wife. Held by Jackson, J., that a distinct finding of fact had been arrived at by the lower Appellate Court (which could not be disturbed in special appeal) that the property was acquired by the wife.

Held (contra by Campbell, J.) that the finding of the Judge was not sufficient, inasmuch as he had found that part of the purchase-money was paid by the husband, but had not found whether the remainder of the money was also paid by the husband. Ranee Surnonoyee v. Lucknee Put Chutter Singh, 6 W. R., 118.

A special appeal will not lie merely on the ground that the lower Appellate Court has disbelieved a witness by reason of his being an interested person, or for any other reason within its discretion. Dwarankanat Doss Bissoon v. Modduer Mohini Chuckbutty, 6 W. R., 292.

A special appeal will not lie in a case for damages for value of crops misappropriated under Rs. 500 cognizable by a Small Cause Court, notwithstanding that the case involved a question of title. Hoddoolah and others v. Sheik Kartloa, 7 W. R., 73.

As a general rule, a special appeal will not lie on a question of costs alone, particularly when it is not shown that the Court has exercised its jurisdiction illegally or contrary to any rule having the force of law. Achumbit Singh v. Kanklee Lall Mahajan and others, 7 W. R., 208.

No appeal to the Judge, or no special appeal to the High Court, will lie from the decision of a Deputy Collector under Section 11, Act VI of 1865.
CIVIL PROCEDURE—WHERE SPECIAL APPEAL DOES NOT LIE.

B. C., on the question of the standard pole of measurement. Rakhal Doss Mookerjee v. Tuno Poranamit, 7 W. R., 239. A special appeal does not lie from the order of a Judge declaring that sufficient cause has not been shown to his satisfaction for presenting after time an appeal from an ex parte judgment of a Deputy Collector. Kughoomn Singh and another v. Roy Mohun Lal Mittra, 7 W. R., 296. The refusal of a Moonsiff to inflict a fine upon recusant witnesses is no ground for special appeal. Pran Kristo Deo v. Kally Doss Deo and others, 7 W. R., 460. The parties in an appeal are not entitled as of right to put in additional evidence. The Appellate Court allows additional evidence in certain cases; but a special appeal will not lie in the event of the Court refusing to allow it. Golam Muckdom v. Mussumat Hafeejooniisa, 7 W. R., 459.

Under Section 3, Act XLII of 1860, a suit for damages of any kind below Rs. 500 (e.g., a suit for damages for not cutting through a bund whereby plaintiff's crops were destroyed in consequence of accumulation of water) is cognizable by a Small Cause Court; and, consequently, under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal will lie in such a case. Gopeenath Paul v. Lieutenant George Huhemnuo'ssa v. Illusmunul, 7 W. R., 246. No special appeal lies from an order of a Judge refusing to pass an order, allowing the appeal by the father to stand as an appeal by the defendant, but the High Court refused to pass an order, allowing the appeal by the father to stand as an appeal by the defendant. A'zo'slo Chum (llosoomdar and others v. Dwarka Nalh Biswas, 10 W. R., 32.

The Court of first instance being satisfied that the plaintiff's case could not be taken in special appeal. Goorodass Akhooler v. Poran Mundle, 12 W. R., 364. In a suit for possession of land after purchase, where defendant pleaded that he had long held under a miras pothah, which both the Courts below found to be false. — Held that the defendant could not be allowed in special appeal to come in for the first time with an allegation of a new and separate title, viz., a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1839. Shorjo Koomar v. Gun-gadur Roy, 12 W. R., 56.

The refusal of an application by a plaintiff to withdraw his suit is no ground for special appeal. Raj Kishen Deo v. Raj Kishen Deo and others, 6 W. R., Act X, 389. The High Court refused on special appeal to convert an order rejecting an appeal into one returning it for amendment. Bussunt Singh v. Zalen Singh, W. R., 1864, 383. The omission of a lower Appellate Court to give its reasons for believing witnesses disbelieved by the first Court, does not constitute a ground of special appeal. Lakhe Monee Dossia v. Rajkishore Paul, 4 W. R., 105. A defendant cannot appeal specially against a decision passed on the appeal of his co-defendant, affirming the decision of the first Court, which was not appealed against by the former. Modhosoodun Roy v. Shurno Miyee Debee, 5 W. R., 106.

When a Judge states as a fact that an admission was made before him by one of the parties to the suit, the High Court cannot in special appeal enquire whether the Judge was right or not in making that statement. Bykuntunath Googto v. Prosurno Miyee Sheba, 5 W. R., 196.

When a plaintiff has ineffectually sued for a declaration that certain property was his own self-acquired property, he cannot in special appeal ask for a declaration of his title to a moiety of the property as a member of a joint Hindu family. Dhan Kristo Roy v. Huro Chunder Roy, 5 W. R., 197.

Where a decree is passed ex parte in an original suit the defendant has no right to a special appeal, even though his appeal have been entertained by the Civil Court. Chidambara Pillai v. Kaman, 1 Mad. Rep., 189.

The father of a defendant filed an appeal from the judgment of the first Court, describing his son as a minor. It afterwards appeared that the defendant was not a minor; and the lower Appellate Court refused to pass an order, allowing the appeal by the father to stand as an appeal by the defendant. Held that the lower Appellate Court could, in the exercise of its discretion, allow the appeal to stand as an appeal by the defendant, but the High Court could not interfere with the order in special appeal. Shama Charan Ghose v. Tarak Nath Mukhopadhya, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 115.

An error of valuation, which does not affect the jurisdiction of the Courts in which a suit is tried, and does not lead to a defect in the decision on the merits, is not sufficient ground for interference in special appeal. Kristo Churum Murquad and others v. Dwarka Nath Bussas, 10 W. R., 32.

It is in the discretion of a Court of first instance, after the plaintiff's case is closed, to allow him to call further witnesses. There is no right of special appeal upon the point. Rakhal Doss Mundal v. Protap Chunder Hazara, 12 W. R., 455.

In a suit by a purchaser of an estate to have his name registered in the collectorate and his possession confirmed, which failed in the Court of first instance, but was decreed in the lower Appellate Court, it was held to be too late for the defendant, after contesting the suit in two Courts, to urge in special appeal that the plaint disclosed no cause of action. Buxk Aly Swadagur v. Joyapat Khon, 11 W. R., 248.

Where a Judge found on evidence that the notices in certain execution proceedings were not caused to be properly served, and that those notices were not made in good faith, the finding was held to be a finding of fact which could not be disturbed in special appeal. Abdool Azee v. Siamswnnsa and another, 11 W. R., 263.
The reasons of a Judge for not giving any weight to documents offered as evidence cannot be questioned in special appeal. Munee Dutt Singh v. William Campbell, 11 W. R., 278.

Parties who did not appeal from the decision of the first Court cannot appeal specially against the decision of the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the decision of the first Court prejudiced their rights. Boykant Ram Sahoo v. Poorno Chunder Dass, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 97.

The omission to record an opinion on one of many items of evidence (e.g., an Ameen's report) is not such an error in law as to come within the scope of the provisions for special appeals. Sreemutty Bundhoo Sookolyan v. Maharajah Joy Prakash Singh Bahadoor, W. R., 1864, 367.

The question of how costs have been awarded is not a point for special appeal. Beer Pershad v. Doonga Pershad, W. R., 1864, 215.

In a suit by a lessee upon a contract for a refund of excess revenue remitted by Government, a special appeal is not admissible if the amount claimed be under Rs. 500. J. White v. Tripora Sunkur Mookerjee, W. R., 1864, 297.

No special appeal lies to the High Court from the order of a Judge refusing to re-admit an appeal dismissed for default by a Principal Sudder Ameen. The application for re-admission should be made to the Principal Sudder Ameen. Kisto Persad Dutt v. T. H. Cowie, W. R., 1864, 315.

No special appeal lies in a suit for damages for breach of a private arrangement by which the parties agree to control the terms of a decree, when the amount is within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. Chundy Persad Dutt v. Kasemath Dass, W. R., 1864, 346.

The directing of a local investigation is a mere matter of discretion in which no special appeal will lie a right. Graham v. F. Lopex, 1 W. R., 141.

The not making a local investigation is no ground of special appeal. Bykant Nath Sein v. Pearce Munee Dasse, 1 W. R., 196.

A Judge's exercise of his discretion as to making further local enquiry cannot be interfered with in special appeal. Poorno Persad Roy v. Chundermath Chatterjee, 1 W. R., 249.

Under Clause 1, Section 17, Act X of 1862, no special appeal lies from the order of a Judge admitting an insufficiently-stamped pottah on payment of full stamp and penalty. Goluck Chunder Sein v. Sheikh Khan Mahomed Khansama, 3 W. R., Act X R., 158.

The question whether there was a sufficient ground for the dismissal of a pagoda hereditary servant by a Dharma Karta is one of degree and not of principle, and must therefore depend upon the circumstances of each case.

The finding of the lower Courts upon such matters must be treated by the High Court on special appeal as a conclusive finding upon a matter of fact, unless it be supported by no evidence whatever. Krissnasamy Tatchhurry v. Gomatam Ranganachurry, 4 Mad. Rep., 63.

A defendant complained, under Section 257 of the Civil Procedure Code, of irregularity in conducting the sale of his lands taken in execution of a decree against him. The sale was confirmed by the Court of first instance, and the order was affirmed on appeal by the Civil Judge.

Held, that a special appeal to the High Court did not lie. Varudha Reddi v. Venkuta Subba Reddi, 5 Mad. Rep., 213.

In a suit for rent the lower Appellate Court decreed the suit as against the tenant but dismissed it as against his vendee, who had wrongly been added by the first Court as a defendant in the suit, and who now specially appeals, praying for a declaration of her liability for rent as purchaser from the tenant. Held, that the appeal would not lie. Mussimatt Oognu Chowdrain v. Shaikth Keramattullah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 219.

In a suit for damages for defamation of character caused by a criminal charge preferred by defendant against plaintiff, where the lower Court finds as a fact from the probabilities, inferences, and circumstances in the case that there was no reasonable or probable cause for the charge, the finding cannot be interfered with in special appeal. Gour Hurree Dass Mohunt v. Hygrib Dass Mohunt, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 425.

A special appeal will not lie from the order of an Appellate Court, refusing, in the exercise of its discretion, to admit additional evidence. Kulpo Singh v. Thakoor Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 429.

If the reasons in a judgment are such as can be rightly given, and the inferences such as can be legally drawn, it cannot be set aside in special appeal, even if the Appellate Court cannot agree with or support all the reasons given. Rummeazoobeddan Bhoorgan v. Iyymala, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 303.

No special appeal lies from the order of a Judge refusing an application to restore an appeal that had been withdrawn. Moulhoomutty Debia v. Dhubul Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 167.

A party to a certain proceeding instituted under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, having been summoned to give evidence did not attend. The Court, considering that his absence was without lawful excuse, decided the matter before it with reference to the provisions of Section 170 of the Civil Procedure Code. It was then attempted to move the High Court under Section 15 of 24 and 25 Victoria, c. 104, to set aside the order as passed without legal evidence. Held, that such action would be substantially a special appeal, which could not be allowed with reference to Section 246. Dhubul Singh v. Indurchunder Doogur, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 121.

When the subject-matter of an award is as to its nature and value cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, no special appeal will lie to the High Court against the decree of an ordinary Civil Court in respect of such award. Mussamut Bemu v. Naranjan Saha, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 82; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 233.

Where a Judge, instead of remanding a case under Section 352 of Act VIII of 1859, when the Moonsiff had not disposed of the case upon any preliminary point, ought to have disposed of it under Section 354, keeping the case on his own file, and ordering the Moonsiff, after taking the necessary evidence and deciding any issue fixed by him, to send up his finding with the evidence to his Court, and then proceeding to try the case as an appeal. Held that the irregularity was not one which affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, so as to justify interference with the Judge's decision in special appeal. Gunga Monee Dassee v. Issur Chunder Shaha, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 465.

The Court cannot in special appeal go behind a decree for ejectment, and hold that the tenure in question was of that character that no order for ejectment could pass. Bejoo Roy v. Bal Mokund Misser, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 421.

Weight of evidence is not a point on which the High Court can interfere in special appeal. Dhomdh Bahadoor Singh v. Priaj Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 314.

The validity of a Civil Court’s decree is not open to question in special appeal, after it has become final and conclusive by operation of law. Ramesur Singh v. Ajoodhya Pershad Singh, 13 S. W. R., 294.

(k) Practice and Procedure in Special Appeal.

When a plaintiff in special appeal complains of the refusal of the Court of first instance to summon witnesses named by him, he is bound to show that he has insisted upon his right at every stage of the case, both in the lower Court and in the first Appellate Court. Unooroop Chunder Singh v. Heera Monee Dossee and another, II W. R., 418.

A case which is tried in special appeal is subject to all rules provided for regular appeals so far as the same may be applicable.

The question whether evidence on the record is legally or reasonably sufficient to support the findings of the lower Appellate Court may be dealt with in special appeal without a remand or rehearing. Joy Ram Roy v. Omrao Roy, 12 W. R., 431.

In special appeal a new ground may be taken, if it manifestly arises out of the facts alleged and admitted, whether pressed or not before the lower Appellate Court. Kalimohun Chatterjee v. Kali Kisho Roy Chowdhry, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 39 ; 11 W. R., 183.

A special appeal will lie from an order of a Judge rejecting an application for the re-admission of an appeal dismissed for default of prosecution, provided the order be shown to be illegal. Mussamut Beebe Haloo v. Mussamut Atware and others, 7 W. R., 81.

A party cannot be permitted to change in special appeal the allegations on which he went to trial in the Courts below, and to raise altogether a new issue. Shiu Das Narayan Singh v. Bhugwan Dutt, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 15.

The defendants in the Court below unsuccessfully claimed to retain possession of some land under a kobala from a Mohammedan widow, who was alleged by them to have been absolutely entitled thereto under her right of dower.

Held that the defendants could not, in special appeal, set up for the first time that the widow was entitled to a share by inheritance, if not as dhenmohur, no case of that kind having been made in the Courts below, and no enquiry asked for into the state of the family, or whether any and what share came to the widow. Ambika Churn Dutt and others v. Nadir Hossein, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 258 ; 11 W. R., 135.

In a suit for kubuleut at an enhanced rate, the Court of first instance gave a decree for an amount less than that of the claim. No objection was taken before the lower Appellate Court that, under the Full Bench ruling in Gholam Mahomed v. Asmut Ali Khan Chowdhry, the suit was liable to be dismissed. This objection was taken for the first time in special appeal. Held that the objection could not be entertained. Nizamut Ali v. Romesh Chundra Roy, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 78 ; 11 W. R., 430.

The High Court will not, even with consent of parties, pronounce a decree on the facts in a special appeal. Kadambinee Dossee v. Doorga Churn Dutt, Marsh., 4.

Held, in suppression of the ruling and resolution of the late Sudder Court, that an due cause being shown for delay to the Court's satisfaction the prescribed period for admission of special appeal may be extended. P. Houest v. Syud Kootub Hossein and others, i Agra Rep., F. B., 100.

In a suit for possession by right of foreclosed mortgage, plaintiff having obtained a decree which was ex-parte against any of the defendants, the lower Appellate Court found as a fact, on the appeal of the defendants, that the mortgage transaction was benamee and collusive (the defendant A. having been a sharer in the fraud), and dismissed the claim. Held that plaintiff could not in special appeal be allowed, under the finding of the lower Appellate Court, to urge that his suit should not have been dismissed as against the share of A., on the technical ground that A. had not appealed. Ramlochun Soor v. Nittyen Kallee Debai, 12 W. R., 210.

Suit against three sets of defendants interested in three different plots of land, A., B., and C. The first Court decreed the suit only as regards A. On appeal, in respect of A., the Judge not only reversed the lower Court's decision as regards A., but also as regards B. and C., by giving the plaintiff a decree in respect of them. On special appeal, as regards A., the plaintiff was unsuccessful; but the defendants interested in B., having been served with a notice to appear, were treated as respondents, and upon their objection, under Section 348, Code of Civil Procedure, the Judge's decision was reversed, not only as regards B., but also as regards C., although the defendants interested in C. did not appear. Chundra Kulla Dossee and others v. Jotendro Mohun Tagore and others, 6 W. R., 104.

A plaintiff or defendant, successful in the Court of first instance, who does not appear in the Court of regular appeal, is not debarred by such non-appearence from preferring a special appeal. Ramshet bin Bächaseit v. Balkrishna bin Abābhāt, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 161.

Plaintiff sued as heir of Juggobundhoo to set aside certain sales by his widow. The property was found to have belonged to the widows, and then the plaintiff claimed the share of one of them as her heir. But as he did not make this claim in the Court below, he was not allowed to advance it in special appeal. Kripa Nath Mozoomdar v. Saroda Chowdhurin, 1 W. R., 283.

On a special appeal the respondent has no right to take any objection to the decision appealed against which he might have taken if he had preferred a separate special appeal. Matuda Basudan v. Mastan Sahib and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 102.

Where a landlord's claim for arrears of rent at enhanced rates was dismissed in toto by the first Court, and in his appeal to the Judge he advanced no claim for arrears at the old rates, he cannot in special appeal object to the Judge's decision on the ground that such arrears were not decreed to him. Bijnay Gobind Bur and others v. Jannooke Burmanya, 8 W. R., 213.

A claim as heir to a widow cannot be heard on special appeal when the plaintiff did not sue on that ground in the Court below. Kripamath Mozoomdar v. Saroda Chowdrain, 1 W. R., 283.

An objection (that an adoption was invalid, because the party adopted was the eldest son of his natural father) was rejected in special appeal, because not urged in the lower Courts at any stage of the trial, and not specifically taken in the petition of special appeal. Joy Tara Dossee Chowdrain v. Roy Chunder Ghose, 1 W. R., 136.

The lower Appellate Court (that of the 24-Pargunahs) found that, though the defendant lived in Calcutta, he had a dwelling-house within its jurisdiction. Held that such an objection was not admissible in special appeal. Kamramund Roy Chowdhray v. Urmokal Debis, 2 W. R., 257.

In special appeal should be taken distinctly in the memorandum of appeal. Buta Narain Roy v. Sham Soonder Nunder, 2 W. R., Act X R., 43.

A plea not taken before the lower Appellate Court may be allowed to plaintiff, appellant, on special appeal, when some of the defendants have been released by the first Court from all liability, without any trial on the merits as between them and the plaintiff. Lall Mohun Sein v. Amund Chunder Chuckerbutty, 4 W. R., Act X R., 3.

The Court would not allow points not raised before the lower Appellate Court, or in the written grounds of special appeal, to be argued. Mee Bahador Ali and others v. Musammat Suneech and others, 6 W. R., 157.

A party was not allowed on special appeal to go behind the issues by which he was content to abide in the lower Court. Sheikh Ahmed Mundul v. Sheikh Sconoollah and others, 8 W. R., 5.

An objection having been taken to a decree of a lower Court, on the ground that it decreed the claim against each shareholder in a talook, without disclosing the extent of his share, it was held by Kemp, J. (dismissing the appeal) that this ground... could not be permitted to be taken by the pleader, as it had not been taken in special appeal.

_Held_ by Mitter, J. (contra), that it was immaterial whether the point had been taken or not, and that the case should be remanded, because the decree was incapable of execution. _Maharajah Mohan Singh Bahadur v. Mathooraprasad and others_, 8 W. R., 515.

The finding of a lower Appellate Court pronouncing, on evidence, on the genuineness of a deed (where production of a copy (the original having been lost) is not open to interference in special appeal).

One of the defendants to a suit having relied on the validity of a hibbanamah and a will, the former of which was alone contested below by the plaintiff, the lower Court was right in not trying the issue as to the will, which was one raised between co-defendants, and the plaintiff was not allowed to contest that point in special appeal. _Bhagwan Chandra Bose v. Srinivasa Sreekutty Deka_, 8 W. R., 356.

Where a lower Appellate Court's refusal to examine witnesses in a suit for damages for assault is made a ground of special appeal, it is not sufficient to put in an affidavit to the effect that a verbal request of the vakeel to examine the witnesses was refused by the Judge. _Rameswar Bhattacharjee v. Shubh Narsain Chuckerbutty_, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 419.

The question of competency of an agent to sue, if not raised in the initial stage of a suit, cannot be permitted to be raised in special appeal. _Sorendranauth Roy v. Rughooobur Dyal Awustu_, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 392.

The High Court is bound to notice an argument on a point of law raised in special appeal, even though it was not raised before the Court on a previous occasion, when it passed an order of remand. _Durimba Deka v. Nilsunray Singh Doss_, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 180.

Where a Hindu widow, jointly with her sons, sued for confirmation of title, and both the Courts below found adversely to her title to hold the land in dispute as separate property, it was held that her sons who had no interest in the result of the suit were not competent without her to prefer a special appeal. _Doorga Pershad Mohupattur v. Kailesh Mohun Myte_, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 536.

It is most essential in special appeal that the High Court should be very careful in not interfering with inference of fact drawn by a lower Appellate Court. _Humur Mahomed Chowdry v. Pool Mahomed Chowdry_, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 311.

Under Section 350, Act VIII of 1859, is not for the High Court to interfere when the decision of the lower Appellate Court on the question of stamps does not affect the case on the merits. _Khan Mahomed Shaha v. Lali Mahomed_, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 179.

In a special appeal the general affirmation of a judgment can only refer to the points raised by the appellant, the rejection of the appeal not necessarily affirming the other findings of fact or law incidentally arrived at by the lower Appellate Court. _Shaikh Ahmed Hossein v. Mussamut Bunda_, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 91.

Where any real grievance or other just cause of complaint arises to a plaintiff from the first Court's refusal to examine his witnesses, his first duty is to bring the matter prominently to the notice of the lower Appellate Court in his grounds of appeal. Failing to do so, he cannot be allowed to urge it as a plea in special appeal. _Osman Singh v. Churn Mahtaoon_, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 87.

A plaint presented to a Court not being the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it, was returned to the plaintiff. It was subsequently registered by the same Court, in obedience to an order of the District Judge, and a decree was passed in plaintiff's favour. On appeal the defendant pleaded want of jurisdiction in the Court below. The plea was overruled, and the case remanded for re-trial on its merits. The Court of first instance again passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff, and the defendant again urged his plea of jurisdiction in appeal, but the Judge declined to go into it a second time.

_Held_, that the suit not having been instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it, the District Judge had no power to direct the Court of first instance to hear the case, and although no special appeal was preferred against the decree of the District Judge in which he remanded the case for re-trial, it was still open to the defendant in special appeal to raise the plea of jurisdiction. _Ganpatrudan Ranchodji v. Bhol Swaraj_, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 79.

The Court of first instance rejected a claim on the ground that it was barred by limitation. The Court of Appeal, however, entertaining a contrary opinion, remanded the case for trial on the merits. The case was, accordingly, in both Courts, tried upon the merits.

_Held_, that the omission to prefer a special appeal from the order of remand did not preclude the party aggrieved by that order from objecting to it in a special appeal preferred against the final decree of the Appellate Court. _Vithul Viswamirth Prithu v. Rdm Chundra Suda Shirv Kirkin_, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 149.

A mortgagee claiming title otherwise than from the execution-debtor is competent, on behalf of himself and his mortgagor, to sue to raise an attachment on the property of which he is mortgagor.

The Court of first instance found against the defendant on a matter of fact, but decreed in his favour on a point of law; and on appeal by the plaintiff, the defendant omitted to file a memorandum of objections to the adverse finding of fact of the Court of first instance. The Appellate Court, without going into the question of fact, confirmed the decree of the Court of first instance on the point of law.

_Held_, that the High Court, in special appeal, could under these circumstances give judgment in favour of the plaintiff without a remand. _R. S. Wagnkar v. B. B. Wadekur_, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 194.

The High Court allowed objections to be taken by a defendant which had not been taken in either of the lower Courts. _Bhubun Chundra Shome v. Ramydev Shumtu_, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 62; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 55.
The admissibility of a special appeal in a case of the Small Cause Court claim for contribution in respect of costs, is a matter which ought not to be decided by an officer of the Court, but judicially by the Court itself. Kisto Koomar Chowdhry v. Anundamoyee Chowdhraun, 6 W. R., Mis., 128.

The Moonsiff, on the application of a judgment-debtor, set aside a sale held in execution of a decree passed against him, on the ground that the decree was barred by lapse of time. The judgment-creditor appealed to the Judge, who rejected the appeal on the ground that no appeal was allowed from such an order. Held, in special appeal, that, under Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, an appeal lay from the order of the Moonsiff. Dhuon Bibe v. Haraldhun Ram, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 11; 11 W. R., 4.

(j) Rulings under the Code.

Section 337, Civil Procedure Code, does not empower an Appellate Court to exercise the power with which it invests such Court when it finds that the ground on which it proposes to base its own decision is common to all the defendants, but only when it finds that the decision of the lower Court has proceeded on such common ground. Proth Chunder Dutt v. Koobonissa Bibe, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 31.

Held that Section 337, Act VIII of 1859, applies as well to ex-parte decrees as to other decrees, the only question being whether the decision of the lower Court proceeded on a ground common to all the defendants. Sreenath Chowdry v. J. J. Grey, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 114.

When one of several defendants appeals at any time against the judgment of a Court of first instance, the Appellate Court is competent, under the circumstances set forth in Section 337, Code of Civil Procedure, to reverse the judgment appealed against in favour of all the defendants. Shramjunees Deece v. Poorusuttum Doss, 9 W. R., 356.

Held that, as the judgment (which was erroneous) was on a ground common to all the defendants, and the appeal was substantially against the whole decree, the High Court was competent, under Section 337, Civil Procedure Code, to reverse the decree, though only some of the defendants had appealed, and though the one who had appealed as to costs had engrossed his appeal only on a stamp to cover the amount of those costs. Badul Singh v. Churterdharoo Singh and others, 9 W. R., 538.

Where a decree of a Court of first instance affects all the defendants, the Appellate Court is competent, under Section 337 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to reverse it in respect to all the defendants, including any who have not appealed or defended the suit. Mohuntrung Lall Gossami v. Gourree Mundul and others, 10 W. R., 285.

Section 346, Act VIII of 1859 (providing for the dismissal of an appeal for default), even if it applies to miscellaneous cases, does not apply to a case in which it is not shown distinctly that the appellant had any notice that his appeal would be heard on the day to which the case was adjourned, and on which the Judge disposed of it. Shib Phunburee v. Allad Monee Dassia, 5 W. R., Mis., 22.

A decree-holder, driven by an order of the Court, under Section 346 of the Civil Procedure Code, made in the execution proceedings, to seek a remedy in a regular suit, sued to establish his right to certain property, as being that of his judgment-debtor. The defendant, admitting that the property had been the judgment-debtor's, alleged that it had passed to himself by conveyance. Plaintiff, admitting the fact of such a deed of sale, alleged that it was fraudulently executed, in order to deprive him of his just rights. Held that plaintiff was bound to prove the fraud. Laloo Rosand v. Binoo Ram Sein and others, 10 W. R., 321.

A petition of objection under Section 348 of Act VIII of 1859 filed by a pauper respondent will be received, but will not be heard till the stamp duty is paid. Act XXVI of 1867 contains no reservation as to the stamp only to be used on such a petition. Rashmonee Dossee v. Chowdhry Fonmonjonny Mullic, 9 W. R., 356.

Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, is as applicable to special as to regular appeals. Narayan Ayyar v. Lakshmi Mammai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 216.

Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, is wide enough to empower an Appellate Court on cross-appeal to re-open the whole case, and assess damages on defendants who had been acquitted in the original suit, and who were not parties to the appeal. Anund Chunder Goopoo v. Mohesh Chunder Mozoondar, 1 W. R., 229.

A plaintiff (respondent) cannot be allowed by way of cross-appeal to take objections, under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, to the finding of a lower Court as to a defendant who has not appealed, and who is not before the Appellate Court. Hosen Buksh Patonk v. Sheikh Baroo Beparee, 5 W. R., 50.

Under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, a defendant may take the objection of limitation without filing an appeal.

The pendency of a suit in Court without jurisdiction, under Section 14, Regulation III of 1793, does not entitle a party to any deduction in computing the period of limitation. Okhotoonissu v. Koobli Sirdar, 2 W. R., 45.

A sued B. to recover possession of a hereditary jote, of which he alleged he had been dispossessed by B. during his minority. B. raised the defence of limitation and relinquishment by A.'s grandmother and guardian. The Moonsiff held that the suit was not barred, on the ground that it had been brought within three years from the date on which A. had attained his majority, but decided against A. on the merits. On appeal the question of limitation was not raised; but on the merits the Judge also found against A. On special appeal by A., B. took an objection, under Section 348 of Act VIII of 1859, that A.'s suit was barred. Held that B. could not take the objection at that stage. Held also that to make the relinquishment, if any, valid against A., it ought to have been shown that it was for A.'s benefit. Decision of the lower Court reversed. Kedarooath Mookerjee v. Mathooranath Dutt, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 17.

Though a notice of a cross-appeal may be lodged... with the Registrar of the High Court, previously, the cross-appeal itself must, under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, be taken at the hearing of the appeal, and must bear the stamp required by Section 6, Act XXVII of 1867. Lalit Singh and others v. Mira Ali Reza and others, 8 W. R., 322.

A respondent, making a cross-appeal, can take objection to any part of the judgment of the first Court adverse to him to which the appellant can answer, and which affects the appellant's interests only; but the cross-appeal of a respondent does not open up any question between himself and his co-respondents, for they cannot be allowed to interplead. The law gives a respondent a right to raise objections at the hearing of the appeal; but, under Section 348, Civil Procedure Code, reasonably construed, the contest is between two parties equally interested, and not with third parties. Mahboob Ali and others v. Zur Bano Bittie, 9 W. R., 78.

Where a plaintiff's suit is dismissed, and a defendant appeals, seeking no relief whatever, but acting in the same interest with the plaintiff, the latter is not entitled, by way of cross-appeal, under Section 348, to argue that his suit was wrongly dismissed. Sabtiullah Meah v. Rohim Dewan, 9 W. R., 273.

A party wishing to file a cross-appeal should do so at the commencement of the hearing of the appeal, and the objection should be put in, in a written form, on a properly stamped paper. It is too late to take an objection, under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, when the Appellate Court has given its decision. Khajah Abdul Guinne v. Gour Monee, 9 W. R., 375.

Where a respondent in the lower Appellate Court formally, under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, took an objection in writing on the ground of jurisdiction, and that Court did not notice the objection,—Held that in special appeal the party was entitled to a remand to the lower Appellate Court for an adjudication on that point. Joy Kissen Mookerjee and others v. Hurrechur Mookerjee, 6 W. R., 285.

Unsuccessful intervenors (defendants) who have not appealed cannot raise objections under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859. Bypro Pershad Mytee v. Mussamut Tarra Soonduree Debia, 6 W. R., 81.

A respondent may file with the Registrar, before the hearing of the appeal, written notice of the objections which he intends, under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, to argue that his suit was wrongly dismissed. Sabtiullah Meah v. Rohim Dewan, 9 W. R., 273.

Section 348 in no way restricts respondents as to the points on which they may, by way of cross-appeal, object to the decision appealed against. Hennooman Singh v. Baboo Suddotali, W. R., 1864, 232.

The mere calling on of a case to be heard does not mean the same thing as the hearing of the case in the sense of Section 348, Act VIII of 1859. Ram Pershad Ojha v. Bhurosa Koonwar, 9 W. R., 328.

A defendant or respondent cannot be heard by way of cross-appeal, under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, as against a co-defendant or co-respondent. Maharajah Turrucknath Roy v. Taburunissa Chowdharrain and others, 7 W. R., 39.

A plaintiff (respondent) may take an objection, under Section 348, against defendants, who have not appealed, but who are pro-forma brought in as co-respondents. Ram Lall Mookerjee v. Mussamut Tarra Soonduree Debia, W. R., 1864, 3.

Held that objections under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, can only be heard when the opposite party being appellant prosecutes his appeal, and not when he withdraws from it. Bakhadar Singh and others v. Bhugwan Doss and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 16.

An Appellate Court may, under Section 355, Act VIII of 1859, admit additional evidence.

In this case the Judge in appeal declined to do so, on the ground that application for the admission of additional evidence should have been made to the lower Court. Held that instead of applying for the admission of a special appeal, the proper course would have been to apply to the Judge for a review of his order. Ram Lall v. Rung Lall, 17 S. W. R., 110.

Where a decree makes a party liable who is not liable (e.g. an agent instead of the corporate body whose agent he is), the error is one affecting the merits within the meaning of Section 350, Civil Procedure Code. Nobin Chunder Paul v. C. Stephenson, Agent of the East India Railway Co., 15 S. W. R., C. R., 534.

The true interpretation of Section 355, Act VIII of 1859, is that, when a Court sees that by some inadvertence or mistake a party has not produced some evidence which he was capable of adding, and that he is likely to be prejudiced by that omission or mistake, which was simply unintentional, undesigned, and accidental, the Court will allow such further evidence to be taken. Gowhur Ali Khan v. Mussamut Sahkeeene Khanum, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 507.

In a suit to establish title to 3 annas and a fraction of an estate, plaintiff having obtained a decree for 2 annas appealed; but the lower Appellate Court reduced the share allotted to the plaintiff. Held that, as no question of the share to be awarded was raised before the lower Appellate Court by the defendant under Section 348, Code of Civil Procedure, that Court should not have interfered with the decision in the way it did. Mussamut Ritooraj v. Oojagur Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 227.

Objections under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, may be urged at any time in the course of hearing of an appeal. Thakoor Dass Goshamee v. Gopee Kristo Gossamee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 18.

A respondent in taking advantage of the provisions of Section 348 of the Civil Procedure Code... can only take such objections as have reference to the party appealing. If he wishes to raise objections against parties who do not appeal, he must do so by independent appeal. Ganesh Pandurnaunag Agli v. Gangadhrs Ramkrish, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. 1, 244.

(e) Re-hearing of Appeals. 18, 19.

There is no provision in Section 6, Act XXIII of 1801, for the re-admission of appeals once dismissed under the provisions of that section. Ramessur Dutt v. Lootzunissa, 6 W. R., Mis., 130.

An application to a Court, asking it to set aside a decree by which it dismissed an appeal for default of prosecution, ought to be made, by the terms of Section 347, Act VIII of 1859, within thirty days from the date of such dismissal. Tarakalkee Dabee v. Nitye Moeeyy Dabee, 10 W. R., 427.

A special appeal lies from an order passed under Section 347, Act VIII of 1859, rejecting an application for the re-hearing of an appeal dismissed for default of prosecution. Ramjaid Je- madar v. Bissessur Bhuttacharjee, 2 W. R., Mis., 23.

To bring an appellant within the terms of Section 347 of the Code of Civil Procedure so as to give the Court jurisdiction, his application for re-admission of the appeal dismissed for default of prosecution must be made within 30 days from the date of the dismissal.

Previous rulings allowing a special appeal from an order under Section 347 followed, but doubted. Sheikh Miltoo Khan v. Rumun Khan and others, 8 W. R., 361.

A special appeal lies from an order refusing to revive, under Section 347, Act VIII of 1859, an appeal struck off for default. Sheikh Gholam Mahomed Akbar v. Koonjo Beharee Zall, 5 W. R., 381.

One of several defendants, who appeals in respect only of the sum decreed against her, is not entitled to take advantage of Section 337, Act VIII of 1859, and question the full amount of a decree. Sreedhoy Coomaree Dabee v. Maharajah Agli v. Gangadhrs Ramkrish, 5 W. R., 392.

The time allowed by Section 347 of Act VIII of 1859 within which to apply for the re-admission of an appeal dismissed for default of prosecution, should not, where the appellant's pleader has died without his hearing of it, be counted as commencing until the appellant has an opportunity of coming in under the provision of Regulation II of 1827, Section 54, Clause 2. Alikkan Umarmhan, ex-parte, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C, 92.

When a lower Appellate Court, after eleven months' delay, and without fixing any time for disposing of an appeal, made an order dismissing the case for default, the High Court set aside the order as erroneous, holding that it was the subject of an appeal, notwithstanding Section 347, Act VIII of 1859, which only applies to cases of involuntary failure to comply with a Court's order. Soodhmonnee Dossee v. GoorooPersaud Dutt, W. R., 1864, 176.

(f) Duties of Appellate Court.

It is not the duty of a Court of Special Appeal to make that clear which is obscure in the judgment of a lower Appellate Court. Shumbhoo Nath Singh v. Mooktaram Kolal, 11 W. R., 361.

It is objectionable to disturb or vary a decree properly made by the lower Court for the mere purpose of guarding against the possible error of some other tribunal in some future suit.

Two suits were heard together. On objection made in appeal that the evidence taken in one suit (to which the objector was not a party) had been irregularly read in the other,—Hold that, having regard to all the circumstances, the suits having been tried together, and the evidence objected to having been commented on by the objector, or on his behalf, it sufficiently appeared that the evidence had been substantially taken in both suits.

A Court of Appeal has to determine whether the decision of the lower Court when pronounced was a correct decision of the issues then pending before it, and not whether the suits were tried in the lower Court.

An admission by an adoptive mother, in a suit brought by her mother-in-law to set aside the adoption, that an alleged unomuttee-puttur under which her mother-in-law had previously professed to adopt a son to her deceased husband was valid, would not estop her adoptive son from denying the validity of that instrument, in a suit subsequently brought by him for the assertion of his rights under the adoption. Annamoojye Chowdhroonv. Shay Chunder Roy, Marsh., 455.

In a suit for collection of papers and money against a gomastah and his surety, a decree was given against the gomastah, and the surety was absolved from liability.

Plaintiff appealed to make the surety liable, and the Judge on appeal dismissed the claim against both defendants.

Hold that, as the decision of the first Court did not proceed on a ground common to the two defendants, the Judge was wrong in reversing it as against the gomastah. Ram Mahinee Debi v. Jabad Sircar and another, 6 W. R., Act X R., 32.

Where a Court of first instance does not proceed on ground altogether common to all the defendants, the Appellate Court is not justified in law, on the appeal of one of those defendants, in giving virtually a decree in favour of the other defendants. Boydenath Surnak and others v. Ojan Bibee and others, 11 W. R., 238.

Upon the appeal of one of several parties, an Appellate Court cannot reverse the decree appealed from as against any other of the parties. Koolada Pershad Misru v. Gowra Chand Misru, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 353.

An Appellate Court is not justified in reversing a decision on an important question of fact without showing distinctly the ground on which it acts. Munsoob Bibee v. Ali Meah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 358.

Where a quite new and different issue is raised in the Appellate Court, it ought to be done in such a way as to give the parties the fullest opportunity imitation, considers sufficient that he is competent to be provided procedure, it's decree. Pershad v. R., 314. There is no objection to additional procedure, to it for v. of producing evidence upon it, because if it is at all likely that, in consequence of the issues framed in the first Court, the parties were induced to abstain from giving evidence, it would not be right to decide the issues against them on account of the absence of evidence. Latoo Mundle v. Bhoobun Mohon Chatterjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 361.

A Court of Appeal cannot raise on appeal an issue which was not raised in the Court of first instance, the functions of a Court of Appeal being not to interfere upon mere points of form, but to rectify a judgment where there has been error on the merits, whether that error has arisen from a misapprehension of the facts or misapplication of the law. Brojo Seonund Mitter v. Futtick Chunder Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 407.

The trial of the issue of limitation after the issue on the merits is an irregularity which, if committed in an Appellate Court, is not necessarily productive of any disadvantage even to the defendant. Sham Churn Doss v. Goono Moya Chowdraid, 14 S. W. R. C. R., 757.

An appeal having been made from an order relating to the execution of a decree, the High Court directed that an Ameen should deliver over possession and make a map of the property so delivered over, and a map showing the boundaries laid down in the decree. The Ameen went to the spot and made a map. That map was not transmitted to the Court; but, in consequence of certain proceedings in the Subordinate Judge's Court, a second Ameen was sent and a second map made. These proceedings were wholly disregarded by the High Court, which proceeded upon the first Ameen's map and report, against which no exception was filed in the High Court. *Laljee Sahoo v. alleged sale of the property (in the possession of the defendant, a mortgagee) to a wife by her husband who was not bona fide, the bonae fide of the mortgage entered into by the wife, with the knowledge of her husband, became a material issue in the case. The first Court found that it was not a bonae fide transaction, and the Judge concurred in the finding. Held that the mere expression of concurrence by the Judge (the finding concurred in being supported by no satisfactory reasons) was not sufficient, and that the Judge should have stated the grounds of his agreement. *Khelluck Chunder Ghose v. An Appellate Court is not competent to remand a case for a re-trial after a local investigation. Jeebu Kissen Roy v. Dwarkanath Roy Chudwry, W. R., 1864, 363.

It is open to an Appellate Court to consider the question whether a document which the Court of first instance has declared to be liable to a stamp under Act X of 1862, is properly so liable. Doorga Lall v. Srinivasa Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 71.

The suit being one not cognizable (with reference to pecuniary limitation) by the Moorens,—Held that the Principal Sudder Ameen was right in taking up the point in appeal, even at a late stage, after having himself remanded the suit for local investigation. Ramruttin Bhuggut v. Bubooollah, 1 W. R., 259.

An Appellate Court should take notice of all the specific objections argued before it, and not content itself with recording a general assent to a first Court’s finding. Shumboonath Chowdhry and others v. Prokash Chunder Dutt and others, 8 W. R., 272.

A Judge has discretion in the matter of adding a fresh respondent to the record, the latter having been a party to the original suit. Chowdannicer Dossee v. Ram Roodro Gangooly and others, 8 W. R., 367.

A suit dismissed on the ground of the pottah on which the plaintiff relies being found a forgery, cannot be decreed in appeal without trial of the issue as to the genuineness of the pottah. Kimesh Kichen v. Achaiten Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 55.

Before rejecting a petition of appeal on the ground that it is insufficiently stamped, the Court ought to require the appellant to supply additional stamp paper. Anund Mohun Ghose v. Doorga Doss Dutt, W. R., 1864, Mis., 4.

The High Court, sitting in appeal on questions of fact, is guided by the same rules as those of the Privy Council when they sit upon motions for a rule for new trials from the old Supreme Court.

The High Court, sitting in appeal, will not disturb a judgment upon a question as to the credibility of witnesses, unless it be manifestly clear, from the probabilities attached to certain circumstances in the case, that the Court was wrong in the conclusion drawn from such evidence.

The High Court, sitting in appeal, will look upon the decree of a Judge as to facts in the same light as the verdict of a Jury; and though some of the reasons given for the conclusion arrived at be erroneous, the High Court in appeal will not say that the decree is against the weight of evidence, if sufficient reason for such decree still remain. Bertallah Chuckerbutty and another v. Mohesh Chunder Ghosaul and another, 1 Hyde’s Rep., 105.

On a question arising under Section 92, Act X of 1859, the Deputy Collector held that the judgment was for a sum exceeding Rs. 500, by including the value of stamp incurred in taking out execution. The Judge, on appeal, held that the value of the stamps should not be taken into account, and reversed the Deputy Collector’s order. The Judge had no authority to entertain an appeal from an order of the Deputy Collector passed in execution; and the High Court, under Section 34, Act XXIII of 1861, and following the principle of Sections 187 and 188 of Act VII of 1859 (according to which the value of stamps used in enforcing a decree is required to be included in the judgment), restored the order of the Deputy Collector. R. C. Bell Campbell v. Cazee Abdu Hing, 6 W. R., Act X R., 8.

Where a plaintiff, dissatisfied with so much of the decision of the first Court as is adverse to him, appeals, making the party in whose favour the decree is made the sole respondent, the Judge of the Appellate Court has only to determine whether, as between the appellant and respondent, the order of the first Court is correct. Kishoree Singh v. Poeskinn Singh, 10 W. R., 432.

A suit to cancel an order refusing to allow an estate to be sold under an attachment was taken before the Judge, without its appearing to have been called up from the Sudder Ameen in accordance with law, and was disposed of by the Judge without any issue being settled, and without any evidence being taken. The Court remanded the case to the Judge, to settle issues and dispose of the case properly. Syed Allerooden v. Moutie Mahomed Abusen, Marsh., 307.

In a suit by a ryot against a zemindar for rent, the Court of first instance gave the plaintiff a decree for a part of his claim. The plaintiff appealed against the disallowance of the residue. The Judge on appeal reversed the decree and dismissed the suit, although no objection was made by the defendant to the judgment of the Court below, merely saying that a claim for rent by a ryot against a zemindar was absurd. On appeal to this Court, the decree of the Judge was reversed, and the original decree established. *Hem...
CIVIL PROCEDURE—DUTIES OF APPELLATE COURT.

Chunder v. Syed Ahmed Reza and others, Marsh., 332. A. and B. were sued on a joint liability to pay rent. A. did not defend, B. did, and a decree passed against both. B. appealed. Held that it was competent to the Judge on appeal to reverse the decree, on the ground that there was no joint liability, but that B. occupied a separate estate at a separate rent. Lukhee Cant Sein v. Ramdyl and others, Marsh., 281.

Held by the majority of the Court (Glover, J., dissenting) that an Appellate Court, after admitting and registering an appeal and serving notice on the opposite party, has no power at the hearing to reject the appeal upon the ground that it was not preferred within the prescribed period. Bhurutt-chunder Roy and others v. Issurchunder Sircar and others, 8 W. R., 141.

An Appellate Court should not ordinarily travel beyond the record, or take up points which are not the subject of appeal before it. Kashinath Roy Chowdhry and others v. Roy Dwarkanath Chucker-bully and another, 7 W. R., 61.

When one of the pleaders for an appellant states his inability to go on with an appeal, the Judge is not bound to send for any other pleader for the appellant, but may at once dismiss the appeal. Brojo Soondery Dossia v. D. L. Gilmore, 7 W. R., 336.

It is in the discretion of the Judge to consider whether sufficient cause has been shown for the non-presentation of an appeal in proper time, owing to delay on the part of the Collector, to whom the appeal was wrongly preferred in the first instance, and the High Court has no authority to interfere with such exercise of discretion by the Judge. Raj-coomar Roy v. Sheikh Mohamed Wais and others, 7 W. R., 337.

Where a plaintiff appeals from a Court's finding on a certain question, the Appellate Court is bound to determine expressly the point appealed. Hurreechur Mukkerjee v. Oonam Moyee Dossia, 12 W. R., 525.

If a lower Court, with power under a particular law only, passes an order opposed to the procedure enjoined in that law, it is the duty of the lower Appellate Court at once to rectify the order of the lower Court. Hurree Bundhoo Myleeboomee v. Soorjo Mone Pat Mahadaye, 4 W. R., Act X R., 37.

An Appellate Court is bound to state its reasons for reversing the decision of a lower Court. Maha-deo Ojka v. Parmeswar Panday, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 20.

An Appellate Court is bound to give reasons for deciding a particular point (in this case limitation) raised before it in appeal, even if it confirm generally the order of the Court below. Radha Godind Kur and others v. Ram Kishore Dutt and others, 8 W. R., 340.

A plaintiff is entitled to some opinion by the lower Appellate Court upon the oral testimony on his side. The mere affirmation of the decision of the first Court which considered the oral evidence in detail does not involve the adoption by the lower Appellate Court of the first Court’s view of the oral testimony. Musamut Rajoo and others v. Raj Coomar Singh and others, 7 W. R., 137.

Where a lower Appellate Court, by the terms of its order on a petition for the apprehension of witnesses, under Section 168, Code of Civil Procedure, undertakes to see that proper orders shall be passed, it is bound to pass such orders as may, in its judicial discretion, be necessary under that section. Mhadeck Shaka and others v. Sheo Suhoy Geer, 9 W. R., 359.

An Appellate Court will not interfere with the discretion of a lower Court as to costs, unless satisfied that there has been some miscarriage or mistake. Luchnum Ram Unooy v. R. Watson and others, W. R., 1864, 146.

An Appellate Court is bound to give the reasons for its judgment when it differs from the judgment of the lower Court. Lalla Sookloll Sing v. Bun-reddur; Sheikh Noor Ally v. Lalla Sookloll, W. R., 1864, 347.

The grounds urged in a petition of appeal to a lower Appellate Court, and the reasons for rejecting them, should be distinctly and concisely recorded by the Court. Kishen-chunder Putronovis v. Tara Mone Chowdhrain, 3 W. R., 4.

When issues in bar are pleaded and averments traversed, the lower Appellate Court should record some reasons for its endorsing the opinion of the lower Court. Walter Mohun Gossain v. Bhryub Chunder Sheet, 3 W. R., 126.

The judgment of an Appellate Court should clearly and fully dispose of all the points in issue between the parties by a distinct finding on each of them. Bhagbut Khan v. Puddo Bews, 3 W. R., 192.

The judgment of an Appellate Court (instead of merely endorsing the opinion of the Court of first instance) should contain the point or points for determination, the decision thereupon, and the reasons for such decision. Korban Ali v. Ashan Ali, 4 W. R., 4.

When a Judge on appeal reverses the judgment of a lower Court, he should make full mention of all the evidence relied on by the first Court, and record his own opinion upon it. Shathk Paul v. Guhadhur Roy, 4 W. R., 100.

In a suit for share of ancestral property, when the first Court tries whether the plaintiff ever had joint possession, and dismisses the claim as barred by limitation, the lower Appellate Court is bound to try the same issue. GOPALCHUNDER CHATTERJEE v. RAI COOMAREE DEBIA, 4 W. R., 101.

An Appellate Court has jurisdiction under Section 37, Act XXIII of 1861, to separate misjoined suits, and to try them separately. Skoroop Chunder Paul v. Moothoor Mohun Paul Chowdhray, 4 W. R., 109.

An Appellate Court ought not to interfere with the judgment of the lower Court until perfectly satisfied that the conclusion arrived at by the Court below is erroneous. It is a presumption of law that the judgment appealed against is right until the contrary is shown; and, when there is a doubt about it, the benefit of that doubt should be given by the Appellate Court to the respondent. Tayyubussa Bibi v. Kuمرة Sham Kishore Roy, 7 B. L. R., 621; and 15 S. W. R., 228.

no decision is passed upon it. If, having had his advanced by the first Court in support of its decision. Krishendo Roy Chowdry v. Digum-bhur Chobdwaren, 10 S. W. R., C. R., 15.

Power of the Court of Appeal, under Section 337 of Act VIII of 1859, to reverse the whole of the decree of the Court below upon the appeal of one only of the parties against whom the decree was passed. Shrubbessur Ghose v. Sadhoo Churn Ghose, 15 S.

In a suit for delivery over to plaintiff of papers said to be in the possession of defendant, the answer of the latter was that he had made over the papers had been delivered as alleged, and made a decree ordering the delivery of certain other of the papers. In appeal, the attention of the Judge was principally directed to the point whether the receipt of the papers by the plaintiff's son was a receipt by him as plaintiff's agent. Held that this point was a departure wholly from the case made below, and ought not to have been entertained in appeal.
Punchanun Roy v. Troykumonkhereyiee, 7 B.

Where the decision of a case involves issues of facts, and the first Court has gone fully into the evidence and recorded its finding and decision, if the decision appears to have made a false statement, or if he sought to palm off a spurious document upon the application was made for re-admission under Sec-section 347 Act VIII of 1859; but the Judge refused the application because the appellant had not conformed to a rule which he had passed, that two pleaders should be engaged in every appeal. Held that the Judge was bound to see whether the reasons set forth for re-admission of the appeal were satisfactory or not. Shomaed Ali Soodagur

Where a Moonsiff, without framing issues or examining the plaintiff, passed a decree in his favour upon an admission made by the defendant, and upon inspection of a document that was upon the record of a former suit: but the Judge, on appeal, reversed the decree of the Moonsiff on account of the insufficiency of evidence, the document, in his opinion, not being admissible.

It was held that the Judge ought not to have reversed the Moonsiff's decree without first exercising his power of taking fresh evidence, under Section 355 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Abyu
Valad Kashmath v. Vithoa Valad Tukuram, 6

Section 359, Act VIII of 1859, requires the points for determination—those in appeal as well as those in the original pleadings—to be stated, and the reasons upon which the decision was arrived at thereon. Rool Chand Roy v. Ram Kant Koberzaj, W. R., 1864, 98.

The judgment of an Appellate Court must contain the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons therefor. Shomaed Ali Soodagur
v. Zuzooor Ally and others, 11 W. R., 34.

Where a lower Appellate Court took no notice in its decision of a large quantity of evidence of very considerable importance which had been urged before it as of the highest possible character, and gave no reasons for agreeing with the Court of first instance that the evidence in question had very little connection with the case, its judgment was held to be not a legal decision in the terms of Sec-section 359, Act VIII of 1859. Adheen Misser and others v. Jograj Misser and others, 11 W. R., 312.

Held, by Markby, J., that, in saying that the "reasons" for the decision of an Appellate Court must be stated, Section 359, Act VIII of 1859, means not the reasons for coming to any conclusion of fact, but the reasons showing upon what points of fact or law the decision runs. The bare fact that a Judge had not given the reasons for his judgment is not in itself a ground of special appeal.
Ramessur Bhuttacharjee v. Shaikh Bhano, 12 W.
R., 272.

A Judge's decision not being in conformity with the provision of Section 359, Act VIII of 1859, is illegal and defective. Rughobur Suhai and others
v. Chattropat, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 73.

(m) Duties of Parties in Appeal.

Where both parties make default in appearing at the hearing of an appeal the Court must dismss the appeal. Manickram v. Roopnarain Singh, Marsh., 5.

When the parties in two or more suits are the same, and the decision in one case governs all the cases, the filing of copies of the judgment and decree passed in the principal case is a sufficient compliance with the law. Bhyrubnath Sandyal v. Hurro Soondery Dossee, W. R., 1864, Mis., 28.

A pro-forma defendant cannot be allowed to raise in appeal objections which he neglected to raise in the suit. Dekeenundun Roy v. Kaled Pershad, W. R., 1864, Mis., 34.

The depositing of tulubana in a wrong Court is no ground for the revocation of an appeal dismissed for want of prosecution. Moshensunder Bose v. Bhugobanchow Mookerjee, 3 W. R., Mis., 29.

The plaintiff's omission to appeal against an interlocutory order of the Sudder Court, remanding his suit for re-trial on the production of the mortgage accounts, did not preclude him from insisting before the Privy Council that the remand for the production of the accounts was erroneous, and that the cause should have been decided in his favour, notwithstanding the non-production of the accounts. A. T. Forbes v. Amcroonissa Regum, 5 W. R., P. C., 47.

When a notice of appeal is transmitted by the High Court to a Court below, with instructions to make a return within a specified time, the appellant is entitled to the whole of the time allowed, and may deposit his tulubana, and cause service of the notice any time within the period limited. Where the appeal is denied this liberty by the lower Court, he ought to come before the High Court with a substantial application for orders. Bhyrubbbee Bis-

(a) Security pending Appeal.

Appeal dismissed, as the appellants had not given security for costs, and as the appeal had not been filed within the time required by the rules of the Court. It is sufficient for the respondent to object at the hearing of the appeal for non-compliance with the rules of Court, and he need not apply specially to have the appeal rejected, when the memorandum of appeal is preferred. Muham-

There is no reason why a respondent, who is admittedly the legal heir of the deceased pro-noprietor, should be required to give security at the instance of the appellants, who were mere strangers. Bhugobuty Churn Bhuttacharjee v. Isiwar Chunder Chatterjee, 16 W. R., C. R., 311.

The High Court having ordered a judgment-deptor, pending an appeal to the Privy Council, to furnish security within two months, he put in a petition in the Zillah Court on the last day allowed by the order, tendering a durnputee mehal as security, and on the day following gave an unregistered security bond. The Judge rejected the bond. Held, that the bond was not required to be registered until the security had been accepted; and that the Judge should have directed an investigation into the goodness and sufficiency or otherwise of the property tendered. Dunne v. Ameroonissa Khatoon, 13 W. R., C. R., 41.

A plaint having been dismissed by the first Court, which decreed that the costs of all the defendants who had filed answers were to be borne by the plaintiff, the plaintive appealed to the High Court, which reversed the decree. One of the defendants then appealed to the Privy Council, which reversed the decree of the High Court and restored that of the Zillah Court. Held, that the decree of the first Court by being restored as it was made was re-affirmed in its integrity, and the defendants generally were entitled to execute it, though only one had appealed to the Privy Council. Luchmeeputt Singhv. Khooobunnissa, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 188a.

Held (Mitter, J. dubitante) that as the Deputy Collector's decision proceeded on a ground common to all the defendants, the Judge had jurisdiction under Section 337 of the Code of Civil Procedure to reverse the decree on the appeal of one of the defendants. Doorga Chunder Dass v. Mahomed Abbas Bhooyan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 121.

(o) Cross Appeals.

In the case of an appeal to the Privy Council, the Court has no power, on failure of both parties to furnish security as required by Section 4, Regulation XXI of 1797, to attach any property held by the appellant beyond that decreed. Baboo Khoro-Lali v. Kant Lali, 5 W. R., Mis., 27.

Plaintiff sued two tenants and his co-sharer for joint rents. His suit was dismissed, and the okhlias produced by the tenant defendants were declared to be false. The latter appealed, making the former and his co-sharer respondents. Plaintiff then appealed and made a cross-appeal under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859. Held that plaintiff had no locus standi to entitle him to make a cross-appeal against his co-sharer upon the appeal of the tenant defendants. Anunotto Doss Sein v. Ram Joy Sein, 11 W. R., 435.

If a decree is passed partly in favour of and partly against a plaintiff, and one of the defendants alone appeals as against the decree in favour of the plaintiff, making a co-defendant a respondent, there is no reason why the latter should appear or interest himself in the result, nor why the plaintiff should be allowed at the hearing to raise objections to his suit having been dismissed against the other defendant. Goononomee Dossie v. Parbutty Dossie and others, 10 W. R., 326.

When a decree gives title to land, to defendant and right of way to plaintiff, and plaintiff alone appeals, Appellate Court must not raise an issue as to right of way without cross-appeal from defendant. Sookhanundamoyee Debia v. Bayne Mad-hub Mookerjee, 1 W. R., 73.

An application to file a cross-appeal orally was rejected, firstly, because a written memorandum of its grounds had not been filed previously; secondly, because the objection, when taken, was not filed on the regulated stamp; and lastly, because the ground now urged had not been advanced as an objection in a regular appeal previously filed. Mussamut Hooles Kooeree and others v. Mussamut Bihiee Sforbeen, 8 W. R., 379.

In a suit to recover possession of certain land against A., who claimed to be its proprietor, in which J. B., who claimed to be a ryot, was made co-defendant, plaintiff obtained a decree against the former, but his suit as against the latter was dismissed. A. appealed from the decree, and during the course of the appeal the plaintiff was allowed to take a cross-appeal with regard to the
A plaintiff who obtains a decree which is appealed against, is not bound to bring a cross-appeal because the Court of first instance did not accept a portion of the evidence; but it is for the Appellate Court to examine such portion and consider whether it proves plaintiff's case. Oomabuttie v. Parushnauth Pandey, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 135.

There can be no cross-appeal after the appeal is withdrawn. Shamachum Ghose v. Radhu Kristo Chaklau, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 210.

A party who purchases the rights and interests of the plaintiffs after a suit has been dismissed, is not entitled to appeal against the order of dismissal without joining the original plaintiffs in the suit as appellants. Dhunno Soudagur v. Sunnoo Bibee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 106.

Where the whole interest of a sole plaintiff had been transferred with his unqualified assent, and the transferee was substituted for the original plaintiff in the very inception of the case, the defendant's written defence being afterwards put in without demur, it was held not to be necessary for the original plaintiff to be associated with the transferee in an appeal by the latter. Munnerodeen Mojoomdar v. Parbury Churn Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 121.

Appeals under the High Court Charters.

An appeal lies from the decision of a Judge exercising original jurisdiction refusing to give leave to institute a suit on the original side of the High Court, in a case in which the cause of action has arisen in part within the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court; but the Appellate Court ought not to interfere with the discretion exercised by the Judge in such a matter. De Souza v. Coles, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 384.

Where two Judges decided a case of original civil jurisdiction under the original Letters Patent, but the decree was sealed, and appeal preferred after the amended Letters Patent had come into operation,—Held that the right of appeal to the High Court, constituted so as to hear an appeal from two Judges, which existed in such a case under Section 14 of the old Charter, was taken away by Section 15 of the new Charter, as there was no reservation therein that parties should retain any right of appeal which existed before its publication in respect of suits then pending, of judgments given, or of decrees made but not executed. A right of action is not taken away by a change in the law, unless by express enactment; but in the case of mere procedure, unless something is said to the contrary, the new law, where its language is general in its terms, applies without reference to the former law or procedure. Frendsonnajji v. Hormajni Barjonsi, 3 Bom. Rep., O. C., 49.

If an appeal is presented under Section 15 of the Letters Patent within 30 days from the time at which a written judgment is put in, the applicant has a reasonable ground to apply to the Court in its discretion to admit the appeal, though filed after 30 days from the time when the judgment was delivered orally in Court. Hurack Singh v. Toolseram Sakho, 12 W. R., 458.

Quære.—Whether, under the provisions of the new Letters Patent of the High Court, an appeal lies from the judgment (not being a sentence or order passed or made in a criminal trial) of a Division Court in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, when the Judges of such Court are equally divided in opinion, and do not amount in number to a majority of the whole of the Judges. Ranee Surno- moye v. Luckmeeput Doogur and others, 7 W. R., 54.

An appeal lies under Section 15 of the Letters Patent of the High Court to the Court at large from the judgment (not being a sentence or order passed or made in a criminal trial) of a Division Court in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, when the Judges of such Court are equally divided in opinion and do not amount in number to a majority of the whole of the Judges. Rgnee Skurnomoye v. Luckmeeput Doogur and others, 7 W. R., 512.

Held (Jackson, J., dubitante) that an order made by the High Court on an application to review its judgment in a case of appeal to the Privy Council previously heard is not an order made on appeal within the terms of Clause 39 of the Court's Charter, so as to enable the Court to admit an appeal against such order to Her Majesty in Council. Raj Enaat Hossein v. Ranee Roushan Ishan, 10 W. R., F. B., 1.

In a suit in a Moonsiff's Court it was found, after issues had been fixed and some evidence recorded, that the claim had been under-valued, and that the proper valuation would carry it beyond the jurisdiction of the Moonsiff. The plaint was accordingly returned; and additional stamps having been filed, the case was tried by the Principal Sudder Ameen. The Judge, in appeal, held that the plaint had been illegally returned by the Moonsiff, and that the act of the Principal Sudder Ameen in proceeding to try the case was illegal. He accordingly dismissed the suit.

Held, with reference to Section 350, Act VIII of 1859, that the Judge was wrong in reversing the decree of the Principal Sudder Ameen. Ram Gutty and others v. Goono Monoo Dabee and others, 11 W. R., 177.

An error in a matter of stamp is no ground for appeal, and is no reason for interfering with the decision of the Court below, under Section 350 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Showadaminee Dossie v. Ram Rodroo Gangoly and others, 8 W. R., 367.

The objection that papers were admitted as evidence which were not legally admissible, is not ground sufficient under Section 350 of the Code of Civil Procedure to warrant a decree being reversed or modified, or a case being remanded, when it is admitted that there was other evidence to support the lower Court's finding, and the insufficiency of such other evidence is not alleged in the grounds of appeal. Kenaram Samont v. Gopee Math Geeree, 10 W. R., 130.

An appeal institute in a case in part within High Court, Core, and in such a manner as to interfere with the jurisdiction of the decree, the amendment. The principle of the Code, 28, 18, 18.

If an appeal wherein a suit has a relation to its dishonor, 30 days.
The High Court refused to interfere with the order of a Court granting a review of its judgment, although the application for review was not made until three years after the date of the decree; the party who preferred the application for the review having satisfied such lower Court of the existence of just and reasonable cause for his not having preferred his application for review within ninety days. Ajonnissa Bibee v. Surja Kant Acharjee, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 181; 11 W. R., 56.

A Deputy Collector may entertain an application for review of a judgment of his predecessor.

When a plaintiff who has obtained a decree against one of two defendants appeals to the Judge to make the other jointly liable, the decree may in the meantime be reversed on an application for review by the defendant against whom the decree was given. Laljee Mul v. Dhunput Singh, 5 W. R., Act X, R., 94.

A petition for the rectification of a decree is not different from an application for a review, when the object of the rectification is to alter the decision of the Court, and such a petition cannot be received after ninety days without just and reasonable cause for the delay being shown to the satisfaction of the Court. Assur Ali v. Woolsutonissa, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 33.

The lower Appellate Court admitted a petition for review of its judgment after a lapse of ninety days from the date of the decision, without recording that just and reasonable cause for the delay had been shown.

On an application, under Section 15 of the Charter Act, to the High Court to set aside the order of the lower Court, on the ground that that Court had no jurisdiction to entertain an application for review after a lapse of ninety days, without recording that there was just and reasonable cause for the delay, the High Court refused to interfere. Arajamminda Begum v. Syad Inaet Hossein, 5 B. L. R., C. R., 316; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 439.

This was an application for review of judgment of three out of five analogous cases decided by the High Court, the judgment in two of which had been reversed by the Privy Council. The application was made after a lapse of more than 90 days from the date of judgment.

Held that a lapse of 90 days, under the circumstances, would not be a bar to the granting of the review. Satto Saran Ghosal Bahadur v. Tarini Charan Ghose, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 287; S. C., 12 W. R., 154.

Where an application to be allowed to sue as a pauper was rejected as barred by the Statute of Limitations, and an application for review of that judgment was granted and the pauper plaintiff's suit was decreed,—Held that the application for review not having been made within 90 days of the order to which it referred, and no just and reasonable cause having been shown for the delay, the application could not be entertained and the Court's decision in the suit was without jurisdiction.

Quaere,—When a Court refuses to allow a plaintiff to sue as a pauper, can an application of review of that order be entertained? Mahomed Gasee Chowdhry and others v. Doolub Bebee, 11 W. R., 22.

Held (by Phear, J.) that an application for review ought to be rejected if no matter is brought to notice which might not have been brought before the Court when the appeal was heard.

Held (by Mitter, J.) that the Court is bound to administer the law as it is, and to take notice of a Full Bench decision applicable to the case, whether it is referred to or not by the pleaders. Collector of Tipperah v. Mussamut Mofasoonissa, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 84.

In applying for a review, it is not sufficient for the applicant to make an affidavit that he was not aware of the existence of a document filed by the other party: the law requires that he also showed due diligence and made enquiries to ascertain its existence, and found that it was not available. See-tanath Ghose v. Shama Soondura Dassee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 26.

On application for review of judgment,—Held, a party applying for a review of judgment must show that there is good and sufficient cause for granting the review before he can be heard to argue that the decision is erroneous. In so showing cause (first) no point can be raised which has been already discussed and decided on the original hearing of the appeal; and (secondly) no new point which has not been raised at the hearing of the appeal can be argued on the application for review. Bhawabul Singh v. Maharajah Rajendra Pratap Sahoy Bahadur, 5 B. L. R., 321; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 157.

When the ninety days within which an application for review of judgment may ordinarily be filed expired on a Sunday or holiday, or in the middle of a holiday extending over more than one day,—Held that the applicant has a right to file his petition for review on the first day on which the Court sits after the holiday.

Per Kemp, J. (dissenting), that he has no such absolute right; that the admission of an application for review after the expiration of the ninety days can only be allowed when a just and reasonable ground for delay has been shown to the satisfaction of the Court. Narayan Mandal and others v. Beni Madhob Sirkar, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 32; and 12 S. W. R., F. B., 21.

Applications for review of judgment should set forth concisely the grounds of objection to the decision of which a review is sought, without argument or narrative, and such grounds should be numbered consecutively. Mahadajee Ramchundra Mul v. Vithal Viswanath, 1 Bom. Rep., 185.

A second application for review of judgment can be admitted, although the first application has been rejected as founded on insufficient grounds. Fateeroodeen v. Kalachund Sircar, 1 W. R., 287.

After an application for a review of judgment has been struck off, a second application may be admitted. Dooyganath Shoor v. Soobkmooy Biswas, 2 W. R., 62.

A second application for review admitted erroneously may be rejected by the Court. Nund Lall Poddar v. Debnath Chowdhr, 3 W. R., 191.

An application for a review of judgment need not be founded solely on the ground of fresh evidence, but may be for “any other good and sufficient reason.” Islam Khan v. Mussamut Sahoo Khanum, 6 W. R., 248.

An application for review, with the object of introducing fresh matter into a case, cannot be admitted, unless verified and supported by proof of the kind referred to in the case reported in 10 W. R., 432. Khetat Chunder Ghose v. Frankisto Roy, 12 W. R., 481.

Where a review is applied for on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, the applicant must satisfy the Court that the evidence tendered was not within the knowledge of the applicant, or could not be adduced by him at the time when the decree was passed, and that it is primâ-facie evidence in the case. Ramdhun Chuckerbutty v. Joynarain Panjah, 12 W. R., 536.

Merely adding to a decree an order that it should bear interest from its date, is not an act done by way of review, and an application for such an order is not governed by the limitation prescribed in Section 377, Act VIII of 1859. Zuhoor Hossein and others v. Mussamut Sydeen, 11 W. R., 142.

An application for a review, on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, of a judgment of the late Sudder Court rejecting a special appeal, ought not to be made to the High Court, but to the Court of original jurisdiction. Rao Baneriam v. Newaz Bibee and others, 8 W. R., 511.

The order of a Court is final as to the admission of an application for review of judgment, under Section 13, Act VI of 1862 (B.C.). Lall Mohun Sein v. Anund Chunder Chuckerbutty, 4 W. R., Act X R., 3.

(b) Procedure in Review.

It is not competent to a Court, when the application for a review of judgment is based on the discovery of new evidence, to dispense with proof that the new evidence has come to the knowledge or the reach of the applicant since the first hearing; and if a Court does re-hear a case when an application has been granted without such proof it is a valid ground of appeal, both regular and special, that the judgment arrived at upon the review has been arrived at contrary to law. Shunshere Ali Khan v. Ram Chunder Gooplo, 2 W. R., 174.

A case should not be decided on the mere admission of an application for review of judgment. After the admission of the application for review a day should be fixed and notified for the hearing of the case so admitted to be reviewed. Parbutty v. Khobun, 3 W. R., 134.

Junior pleaders of the High Court should be cautious how they certify for a review, when they find that the case has been in the hands of members of the bar, and of pleaders more experienced than they, who, they ought to consider, have declined to certify to the review. Rousseau and another v. Pinlo, 10 W. R., 54.

When a case is admitted to review by the deciding Judge, and tried afterwards by another Judge, the new Judge ought to try only the point directed by the order of review. Hurro Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Ramkissoor Chuckerbutty, W. R., 1864, 142.

That there is a difference of opinion between two decisions of the High Court on questions of fact is no reason why, on review, a reference to a Full Bench shall be made. W. Ferguson v. The Government, 9 W. R., 158.

Where a lower Court granting a review re-opened the original case, took fresh evidence, and upheld its former decision, it was held that an appeal did lie to the Judge. Rughoonath Roy v. Anundo Pauray, 10 W. R., 387.

Where a review has been admitted by the sole remaining Judge of the Bench which heard the case originally, it is not open to counsel on the re-hearing of the appeal to question the propriety of the order for admission. If such order is wrong the error cannot be corrected by the Bench appointed to hear the appeal after its restoration to its original number on the file. Jardine, Skinner, and Co v. Dhun Kissen Stein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 82.

Where an application for review of an order in execution, made after ninety days from the order, was granted simply on the ground that in the execution case of another person upon the same decree the decision, which apparently proceeded upon the same ground as the decision in this case, had been reversed by the High Court,— Held that the order admitting the review was open to appeal and must be set aside. Roy Goodur Suhayy v. Achebur Lall, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 120.

It cannot be treated as a universal rule that no point can be raised on an application for a review which has been already discussed and decided on the original hearing of the appeal; or that no new point, which has not been raised on the hearing of the appeal, can be argued on the application for a review. In each case the Court to which the application is made must consider and decide whether a review is necessary to correct any evident error or omission, or is otherwise requisite for the ends of justice. In the matter of Chintammi Paul Chintammi Pal v. Vyari Mohun Mookerjee. In the matter of the Petition of Saleh Shabiuddin Abu Saleh, Saleh Shabi-uddin Abu Saleh v. Asadunissa Bibi, 6 B. L. R., 126, and 15 S. W. R., F. B., 1.

Whereas by the law in force, previous to the Code of Civil Procedure, the subordinate Courts could not review their judgment without the permission of a superior Court, the Code removed that inability, and the removal extended to suits past and pending, as well as future.

A party petitioning, after the Code of Civil Procedure came into force, for the review of a judgment in appeal passed in 1849, is entitled to be governed by the terms of application for review of an order in execution passed in 1849, which allows a review in respect to a decree, from which "no further appeal" may have been admitted by a superior Court; and a "further appeal" included both a second or special appeal and a summary appeal. Joogul Kishore Singh and others v. Oogur Narain Singh and others, 8 W. R., 483.

On application by a defendant for the review of an ex-parte judgment by a Deputy Collector, on the ground of non-service of notice, the suit was ordered to be replaced on the file, and a notice was issued to the plaintiff that a day had been fixed for the re-hearing of the case, and intimating that if he had any objections he might make them on that day. The plaintiff appeared on the day fixed, but failed to show that the notice had been served by the defendant. Held that the admission of the review was not a contravention of Section 58 of Act X of 1859. Ali Asim v. Ram Manick Roy, 12 W. R., 195.

If a review of judgment be applied for in proper time, and before an appeal has been preferred, the Judge is not prevented from proceeding upon the application for review by the subsequent presentation of an appeal, and he has full power, whether he is bound to proceed with the application for review. Quere,—Whether a review can be admitted by a lower Court after an appeal has been preferred therefrom. Bhurrut Chunder Moshoomdar v. Ram Gunga Stein, 5 W. R., 59.

A suit for possession having been decreed in the absence of the defendants, they applied for a re-hearing, and their application was rejected. They then, after the time allowed by law, applied for a review of judgment, which was granted, without any determination as to the goodness and sufficiency of the cause of delay. Held that the order granting the review was illegal, and that an appeal lay as to the sufficiency of the cause for the delay. Krishna Gobind Joatdar v. Juggabandhoo Sircar, 12 W. R., 94.

A lower Court acts without jurisdiction if it admits a review of its predecessor’s judgment, unless either the party apply for review within ninety days, or the Court is satisfied that there is just and reasonable cause for not having preferred the application within the limited period. Gossie Doss v. Narain Doss, W. R., 1864, 287.

R. D. having obtained a judgment against S. M., the latter petitioned for a review thereof, on the ground that he had obtained additional evidence in support of his case. Application refused, on the ground that it was the duty of the defendant to have been prepared with such evidence at the former hearing. Held that, when an issue which decides the case on the merits has been found in favour of either party, a review of judgment will not be granted merely because there has been an erroneous decision on a point affecting an issue which, in consequence of the finding, has become immaterial; that, when a Judge exceeds his jurisdiction, a party claiming costs in consequence thereof must apply for them when objecting thereto. Rakub Doss v. Sooraj Mull and Soobaj Mull, Bourke’s Rep., O. C., 131.

After rejection of an application made within ninety days for review of the judgment of a Division Court, which turned upon the construction of a “teep” or indigo contract, a Full Court, sitting in appeal under Section 37 of the Charter, gave a decision upon a similar “teep” upon which a second application was filed for review of the original decision. Held that such second application should have been made within ninety days from the date of the decision of the Full Court, that having been the judgment which gave cause to the review. A. J. Forbes v. Sheikh Dyanoololah Lall and others, 10 W. R., 415.

A Judge ought not to admit a review for the purpose of receiving fresh evidence in the suit, except upon being satisfied by legal evidence that the fresh evidence was not known to the applicant, or could not be obtained by him at the time of the original trial. Nuffer Chand Paul Chowdhry and others v. A. D. Sandes and another, 10 W. R., 432.

Where an application for review was rejected and no appeal to the Privy Council was filed against the order of rejection, papers filed with the application for review will not be forwarded with the record to the Privy Council on the appeal of the case. Fukeeruddeen Mahommed Chowdhry v. Najumunissa Chowdhry, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 264; 11 W. R., 145.

Held that Judges of the Sudder Court admitting an application for review were competent to make a qualified order, leaving in the Court which was to review the decision a discretion as to the extent to which the review should be carried. Bhugwandeen Doobey v. Myna Bis, 9 W. R., P. C., 23.

A Court should give reasons, on review of judgment for coming to a different conclusion from that which it had previously formed. Anumoyer Dossy v. Kalez Coomar Rochect and others, 6 W. R., 18.

Proced to admitting a review of a predecessor's judgment applied for after ninety days from the date of the decree sought to be reviewed. Dookhoo Pasey v. Sheikh Mahomed Hossein and others, 6 W. R., 98.

A review of judgment may be proceeded with after an appeal has been filed against it. Syud Asa 6 W. R., 98.

ment, for coming to a different conclusion from that which it had previously formed. Anumoyer Dossy v. Kalez Coomar Rochect and others, 6 W. R., 18.

A record should always be kept by a Judge of all orders passed by him, rejecting application for review of judgment. Shumboonath Barooree and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 108.

An order rejecting or admitting a review is not final; but the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, admit a second review, even after a prior order rejecting it. (Dissentiente Seton-Karr, J.)

Applications for review dismissed for mere default may be re-admitted like appeals dismissed for default. Nussereoroodden Khan v. Indurnarain Chowday, 5 W. R., 93.

An order rejecting an application for review of a judgment or order passed by the Court is final. Application for re-consideration of such orders should not be received in the office, but the applicants should be referred to the Bench receiving motions. Kanto Lall Singh v. Broje Lall Singh, 3 W. R., Mis., 3.

When the decision of a lower Court is admitted to review, the suit becomes in all respects a new one, and its decision will be guided by precedents then in force,—e.g., by a subsequent Full Bench ruling of the High Court containing an exposition of the law contrary to that which prevailed at the time when the decision sought to be reviewed was passed. Ahtamone Dossy v. Jeyasuruk Roy, 7 W. R., 408.

Where a Court has granted a review, the High Court on appeal will not interfere, though the grounds for granting the review may have been improper or insufficient. Gorrnumostu Nayada v. Poppa Nayada, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 250.

A Court has the power, for any reason that it may consider good and sufficient, to grant a review of its judgment; and if the application is made within ninety days, the Court's estimate of those reasons cannot be interfered with by an Appellate Court. The procedure is not different when there has been a change (during the ninety days) of office incumbents. Mussamut Muntoora v. Ablack Roy and others, 11 W. R., 197.

A review is not to be sought upon the arguments and facts already placed before the Court, and upon which judgment has been given, nor should it be allowed on a new point not taken at all at the first hearing, though full opportunity existed for doing so. Jomah Aly v. Chundee Churn Dewy and others, 11 W. R., 202.

To reject an application for a review is not a function which can be performed by the High Court generally, but merely by the Court which passed the original decision; and the order of rejection is not a judgment within the meaning of Section 15 of the Letters Patent. Mussamut Rughoo Bilee v. Noor Jehan Begum, 12 W. R., 459.

Where a review had been granted for the purpose of setting aside whether a chitta ought not to be used, and the case was remanded for re-hearing, the party was held to be concluded from objecting that the chitta was improperly made use of upon the re-hearing. Makhun Koer v. Tincoury Dutt, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 22.

Where a Subordinate Judge admitted a review on the representation of plaintiff that he (the Judge) had made a mistake as to the subject of a certain dagh in a Government halabadee chitta, the applicant filing with his petition for review another chitta and other evidence for the purpose of convincing the Court that it had made an error,—Held that an error of this kind was sufficient to found the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the review. Gunnesh Rum Surmah v. Rohinee Dusse, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 236.

Held (Mitter, J. dissentiente) that in cases of review, Judges are not required to re-adjudicate points which were considered and adjudicated when the cause was heard before them by a pleader then employed, although they may be better argued, and put in a different light, by another pleader subsequently; but are to be guided in their admissions of reviews in Indian Courts by the definite terms of the Sections (367 and 378) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Choonee Mundur v. Chundee Lall Doss, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 178.

In a suit for confirmation of title to a village alleged to be in the possession of plaintiff under a mokurree pottah, the first Court found the pottah to be genuine, and gave plaintiff a decree. The lower Appellate Court at first doubted the genuineness of the pottah and reversed that decision, but on an application for review admitted additional evidence on both sides and dismissed the appeal. Held that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have allowed points to be explained away in the review stage by admitting additional evidence thereon, though in this particular case injustice was not done. Tekaat Khod Narain Singh v. Toolsey Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 9.

Where an applicant is refused postponement and his appeal is dismissed in his absence, the case must be looked upon as one of default, even though the Judge looked into the facts with such light as he could obtain from other sources.

The appellant in such a case might apply for a re-hearing or for a review of judgment, but is not entitled to a special appeal. Puldeo Misser v. Syud Ahmed Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

Where an applicant for review is not informed at the time of his application that his petition is insufficiently stamped, he cannot at the time of hearing be refused permission to make up the proper valuation. Shahasaddar Fukurooden Ahmed, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 278.

(c) When Review is allowed.

A Judge has power to review an order relating to the execution of a decree. (Dissentiente, Morgan, J.) Haradhone Mookerjee v. Chundee Mohun Roy, Marsh, 205, W. R., F. B., 66.

A review of judgment can only be granted as CIVIL PROCEDURE—WHEN REVIEW IS ALLOWED—WHEN NOT ALLOWED.

regards those parties who appear or have applied for the review. Doorga Pershad Ghose v. Greesh Chunder Bose, 1 W. R., 222.

Before a review can be granted upon the ground of the discovery of new matter, it must be stated in the petition and proved that the new matter was not within the applicant’s knowledge, or could not be adduced at the time when the decree was passed. Dwarkanath Chowdary v. Kishenlall Chowdary, Marsh., 553.

An error on a point of law is a ground for a review of judgment. Koh Poh v. Monng Tay and others, 10 W. R., 143.

Where the decision of a lower Court follows a view of the law taken by the High Court, and that view is set aside by a ruling of Her Majesty in Council, the judgment-creditor has a right to have his case re-tried upon that ruling. Banee Pershad v. Radha Pershad Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

Where a Judge has omitted to try a point which was urged before him, it is the duty of the pleader, after the decision, to point out to the Judge the omission, and, if necessary, an application for review may be filed. Hossein Ali Chowdry v. Nasiroodeen, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 134.

A suit having been brought before a Subordinate Judge against co-sharers in a joint property for contribution on account of costs levied from plaintiffs in a suit which had been preferred by all the co-sharers (plaintiffs and defendants) together, a decree was given ordering the defendants to contribute per capita in equal shares. On application made to the Subordinate Judge’s successor a review was granted, and additional evidence called for as to the respective shares of the parties in the property. Held that the Subordinate Judge was legally competent to admit the review and call for the evidence. Shaikh Murdan Ali v. Shaikh Tufuzzul Hossein, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 78.

Where there is an omission on the part of the lower Appellate Court to try any point from mistake, the non-decision of such point is not a ground for special appeal, but for review. If the Judge refuses to admit a review in such a case, an application to the High Court may be made. Wise, J., P. v. Huro Lall Giru Gossain, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 150.

Where an appellant discovers fresh evidence after a special appeal has been admitted, the proper course for him to pursue is to ask to have the special appeal dismissed, and to apply to the lower Court for a review. Pandurang Sadashia v. Moro Vassudea, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 68.

Where a defendant, in the presence of the mookhtears on both sides, gives evidence that no summons was served on him in a case leading to the ex-parte decree against him, the Court’s order to enter the case on the register of decisions is a proper admission, admitting the review. Annumad Moyee Dassee Chund Dutt v. Annumad Soondar Mookerjee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 237.

Review, ground of. In the matter of the petition of Tufani Singh, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 141.

A Court of original jurisdiction has power to entertain an application to review an order refusing a petition for leave to sue in forma pauperis. Under Section 15 of 24 and 25 Vict., c., 104, the High Court set aside an order of a Court of original jurisdiction, refusing to entertain such an application on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain it. Rani Umasunduri Dabi, in the matter of the petition of, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 29.

On an application for review of a judgment, passed by the High Court in a special appeal, confirming the decision of the lower Appellate Court, on the ground of discovery of new evidence,—Held, this might be a good ground for moving the lower Appellate Court for a review of its judgment, but was not a sufficient ground for asking for a review of a judgment passed in special appeal. Panchanan Mookerjee v. Radha Nath Mookerjee, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 213.

(d) When Review is not allowed.

Reviews are not granted merely to supply defects on the part of pleaders in the conduct of appeals. Prosunnonath Dutt v. Judoonath Paul, 9 W. R., 589.

A Judge cannot, by transferring a case to his own file, confer on himself the power to review an order of dismissal pronounced by a Principal Sudder Ameen. Golam Esha v. Hurriah Chunder Mookerjee, W. R., 1864, Mis., 29.

A Court has no jurisdiction to grant a second review of judgment on the application of the same party under the Code of Civil Procedure. Vencuma Shetty v. Pamoo Shetty, 5 Mad. Rep., 223.

The Court declined, in the absence of some satisfactory explanation, to entertain an application for a review of an order rejecting an application to admit a special appeal. Burramoollah v. Nil Chand Dutt, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 484.

Upon the dismissal of a special appeal by the High Court, the appellant in special appeal applied to the High Court for a review of judgment upon the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was rejected on the ground that the Court could not take cognizance of the merits of a case in special appeal, and therefore could not admit a review upon fresh evidence. The special appellant then applied to the lower Appellate Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was admitted, and a review of the judgment was allowed.

On application to the High Court, under Section 15 of the Charter Act,—Held, the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to admit the application for review. Jadunath Mookerjee, in the matter of the petition of, 6 B. L. R., 333, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 438.

Held that the lower Court had no power to admit a review of its judgment after special appeal has been filed, registered, and admitted on the file. Lalmon and others v. Manick Chund and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 133.

Revenue Courts are not competent to admit reviews against decrees passed by them in appealable cases. Sookkanunda Moyee Debia v. Banemadhub Mookerjee, 1 W. R., 73.

A second review of judgment was refused as not contemplated either by the law itself or the Full Bench ruling of 12th February, 1866; the first review being neither appealed against nor shown to be wrong. Taranath Roy v. Raj Bulhub Bhanje, 7 W. R., 404.
An application for review of judgment of a lower Court is not admissible after the limited period, merely in consequence of a decision of the High Court or of the Privy Council modifying the law or practice which prevailed at the time when the judgment sought to be reviewed was passed. Onoop Chunder Paul and others v. Ekhawree Singh and others, 6 W. R., 167.

That the lower Court should have improperly neglected to examine a witness, is not a ground for a review of judgment, if the objection was not taken when the case was heard by the Court in regular appeal. Munshad Bibee v. Luchmeetput Singh, 9 W. R., 129.

That one Division Bench of the High Court has decided a point at variance with the decision of another Division Bench, is no reason for applying for a review of judgment.

A memorandum has a perfect right to bring a tenement to sale for arrears of rent, without regard to the rights of the new tenant, while he is yet unregistered. Nobeen Kishen Mookerjee v. Shit Pershad Pattuck, 9 W. R., 161.

No review can be admitted of a judgment passed on a compromise. A Moonsiff cannot grant a review of and reverse his predecessor's judgment on personal grounds and after eight months' delay. Purmeswar Narain Singh v. Syud Romeoodeen Ahmed Casee, 5 W. R., 226.

An application for a review of judgment by the High Court on a reference from a Small Cause Court is not admissible. J. J. Doyle v. Khoat Mundle, 3 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 8.

A case having been remedied for the trial of an issue under the specific provisions of Clause 1, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, an application for review was made on the ground that it was requisite for the ends of justice to remand the case upon an issue under Clause 3, which, it was alleged, was the issue to which the applicant had directed all his evidence.

Held that, as the correctness of this allegation could not be ascertained without going through the record again, the application could not be granted, for to grant it would in fact be to grant a second special appeal, which is not the object of a review. Juggobundoo Bose v. Wise, 12 W. R., 409.

Though a Judge ought not to admit (merely on the facts and without any new evidence being adduced) a review of judgment passed by his predecessor, yet his doing so is not per se a ground of special appeal. Sheikh Ghomam Hossein v. Okhoy Coomar Ghose, 3 W. R., Act X R., 169.

The order of the lower Appellate Court admitting a review of judgment, after the expiration of ninety days from the date of the decree, without showing whether there was sufficient cause proved to its satisfaction for the delay, was held to be illegal, and was set aside with the subsequent proceedings thereon (Shumhoo Nath Pundit, J., dissenting). Ganganarain Roy v. Goomoomoonee, 8 W. R., 184.

The High Court has no authority to admit a review of a judgment passed in special appeal merely on the ground that new evidence to prove a fact has been discovered. Bhurub Nath Toll v. Kally Chunder Chowdhry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 112.

(c) Rulings under the Code.

On a rule nisi for review of judgment, obtained by a defendant, against whom a decree had been given on an affidavit that he was not, at the institution of the suit, residing within the jurisdiction of the Court; that after putting in his written statement he had to go to Agra, and was prevented by illness from attending at the trial; that he believed the evidence adduced by the plaintiff was untrue, and further believed he had a good defence on the merits, cause was shown that such an application should not be favourably entertained; and that the facts disclosed did not bring the defendant within the requirements of Chapter XI of Act VIII of 1859. The rule was discharged with costs.

Held that a review of judgment will be granted only on proof of one of the grounds specified in Section 376 of Act VIII of 1859.

That the facts disclosed did not establish the existence of any of their grounds; that the affidavit of a party alleging inability to attend from illness is not enough to satisfy the Court, but for this purpose there must be a medical certificate, or the affidavits of third parties; that the words "ends of justice," in Section 378 of Act VIII of 1859, mean that the new evidence referred to in Section 376 would probably alter the decision of the Court; that the affidavit on which an application for review is grounded must state what the new evidence to be relied on is; that in such an affidavit no reliance can be placed on a statement of belief of good defence on the merits, but the facts to be relied on as such must be set out; and that the application was of a dangerous nature. Dhunsook Doss v. Hurry Baboo, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 115.

A review of judgment under Section 376 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground of discovery of new evidence not within the applicant's knowledge at the hearing of the case, should not be admitted without proof of the truth of the ground alleged. Umrao Thakur v. Gokul Mandal, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 34; and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 7.

A Judge is right in refusing to entertain an application for review where a special appeal has been admitted, tried, and disposed of. The words of Section 376, Act VIII of 1859, "special appeal shall have been admitted," refer to cases which have advanced beyond the inchoate stage of appeals, and in which it has been shown prima-facie that there were errors in law. Raj Dharee Lal v. Mohdeo Singh and others, 11 W. R., 511.

Section 376, Act VIII of 1859 (relating to review of judgment), applies to cases heard and decided in the presence of both parties, but not to the case of a person coming in under Section 119, and alleging that he had no knowledge of the suit. Moti Chund v. Radha Madhub Chund Baboo, 2 W. R., Mis., 34.

A second application for review after rejection of the first may be admitted. The word "final" used in Section 376 was construed to apply to appeal. Nusseroodeen Khan v. Indernaryan Chowdhry, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 147.

The mere fact that a special appeal has been admitted in the High Court against a decrerate order of a lower Appellate Court, prevents any party to the suit, no matter whether or not he be the party who preferred the special appeal, from having the right, under Section 376, Act VIII of 1859, of applying to the lower Appellate Court for a review of the judgment upon which its decree was passed. L. T. Lucas v. W. Stephen and others, 9 W. R., 301.

When a suit has been dismissed for want of evidence, and the plaintiff's special appeal was dismissed, and the evidence wanting was subsequently discovered, the appeal was not necessary to enable the plaintiff to apply for a review of the Court in which the suit was brought. Deen Dyal Paromasic v. Ram Coonmar Poromasic and others, 10 W. R., 345.

An application having been made for a review of a judgment passed three years previously, it was found to be a renewal of an application made within that time, application being on the ground that a judgment of a Full Bench had, since the death of the former applicant, laid down the law in conformity with petitioner's contention in his former application.

Held that the fact pleaded did not constitute a "just and reasonable cause" within the meaning of Section 377, Act VIII of 1859. A Full Bench decision does not warrant interference in review, with a determination of the law come to prior to such decision. Dwarkanath Doss Biswas v. Manick Chunder Doss, 9 W. R., 102.

A lower Appellate Court has no power to interfere with the discretion vested in a lower Court by Section 377, Code of Civil Procedure, of admitting a review of judgment after ninety days.

A petition of review ought not to be admitted after the time prescribed in Section 377, Act VIII of 1859, without the leave of the Court or a Judge. Omrao Singh v. Mangula Bibee, 3 W. R., 113.

Where the only cause for admitting a review after the ninetieth day prescribed by Section 377, Act VIII of 1859, was that the High Court construed the law differently from the way in which it had been laid down in the decision admitted to review,—Held that the cause alleged was no excuse for the delay. Pran Kissen Bhattacharjee v. Bakshee Casee, 10 W. R., 26.

A decree for wasilat was passed against "the defendant" in a case where there were several defendants; and as soon as one of them, who was not the person against whom the plaintiff sought for wasilat in the original plaint, found that the decree was to be executed against him, he applied to the Court for a review, though after the time prescribed by Section 377, Act VIII of 1859. Held that the Court was quite right in holding that there was no renewing of the cause, within the meaning of that section, for the application for review not being preferred within the limited time.

The preferring of an appeal against a decision by one defendant does not deprive another defendant of his right to apply for a review of the same decision with reference to Section 376. Bunkoo Lall Singh v. Basoomunissa Bibee and others, 7 W. R., 166.

Where an application for review is not made within the ninety days provided by Act VIII of 1859, the pendency of a special appeal is not "a just and reasonable cause" for the loss of time, such as the Court to which the application is made is bound to arrive at under Section 377, before it can entertain the application at all. L. F. Lucas v. W. Stephen, 9 W. R., 301.

An appeal lies from the order of a lower Court deciding what is just and reasonable cause for admitting an application for review after the prescribed period of 90 days have elapsed, and an Appellate Court has power to look at the reasonableness or sufficiency of the cause assigned for admitting such review. Sections 377 and 378 of Act VIII of 1859 must be read separately, the words "whether for rejecting the application or granting the review shall be final" applying solely to the application under Section 378, and not to the application under Section 377; and the latter section relates only to the question of the time at which the Court is first asked to review its judgment. A new exposition of the law by the High Court is not a just and reasonable cause for not having applied for a review within the period of 90 days; but, when a review has been properly granted, the case should be governed by any new exposition of the law which may have been laid down since the date of the original decision. Shama Churn Chuckerbuzzy v. Bindabun Chunder Roy, 9 W. R., 187.

Section 378, Act VIII of 1859, refers to applications for review of judgment, but this was not an application for revival of the suit under Section 2, Act XIII of 1860. A special appeal does lie in the latter case. Bungsherdu Mundul v. Puddo Lockum Roy, W. R., 1864, F. B., 11; Ind. Jur., 5.

Section 378, Act VIII of 1859, does not bar a second application for review of judgment being entertained after the dismissal of the first.

Whenever a petition for review of judgment is presented after 90 days, it is indispensable that the party preferring such petition should in the first instance account for the delay. Kasheenath Roy v. Luckheenarain Chatterjee, W. R., 1864, 91.

There is nothing irregular in granting in 1862 a review of a decision passed in 1854. Such an order is final under Section 378, Act VIII of 1859. Mahadeo Lall v. Lalla Gour Persad, W. R., 1864, 232.

A proceeding admitting a review, without notice to the opposite party, as required by Section 378 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is wholly vitiated by such defect, and not binding on that party. Mus-samat Goaoo v. Ramdoyal Singh, 8 W. R., 304.

The High Court cannot interfere with a review granted by a lower Court. Under Section 378, Act VIII of 1859, an order for rejecting or granting a review is final, and not open to appeal. Radhaswami Bhattacharjee v. Kishon Pershad Chuckerbuzzy, 5 W. R., 89.

In a suit to recover land on a document described as as a lease, Moonsiff M. decided that the document created a mortgage, and that the suit should be for redemption. In a subsequent suit to redeem, Moonsiff D. decided that the same document operated as a sale, and threw out the claim, which decision was affirmed by the District Judge in appeal. Plaintiff then applied to Moonsiff L. The review was granted, the claim re-heard, and plaintiff had judgment to recover the land as heir of his uncle, on the ground that his uncle's widow, who passed the document sued upon, had no right to alienate the land. This decree was affirmed by a new District Judge.

 Held, that though L.'s act in granting the review was of a very questionable character, his order thereon was final, under Section 378 of Act VIII of 1859, and that the propriety of the order could not be enquired into on a special appeal from the decision passed after the review had been admitted. Dhunká Devlá v. Hírd Rámldí, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 1, 576. Section 378 does not apply to judgments on review, but only to orders rejecting reviews. Apar v. Howah Bye, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 231.

Section 378, Act VIII of 1859, bars an appeal from the decision of a Principal Sudder Ameen, granting a review of his predecessor's judgment. Rane Surut Soondury Debla and another v. Rajendro Kishór Roy Chowdhry and others, 9 W. R., 125.

Under Sections 378, 379, and 380, Act VIII of 1859, before an applicant for review is entitled to re-open the case, he must show some good and sufficient reason why he should be re-heard. A re-hearing cannot be allowed upon the possibility of an alteration of opinion on new points being put and new arguments urged, by a pleader not present at the first hearing. Rajendro Prolab Sakee v. Bhorrabul Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 105.

The law makes no distinction between the power of a Judge who originally heard a case, and subsequently has an application for review before him, and the power of a Judge subsequently succeeding to the same office who has such an application before him, and is not barred by the circumstances stated in Section 379, Act VIII of 1859, from considering that application. Aman Ali Chowdhry v. Kasim Ali and others, 6 W. R., 316.

XV.—REMAND.

In a case decided on pure questions of fact, no point being left undetermined, in which the Judge in appeal endorsed the opinion of the first Court, without giving detailed reasons, the High Court did not consider it right to remand the case to the Judge to set forth in his judgment the same reasons which influenced the Court of first instance. Imrit Lali Thakoor and others v. Nuckshed Suhye, 10 W. R., 100.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, which had been remanded to the lower Appellate Court, with the instruction that the defendant had produced sufficient evidence to raise the presumption that he held his tenure at a fixed rate from the Permanent Settlement, and that it was for the Judge to give an opinion how far the plaintiff was able to rebut that presumption,— Held that there was nothing objectionable in the Judge directing the first Court to hear further evidence upon the point. Rakhal Chunder Tewaree v. Koonooram Haldar, 10 W. R., 442.

Where the ground of regular appeal to the lower Appellate Court was that the Court of first instance ought to have found that an ijara existed, it was the duty of the Appellate Court to determine whether that fact had been proved, and not to remand the case for re-trial. Mahomed Aksan v. Mahomed Yasin, 9 W. R., 106.

When a lower Appellate Court has before it all the evidence which the parties wish to adduce, and decides upon a preliminary point (e.g., the genuineness of a potah), it has no authority to remand the case, but should itself try it. Ram Joy Sen v. Nundmoyee Dabea and others, 10 W. R., 374.

A lower Appellate Court which remanded a suit to the first Court for decision of the substantial part of the dispute, should not have confirmed the decision of the first Court regarding only one part of the claim. Madhub Chunder Dey and others v. Ram Dyal Gooho and others, 8 W. R., 303.

Where a suit which had been tried by the lower Court on its merits, without the omission of any issue or question of fact essential to those merits, was remanded by the lower Appellate Court with a view to additional evidence being taken, the order of remand was held to be not in accordance with any of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, and in opposition to the terms of Section 352 of the Code. Mohesh Chunder Dass v. Madhub Chunder Siridar, 10 W. R., 388.

Where a suit for rent was decided and dismissed by the lower Court, on the issue whether or not the plaintiff's title to sue could be made out,— Held that it was not competent to the lower Appellate Court to remand the case in order that it might be tried on its merits. Gopal Chunder Gooho v. Joggodenna Dassea, 10 W. R., 410.

When the decision of a lower Court is not on a preliminary point, the lower Appellate Court cannot remand the suit to that Court, with directions to take further evidence and to re-try the case, but the appeal must be kept pending on the file, and the record must be sent to the lower Court, with orders to take the necessary evidence. Kalleb Shunker Roy v. Kishó Doolal Chowdhry, W. R., 1854, 296.

The order of a Judge overruling the defence of limitation, and remanding the suit for trial on the merits, if not immediately appealed against as a decree, may as an interlocutory order be objected to when the ultimate decision is appealed against. Mussamut Wuzreurn Bibee v. Sheikh Warsi Ali, 1 W. R., 51.

In a remanded case, a fresh vakeelutnama is not necessary. Sreenmutty Nobimonials Dosssee v. Jey Gopal Gossur, 1 W. R., 276.

When a plaintiff has been offered a remand by an Appellate Court to enable him to produce fresh evidence, and has elected to go to trial on the record as it stands, he cannot, after failing to prove his case, be permitted what he once refused. Nobbo Lall Khan v. Maharaneen Odheeraneen Narainee Koomaree, 3 W. R., 5.

The effect of an order of remand for a new trial is entirely to nullify the first decision and to re-open the whole case. Tarinee Kant Lahovree v. Koornjo Beharee Aoste, 12 W. R., 112.

High Court (1 W. R., 140) that, as the case was admitted and investigated (though partially) by the first Court, that fact gave jurisdiction to the Appellate Court, which should have remanded the case to be registered and tried as a regular suit. Russool Bibe v. Mobarak Aty, 11 W. R., 187; S. C., 2 B. L. R., A. C., 303.

Held by the majority of the Court that, when a suit is remanded in part, the appellant is entitled to only a proportionate refund of stamp duty. In the matter of Doorga Dossa Dutt, 6 W. R., Mis., 65.

In a suit brought by A. to recover a half share in certain ancestral land which he claimed, first by right of inheritance, and secondly under a deed of settlement executed by the other half sharer B., since deceased, the widow of B. answered that the whole of the land had been assigned for the purpose of a mosque by B.'s father; and the lower Appellate Court found that it was so, and reversed the decree of the Moonsiff who had allowed A.'s claim. Held upon as creating an endowment had been impro... *

A party who submits without resistance to a remand, cannot afterwards be allowed to complain of the legality of the step as an integral part of the proceedings. Gholam Murteza Chowdhry v. Go- lucch Chander Roy, 3 W. R., 191.

If a lower Appellate Court finds a suit to have been undervalued, when its proper value would have placed it beyond the jurisdiction of the Court of first instance where it was instituted, it should dismiss the case, and not remand it with a view to the deficient stamp duty being made up. Augophora Chowdry v. Meh Atee and others, 10 W. R., 207.

The Judge dismissed an appeal on the ground that the appellant fraudulently presented a stamp insufficient to cover the stamp duty, properly payable by him on appeal, although the appellant offered to supply additional stamps to make up the proper amount. *On special appeal, the proper stamp duty having been paid, the High Court held that the course taken by the Civil Judge amounted to such a substantial error in the investigation of the case as called for the interference of the High Court, and remanded the case for investigation on the merits. Ambulu Ramaswany Iyengur v. Muh- hundauli Rosanum, 5 Mad. Rep., 330.

An Appellate Court can remand a case a second time on account of error, defect, or irregularity of procedure in keeping a decree or order, provided the error, defect, or irregularity by such as to affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. When a suit has been regularly heard and determined, and on appeal the decree is reversed, the Appellate Court has the discretionary power to remand the case, only if the decree should have been upon a preliminary point and have the effect of excluding the consideration of evidence essential to the rights of the parties. Muniappah Naidu v. Iyasamy Mudeey, 5 Mad. Rep., 313.

CIVIL PROCEDURE—REMAND.

The High Court will not in a special appeal remand the case where there has been a distinct finding by the District Judge on the only issue framed by him, though he may have omitted to find on another issue raised before the Moonsiff, but not called for by either party in appeal. Moti Bhagvan v. Harjivam Girdhuradas, 2 Bom. Rep., A. C. G., 160.

The meagreness of the judgment of a lower Appellate Court can only warrant a remand when the High Court is of opinion that the lower Court cannot properly come to a different decision upon the evidence than that to which it has already come. Bonomally Churn Myteev. Shoroop Hootait, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 60.

Where no preliminary point has been wrongly decided by the Court of first instance, and no evidence has been included, and the Appellate Court considers the issues, nevertheless, to have been defective or insufficient, it is the duty of the latter not to remand the case, but to re-settle the issues and to determine the case itself. Shaikh Fattehoollah v. Oomdunissa Bibe, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 69.

An order of remand by a Subordinate Judge is final so far as the purpose of the remand goes, and cannot be set aside by his successor. Lubti Pandey v. Diskrath Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

The meagreness of the judgment of a lower Appellate Court can only warrant a remand when the judgment does not show that the Court has considered the evidence. Krishendro Roy Chowdry v. Digunbeer Debia Chowdram, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 15.

A remand order made on special appeal is (unless a review of it be obtained within the prescribed time) a conclusive determination of the point of law involved in it; and the correctness of law laid down upon a remand cannot be questioned on a second special appeal; nor is the fact of the Courts adopting a different view of the law after an order has been made, in general a good ground for allowing a review of such order after the time for a review has elapsed. Ramkumar v. Damodhar Nathuram, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 146.

It is an error in law for a lower Appellate Court to remand a case except in accordance with Section 351 of the Civil Procedure Code. A special appeal will lie against a decree remanding a suit. Nathakshar v. Ramshet Govindshet, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 156.

The terms of Section 148, Act VIII of 1859, do not prevent an Appellate Court, on good and sufficient cause shown, from remanding a case disposed of thereunder, in order that justice may be done between the parties. Lochkin Mundie v. Wurzsor Puramanick, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 464.

A lower Appellate Court has no authority to remand a case except when the Court of first instance has so disposed of it on a preliminary point as to exclude any evidence which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties, and the decree of the first Court, on such preliminary point, has been reversed by the Appellate Court. Brindabun Day v. Bissona Bibe, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 107.

Where the High Court had been misled into making an order of remand upon an issue other than that on which the case at the time ought to have been made to depend as between the parties, and the lower Appellate Court on remand came to a finding of fact which correctly disposed of the case, it was held that though the latter did not deal properly with the evidence on the record with reference to the precise issue sent down to it, its default ought not to govern the final result between plaintiff and defendant. Mohamed Hossein v. Kaleshun Bonnerje, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 91.

If a case after being decided in appeal by the Zillah Court is brought before the High Court in special appeal and is remanded, the costs of the special appeal can only be recovered if the High Court's order of remand provides that they are to abide the decision on appeal below. Digambar Chatterjee v. Ram Roodra Gungopadhyaya, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 39.

In a suit to recover accounts and papers, instead of giving plaintiff a decree with a direction that it should be ascertained in execution what accounts or papers, if any, were in the hands of the defendant, the lower Appellate Court ought to have remanded the case to the first Court with instructions to frame a new issue to try what papers and accounts, if any, were in the hands of the defendant, and whether he had wrongfully refused or omitted to deliver them to plaintiff, and if so, decide the case accordingly. Juggar Nath Paner v. Rajakah Chuttar Narain Deb, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 410.

(a) Duties of the Lower Court.

An Acting District Judge, having made a decree reversing the decree of the Moonsiff, who threw out the plaintiff's claim, ordered to pass a decree himself in favour of the plaintiff, which his finding showed he intended to do. The case was remanded on special appeal by the High Court to the District Judge (who had meanwhile returned to his appoint-1859. As that was not the proper form for him to apply, and as the time within which he ought to have come in the proper form had expired, the lower Court declined to grant the application, the High Court approving of the order. In re Kalee Mohun Dass, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 70.

In a case which was remanded to be tried on its merits, the remanding Judges being of opinion that it was not barred, the Additional Judge of the Zillah adhered to his former opinion, that the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation; but found as a fact that she had been a party to a solehnamah and other acts by which she was stopped from her present claim. Held that the Additional Judge was wrong in entering again into the question of limitation; but that his finding of fact could not be interfered with in special appeal, and that the plaintiff was barred by the solehnamah from maintaining this suit.

A case remanded to a District Judge for the purpose of a local enquiry cannot be transferred to a Subordinate Judge for disposal. Chowdry Hamdoollah v. Mutunooisa Bibe, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 579.

Where the evidence of a defendant has been taken by the Court of first instance so imperfectly that the lower Appellate Court cannot pass a satisfactory judgment between the parties, it is competent to the Judge of that Court, under the provisions of Section 355, Civil Procedure Code, to have the defendant fully examined before himself, but not to remand the case for re-hearing and re-trial. If he examines the defendant, he is bound to record his reasons for so doing, in order that the High Court may be enabled on appeal to decide whether or not the new evidence has been rightly admitted. Mohesh Chunber Dass v. Madhub Chunber Sirdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 903.

In a suit for a pottah, the Deputy Collector having failed to take evidence of certain witnesses produced by the plaintiff for examination, the lower Appellate Court remanded the case with a view to the evidence being taken. This was done, and the case re-tried by the Deputy Collector, who again dismissed the plaint. On appeal the decision was reversed. Held that the Judge may have been so far in error, in that while remanding the case he did not direct the lower Court to send the case back to him with the additional evidence; yet, as the error did not interfere with the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court (the evidence having been before the Judge in the trial), it would not warrant interference with his decision in special appeal. Nussroodeen Hossein Chowdry v. Lall Mahomed Pyramanick, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 234.

If a case is remanded for the attendance and examination of the plaintiff, the lower Court may dispense with his attendance and accept the evidence of his agent instead, if the plaintiff be ill and unable to attend. Rajah Syed Ahmed Rezza v. Rajah Enaet Hossein, 1 W. R., 330.

Where a Judge enters into the merits of a case remanded to his predecessor for a legal judgment, if he admits further evidence on the part of the defendant, he cannot refuse to admit that offered by the plaintiff. Boola Singh v. Bibe Reasoonissa, 6 W. R., Act X R., 16.

When a case is remanded with a view to some special evidence being taken, the Court receiving the order of remand is not at liberty to allow the parties to produce additional evidence. Ram Jeevan Lall v. Arjoo Chowbey and another, 10 W. R., 303.

A rent case having been remanded to a lower Appellate Court with a view to its being ascertained whether an ammulnamah produced by the plaintiff was the same as a pottah filed in a survey case, the Judge found that it was the same, but the pottah was not the one which the defendant had given to the plaintiff to file in the survey case. He accordingly reversed his predecessor's decree for rent, and adjudged plaintiff to pay damages under Section 3, Act VI of 1862. Held that the additional finding was not opposed to the order of remand; that the whole case was re-opened; and that the Judge had authority to award the damages without appeal on that point. Ram Chunbra Surmah Chowdry v. Dago Khan and others, 10 W. R., 339.

Where a case is remanded for the trial of an issue which had not been laid down by the Court which tried the case, the parties are entitled to have the opportunity of giving evidence upon it, although the order of remand contains no express direction to that effect. Kisto Churn Chuckerbutty v. Mugwan Chuckerbutty and others, 10 W. R., 401.

Where the lower Court had not fully carried out an order of the High Court remanding the case, yet, as the case appeared to have been substantially tried fully on its merits, the High Court thought there should not be a second remand. Kasheenath Deb v. Maharannce Sib bersree Debia and others, 8 W. R., 503.

When fresh issues are fixed by the Appellate Court, and remanded to the lower Court to be tried, the parties are entitled to have a day fixed for the reception of further evidence which they may wish to adduce thereon. R. Watzen v. Kunlye Bahadoor and others, 9 W. R., 294.

Where the High Court, proceeding on the assumption that appellants (plaintiffs) were in possession, remanded a case to a Zillah Court, with instructions to pass a declaratory decree, if that Court was satisfied that the act complained of was so recent and of such a nature as to entitle plaintiffs to a declaratory decree, it was held (by Kemp, J., decreeing the appeal) that the Zillah Judge was wrong in re-opening the whole question of possession. Held (by Jackson, J.) that the issue of possession being one which clearly arose on the statements of the parties, the Zillah Judge should not have interfered in trying it. Purce Jan Khatoon and others v. Bykant Chunber Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 380.

In a case remanded for a finding as to whether a confirmatory pottah had been really given or not, it was held that, as the order of remand did not restrict the Judge to the evidence on the record, he was at liberty to examine witnesses who were in Court. Held also that, as the bona fides of the grantor was before the Court, or might have been if defendant's pleader had examined him, defendant could not appeal specially, on the ground of the want of a finding on the point. Ram Sunkur Stein and another v. Nilkant Bizwas, 9 W. R., 392.
Where a case is remanded to the lower Court to record reasons for its judgment, if the Judge who passed the decree is absent, the superior Court should be informed of it by his successor. Under such circumstances, his successor has no jurisdiction. Application should be made to the Bench which granted the order of remand for an order for the present Judge to re-try the case de novo. Manick Seti and others v. Khettormohan Gossami and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 101.

Where the Appellate Court remands a case for a specific enquiry, it will not receive any statement on the part of the Zillah Judge as to what he considers the merits of the whole case. M. Dauzelle v. Rajah Ramnarain Singh, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 51.

This suit was remanded (at the instance of the defendants) to the first Court to examine one of the plaintiffs, and to allow the defendants to have certain unstamped receipts (before rejected by the first Court) stamped, and then put in. Held that it was too late then for the defendants to insist upon the attendance and examination of the other plaintiff also. Bokalee Loll v. Radha Singh, 1 W. R., 357.

A case remanded to a lower Appellate Court for a statement of the Judge's reasons must not be decided de novo on its merits by succession. Lall Byro Lall v. Lalla Moodooond Lall, 2 W. R., 275.

When a case is remanded for the trial of the lawfulness or unlawfulness of an alleged act, the Court is wrong in allowing the litigation at the last moment of a question never before raised, viz., whether the act was committed. Norendro Coomar Dutt Chowdhry v. G. French, 3 W. R., 198.

The remand of a case to a lower Appellate Court for the purpose of stating good and substantial reasons for reversing a careful and clear judgment of the first Court, is not warranted to the lower Appellate Court to suppose that the case was remanded to it for the purpose of confirming the judgment of the first Court. Moolchand Shah v. Thakoor Doss Dutt, 4 W. R., 33.

The Court of Appeal directed a remand to try the issue on a plea of payment. The lower Court determined the whole case over again. Held that it had no power to do more than try the issue referred, and that, on this ground, its decision might be set aside on special appeal. Syed Mollan v. Shew Buksh, Marsh., 603.

When a case is remanded to a particular Judge merely for him to record the reasons of his finding, his successor, if the deciding Judge has left the district, acts without jurisdiction when he re-hears the whole appeal de novo. Bhrub Sheet v. Khett Mohun Gossain, 5 W. R., 124.

When the High Court has remanded a suit for re-trial on the merits, the lower Appellate Court has no authority to raise a question of jurisdiction for the first time. Temulji Rustamji v. Fardunjii Kavasji et al., 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 137.

Where on a case coming on for hearing before a Court to which it had been remanded, the Judge observed that the evidence of witnesses would be unnecessary, the declaration was held to have sufficient force to justify the plaintiffs in making no further application for a summons on their witnesses. Ram Jeevan Singh v. Radha Pershad Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 109.

When an Appellate Court remands a case under Section 351 for the trial of an issue which the lower Court may have omitted to raise or to try, it is not limited to the evidence then on the record, but may keep the case pending on its own file until the return of the first Court's finding on the issue with the evidence recorded on the trial thereof, or the Appellate Court may itself try the issue so raised. Wise v. Ishan Chunder Bonnerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 360.

S. sued to establish his claim to certain property, as the next heir of its former owner, on the death of whose grandmother, the property had been taken possession of by defendant P., and obtained a decree. Upon this, P. appealed, and while the case was under appeal S. sold his rights to H., who on application to the Court was made a party to the suit. The case was then remanded for further enquiry to the first Court, which dismissed the claim on account of default of both plaintiff and defendant. H. then applied for opportunity to show that he had not been in default, but his application was rejected on the ground that he was not a party. Held that when the case was remanded for re-trial, some date should have been fixed for the re-hearing which would have given the parties opportunity to appear and take measures to carry on the suit, and that the Judge's decision must be set aside, H. having been in reality a party to the suit. Haradun Chuckerbutty v. Protap Narain Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 401.

(8) Rulings under the Code.

When a case is remanded by an Appellate Court for re-trial, under Section 148, Act VIII of 1859, the Court of first instance has no authority to receive new evidence, nor the lower Appellate Court to decide thereupon. Padma Lochan v. Sirdar Khan; B. L. R., Ap., 91; W. R., 457.

Quare,—Whether, under Sections 351 and 352, Act VIII of 1859, when several cases are tried together, remand can be allowed for a new trial, on the ground that the plaintiff's evidence had not been completely heard, and that it was an error in the Court below to determine all the cases at once. R. Snadden v. Todd, Finlay and Co., and others, 7 W. R., 313.

Section 351, Act VIII of 1859, is meant for those cases in which a lower Court has disposed of a case on a purely preliminary point. When abundant evidence has been taken, if the lower Appellate Court think any further enquiry necessary, the proper course is not to remand the case to the lower Court, but to frame an issue, and to refer the same to the lower Court for trial under Section 354. Ram Chunder Googla v. Bhusen Surma, W. R., 1864, 357.

When the first Court dismissed a suit on the ground of limitation, and the lower Appellate Court reversed that order, and remanded the case to the first Court for trial on its merits,—Held, that if there was sufficient evidence to enable the Appellate Court to dispose of the case on its merits, that Court should have tried the case, as prescribed by Section 353, Act VIII of 1859; but that, if further evidence were required, the Court should have followed the rule prescribed in Section 354. Lucrum
Lall Doobey Govally v. Hursoboy Lall, W. R., 1864, 361.

A Judge on appeal in a suit to open roads leading to a kotee, expressing an opinion that the facts had not been sufficiently ascertained, directed a further local enquiry to be made, and remanded the case to the lower Court to be again decided there after such local enquiry. Held that he had no authority upon such a ground to remand the case for re-decision, there being no suggestion under Act VIII of 1859, Section 351, that the lower Court had erroneously decided a preliminary point excluding evidence, and the reference not being of an issue framed by the Appellate Court under Section 354. Nundooomar Bannerey v. Burry, Marsh, 121.

A special appeal does lie where a lower Appellate Court remands a case under Section 351, Act VIII of 1859, instead of calling for additional evidence under Section 255. Ram Kant Pandey v. Mursamut Guneshoo Koowar and others, 6 W. R., 47.

Held that the Judge ought to have received a note in evidence, which was "produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint was presented" (Section 39); that the plaintiff's counsel was not bound, under the circumstances, to apply to withdraw the suit, which was accordingly remanded to the lower Court, and be tried by one of the Judges of the Court. W. B. Thomson v. Jehangir Hormasji, 3 Bom. Rep., O. C., 66.

A special appeal does lie where a lower Appellate Court remands a case under Section 351, Act VIII of 1859, instead of calling for additional evidence under Section 255. Ram Kant Pandey v. Mursamut Guneshoo Koowar and others, 6 W. R., 47.

Held that the Judge ought to have received a note in evidence, which was "produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint was presented" (Section 39); that the plaintiff's counsel was not bound, under the circumstances, to apply to withdraw the suit, which was accordingly remanded to the lower Court, and be tried by one of the Judges of the Court. W. B. Thomson v. Jehangir Hormasji, 3 Bom. Rep., O. C., 66.

A remand is allowable only under the circumstances contemplated in Section 351. When the Judge requires further evidence, he should call for it under Section 354. Hureenarain Gossain v. Shumboonath Mundul, 1 W. R., 6.

A Court of special appeal has, indirectly, the same powers as are vested in a Court of regular appeal by Sections 351, 354, and 355 Act VIII of 1859, in respect to a wrong order passed by a lower Appellate Court. Wujee Ali and others v. Kalee Coo- mar Chunderbuty, 11 W. R., 228.

In a suit on a bond executed under a mooktearnamah, which was not produced, the Court of first instance admitted secondary evidence of it, and decreed the suit. In special appeal, the High Court was of opinion that the secondary evidence had been improperly admitted, and therefore the decree in the plaintiff's favour could not stand. Upon this it was contended that the suit should be dismissed, as the Court hearing a case in special appeal had no power, under such circumstances, either to remand the case or to call for additional evidence. Held that, although the powers conferred by Sections 351, 354, and 355 of Act VIII of 1859, on the Court of Regular Appeal, are not directly given to the Court of Special Appeal, yet the Court, when it found the order of a lower Appellate Court was wrong, could point out the error and direct the lower Appellate Court to make such order as would rectify the error. Syed Asur Ali and others v. Kali Kuncier Chunderbuty, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 315.

An Appellate Court cannot remand a case, unless the lower Court has disposed of it upon a preliminary point, so as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to a right determination of the parties. Fuzeebun Bl'beev. Omdalz Bibee and Ahab Jonacl Aty, 10 W. R., 466.

Section 354, Act VIII of 1859 (relating to the trial of additional issues), is only applicable to Courts hearing regular and not special appeals. Kebul Kishen Moomooomdar v. Mursamut Ambala, 7 W. R., 326.

Sufficient time must be allowed to the parties under Section 354, Act VIII of 1859, to file their objections to the revised finding of the lower Court. Bukhtouree v. Meheen Lall and others, 3 Agra Rep., 96.

Held by Jackson, J. (whose opinion prevailed), that where a lower Appellate Court is of opinion that further evidence should be taken, it may take such evidence itself, or require the first Court to do so, but it is not competent to remand a case for a second decision upon any of the issues, such a course being forbidden by Section 352, Act VIII of 1859.

Held by Markby, J. (dissenting), that a lower Appellate Court has power, under Section 354, to send back a case for trial upon an issue not satisfactorily tried by the Court of first instance. Umbooa Churn Mundul v. Ramdhone Mohurvir, 11 W. R., 35.

An Appellate Court cannot remand a case, unless the lower Court has disposed of it upon a preliminary point, so as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to a right determination of the parties. Fuzeebun Bl'beev. Omdalz Bibee and Ahab Jonacl Aty, 10 W. R., 466.

Held by Jackson, J. (whose opinion prevailed), that where a lower Appellate Court is of opinion that further evidence should be taken, it may take such evidence itself, or require the first Court to do so, but it is not competent to remand a case for a second decision upon any of the issues, such a course being forbidden by Section 352, Act VIII of 1859.
When a case has been remanded under Section 354, Act VIII of 1859, and a time fixed within which objections to the findings on remand are to be taken, the Appellate Court is not competent to alter any of the findings in respect of which no objection is preferred within the time fixed. Where a person executes a deed as witness with full knowledge of its contents, such execution may be taken to be evidence of his assent to the statements contained in the deed. Mussamut Noorum v. Khoda Bukh and others, 1 Agra Rep., A.C., 50.

In a case in which an issue referred under Section 354 of Act VIII of 1859 to the lower Court was tried there, and the finding was returned with the evidence, as no memorandum of objection was filed within the time fixed by the Court, the Court declined to allow objections to be taken when the appeal came on for final determination. Ashroo funissa Begum v. Stewart and others, 9 W. R., 438.

The object of a remand under Section 354, Act VIII of 1859, is not that the Judge should try the issues on the evidence already taken, because that the Court sitting in regular appeal can do for itself, but that he should take such evidence as the parties may have to offer for the determination of the issues. Abdool Khyrat v. Jamalondeen Hossein, 10 W. R., 244.

The failure of a party to take advantage of a postponement for the purpose of tendering further evidence cannot afterwards give him a right to a remand for such further evidence to be taken: without such postponement, he would have been entitled to a remand under Section 354, Act VIII of 1859. Teem Courree Kharah v. Luckhee Minee Dossee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 8.

If a plaint discloses a cause of action, a Judge on appeal ought not to dismiss the suit, on the ground merely of defect in the allegations in the plaint. If the subject-matter of the absent allegation has not been tried in the Court below, the proper course is for the Judge to frame an issue, and refer it to the lower Court for trial, under Act VIII of 1859, Section 354, Kaseemunath Moor v. Beebye Ruyominass Marsh, 198.

In a suit for a declaration of plaintiff's title to and possession of a share of certain property, she alleged that her title was derived by purchase from one R., who held under a deed of gift from T., the wife of the original holder. Defendants' case was that their title was derived by purchase from R. K., by his daughter C. The first Court dismissed the suit, considering that the defendants' title was proved, and that T. was not competent to dispose of the property by gift to plaintiff's vendor. The lower Appellate Court, finding that it was not satisfactorily proved that the defendants' alleged three vendors were really the daughter's sons of R. K., remanded the case for a finding on that issue. Held, with reference to Section 354, Act VIII of 1859, that the order of remand was illegal. Huroosoondery Dahee v. Unno Poona Dahee and others, 11 W. R., 550.

Defendant pleaded payment, and produced a letter of acknowledgment said to have been written by plaintiff. Plaintiff denied its genuineness, and the Principal Sudder Ameen rejected the testimony of two peadahs who deposed to the payment. On appeal, the Judge remanded the case, requiring the lower Court to give appellant the opportunity of proving the letter, and after recording a fresh finding to return the case to his Court. Held that the Judge was wrong in remanding the case under Section 354, Act VIII of 1859, as he could have decided the case himself, taking such additional evidence as might appear necessary. Rungal Singh v. Maka rajah Joy Munge Singh, 11 W. R., 106.

The High Court decided a case irrespective of certain documents brought forward by a party at the hearing of the appeal, and afterwards rejected an application for a review of that judgment. In an application to the Privy Council for special leave to bring in those documents,—Held that further evidence ought not to be admitted under Section 355, Act VIII of 1859; that there was great danger in the Court of ultimate appeal lightly introducing evidence which had not been under the consideration of the Courts below, and which the parties had had no means of testing. Gobind Sundart Debia v. Jagdamba Debia, 3 B. L. R., F. C., 25.

The plaintiff claimed to succeed to the Shoosung estate as sole proprietor, alleging a family custom according to which the property was a raj and indivisible, and descended to the eldest son or nearest male heir of the party in possession. Held that there was no satisfactory proof of such a custom. Held also that a lower Court, in taking evidence ordered under Section 355, Act VIII of 1859, acts in a ministerial capacity; that a defendant may raise any objection he pleases to the documentary evidence produced by the plaintiff, when it is submitted to the consideration of the Appellate Court, though no objections were taken to it in the lower Court; and that a plaintiff filing copies of documents is bound to explain why the originals have not been filed. Ram Joy Surmah v. Rajak Prankishen Singh; Buroda Debia v. Rajak Prankishen Singh; Oronnoda Debia v. Rajak Prankishen Singh, 2 W. R., 81.

Where a party obtained a decree which was appealed from, and in transit from the first to the second Court, the record was irrecoverably lost, the High Court directed the lower Appellate Court to receive secondary evidence from both parties of the papers which made up the entire record, or, failing this, additional evidence under Section 355, Act VIII of 1859. Gooroo Doyal Singh v. Durette Lall Tewaree, 7 W. R., 18.

A Judge who called up a defendant and examined him in appeal, because he had failed to give material evidence which it was in his power to give in the Court below, was held to have acted erroneously; the Privy Council having laid down that Section 355, Act VIII of 1859, does not authorize the Appellate Court to introduce into the record substantially new evidence to mend the case of either party, and that that Court ought, unless some special reason to the contrary occurs, to decide the case on those materials alone which the disputants furnish. Puggoumbhoo Deb v. Goduck Sunnder Holder, 10 W. R., 238.

It is incumbent on a Court taking additional evidence under Section 355, Act VIII of 1859, to record its reasons for admitting such evidence, but such record is not a condition precedent to the reception of fresh evidence. Banee Pershad v. Lalla Joggeshur Dass and others, 11 W. R., 47.
Under Section 355, Act VIII of 1859, the Government Gazette containing the advertisement of sale and a printed paper purporting to be the conditions of sale alluded to in the Gazette, and issued from the Master's office in the name of the Master, were admitted in evidence to prove the actual conditions of the deed of sale. Jotendro Mohun Tagore v. Kanee Brojosoondery, W. R., 1864, 50.

The High Court cannot interfere with the refusal of a lower Court to comply with an application, under Section 355, Act VIII of 1859, to file additional exhibits. Mohesh Chunder Seth v. Shoshee Mookhee Debia, 6 W. R., 196.

In a suit for possession of certain lands under a howla tenure, khas possession of which for some generations was alleged, no special documentary title was set up in the plaint; but one of the plaintiffs in his deposition referred the title to a particular pottah which he said had existed and had been lost in the time of his grandfather. Mohun Tagore v. Ranee Brojosoondery, W. R., 1865, 50.

Two of the defendants were the zemindars of the talook in which the howla tenure was said to exist, and had transferred their proprietary right to the other two defendants. The zemindars did not defend the suit, and were not examined in the Court of first instance.

The lower Appellate Court "considered it necessary, for the proper decision of the case," to examine the zemindars, and relying mainly on their evidence, reversed the decision of the Moonisiff, and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff. Held, in appeal, that the lower Appellate Court had sufficiently recorded its reasons within the meaning of Section 355 of Act VIII of 1859 for requiring the additional evidence; that it was right in so doing; and that, although no special title had been set up in the plaint, the decree which was given on the evidence in favour of the plaintiffs could not be reversed in special appeal. Radhanath Dhubi and Mohesh Chandra Dhubi v. Ram Gobind Paul, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 218.

The omission of a Court to take into consideration a material issue is a sufficient ground to admit an application for review of judgment.

When an application for review is admitted upon other grounds, fresh evidence not produced at the trial may be received, although no reason, as required by Section 376, Act VIII of 1859, had been assigned for the non-production at the trial. Bikhar Lal Nandi v. Srimati Trailokhomoyi Barmani, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 346; S. C., 12 W. R., 223.

A special appeal is not converted into a regular appeal, because the Judge, sitting as a Court of Appeal, recorded further evidence under Section 356, Act VIII of 1859, or pronounced a judgment on the evidence recorded, which had not been considered by the first Court as described in Section 355. Lalita Heera Lal v. Gourou Bijnath Pershad, 4 W. R., 43.

When an application in a suit to recover arrears of rent in which the genuineness of the kabuleutt was in issue, and the defendant asked the Deputy Collector to summon certain witnesses to prove that he had been paying at particular rates, the Judge ought, under Section 356, Act VIII of 1859, to have directed the Deputy Collector to send up either the witnesses or their evidence, and, under Section 357, to have directed the evidence to be confined to the rate and time of payment, and the rent to which the payment had been appropriated. Mohun Mundur v. Brij Bhokun Singh, 9 W. R., 127.

An appeal having gone down on remand from the High Court, the Zillah Judge considered he was bound to proceed with it, notwithstanding a representation made to him by petition that a compromise had been entered into between the parties. Held that, by Section 353 of the Civil Procedure Code, an appeal could not be preferred against this order of the Judge. Sooroo Narain Pandah v. Soondur Poraya and others, 11 W. R., 505.

XVI.—Miscellaneous Rulings.

When an objection is taken to an application for partition under Act XIX of 1863, the Collector may either decline the application until the question has been decided, or proceed to investigate it. If he adopts the latter course, he is bound to follow the procedure prescribed by Act VIII of 1859.

But his failure to follow that procedure will not deprive the parties of their right of appeal to the Judge, who must dispose of the appeal in due course. Rameshur Rai v. Subhoo Rai, 1, 4, N. W. R., 81.

It is competent to the High Court, under Act XXIII of 1859, to order a warrant of attachment before judgment issued by a Mofussil Court to be executed within the limits of the High Court's ordinary original civil jurisdiction. Abraham R. J. In re, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 170.

A Judge cannot under Section 6, Act VIII of 1859, call up a case to his own file after the evidence has been taken by a Subordinate Court. Dumree Sahoo v. Jugdhar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 398.

In a suit on a registered bond in which defendant asked the Court to send for the registration books, with a view to prove the non-existence of the bond at the time it purported to be certified,—Held, that as defendant had failed to summon the Deputy Registrar, it was not necessary for the Judge to use the discretion given in Section 138, Act VIII of 1859. Monmohinee Dabee v. Sridhama Churn Rana, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 302.

When a decree-holder wishes to execute his decree against the heirs of his judgment-debtor to the extent of property inherited from the debtor and not duly applied by the heirs, he must, before he can put Section 203, Act VIII of 1859, into force, satisfy the Court that no such property of the deceased can be found as he can sell in execution. Jodro Narain Misser v. Kristo Chunder Mabto, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 362.

Section 237 of the Code of Civil Procedure gives no authority to a Civil Court to dispose of claims to money in deposit with a Collector, nor does...
Section 242 give a Court authority to dispose of claims to money under attachment. Brojanauth Mitter, In re, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 301.

The plaintiff sued on a mortgage bond executed by the first defendant. The second defendant, who claimed the property under a mortgage from the first defendant, was admitted a defendant on his own application, but afterwards excluded from the suit. Before this was done he had incurred certain costs, which, by the Moonsiff's decree, he was ordered to pay himself. Upon appeal by the first defendant the Civil Judge found that the mortgage bond sued upon was not proved, dismissed the suit, and ordered the plaintiff to pay all costs, those of the second defendant included.

Held, that under Section 337 of the Civil Procedure Code it was competent to the Civil Judge so to modify the Moonsiff's decree, as the main ground of the whole decision, viz., the validity of the mortgage bond, affected all the defendants in common, and the appeal of the first defendant and the decision of the Appellate Court had reference to that common ground. Yerrabalu Viradguna Reddi v. Abdul Khadir Sahib, 4 Mad. Rep., 26.

An Appellate Court is restrained under Section 350, Act VIII of 1859, from reversing a decree on account of any error in the valuation of a claim which does not also affect the jurisdiction of the Court which originally tried the suit. Kamersun Dyal Singh v. Raj Biskore Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 325.

In a suit for possession of a quantity of land, where the first Court gave plaintiff a decree on the ground that he had proved title by purchase, and the lower Appellate Court, in confirming the decision on the substantial issue raised, went further, and found that one of the defendants was plaintiff's ryot, contrary to the allegation set up by the plaintiff himself, —Held in special appeal, that the error did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the lower Court; and the High Court could not therefore interfere under Section 350 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Ram Chunder Chatterje v. Ram Jeeunt Dass, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 141.

The right reserved to parties in pending suits under Section 387 of Act VIII of 1859 does not refer to Section 7 of Regulation VII of 1832, which bars a special appeal in Small Cause Court cases. Bholanath Dutv v. Mohadeb Sheet, 3 W. R., Mis., 19.

A defendant in a suit instituted before the passing of Act VIII of 1859 is entitled, under Section 387, to any advantage of right which he might have possessed under the old procedure; but this does not bar him from availing himself of any advantages which he may obtain from the new procedure,—e.g., a re-hearing, under Section 119, in the case of an ex-parte decree. Mussamut Kussoolun v. Mussamut Fusselot-oonnissa, W. R., 1864, Mis., 36.

A suit must be held to be pending under Section 387, Act VIII of 1859, if anything remains to be done which might have been done under the old law, and a party in such a case is entitled to ask the Court to proceed under the old law, inasmuch as the application of the new Code would deprive him of a right, in reference to the procedure of the case, which but for the passing of the Code would have belonged to him. Captain Parrott v. Ram Shahye Singh, W. R., 1864, 35.

The correct interpretation of Section 360, Act VIII of 1859, is to the effect that a suit by a party claiming to be the real purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree, cannot be brought against the certified auction-purchaser, even though claimant has had previous possession. Bikutu Chunder Mooystofe v. Khema Meeha Deba, 9 W. R., 350.

By the words of Section 365 of Act VIII of 1859, the Legislature must have intended to give the person aggrieved by any order of a Civil Court imposing a fine on him as a punishment for keeping out of the way in order to avoid service of summons to attend as a witness, the right of appeal to the High Court, whether the order be strictly referable to Section 160 of that Act or not. In re Gajadhu Prasad Narayan Singh, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 187; 16 W. R., 233.

XVII.—RULINGS UNDER ACT XXIII OF 1861.

Under Section 2, Act XXIII of 1861, no appeal lies from an order passed under Section 208, Act VIII of 1859, substituting the assignee of a decree in the place of the original decree-holder. Mujh Narayan Singh v. Radha Prasad Singh, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 200; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 224.

A plaintiff in the Moonsiff's Court filed a list of witnesses, but failed to deposit tulubana or cost of the service of summons for their attendance. The Court failed to fix a time for the service of tulubana. The processes were not served, and the Court dismissed the suit, because the plaintiff had produced no evidence in support of his claim. Held that, under Act XXIII of 1861, Section 2, the lower Court should first have fixed a time for the deposit of tulubana. Case remanded. Lalla Prasad Lali v. Lalla Ambaka Prasad, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 25.

The words in Section 2, Act XXIII of 1861, "questions arising between the parties to suit," cannot be limited to questions arising between those who were parties to the suit at the date of the decree, but after decree the representative of a decree-holder, or the representative of a defendant against whom an execution is sought under Sections 210 and 216 of the Code, become parties to the suit for the purpose of execution, and questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of Section 2 of the amending Act Buddu Ramayia v. C. Venkaiya, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 263.

The omission by a plaintiff to deposit tulubana required by the Court in a case pending for some time, was held not to warrant a dismissal of the suit, inasmuch as the Court had not fixed a period for the deposit, as it was bound to do under Section 2, Act XXIII of 1861. Purshadee Lali v. Umbica Pershad Lall and others, 11 W. R., 290.

A suit for debt against two defendants whose liability is joint, but one of whom at the time of filing the plaint is neither resident nor personally working for gain within the limits of the jurisdiction, may be tried by a Small Cause Court within whose jurisdiction the other defendant is resident at the time of the commencement of the suit, provided an order is obtained from the High Court under Section 5 of Act XXIII of 1861. Rungunsary v. Shappani Asary, 5 Mad. Rep., A., 375.

The provisions of Section 4 of Act XXIII of 1861 are applicable to Courts of Small Causes in the Mofussil. Annapurnabai v. Sathuram Jaganath, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C., 256.

When a cause of action has arisen within the local jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court, but one of several defendants resides out of such jurisdiction, sanction may be given, under Section 4 of Act XXIII of 1861, by the High Court to the Small Cause Court to try the suit, Mathuradus Juggivunds v. Nathur Baji, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C., 131.

Where the Court of first instance ordered a co-defendant to be joined in the suit, but the plaintiff failed to pay the allowance necessary for the purpose of causing a notice to be served on such co-defendant, who accordingly did not appear at the hearing, the suit was dismissed under Section 5 of Act XXIII of 1861. Where the Court did not adopt that course, but proceeded with the suit, and passed a decree from which the original defendant appealed on the merits to the Assistant Judge, without taking the objection that the suit ought to have been dismissed, it was held that he could not raise the objection for the first time in special appeal.

The provisions contained in the first portion of Section 5 of Act XXIII of 1861 are imperative, Shek Abas v. Ibrahimji, 5 Bom. Rep., A., 191.

A notice to a creditor having been returned unexpired, owing to the omission on the part of the appellant to deposit the requisite tulubana in the proper Court, the default under Sections 5 and 6, Act XXIII of 1861, was held to be in no way excused by the fact of its having been committed by an ignorant kurpurda, or man of business, whom appellant chose to employ rather than a vakheel. Fran Chunder Roy v. Juggeshur Mukerjee, 11 W. R., 417.

The discretionary power of a Judge to detain a defendant in custody otherwise than by committing him to prison in execution of a decree is confined to the case provided for in Act XXIII of 1861; Section 8. Sahib Rautan v. Ibrahim Rautan and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 441.

When the Court orders further interest under Section 10, Act XXIII of 1861 is to be from the date of the decree to the date of the payment of the principal sum adjudged, and not for a limited period. Rambudumi Ayyan v. Appavaiyan, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 211.

Held that an order discharging a judgment-debtor under Section 8, Act XXIII of 1861, being illegal on account of non-compliance with the procedure prescribed by law, may be quashed and afterwards treated as a nullity, so as not to bar any subsequent application for arrest. Luchme Narain v. Bhairou Perishad, 1 Agra Rep., Mis., 4.

A decree-holder having allowed the term of three years to run within a very few days of expiry before applying for execution, and then, though allowed five days to pay tulubana, having neglected to do so, his application was found to be not bona fide.

 Held that Section 7, Act XXIII of 1861, did not apply to the case, that Section applying only to suits dismissed under the provisions of Section 5 of Act XXIII of 1861.

A surety-bond taken by the Court under Section 8, of Act XXIII of 1861, after judgment has been pronounced, can be enforced under Section 204 of Act VIII of 1859. Abdul Kureem v. Abdul Hug Kazer, 8 B. L. R., 205; 15 S. W. R., C. R., 473.

Where no liability to mesne profits is imposed by a decree, Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 does not give a power to extend the relief granted by the decree in respect of the right to mesne profits, but only to determine questions regarding the amount thereof when the right thereto has been ascertained by the decree. Subbu Ven Kutramayam v. Subraya Aiyam, 4 Mad. Rep., 257.

A suit does not lie to enforce a liability specifically imposed by the decree of a Civil Court in the Mofussil, the right of suit in such case being taken away by Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. K. Sangeeviyah v. Nangiyah, 4 Mad. Rep., 453.

Where no liability to mesne profits is imposed by a decree, Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 does not give a power to extend the relief granted by the decree in respect of the right to mesne profits, but only to determine questions regarding the amount thereof when the right thereto has been ascertained by the decree. Subbu Ven Kataramayam v. Subraya Aiyam, 4 Mad. Rep., 257.

The plaintiff sued to recover certain land of which the defendant obtained possession in execution of a decree in a former suit, in which the plaintiff was a defendant, although it was not part of the land mentioned in the plaint or decree in the former suit. Held, that the plaintiff's suit could not be maintained, and that his only remedy for the wrongful dispossession was a proceeding under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Muthevelu Pillai v. Vythilinga Pillai, 5 Mad. Rep., 185.

The ancestors of the plaintiff brought a suit in 1821 before the Registrar of the Adawlut Court to eject the defendant's grandfather from a piece of ground. The Registrar found that the defendant was a tenant under the plaintiff at a monthly rent, and the Court decreed that defendant should remain in possession so long as he should continue to pay the rent regularly, and that in default of payment the plaintiff should be placed in possession.

An attempt to obtain possession in execution of that decree in 1861 failed, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession with arrears of rent. Held that Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 precluded the plaintiff from maintaining the suit. Rungunsary v. Shappani Asary, 5 Mad. Rep., 375.

Plaintiff, the zamindar of Shivaganga, sued to recover two villages which she alleged formed part of the Shivaganga Zamindari. The villages originally belonged to Pitchama Nachiar, mother of the present defendant, Bothagurnami Tevar, the ex-Zamindar of Shivaganga. In 1856 they were purchased by the Court of Wards on behalf of Bothagurnami, who was then a minor, with part of the rents and profits of the Zamindari, and in 1860 were given by him to his mother. In 1864 Bothagurnami was ousted by a decree of the Privy Council and the, same relation between the Collector and the plaintiff was entitled under a decree passed in lieu, namely, the existence of the relation of trustee and beneficiary between the Collector and the plaintiff, and afterward paid to plaintiff his portion of the amount of such profits. Rumkanye Ghose v. Gooroo Prosseno Roy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 30.

The question whether the execution of a decree is barred by limitation is a question arising between the parties to the suit; and an appeal lies under Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, from a decision on such question, whether it be raised by the Court proprio motu, or by the parties. Hari Vishnu v. Gopal bin Rughietal, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 307.

N. obtained a decree against A. for certain lands, and was put in possession of them in execution of the decree.

On appeal the decree against A. was reversed, and the lands were accordingly restored to him, but no provision was made as to the mesne profits received by N. when he was in possession of the lands under the decree of the lower Court. In a suit brought by A. against N. to recover such mesne profits, it was held that the suit would lie, and was not prohibited by Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. Abdur Alli v. Nathu Jallam, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 74.

A. a judgment-debtor, paid to B., the decreeholder, a sum of money by way of compromise in full satisfaction of the decree. B. failed to certify this payment to the Court, and afterwards executed her decree for the full amount.

In a suit by A. against B. for recovery of the amount previously paid out of Court in satisfaction of the decree, held that, notwithstanding Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, the suit was maintainable.

Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 does not give an appeal from an order made, under Sections 270 and 271, Act VIII of 1859, as to the application and distribution of the proceeds of property sold in execution under a decree of a rival decree-holder. Misree Kowur v. Maharajah Bulsh Singh, 1 Marsh., 527.

Where by a decree the plaintiff's right to a monthly allowance was declared,—Held that any failure on the part of the person bound to pay by the terms of the decree would constitute a good cause of action; and a fresh suit brought on the assertion of payment being withheld, would not be affected by the provisions of Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Nawarish Aly Beg v. Bilayete Khanum and others, 1 Agra Rep., 23.

The order of a Moonsiff declining to put the purchaser, at a judicial sale of immovable property, in possession thereof, is open to appeal under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861. In the matter of Gooruppa Bin Rachapa, 1 Born. Rep., 90.

Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 does not allow an appeal in matters already specifically provided for in the different sections of the Procedure Code (e.g., Sections 243 and 364). Greejamundo Oopadhya v. Kuttee Ramun Oopadhya and others, 8 W. R., 136.

A claim for damages in respect of injury sustained by goods while under attachment in execution of a decree which was afterwards set aside, is not a matter to be disposed of under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, but must be the subject of a separate suit. Kashere Kishore Roy v. Noor Khan, 7 W. R., 45.

The words "party to a suit" in Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, include the heirs, assignees, and representatives of such party, and consequently give the purchaser of a decree all the rights of appeal, &c., which his vendor had. Huro Lall Dass v. Soojawat Ali, 8 W. R., 197.

A decree-holder took out execution against A. and B. When B.'s property was attached, his widow, C., came forward and laid claim to it on the part of her minor son, urging that, as B. was not liable under the decree, his property could not be sold. The objection was disallowed, and the property was sold. Held that Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, did not prevent C. from suing to set aside that sale and recover B.'s property, on the ground that B. was not liable under the decree. Issan Chunder Dass v. Chundro Bodinee and others, 7 W. R., 361.

Held that Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, does not apply to suits brought by a decree-holder to question an alienation made by the judgment-debtor, inasmuch as the transferee was not a party to the former suit, and only questions between the parties to the suit must of necessity be determined in the Execution Department. Sumbhooth v. Usger Ally Khan and others, 2 Agra Rep., 180.

Where the object of the suit was to set aside orders passed in the Miscellaneous Department relating to execution of decree,—Held that such suit was untenable; Section 11, Act XIII of 1861, having distinctly prohibited all remedy by separate suit, and the remedy provided being an appeal from the order complained of. Mussamut Amrit Koonwar and others v. Luchme Narain and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 93.

The words in Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, "questions arising between the parties to the suit," cannot be limited to questions arising between those who were parties to the suit at the date of the decree; but after decree the representative of a decree-holder, or the representative of a defendant against whom an execution is sought under Sections 210 and 216 of the Code, become parties to the suit for the purpose of execution, and questions arising between them are questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of Section 11 of the Amending Act. Buddu Ramaiya v. C. Venkaiya, 3 Mad. Rep., A., 263.

A decree was obtained in 1849, and execution issued in 1862. Several subsequent applications for execution were made, against one of which objection was raised by some of the representatives of the judgment-debtor that the decree was barred by lapse of time; but the objection was overruled by the High Court in special appeal. A further application was made, and was opposed by one of the representatives who had since attained his majority, upon the ground that the suit was barred. The Moonsiff disallowed the objection. On appeal the Judge reversed his decision.

Held in special appeal that the terms of Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, do not prohibit an appeal by a representative of a deceased judgment-debtor against an order passed in execution of a decree against his ancestor. Bishnu Narayan Bando-padhya v. Ganga Narayan Biswas, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 40; S. C., 1 W. R., 58.

A plaintiff, in possession under a decree for land and mesne profits, applied for further execution as to mesne profits, and obtained an order from the Court of first instance (the District Moonsiff's Court).

This order was reversed by the Appellate Court (the Civil Court) leaving still open to the Court of first instance to make a further order. Plaintiff, however, instead of applying again for execution, instituted a fresh suit for mesne profits in the Civil Court. The Civil Judge rejected the plaint.

Held that Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, warranted the rejection of the plaint, on the ground that the mesne profits to which plaintiff laid claim in the suit were payable in respect of the subject-matter of the former suit. B. Lakshai Narasimhalu v. Chatrasu Nadham Pantulu, 3 Mad. Rep., A., 287.

An appeal does not lie under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, from an order in execution, in which the representative of a decree-holder was on one side, and a stranger (the auction-purchaser) on the other. Luchmun Persad v. Ameer Ali, W. R., 1864, Mis. R., 15.

Held, under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, that a separate suit could not be maintained to recover mesne profits, or interest payable in respect of the subject-matter of a suit between the date of the institution of the suit and the execution of the decree, but that all questions relating thereto ought to be urged before, and be determined by, the Court executing the decree passed in such suit. Jiva Patti Rohinna v. Mukeji M. Nathkuna and others, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 31.

In a former suit brought for possession of immoveable property against J. and her father, and subsequently revived against J. as the representative of her father, possession and mesne profits were decreed against J. in her representative capacity; while as against her in her individual capacity, the suit was dismissed. The decree-holder, after obtaining possession, attached and sold, in satisfaction of his decree for mesne profits, J.'s private property, notwithstanding her objections, and himself became the purchaser, but never obtained possession. This sale, ordered on the 8th October, 1863, was confirmed by the Judge on 15th March, 1864. The present suit was brought by J. for confirmation of her possession of her private property by cancellation of the execution sale.

_Held_ (Macpherson and Glover, J.J., dissenting), that such suit was maintainable, and that J. in her individual capacity was not a party to the suit in which execution issued within the meaning of Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. _Sheikh Wahid Ali v. Mussamat Jumay_, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 73.

Section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861 is not applicable to permanently-settled estates in Sylhet, nor to estates in any district of Bengal, unless extended thereto. _Abdul Jabel v. Khelachundra Ghose_, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 105.

Under Section 15, Act XXIII of 1861, if an application for execution corresponds with the terms of a decree, it should be admitted. If the decree needs correction, the Court executing cannot correct it, but it is for defendant to apply to the Court which made the decree. _Bisheskur Roy Chowdhry and others v. Bisheskur Bose_, 8 W. R., 277.

Section 15, Act XXIII of 1861, does not authorize a Judge to reject an application for the execution of a decree, on the ground of an irregularity in form. Where the application is irregular, the Judge should either return it immediately to the applicant for correction, or with his consent cause the necessary correction to be made. _Chowdhy Purladhi Mahapatra and others v. Chowdhy Jonnadon Mahapatra_, 8 W. R., Mis., 15.

Under Sections 16 and 19, Act XXIII of 1861, Civil Courts have power to refer to Magistrates, or to make commitments to the Sessions in cases of perjury or forgery, only when they have come to some conclusion in respect of the guilt of the party concerned, or the truth or otherwise of the document or evidence. _Huronath Roy and others, petitioners_, 7 W. R., 482.

Where a Moonsiff, under the provisions of Section 19 of Act XXIII of 1861, makes a matter over to a Magistrate for investigation, the Magistrate has no power to transfer to a Deputy Magistrate a case so duly sent to him. _Queen v. Syud Assaf Ali Khan_, 3 N. W. R., 126.

Section 23 of Act XXIII of 1861 refers only to the late Sudder Court, and although this Act forms part of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is clear that Section 23 cannot apply to Judges sitting in appeal from the original civil jurisdiction, for this reason, that all the Judges of the Court so sitting in appeal are supposed in law to be equal, whereas Section 23 of Act XXIII of 1861 only contemplates an appeal from a Court of inferior jurisdiction to the late Sudder Court, and has nothing at all to do with the Court of appeal from the original civil jurisdiction as that Court is now constituted. _Greenway v. Hoge and others_, Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 139.

Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, bars a special appeal in execution proceedings arising out of decisions passed on regular appeal in suits of a nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes. _Anund Chunder Roy and others v. Sidhy Gopal Misser_, 8 W. R., 112.

Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, which bars a special appeal in suits below 500 rupees, as being of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, does not apply to a case in which the Lower Appellate Court has wrongly decided that the case is not cognizable by any Civil Court. _Sheikh Goreboollah v. Sheikh Syeefoolah_, 7 W. R., 41.

A suit to recover plaintiff's share of malikana out of a sum which the principal defendant had realized from the other defendant (the Collector of the district) was held to be a suit for damages cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. The fact of a question of right having been incidentally raised in the case, did not put it beyond the provisions of Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861. _Rasmonee Debia v. Hufeefoolah_, 12 W. R., 29.

A decree-holder having taken out execution, the judgment-debtor paid a sum of money in satisfaction of the decree, and got a surety to execute a security bond on his behalf. The decree-holder took out proceedings under Section 204, Act VII of 1859, had the surety arrested, and realied from him the amount due under the decree. The surety then brought an action to recover damages for illegal arrest, the sum claimed not exceeding Rs. 500.

_Held_ that the suit was cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and that under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no appeal would lie. _Toolee Ram v. Nund Kishore Lalji_, 12 W. R., 471.

Under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal lies in execution proceedings where the original decree was for a sum less than 500 rupees, and in a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. _Deber Pershad Singh v. Syud Delawar Ali_, 12 W. R., 485.

Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, takes away special appeal in all those cases that are expressly alluded to therein, thus overriding Section 387, Act VIII of 1859. The provision applies in execution of decree, as well as in suits themselves, and to suits and proceedings in execution commenced before 1861, or even before 1859. _Ram Jhabub Chatterjee v. Rash Monie Dassae_, 8 W. R., 321.

The decision or order mentioned in Section 27 is confined to those decrees which, if made in a Small Cause Court, would be conclusively binding on the parties, and does not include a decree based upon an issue affecting the proprietary relations between the parties, which, if it had properly arisen incidentally in a suit brought in a Small Cause Court, could not then have been finally concluded between the parties. _Bhoopinari Sahoo v. Meer Mahomed Hossein_, 4 W. R., 60.

The decision or order mentioned in Section 27 is confined to those decrees which, if made in a Small Cause Court, would be conclusively binding on the parties, and does not include a decree based upon an issue affecting the proprietary relations between the parties, which, if it had properly arisen incidentally in a suit brought in a Small Cause Court, could not then have been finally concluded between the parties. _Bhoopinari Sahoo v. Meer Mahomed Hossein_, 4 W. R., 60.
appeal lies from a regular appeal against an order passed in a suit of a nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes, no matter how long ago the suit was instituted, provided the appeal was decided after the passing of Act VIII of 1859. Mohamadoukissa Begum v. Ooser Jemadar, 8 W. R., 107.

A suit for mesne profits only is a suit for damages within the meaning of Section 6, Act XI of 1865, and if the demand does not exceed 500 rupees, no special appeal will lie with reference to Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861. Ram Peery Dabee and another v. Denonath Mookerjee, 10 W. R., 375.

In a suit for recovery of a sum of money below Rs. 500, the parties entered into a compromise, whereby the defendant made over a certain piece of land in lieu of the money claimed, and a decree was passed accordingly. In execution of the decree, disputes arose between the parties. Upon special appeal by the judgment-debtor to the High Court, — Held, that, under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal lay to the High Court. Srimuti Talan Bibi v. Srimuti Tenu Bibi, 6 B. L. R., Ap. 82, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 65.

A sum of money was stolen from the Judge's Court of Tippera while A. was the Nazir. A. paid the amount to Government, and died, leaving B. his heir. B. sued Government for recovery of the amount paid by A., on the ground that as there was no negligence of A., and as the amount was under the custody of the guards of Government, at the time of the theft, A. was not responsible for the loss thereof. Held, the suit was cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and therefore, under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal lay to the High Court. Collector of Tippera v. Mussamut Maftunissa Bibi, 4 B. L. R., Ap. 46.

Held that, notwithstanding Section 387 of Act VIII of 1859, Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861 bars a special appeal in a suit of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes instituted before Act XXIII of 1861 came into operation. Soorje Coomer Surmah Roy v. Kristo Coomar Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., F. B., 30.

Section 28 Act XXIII of 1861 merely authorizes the reference of such questions as may arise in the trial of a suit, or not of questions arising on an appeal for a review of judgment, which cannot in any sense be considered as the trial of a suit. Benemally Deo v. Bam Sadyo Chuckerbutty, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 95.

The provisions of Section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 extend to the Courts of Revenue Officers acting without jurisdiction under Act X of 1859. Hurpersand v. Laloo, 3 N. W. R., 60.

An application to the High Court, under Section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, to order a Subordinate Court to receive an appeal, which in ordinary course ought to have been received within 15 days of the original decision, ought to be made either immediately upon the quashing of the order of the Subordinate Appellate Court, or, put briefly and without any avoidable delay. Russel Lall Chutterjee, in the matter of, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 519.

Petitioner bought at Court sale certain property which had been attached in O. S. No. 30 of 1860 on the file of the District Munisif's Court. Before, however, the sale certificate was issued to him, the plaintiff in O. S. No. 79 of 1866 presented a petition praying for a re-sale of the property on the ground that it had been sold at an undervalue. On this petition the Munisif cancelled the former sale and ordered a re-sale. Before this re-sale took place the property was sold in execution of the decree in suit No. 3 of 1866 on the file of the Civil Court and purchased by the plaintiff in that suit. Thereupon petitioner applied to the Munisif to re-sell the property in satisfaction of his claim. The Munisif refused to do so, and the Civil Judge, upon appeal, confirmed the Munisif's order. Held, on special appeal, that the Munisif's first order, annulling the sale, was a nullity, and the subsequent attachment and sale under the decree in O. S. No. 3 of 1866 inoperative against the property. That, consequently, the appellant was entitled to have these proceedings set aside and the validity of his sale upheld, if the respondent's objection that the orders were not open to question in the High Court should not prevail. Upon the latter point, held, that no right of appeal existed, but that, therefore, the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal to that Court, and, giving effect to the petition of special appeal as a petition under Section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, that the orders of the lower Courts should be annulled and the petitioner declared entitled to an order and certificate perfecting his title. Annamalai Chetti v. Muthusingham Pillai and Rangappa Nain, 6 Mad. Rep., 360.

In execution of a decree, the District Munisif made an order which he was not legally authorized to make at the instance of the purchaser of the property sold in execution. No appeal could be made against the order, but the Civil Judge entertained an appeal and reversed the order of the District Munisif.

The High Court set aside the order of the Civil Judge under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, but, by virtue of the powers given by the section, the order of the District Munisif was also annulled. Subraya Gounden v. Venkatagiri Aiyar, 6 Mad. Rep., 22.

Held by the majority of the Court (Jackson, J., dissenting) that, under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, the High Court has power to interfere, either in a case in which a Subordinate Court exercises an appellate jurisdiction, or in a case in which the subordinate Court, in the exercise of a jurisdiction which it has, exceeds its jurisdiction; that where a Court exceeds its jurisdiction, the High Court may set aside that part of the order which is in excess of jurisdiction; that where the decision of the subordinate Court is made on appeal in a case in which it has no appellate jurisdiction, the proper order is to set aside the decision altogether; and that where an appeal is heard by a subordinate Court which has no jurisdiction to hear it when it ought to be heard by another subordinate Court which has jurisdiction to hear it, the High Court may set aside the decision of the Court which has no jurisdiction, and may, if it think it right, refer the case to the Court which had jurisdiction, even if it be too late to prefer a fresh appeal to that Court. Subhajit Ostagar v. Promotionsh Ghose and others, 6 W. R., Mis. R., 77.

Where a Collector on appeal affirmed an order of a Deputy Collector for the sale of an under-tenure in execution of a decree for rent, but afterwards, upon review of judgment, set aside his former order as made without jurisdiction.—Held that the High Court had no power, under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, to interfere with the order of the Deputy-Collector, which was final; and that, even if the Collector had not set aside his former order, the mere circumstance of his having by mistake assumed jurisdiction on appeal would not make it right for the High Court, in setting aside the Collector's order for want of jurisdiction, to interfere with the order of the Deputy Collector, which the law intended to be final, and with which the High Court, but for the mistake of the Collector, could not have interfered.

Quaer.—Whether the Collector is a Court subordinate to the High Court within the meaning of Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861. Docoure Caze v. Hurrosoonderee Debea and another, 6 W. R., Act X R., 53.

The High Court cannot interfere, under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, where a subordinate Court has not exceeded its jurisdiction. Abdool Kureem v. Ooghan Lal, 6 W. R., 119.

Suit by an executor of an alleged adopted son of a party upon a bond executed in favour of that party for an account (including interest) below Rs. 500. The defendant having questioned the plaintiff's title—held that it was sufficient for the plaintiff either to show that he had obtained a certificate under Section 2, Act XXVII of 1860, or to prove that he was in de facto possession of the deed, and that the lower Appellate Court acted beyond jurisdiction in directing an enquiry into the plaintiff's de jure title.

Although the case was one cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and no special appeal therefor lay to this Court under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, yet under Section 35 of that Act, the Court set aside so much of the lower Appellate Court's order as was beyond jurisdiction. Bhowanee Pershad Surmah Khan v. Dhurm Narein Neog, 3 W. R., 24.

When a ganteedar on the suit of the putneedar is ejected from his holding, notwithstanding a right of occupancy independent of his gantee, an appeal lies to the Collector, whose order can only be questioned by a civil suit, and not under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861. Rughoonath Mitter v. Wooomanath Chowdury, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 47.

When a Collector decides upon the genuineness of a deed of sale, he exceeds his authority, and his order can be set aside by the High Court under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861. Tojilchonath Sirdar v. Baluck Ram Doss, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 26.

No appeal lies from the order of a Collector passed after decree, and relating to the execution thereof.

In annulling an illegal order of a Judge passed on such an appeal, the High Court cannot, under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, look into the legality or otherwise of the Collector's order regarding the sale of an estate for arrears of rent, when the judgment-debtor has not preferred his appeal in the first instance to the Commissioner of Revenue. Sirdar Gobh Singh v. Ram Buddun Singh, 4 W. R., Act X R., 28.

Where a Judge without jurisdiction heard an appeal from the order of a Deputy Collector in a suit for rent below Rs. 100, the High Court in special appeal set aside the order of the Judge, and under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, transferred the case to the Collector for the purpose of hearing the appeal. Kristoinder Roy Chowdhry v. Roopnee Beebe and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 56.

Where a respondent in a Collector's Court applied in special appeal to the High Court to exercise the general powers of supervision vested in it by Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, and Section 15 of 24 and 25 Vict., Cap. 104, to set aside the Collector's proceedings as without jurisdiction, it was held that as he had allowed the appeal to be heard without objection, he was not entitled to the relief sought. Drobo Moyee Dabee v. Bipin Mundul, 10 W. R., 6.

A Civil Court has no power, under Section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, to reverse a sale for arrears under Act X of 1859 on account of irregularity or damage, without the aggrieved party having first appealed to the Commissioner of Revenue. Act XXIII of 1861 gives no power to the High Court to consider the legality or otherwise of the Collector's order without such appeal. Sudder Doyer Singh v. Rambudden Singh, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 70.

Where application was made for leave to withdraw a suit, with leave to bring a fresh one, it being contended that the fact of a notarial protest on inland bills, and of their being in the hands of the holder without signature, was proof of dishonour; and further, that defendant being a Hindu, there was no necessity for notice of dishonour,—the Appellate Court, reversing the decision of the Court below, granted the application under the power given by Section 37, Act XXIII of 1861. The Bombay City Bank, Limited, v. Moonjree Hurridros, Bourke's Rep., A. C., 99.

The word "powers" is not synonymous with, and does not comprehend, "jurisdiction." Kalikrishna Chandra v. Harikar Chuckelbury, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 155.

Section 38, Act XXIII of 1861, was not intended to make the procedure and the powers of the Court which may be applicable in suits before decree applicable to proceedings in suits after decree, but to provide a procedure as nearly resembling Act VIII of 1859 as possible for other cases not being suits. Jadu Mony Dosset, petitioner, 11 W. R., 494.

After property, the subject of litigation, has been given over in execution of a decree to the plaintiff, it is not within the scope of Section 36 of Act XXIII of 1861, to exact security from the plaintiff for the restitution of such property in the event of a successful appeal. Mansukhrâm Purshetam et al. v. Jawaredshu, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 122.

Under Section 37, Act XXIII of 1861, the High Court, upon appeal from a Judge sitting in the exercise of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the Court, has power, before pronouncing final judgment in appeal, to permit the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. Gregory v. Dooley Chund Kunday Mull, 14 S. W. R., A. C., 17.

1.—THE PRIVY COUNCIL AND ITS PRACTICE.

In the examination of such questions as whether, as alleged, the consent of one of the parties to an arbitration was obtained by threats, the Privy Council will look to the broad principles of justice and equity, and discourage mere technical objections, and the invention of new grounds of dispute which were not even mentioned at the commencement of the suit. Ranee Purvatha Vurdhay Nauchiar v. Jayavera Ramakomara Ettyapa Naicker, 4 W. R., P. C., 31.

The Privy Council in cases depending upon facts which have received the concurrence of two Courts in India, will not set aside the last judgment, unless it can see very clearly that that judgment was wrong. Petamber Manikjee v. Moterdchund Manikjee, 5 W. R., P. C., 53; Khokshedee Manikjee v. Mehewanjee Khokshedee, 5 W. R., P. C., 57; Raja Row Vencata Niladry Row v. Ainoogooity Sootthah, 5 W. R., P. C., 79.

It is not the habit of the Privy Council, unless in very extraordinary cases, to advise the reversal of a decision of the Courts of India merely on the effect of evidence, or the credit due to witnesses. Naraganty Luchmedovamah v. Vengama Naidoo, 1 W. R., P. C., 30.

It is not the practice of the Privy Council to disturb the finding of the Court below upon mere issues of fact, unless it is clearly satisfied that there has been some miscarriage either in the reception or in the appreciation of evidence. In cases that turn upon the credibility of the testimony given, it is disposed to defer to the judgment of those who, with the advantage of local experience, have had the means of seeing witnesses under examination and of inspecting the original documents. Richardson and others v. The Government, 1 W. R., P. C., 47; Cheel Ram v. Chowdhry Nowbut Ram, 5 W. R., P. C., 3.

The Privy Council objected to disturb or vary decrees properly made by the Zillah and Sudder Courts for the mere purpose of guarding against the possible error of some other tribunal in some future suit. Annundmoyee Chowdrain v. Shib Chunder Ray, 2 W. R., P. C., 19.

When the Privy Council remits a case with directions that the Zillah Court may arrive at certain results by certain enquiries, the objects and reasons of those enquiries, as set forth in the judgment of the Privy Council, are to be noted of the official record, and may be forwarded to the Zillah Court with the decree of the Privy Council. Goluck Chunder Dutt v. Mohun Lall Sookul, 5 W. R., 271.

Where there is a manifest discordance between a decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council and the Common Law Courts at Westminster, the decision of the Judicial Committee is entitled to the greater weight. Per Holloway, J. DeSousa v. Cotes, 3 Mad. Rep., O. A. J., 384.

Where the Court of Appeal in India concurs in the finding of the Court of first instance on a question of fact, the Privy Council will not disturb that finding, unless satisfied, beyond all reasonable question, that there was some miscarriage in respect of the principle on which the decision rested, of a presumption to which too much weight was given, or of something as to which the Judicial Committee could see there was a principle involved which ought to be set right for the guidance of the Court in other cases. Gobhandunturi Deb v. Jagadamboo Deb, 6 B. L. R., 268; 15 S. W. R., P. C., 5.

An infant appellant, in an appeal pending in the Privy Council, having come of age, and having petitioned the High Court in India to be allowed to withdraw from the suit,—Held, that it was competent to the respondent in England to have the appeal dismissed for want of prosecution, although the guardian had given security for the costs and paid the expenses of the appeal, and although the (former) infant was not served with notice of the motion, the Council being satisfied that he had in the High Court petitioned for leave to withdraw. Rani Bistuprya Patmadaye v. Basudeb Dhall, 6 B. L. R., 190; 15 S. W. R., P. C., 19.

When the Privy Council declares an appellant entitled to real property, of which he was out of possession, and directs the High Court to make the enquiry necessary to ascertain what is comprised therein, and to proceed in the suit as upon the result of such enquiry may appear to be just, the High Court on being applied to for execution ought, besides giving possession, to ascertain and award mesne profits up to the date of giving possession.
An appeal will lie as of right from the order of a single Judge of the High Court as to execution of a decree of the Privy Council where the property is over Rs. 10,000. Rajah Lilianand Singh v. Maharaja Luckimbur Singh Bahadur, 5 B. L. R., 605; 14 S. W. R., P. C., 23.

The practice of the Privy Council has been never to favour objections merely of form. The Mohkuddin of Mouza Kunkundady v. The Enamdar Brahmins of Mouza Soorpat, 7 W. R., P. C., 8.

Considering the advantages which the Judges in India generally possess of forming a correct opinion of the probability of a transaction and in some cases of the credit due to the witnesses, the fact that the Courts below have decided against the validity of an instrument affords a strong presumption of the correctness of their decisions, but does not and ought not to relieve the Privy Council, as the Court of last resort, from the duty of examining the whole evidence, and forming for itself an opinion upon the whole case. Modhososodun Sundial v. Sorup Chunder Sircar Chowdhry, 7 W. R., P. C., 73.

In reviewing proceedings of the Courts in India where the Hindu and Mahomedan laws are the rule, and where the forms of pleadings are wholly different from those in use in Courts where the law of England prevails, the Privy Council will look to the essential justice of the case, not considering whether matters of form have been strictly attended to. Ghridhakree Singh v. Koolahal Singh and others, 6 W. R., P. C., 1.

In a suit by A. for possession of property which belonged to her uncle B., the defendants C. and D. each alleged herself to be the wife of B., and each said that the other was his concubine. C. also set up a will in her favour by B. C. admitted that she had once B.'s concubine, but alleged that she had been subsequently married to B.

The evidence was conflicting, and the Courts below pronounced against both the marriages and also against the will. C. alone appealed to the Privy Council, who held that lapse of time and propriety of conduct, and the enjoyment of confidence, with powers of management reposed in her, are not sufficient to raise the presumption that A. was a lawful wife; and there was wanting in this case that clear indication of error in the finding which was necessary to take the case out of the rule laid down by the Privy Council, in the case cited, that the Judicial Committee would not interfere with the decision of the Courts in India, when they have concurred in opinion, merely on the effect of evidence, or the credit due to witnesses. Mussamat Farintool Butool v. Mussamat Hossein Begum, 10 W. R., P. C., 10.

The decree-holder (respondent to England) was required immediately to elect between furnishing security and drawing the sum deposited by the appellant on account of wasilat and costs, and (upon her failure to do so) allowing the appellant to obtain a refund of the deposit upon waiving the like security. Juggo Lall Oopadyu v. Jankee Bibee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 521.

Where the decision of the first Court upon a question of fact has been affirmed on appeal, the Privy Council will not reverse such finding on a mere balance of testimony: there must be so strong a preponderance of testimony that they can confidently pronounce it to be wrong. Rani Sarasundari Debi v. Kumar Paresnarayan Roy, 8 B. L. R., 113; and 16 S. W. R., P. C., 9.

In this appeal the Privy Council, in confirming the decree of the High Court, were doubtful as to whether the respondents to England were, on the face of the plaint, entitled by Mahomedan law to the full amount claimed, and left the matter to be determined by the High Court in execution. It appearing that the doubt raised in the Privy Council was owing to the word shohodur in the plaint being wrongly translated "sons" instead of "uterine brothers," the High Court allowed the respondents to take out execution for the whole amount. Meer Masufer Hossein Chowdry v. Memonaissa Kha- toon, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 340.

With reference to the laxity prevailing in the Indian Courts in admitting documents, the Privy Council remarked that, whilst it might not be desirable in all cases to apply strict and technical rules to the admissibility of evidence in the Courts in India, the substantial principles on which the authenticity and value of all evidence rest should be observed. Ramalakshmi Ammal v. Siranantha Perumal Sethurayer, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 553.

The Privy Council will never interfere with the finding of an Indian Court upon a question of boundary, unless they are clearly satisfied that there has been some plain miscarriage in the conduct or decision of the case upon which they can put their hands, and make it the ground for an order reversing or varying the decree. Ram Gopal Roy v. Gordon, Stuart & Co., 17 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

Quere,—Whether the so-called "decrees of the Privy Council" are not subject to any law of limitation; or whether they are not merely orders of Her Majesty in Council made on the recommendation of a Committee of the Privy Council, and do no more than prescribe what shall be the final decree in the cause, leaving them to be executed by the ordinary process of the Courts in India. The presentation of a petition of appeal to England, which is a proceeding taken to destroy the decree appealed from, cannot of itself be treated as a proceeding to keep it in force; though, if the appeal to England be allowed, the respondent to it supporting the decree appealed from is entitled to sue out execution at any time within three years after the final dismissal of the appeal. Kristo Kinkur Ghose Roy v. Burroda Kanti Sing Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 292.

Suit to set aside a sale of ancestral property by a minor's father and guardian as made without necessity and for the father's profligate expenditure, and without enquiry by the purchasers as to whether it was for the infant's benefit. Defendants alleged that the sale was made under pressure of a foreclosure suit on account of a demand under a former mortgage for an ancestral debt. Plaintiff having failed to establish his case, sought to go back and open the consideration for the mortgage made so long as twenty years ago; but the Privy Council (agreeing with the High Court) declined to allow plaintiff to so do, observing that whereas in this case the question of fact has been tried upon evidence fairly warranting the conclusion to which the High Court has come, and there has been no adverse findings of facts, their Lordships will require a strong case to be made out before they will recommend Her Majesty to reverse such a decision. Their Lordships referred to the extent to which the record in this case had been swelled with a quantity of documents, and expressed a hope that some means might be taken in India to prevent such a waste of the suitor's money. Mussumat Hameeda alias Beboo Khasso v. Mussumat Amatool Mehdoo Begum, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 106.

Although it is open to parties before the Privy Council to allege that a mistake has been made in point of law which they did not raise in the Court below, they must clearly make it appear before the Privy Council that the mistake was really made by the Judge below, and that the decision is in fact attributable to such mistake. Phulwan Singh v. Mohessur Baksh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 5.

The Privy Council will not interfere in a case where objections are taken to matters of practice, unless they see very clearly that justice has not been done. Mouville Abdool Ali v. Mozuffer Hossein Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 22.

Order in Council as to the employment of agents before Privy Council. 13 S. W. R., P. C., 45.

There are concurrent decisions on a question of fact, the Judicial Committee to appeal (especially in a question of fact as to boundaries) reverse the decision unless there was no evidence, or there has been in the conduct of the trial, or in the mode in which evidence was adduced, or in the course of deciding the case, a clear departure from the ordinary principles which regulate judicial proceedings. Maharaj Kumar Baboo Ganeshwar Singh v. Durga Dutt, 7 B. L. R., 651, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 37.

The manager of the Court of Wards effected a compromise with claimants on the estate; a decree was passed on the basis of that compromise, but before the parties wished the decree to be made; in the decree, leave was reserved to apply for a review, if the compromise was not sanctioned by the Commissioner, and was prejudicial to the parties. The compromise was sanctioned by the Commissioner, but afterwards the manager found that he had been deceived by his servants, and that the claim had been allowed erroneously. Held, that the Court having granted a review, and the claim being proved to be exaggerated, a decree was properly given for the true amount. Where both the lower Courts had agreed as to the facts, the Privy Council refused to examine the evidence, the controversy being merely as to the weight to be attributed to it. Lalji Sakee v. The Collector of Tirhout, 6 B. L. R., 648, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 23.

2.—APPEALS TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

A suit for the recovery of possession of land was valued at a sum less than Rs. 10,000, being the value of the land; but the plaintiff claimed in the suit, in addition to the land, wasilat, which, when added to the value of the land, amounted to more than Rs. 10,000. Held that an appeal lay to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Goooroo-doss Roy v. Ghomal Mouolah, Marsh, 24.

Until a petition of appeal to the Privy Council presented to the High Court has been admitted and allowed, a party has no right of appeal to the Privy Council. If the petition is allowed to remain on the file of the Court, and is not prosecuted within a reasonable time, the Court has power to order its removal from the file. Goburdhan Bur-nan v. Srimati Mano Bibi, 5 B. L. R., 76; 14 S. W. R., A. O., 34.

Special leave to appeal granted, notwithstanding that no application had been made for such leave to the Court below, upon the allegation that, although the amount decreed was much under the appealable value, the original demand being necessarily limited by the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was originally instituted, yet the subject-matter at issue exceeded in value the appealable amount. Mutsawsumy Jagaavera Yettapa Naiker v. Vencat-svara Yettia, Ind. Jur., N. S., 205.

A suit was instituted in a Zillah Court in Bengal by the respondent against the appellant, involving questions both of law and fact, and on the 15th of November, 1866, a decree was made on the points of law in the appellant's favour. The respondent appealed to the High Court of Judicature, which Court, on the 14th of January, 1864, reversed the decree of the Zillah Court, and remitted the suit to that Court for the trial of the issues of fact. In June, 1865, the appellant petitioned the High Court for leave to appeal, and set prayed that, pending the appeal, all further proceedings in the suit might be stayed. The High Court granted leave to appeal, but made an order refusing to stay the proceedings; and from this order there was no appeal. The appellant then petitioned the Judicial Committee to stay all further proceedings in India, pending the appeal. Held (without deciding the question as to an appeal from the order of the High Court) that it is essential to the establishment of such an application, first, that an irreparable injury will result to a party applying unless the delay be granted; secondly, that a party has come promptly to make the application: and their Lordships dismissed the petition with costs. Na'wab Sidhee Nuzur Aly Khan v. Ojoodlyaram Khan, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 185.

A Court of Appeal cannot refer to the evidence in another case, or act upon the impression made by it in the Court below.

The rule of the Privy Council not to disturb a judgment of a Court in India upon a question of fact, unless it is clear from the probabilities of the case that the judgment is wrong, however necessary as regards a Court of Appeal far removed from India, would hardly be extended as one equally necessary and applicable with the same strictness to a Court of Appeal in India. Saroda Soondery v. Tincovur Nundy, 1 Hyde's Rep., 223.

An appeal to the Privy Council involving a question or demand respecting property which on the whole is of the value of more than Rs. 10,000, is admissible, although the portion of the property to which the appeal relates is below that value. Onoorooch Chunder Mookerjee v. Perta Chunder Paul and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 4.

When an appeal to the Privy Council has been admitted, all that the High Court can do is to proceed, under Section 4, Regulation XVI of 1797, to stay the execution of the decree, on the appellant giving security for the due performance of the decree of the Privy Council. But the Court cannot continue an attachment of money made under Regulation II of 1806 during the pendency of the suit in the Zillah Court, after the decree of the Zillah Court has been reversed by the High Court on appeal. Petition of Rammath Chowdhray and Rughoobur Dutty Chow-dhray, 6 W. R., Mis., 17.
An appeal to the Privy Council being once admitted, whether properly or erroneously, the High Court has no further jurisdiction to review its order and declare the appeal rejected. Amerunnissa Begum and others v. Ranee Inderjeet Koouwar, 6 W. R., P. C., 97.

The High Court cannot, by reason merely of a different view of the law subsequently taken by a Full Bench, recall an order admitting an appeal to the Privy Council. Woomatara Deba, petitioner, 6 W. R., Mis., 120.

The High Court has no authority to restore appeals to her Majesty in Council, dismissed or struck off the file for default in making deposit. Petition of Sreekunt Roy, 7 W. R., 47.

Where it was impossible to say whether certain account-books and papers were material or relevant, or even were part of the evidence in the case, the High Court declined to put the appellant in an appeal to England to the expense of translating and transcribing them, but gave the respondent the option of translating them at his own expense, with a view to their being sent to England as an appendix to the record, leaving it to the Privy Council, in the event of the respondent being successful, to make any order they pleased as to the costs of translation. Petition of Sreehunt Roy, 7 W. R., 47.

Razeenamas and safeenamas, as well as security bonds, connected with appeals to India, need not be in English. Meer Mahomed Tuke Chowdhry v. Luchmeput Singh Dogur and others, 7 W. R., 291.

The High Court has no authority to receive a petition of appeal to England tendered without the usual security bond duly registered, as provided by the 8th Rule of the 7th December, 1858. Rajah SAkeh Persaud Sein v. Rajah Rajendra Kishore, 7 W. R., 338.

An order rejecting an application to review a judgment passed on appeal is not an order made on appeal, from which an appeal lies to the Privy Council, under Section 39 of the Charter of the High Court. Sowdamee Dossee v. Maharajah Dheraj Mahatab Chand Bakadoor, 6 W. R., Mis., 102.

Quere,—Whether the leave given by the Courts in India to a party to sue in formâ pauperis would enable him to prosecute the appeal to the Privy Council without obtaining the leave of the Privy Council. Mumin Ram Awasty v. Sheo Churn Awasty, 7 W. R., P. C., 29.

An application to appeal to the Privy Council in formâ pauperis may be made to the High Court on unstamped paper, and accompanied by a certificate of Counsel that there is a reasonable ground of appeal; the usual security for costs being given, and the costs of translation deposited. Jowad Ali and another, 8 W. R., P. C., 48.

An appeal from part of a decree, the whole decree is not open to the respondents. Under the peculiar circumstances of this case, however, leave was given to present a cross-appeal, and the appellants not objecting, the appeal was heard from the whole decree. Myna Boye v. Ootoram, 2 W. R., P. C., 4.

In this case, the Privy Council originally gave leave to appeal, provided satisfactory evidence were supplied by the appellants to the Registrar of the Sudder Court that the real or market value of the land in dispute exceeded Rs. 10,000. This order was subsequently discharged as obtained upon an incorrect statement of the facts, it appearing afterwards that the appellants had satisfied the Registrar that the real or market value of the land exceeded Rs. 10,000. The appeal was restored, with a general suggestion that the terms of the Bengal Stamp Regulation X of 1829 upon the subject of value should be carefully attended to. Mohnunlall Sookul v. Debedoss Duft, 2 W. R., P. C., 9.

No subsequent event or deviation of interest can affect the decision of a question as it stood at the time the decision was pronounced. To give effect to these, should justice require it, would be the office, not of an appeal, but of some supplemental proceeding. Anwadnomyee Chowdhraun v. Seebo Chunder Roy, 2 W. R., P. C., 19.

Leave to appeal to the Privy Council is to be given in cases where the petition is presented within the prescribed period, and the value of the matter in dispute in the appeal amounts to Rs. 10,000, including interest up to the decree.

The grant of leave to appeal in cases where the specified amount of Rs. 10,000 can only be reached by the addition of interest subsequent to the decree, is in the discretion of the Privy Council.

The security in India was held to have gone by the dismissal of the appeal for default of prosecution. Ranee Birjobuttee v. Pertab Singh, Government, and others, 3 W. R., P. C., 36.

There is no law which requires a suitor to appeal from interlocutory orders under penalty of forfeiting for ever the benefit of the consideration of the Appellate Court. The Privy Council have, in many cases, corrected erroneous interlocutory orders on the appeal of the whole cause coming before them.

The security in India was held to have gone by the dismissal of the appeal for default of prosecution. Ranee Birjobuttee v. Pertab Singh, Government, and others, 3 W. R., P. C., 36.

Application for restoration of appeal acceded to in consideration of the interests of infants being involved in the case, and of the state of that part of India when the matter arose in and after 1857, on the condition of deposit of further security, and of the prosecution of the appeal within a certain time.

A. J. Jones v. Ameerunnissa Begum, 5 W. R., P. C., 47.

When a discretion is vested in a Court as to costs, the Privy Council will not allow any appeal against the exercise of that discretion, because no appeal lies against a mere decree as to costs. Mussamut Kemeem Baee v. Luchnum Doss Nairain Doss, 5 W. R., P. C., 59.

An appeal lies to the Privy Council, under Section 39 of the Charter of the High Court, from an order rejecting an application for a review of judgment. The petition of appeal must be presented within six months from the date of the said order. Nazur Ali Khan v. Rajah Oojodyrham Khan, 1 W. R., Mis., 13.

The plaintiff obtained a decree for possession of a zamindary, which was reversed on appeal by the High Court. The plaintiff then appealed to the Privy Council. Under such circumstances, the High Court has no power under Section 4, Regulation XVI of 1797, to order security to be taken from the defendant (respondent) in the appeal to the Privy Council for the due performance of such orders as the Privy Council may pass in the appeal, or to suspend the decree reversing the decision of the first Court. Nilkissen Thakoor v. Beerschmer Thakoor Gossain, 2 W. R., Mis., 23.

The High Court has no power to consolidate appeals to the Privy Council or to admit appeals to the Privy Council in cases in which the time for filing an appeal has expired: such consolidation or admission cannot be made without the permission of the Privy Council. Pram Nath Roy Chowdry v. Kasheenath Chowdry, 2 W. R., Mis., 26.

The pendency of an appeal to the Privy Council does not put the party who, subject to that appeal, is the owner of an estate, under a legal disability to bring a suit in that character against third parties. Rajah Sukheb Perkhdan Sen v. Budoo Singh, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 11; 12 W. R., P. C., 6.

No provision by Statute or Charter being made for appeal to Her Majesty in Council from judgments of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oude, created on the annexation of that kingdom in the year 1858, the Judicial Committee, to prevent the denial of justice, admitted an appeal under Statute 3 and 4, Will. IV., Cap. 41. Salik Ram v. Anim Ali Beg, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 117.

There were four respondents in an appeal to the Privy Council. At the hearing, the appeal was allowed ex parte against all the respondents. One respondent afterwards petitioned for a re-hearing, on the ground that neither he nor his agents had notice that the appeal had been entered or fixed for hearing until after it had been decided.

On enquiry, it appeared that the petitioner had inaccurately described the suit to his agents as an appeal against himself only, without mentioning the names of the other respondents; and the agents, on being told at the Privy Council office that no appeal so entitled was pending, had taken no further steps.

Held that there had been omission and neglect on the petitioner's part and on the part of his agents such as to prevent the Judicial Committee from recommending a re-hearing of the case. Rani Swar-

Petition for leave to appeal against a conviction and sentence of the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut of Bengal, on the ground of alleged irregularities in the proceedings causing great hardship and injustice. Held that, assuming that the prerogative of the Crown extended to the granting of leave to appeal in such a case, and was not curtailed by the operation of the Indian Act XXV of 1861, and that this was prind-facie a cause of great grievance, yet the consequences of allowing appeals in criminal cases would be such as to justify their Lordships in advising Her Majesty in the exercise of her discretion to refuse to grant the prayer of the petition. Joykissen Mookjee v. Queen, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 61.

The High Court has no power to allow an appeal to Her Majesty in Council when the petition is not presented within six months from the date of the decree complained of.

When the six months expired during the Durga Pooja vacation, and the petition of appeal was presented on the first day the Court resumed its sitting,—Held that the petition was too late, and leave could not be given to appeal. Tamvaco v. Skinner, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 39.

An order of the High Court rejecting an application for a review of judgment, is a final order from which an appeal lies to the Privy Council under Section 39 of the Court's Charter; the petition of appeal being presented within six months from the date of the said order. Nuseer Ali Khan v. Rajah Oojodyrham Khan, 1 W. R., Mis., 13.

In the case of a petition of appeal to the Privy Council being filed, due diligence must be shown in transmitting the appeal to the Privy Council, otherwise, on the application of the respondent, the High Court has the power to strike the petition off the file. Goberdhan Barmono v. Srimati Munun Bibi, 3 B. L. R., 126.

Judges should not transmit to the High Court documents used before them to make out the title of properties offering immoveable property as security in Privy Council cases; but should, in reporting upon the securities, state particulars of the documents upon which the title of the surety appears to be made out. Ameerunnissi Khaloon, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 94.

In a case where the period within which applications for leave to appeal to England expired during the Dusserah vacation, and the application was presented on the first day of the Court sitting after the vacation, when, though notice was served under the rules—no cause being shown to the contrary—the appeal was admitted and the applicant allowed to incur large costs for translation and transcription, and the record was nearly ready for transmission,—Held that the plea of limitation could not at this stage be heard in bar to the admission of the appeal, and that the High Court was bound to allow it to go on subject to the orders of the Privy Council. Rajah Roy Kishen Singh v. Huru Soondooroy Dassee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 255.

cients to meet the mesne profits which are to go to his hands from the date of his obtaining possession to the probable date of the eventual execution of the decree of the Privy Council, which period is generally taken to be three years. Ameeoonissa Khatoon v. A. D. Durnne, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 361.

In calculating the period of six months allowed for appealing to the Privy Council, the date on which the decree was pronounced or dated should be excluded. Re Rama Norgu Narain, 13 S. W. R., P. C., 17.

An appeal lies directly to the Privy Council from the decree of a Division Bench of the High Court on an appeal from the Mofussil, although the Judges differed, and upon the points of difference a further appeal to the High Court is given under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent. In the matter of the petition of the Court of Wards on behalf of the Raja of Durbang, 7 B. L. R., 730, and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 191.

3.—THE HIGH COURTS AND THEIR JURISDICTION.

Held that the High Court can interfere, under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, with the order of the Appellate Court, as well as of the Court of first instance, in cases of appeal from the Mofussil, when the orders of both the Courts appear to be without jurisdiction. Sheo Doyal Singh v. Sheikh Mahomed Kamil, 3 Agra Rep., Mis., 2.

If, in the course of hearing a suit, a Civil Court commits a party to the suit for trial on a charge of perjury or forgery, or directs that the case be made over to a Magistrate for investigation of such a charge, the High Court, in the exercise, either of civil or criminal jurisdiction, cannot, in the event of a regular or special appeal being lodged against the decision of the lower Court, interfere to stay the criminal proceedings, until the appeal shall have been heard and determined. Ram Pershad Hazaree v. Soomuthra Dabe, 5 W. R., Mis., 24.

The High Court cannot interfere with the order of a lower Court, setting aside a sale of moveable property in execution of a decree, even though the lower Court has thereby acted wholly without jurisdiction, and done injury to a bond-fide purchaser. J. DaCosta v. M. M. Hall, 5 W. R., Mis., 25.

The High Court can, on cause shown, require security from a decree-holder who has been put in possession in execution of a decree, even though the lower Court has thereby acted wholly without jurisdiction, and done injury to a bond-fide purchaser.

The Court will order its seal to be impressed on any warrant made by the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, even if not actually signed by him. Ind Jur., N. S., 106.

An order rejecting a review of judgment is not an "order made on appeal" within the meaning of Clause 39 of the Letters Patent of the High Court. In cases of appeal made under Clause 42 of the Letters Patent, the Court ought not, in transmitting the proceedings connected therewith, also to send such proceedings as applications for review of the judgment of the High Court and the orders of the Court thereupon. Raja Syed Enayat Hussein v. Rezak Mohammed Jehan, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 1; S. C., 10 W. R., F. B., 1.

Where Full Bench ruling is brought to the notice of a Judge re-trying a case on remand, he is bound, whether the ruling has been published or not, either to ask the pleader to produce the decision relied on, or to take other means for satisfying himself as to the ruling of the High Court, so as to apply the correct law to the case. Tameezooddee Khoron v. Mohema Chunder Mookerjee and others 11 W. R., 227.

Under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent, the High Court has jurisdiction to entertain suits for land whether the land is situated wholly or in part within the local limits of its original ordinary jurisdiction, leave of the Court having been obtained in the latter case. Sen Jaghadamba Dasi v. So Padmanami Mud, 6 B. L. R., 686.

The High Court has jurisdiction to hear appeal in testamentary cases. Saroadosondey Dasse v. Tincoury Nundy, 1 Hyde's Rep., 70.

The High Court cannot exercise jurisdiction in respect to land which is situate out of its local limits, even though it be in possession of the Re ceiver. Denonath Sreemany v. Hoeg, 1 Hyde Rep., 141.

The High Court, under Letters Patent, 1861, Section 12, has jurisdiction in all cases where the amount claimed is over Rs. 100, whatever be its nature or situs. Sikur Chund v. Sooriumul 1 Hyde's Rep., 272.

A collision had taken place at sea in the Bay of Bengal off Juggernaut Pagoda, between the ship Garland and the ship Dragoon, both foreign vessels, which afterwards came within the jurisdiction of the Court. Held that the High Court at Calcutta had jurisdiction to try an action in respect of such collision. Garland v. Dragoon, Hyde's Rep., 275.

Although the High Court, in the original jurisdiction, has no jurisdiction over land or other immovable property situate beyond the local limits of Calcutta, and can make no adjudication of the right of any party in such land, yet where a party is actually subject to the jurisdiction, the Court has power to declare whether or not such party holds such land subject to a trust.

When an objection to a jurisdiction is first taken at a late stage of the suit, instead of being brought forward as it should be at the first stage of the suit, when the plaint is presented for admission, the proper course is, even if the jurisdiction be doubtful, to proceed to determine the suit. Baggum v. Mous Gaster, 1 Hyde's Rep., 264.

The High Court previously to the issue of the order in Council No. 4366, dated 22nd November 1865, had jurisdiction in cases in which the cause of action arose in a district in which British subjects were formerly subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Indian Carrying Co. Limite v. McCarthay, Cor. Rep., 116.

The Court will, at the hearing of a suit, order foreclosure of mortgaged property situate beyond the limit of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction under the powers conferred on it by Section 12, Act VIII of 1859. Khetiro Mohun Doss v. S. K. Chandra Money Dabee, Cor. Rep., 125.

Where part of the property was situated within, and part out of the jurisdiction of the Court,—Held that the Court had jurisdiction to try the suit according to the true construction of Section 12 of the Charter 1865 in reference to the whole of the property. Prosono Moyi Dasi v. Kadumbeni Dasi, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 85.

Judges of the High Court do not try cases in which they have any personal interest. Calcutta Steam Tug Co. v. Hadee Hossein Ibrahim Bin Jotur, Bourke’s Rep., O. C., 273.

The High Court, in the exercise of its civil jurisdiction, has not the power to execute its own decree, or serve its own process, out of the local limits of such jurisdiction. Sagore Dutta v. Ram Chunder Mitter, 1 Hyde’s Rep., O. C., 136.

The High Court has no authority to re-admit an appeal to the Privy Council which has once been dismissed for default. Mussamut Bolakan, petitioner, 6 W. R., Mis, 121.

The general powers of the High Court do not enable it to hear an appeal from an order of a Zillah Judge refusing to rectify a decree. Mahomed Buxkeroollah v. Ramkant Chowdry, 9 W. R., 394.

The High Court at Calcutta has no jurisdiction over the Court of the Sessions Judge at Allahabad, such Court not being subject to the superintendence of the High Court under the 13th Section of the Charter. Great Eastern Hotel Company Limited v. The Secretary of State for India, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 219.

No appeal lies from an order of a Judge proceeding under Act XIX of 1841.

The fact that the Judge may have rejected evidence which ought to have been received and considered does not warrant the High Court in interfering to set aside an order of such Judge. Venkatachella Chetti and others v. Parvatamal, 2 Mad. Rep., 418.

Of three suits by different parties against the same defendant, the appeal lay in one to the High Court, and in the other two to the Judge. The Judge postponed the two cases before him until the decision of the High Court, when, taking it as a precedent, he decided it accordingly in favour of the defendant. Held that the decision of the one case, though not strictly binding on the two other plaintiffs, was nevertheless a good guide to enable the Judge to arrive at a correct finding on the facts. C. Gregory v. Hurrey Kishore Roy, 3 W. R., 2.

The High Court can raise and adjudicate upon certain points in special appeal, when they are apparent on the face of the pleadings, even though the parties to the suit are silent. Molk Eenat Hossein v. Mussamut Kureemoonissa, 3 W. R., 40.

The High Court cannot interfere to require security from a party who has formally been put in possession of the property in dispute in execution of a decree, where execution was taken out before an appeal to the Privy Council was preferred and admitted. Huro Soonduree Debi v. J. Stevenson, 5 W. R., Mis, 13.

The High Court cannot express any judicial opinion upon a question submitted to it when it does not arise in the course of a trial of a suit. Suroop Chunder Patre v. Jadoo Moytee, 5 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 8.

Only questions which arise in the trial of a suit, and not such as arise on applications for execution of decree, can be referred, under Section 22, Act XI of 1865, for the opinion of the High Court. Annundchunder Mozoonomar v. Goburdhun Khan, 5 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 19.

Case in which the High Court formed an independent opinion upon the evidence, and came to an opposite conclusion to that of the Court below, the Judge who decided the case not having heard the witnesses. Gendernarain Ghose v. Bajpayee Rajah, 6 W. R., 25.

The High Court may, on sufficient cause being shown, make an order upon motion to compel a lower Court to make absolute a sale which had been made by that Court, but which the Court had not confirmed and thought it not expedient to confirm. Petition of Oodint Zuman, 8 W. R., 109.

A certificated purchaser of property sold in execution of a decree, applied to the Judge for an order of confirmation of sale and was refused. Held that the High Court had no power to interfere with a Judge’s decision, even though erroneous on a point of law, upon a matter entirely within his jurisdiction, and from which there is no appeal. Re petition of Doorga Churn Sircar, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 165.

The High Court has jurisdiction to direct a lower Court in what manner its own (the High Court’s) decree or order shall be carried into effect by that Court, and to see that the lower Court does not pervert the order or do that which was not intended to be done, even when such order constitutes a part of the order in execution of a decree which the lower Court ought to have passed. Kalee Doss Sandyal v. Roy Luchmeeput Doogur, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 145.

Construction,—The judgment of the Division Bench, reported in 10 Weekly Reporter, page 38 (Shoudamine Dassee v. Ram Chand Baidoo) was not intended to lay down that the High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from a lower Court of regular appeal in the event of that Court’s decision being passed without jurisdiction. Dibakur Soondur Roy, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 8.

The High Court cannot interfere under Section 15 of the High Courts’ Act, where the lower Court has not acted without jurisdiction, or where there is a remedy by a regular suit. Khorshed Ali v. Chowdry Wahid Aty, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 170.

A sued B., a ryot, for arrears of rent. C. was added as a plaintiff under Section 77, Act X of 1859. The Collector in appeal refused to try C.’s claim under Section 77, because she had not produced her title-deed. Held, that the refusal to try C.’s claim by the Collector was a denial of jurisdiction on his part, and the High Court sent back the case to the Collector for trial of C.’s claim. In the matter of the petition of Srimati Nassir Jan, 7 B. L. R., 145, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 418.

A obtained a decree against B. in her representative character for a debt contracted by her mother. The decree declared that execution should be taken out against the property of the mother, and not against any part of her (the mother's deceased husband's) estate. In execution, A. attached and put up to sale certain property as belonging to the mother. B. objected to the sale, alleging that the property was not her mother's, but was inherited by her from her father. The Moonsiff disallowed her objection on the ground that only the right, title, and interest of the defendant's mother was put up for sale. On appeal, the judge set aside the Moonsiff's order. Held, that for the purposes of her objection, B. was a third party unconnected with the decree, and that her objection should have been disposed of under Section 240 of Act VII of 1859. Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 did not apply. There being, therefore, no appeal, the Zillah Judge's order was set aside as passed without jurisdiction, and the Moonsiff's order was also set aside as not having been passed under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, under which section the objection had been preferred.

The plaintiff brought a suit, which was cognizable by a Small Cause Court in a Moonsiff's Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. He obtained a decree, but the decree was reversed on appeal. On special appeal, the Court set aside the decrees of both the lower Courts as having been passed without jurisdiction.

The influence of his habits, calling, and the nature of his establishment, may be considered in deciding whether a defendant is resident within the jurisdiction. Emrit Lall v. Kidd, Cor. Rep., 46; 2 Hyde's Rep., 67.

A trader in the mofussil habitually sent grain to Madras for sale by a general agent for the sale of goods sent to him by different persons. On some occasions the trader himself accompanied the loaded bandies. Since his death the first defendant, his widow, carried on his business. The grain so sent for sale was never stored, but remained in the bandies until sold by the agent, who acted himself as broker, the purchasers paying his brokerage commission, and the consignors of the grain paying nothing. Held that the first defendant did not "carry on business" within the jurisdiction of the High Court of Madras within the meaning of Section 12 of the Letters Patent. Chimamal v. Tulukna Thammamal, 3 Mad. Rep., O. C., 146.

A suit for foreclosure of land out of the jurisdiction cannot be brought in the High Court at Calcutta on the ground that the defendant is living in Calcutta. In such cases the Court will return the plaint. Bibee Jauan v. Meerza Mahammad Hade, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 40.

Where A. obtained a decree in the late Supreme Court, and subsequently resided out of the local limits, and then executed a compromise in an action brought by B. to prevent A. from proceeding upon the decree of the Supreme Court,—Held that the whole cause of action did not arise within the local limits provided by the Letters Patent, and that the Court had no jurisdiction. Feda Hosein v. Syedownissa, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 80.

M., residing at Meerut, sued B., in respect of a cause of action which did not arise in Calcutta. It appeared that B. usually resided at Mussoorie from March to October, but attended races at Meerut, Calcutta, and elsewhere, at which races he ran horses, but not for gain. B. had no pursuit or occupation, other than that afforded by his horses. He had come to Calcutta to attend a race meeting, and had been living in Calcutta for some days previous to and on the day the plaint was filed. The Court decided that he was amenable to its jurisdiction. Held that such racing transactions do not constitute a "carrying on business" or "personally working for gain" within the meaning of Section 12 of the High Court Charter.
That a temporary residence in Calcutta, for purposes of pleasure, with intention of remaining there a month, without having at the time a residence out of the jurisdiction, is a sufficient dwelling within the jurisdiction to satisfy Section 12 of the Charter. Morris v. Baumgarten, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 127; S. C., 1 Cor. Rep., 152.

S. M. D. executed an agreement in Calcutta to sell R. S. certain lands out of Calcutta. R. S. sued for specific performance and obtained a decree. Held that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain a suit upon the contract, it having been made in Calcutta. Ram Dhone Shaw v. Sreemutty Nobeenmany Dosser, Sumbhoonath Ghosh, and others; Bourke's Rep., O. C., 218.

The jurisdiction of the High Court is as extensive as the jurisdiction of the late Supreme Court. Under Section 12, the Secretary of State may be sued in such Court as may have jurisdiction in each particular cause of action. The Secretary of State may be treated as Government itself. Universal presence of Government cannot be said to give every Court concurrent jurisdiction in all cases in which Government is a party. The Secretary of State in Council cannot be said to be within the ordinary jurisdiction of this Court. The words "personally working for gain" were intended to give the Court jurisdiction over individuals only. Officers of Government are subject to jurisdiction of fumofussil Courts. Suits instituted there may give the Court jurisdiction over individualsonly. The High Court at Calcutta in its matrimonial jurisdiction, has jurisdiction only over parties actually resident within its local limits. Subbaraya Mudali and others v. The Government and Cunliffe, 1865, when the cause of action arises only partly within the local limits, the leave of the Court must be obtained before the institution of the suit. Sheik Abduol Hamed v. Promothonath Bose and another, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 218.

The words of the Secretary of State sued in such Court as may have jurisdiction in each particular cause of action. Chatterjee and others v. Chunder Kant Bhutta and others, 12 W. R., 74; Juddoooputee Chatterjee and others v. Chunder Kant Bhutta Chatterjee, 9 W. R., 309. Where there is a remedy by a regular suit, the High Court cannot exercise its extraordinary powers under Section 15 of the Charter. Jumal Ali v. Sheikh Wahed Ali, 11 W. R., 97.

5.—THEIR EXTRAORDINARY POWERS.

The High Court refused to interfere, in the exercise of its general powers of superintendence, with an order of a lower Court which, though apparently arbitrary and indiscreet, that Court was authorized by law to make. Janokee Bulbul Sein v. Dukhina Mohun Chowdhry, 7 W. R., 519.

Where, in execution of a summary decree for rent obtained under Regulation VII of 1799 in 1851 against the father of the petitioner and another, the petitioner was arrested and lodged in jail in January 1867,—Held by the majority of the Court (Norman, J., dissenting) that the High Court could not, under the general powers of superintendence vested in it by Section 15 of the High Courts' Act, or Section 16 of the Letters Patent, interfere to order the release of the petitioner. Gopal Singh v. The Court of Wards, on behalf of the Maharajah of Dhurbanghah, 7 W. R., 430.

A Civil Court is not competent to order the name of a purchaser of the rights of the plaintiff in a suit to be substituted for that of the plaintiff, or, upon the application of the party substituted, to allow the suit to be withdrawn. Such an order, if made, is made without jurisdiction, and is not an order of that description in respect of which the Legislature intended either to give or to deny the right of appeal. But the order is one which the High Court may set aside in the exercise of the superintendence vested in it by Section 15 of 24 and 25 Vict., c. 104. Juddoooputee Chatterjee and others v. Chunder Kant Bhutta Chatterjee, 9 W. R., 309.

Under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent (1862) constituting the High Court of Madras, the Government must be considered as carrying on business at the place where its members exercise all the functions of Government. Gopoo Mohun Roy v. Protap Chunder Roy and another, 11 W. R., 530.

The High Court has a power of superintendence over a Collector's Court, and can interfere to restrain a suit upon the contract, it having been made in Calcutta. Ram Dhone Shaw v. Sreemutty Nobeenmany Dosser, Sumbhoonath Ghosh, and others; Bourke's Rep., O. C., 218.

The High Court at Calcutta in its matrimonial jurisdiction, has jurisdiction only over parties actually resident within its local limits. Thompson v. Thompson, Bourke's Rep., M., J., 1.

Under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent (1862) constituting the High Court of Madras, the Government must be considered as carrying on business at the place where its members exercise all the functions of Government. "personally working for gain" were intended to give the Court jurisdiction over individuals only. Officers of Government are subject to jurisdiction of fumofussil Courts. Suits instituted there may give the Court jurisdiction over individualsonly.

5.—THEIR EXTRAORDINARY POWERS.

The High Court refused to interfere, in the exercise of its general powers of superintendence, with an order of a lower Court which, though apparently arbitrary and indiscreet, that Court was authorized by law to make. Janokee Bulbul Sein v. Dukhina Mohun Chowdhry, 7 W. R., 519.

Where, in execution of a summary decree for rent obtained under Regulation VII of 1799 in 1851 against the father of the petitioner and another, the petitioner was arrested and lodged in jail in January 1867,—Held by the majority of the Court (Norman, J., dissenting) that the High Court could not, under the general powers of superintendence vested in it by Section 15 of the High Courts' Act, or Section 16 of the Letters Patent, interfere to order the release of the petitioner. Gopal Singh v. The Court of Wards, on behalf of the Maharajah of Dhurbanghah, 7 W. R., 430.

A Civil Court is not competent to order the name of a purchaser of the rights of the plaintiff in a suit to be substituted for that of the plaintiff, or, upon the application of the party substituted, to allow the suit to be withdrawn. Such an order, if made, is made without jurisdiction, and is not an order of that description in respect of which the Legislature intended either to give or to deny the right of appeal. But the order is one which the High Court may set aside in the exercise of the superintendence vested in it by Section 15 of 24 and 25 Vict., c. 104. Juddoooputee Chatterjee and others v. Chunder Kant Bhutta Chatterjee, 9 W. R., 309.

It was not the intention of Section 15 of the Charter Act to confer any rights upon litigant parties, its whole object being to give the High Court some control over the Courts subject to its appellate jurisdiction. Quere,—Is a conflict between a Judge's order and a direction of law, ground for the High Court to exercise its powers of interference? Sreemutty Dosser v. Sreenesh Dey, 12 W. R., 74.

W. got a decree against M. in the Court of the Sudder Ameen, and, in execution, attached certain property of the judgment-debtor. J., who had a decree against the same judgment-debtor in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen, applied to the Court of the Sudder Ameen to stay its proceedings, on the ground that W.'s decree had been obtained by fraud. The Sudder Ameen refusing the application, J. appealed to the Judge, who saw no ground for the imputation of fraud. Held (by Hobhouse, J.) that the Judge's judgment was on the face of it good and in a case within his jurisdiction, and that it did not call for an exercise of the extraordinary power given to the High Court by Section 15 of the Charter. Jumal Ali v. Sheikh Wakef Ali, 11 W. R., 97.

Under Section 15 of the High Court's Act, the High Court has a power of superintendence over Collector's Courts, and can interfere to restrain a Collectors from exercising a jurisdiction which properly belongs to a Zillah Judge. Bhyrub Chunder and others v. Shama Soondee Debia and another, 6 W. R., Act X R., 68.

Where a Small Cause Court acts without jurisdiction in a suit, the High Court cannot interfere, unless the Small Cause Court has been moved to refer the case till the decision of the High Court, under Section 22, Act XI of 1865. R. R. Bell and Campbell v. Thakoor Doss Gossain, 6 W. R., Mis., 26.

The High Court cannot, where an inferior Court has jurisdiction to try a case, and has tried it, merely because there is an error apparent in the decision on the facts, alter that decision, where the law allows no appeal. Petition of Peer Lall Shahoo, 7 W. R., 130.

Section 15 of the 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 104, does not enable the High Court, by way of motion, to deal with an order made by a lower Appellate Court in cases where the latter has jurisdiction, and the law declares that its order should be final. Suddamnee Dossee v. Manick Ram Choudhry, 9 W. R., 386.

The High Court should not, in the exercise of its extraordinary powers, give an appeal in a case where the law provides none. Nor should the Court in the exercise of these powers interfere when such interference would have the effect of working an injustice. Narayan Lalibh v. Gangakrishna Balkrishna, 4 Born. Rep., A. C., 87.

The High Court has no power to interfere with the discretion of a Deputy Collector refusing to add another person to the record, except it sees that the refusal was capricious, or the addition was absolutely necessary for the purpose of doing justice. Juggodumba Dosse v. Haran Chundra Dutt and others, 10 W. R., 108.

A claim was disallowed to certain property which had been attached in execution of a decree. The property was sold; and after satisfaction of the decree, it was ordered that the surplus proceeds should be rateably distributed among other judgment creditors who had subsequently attached. On the application of the unsuccessful claimant again preferring his claim to the property, the Principal Sudder Ameen made another order, setting aside the previous order for distribution, so far as it affected some of the creditors. Held that the Principal Sudder Ameen had no jurisdiction to make the latter order. The High Court would, therefore, interfere to set it aside under its general power of superintendence. Re Maharajah Makatab Chand Bahadoor, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 217.

Held that the High Court, under its general powers of superintendence, has power to quash an order made by a Magistrate for the issue of a warrant in a case in which he had no jurisdiction whatever so to proceed. In the matter of Bunkoo Behary Ghosh, 11 W. R., 26.

Held that the High Court's interference, under Section 15 of the High Courts' Act, should be confined to cases in which the lower Court has acted without jurisdiction, or improperly declined jurisdiction, and ought not to extend to ten cases in which that Court has put an erroneous interpretation upon a provision of law. Kasheenath Roy Choudhry v. Shabirree Soonderee Dossee and others, 11 W. R., 402.

Where the security offered by a judgment-debtor, with a view to execution against her being stayed until the decision of a suit for an account which she had brought against the decree-holder was rejected by the lower Court. It was held that the order of rejection could not be interfered with by the High Court, under Section 15 of the High Courts' Act. Kasheenath Dossee v. Tithama, 11 W. R., 152.

The High Court, as a Court of general supervision, can declare the order of a Monsifin null and void. Joy Ram v. Bultsung Singh, 5 W. R., Mis., 3.

An ex-parte decree for an arrest of rent having been passed by a Revenue Court against certain tenants, and their land having been put up for sale in execution and bought by the decree-holders, the tenants brought a civil suit to get rid of the sale as well as of the decree. The lower Courts, finding that the whole of the proceedings had been conducted without the knowledge of the plaintiffs and that a fraud had been intended, gave them a decree setting aside the sale, and affirming plaintiffs' title in the disputed lands. Held in special appeal, that as the parties came up on a ground of equity, the High Court could interfere without prejudice to the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts. Accordingly, on the principle that the defendants should not be allowed to take advantage of their own fraud, it was decreed (the purchase-money being still in deposit in the Collectorate) that the defendants should re-convey the property to the plaintiff. Shiboo Soondorey Dossee v. Panchowree Chandra, 14 S. W. R., 135.

Where a Deputy Collector who had passed an informal decree refused to execute it on application, the decree-holder was held to be entitled to an order from the High Court, in the exercise of the powers it possesses under Section 15 of the High Courts' Act, directing the Deputy Collector to do his duty. Khemunkuree Dabee v. Ranee Shurut Soonduree Debia, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 9.

The High Court declined to exercise the extraordinary powers described in Section 15 of the High Courts' Act, where a Magistrate did not interfere with the arrest in his Court, under a civil process, of a person who had been accused before the Magistrate, but was acquitted at the time of his arrest. Re Guzarre Lall, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 393.

Where an Acting Judge of a Small Cause Court had made an order which the permanent incumbent on his return considered to have been made without authority of law,—Held, that the High Court was not competent to take up the case on a reference from the Judge; but that the party aggrieved should apply to the High Court, if he thought fit, to exercise its extraordinary powers under Section 15 of the High Court Act. Deep Chand v. Guotree and Beharee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 98.

When a Court, subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court, refuses to entertain a suit over which it has jurisdiction, the High Court may, under its general power of superintendence, order the Court below to entertain such suit, notwithstanding that no appeal would lie to the High Court from the decree in such suit. Hardayal Manda v. Tirzamam Thakur, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 28, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 34.

In an action brought to recover a third share of arrears of a varshasam or annual allowance paid by the Gaikwar of Baroda to the defendant, and in which the plaintiff alleged that he was entitled to a share in such varshasan.

Second,—A suit on action can be maintained in a Moonsiff's Court, although it may be necessary to determine the title of the plaintiff to

Where the District Judge reversed the decree of the Moonsiff for want of jurisdiction, although the amount of the claim was under Rs. 500, the Court, in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, interfered. Ratanshankar Renashankar v. Gulabshankar Lalshankar, 4 Bom. Rep., 173.

Where a suit was originally instituted in the Hooghly Court, and H. S., who was a defendant, and not subject to the jurisdiction of that Court, joined in an application to have the case tried by the High Court in the exercise of its extraordinary original civil jurisdiction, which application was granted,—Held that the suit must be treated as if the plaint had been originally filed in the High Court, the proceedings in the Hooghly Court being without jurisdiction, and the cause of action having arisen wholly within the jurisdiction of the High Court; that the defendant H. S., by joining in the application to have the suit removed to the High Court, admitted the jurisdiction of that Court to try the suit in the exercise of its extraordinary original civil jurisdiction, and could not afterwards dispute the jurisdiction. The law therefore to be administered by the High Court must be the same law and equity which ought to have been applied if the suit had been originally tried in the Court at Hooghly. The law which would have been applicable to the case if it had been tried at Hooghly is practically the same as the English law, whatever may be the nationality of the parties. Grose v. Amirtamayi Dassee, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 1; *S. C., 12 W. R., O. C., 13.

The Court will order a suit to be removed from the mofussil, and tried in the High Court, when the mofussil refuses to attach property in execution which he is bound to attach, he may be compelled to do so by the High Court in the exercise of its powers of supervision. Borradaile and Co. v. Gregory and others, Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 1.

An application to the High Court to remove a case from a District Court, and to try it as a Court of extraordinary original jurisdiction, under Section 13 of the Charter Act, should be made to a Judge sitting on the original side of the Court. T. R. Doucet v. J. F. Wise, 4 W. R., Mis., 7.

In a suit cognizable by the Small Cause Court, and in which no special appeal lies to the High Court under Section 13, Act XXIII of 1861, the High Court exercised its appellate powers and dismissed the suit. Maharaja Dhiraj Mahlat Chund Bakadoo v. Shagor Kundi, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 91.

An application to the High Court to exercise its extraordinary powers in respect to a finding of the Moonsiff, that a summons had not been served, was refused because the affidavit on which they came into Court omitted to state that the summons was served. Biddayabutter Dossia, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 8.

In cases not appealable the High Court will not usually interfere in the exercise of its extraordinary civil jurisdiction when the petitioner is applying his remedy by regular suit. Mahakunur Harshunker v. Valibrarai Umanyi, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 174.

All applications to the High Court in the exercise of its extraordinary civil jurisdiction should be accompanied by a copy of the orders of the lower Courts made in respect of the matter of such application, and should be presented within the time allowed for the presentation of special appeals. Nagappa bin Hulgappa (applicant), 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 215.

Petitioner, a decree-holder, allowed another decree-holder to obtain a decree upon a regular suit declaring him entitled to the properties in dispute in execution of his decree, and did nothing even after that decree was obtained by another decree-holder applied for the attachment and sale of the properties in execution of his decree, and the lower Court having all the parties arrayed before it, and having passed an order rejecting the petitioner's application, petitioner, after more than ninety days (the period limited for an appeal) had elapsed, invoked the aid of the High Court under Section 15 of the Charter Act, but the Court declined to exercise that jurisdiction, leaving the petitioner to his remedy in a regular suit. Kulee Kishore Sen v. J. F. Wise, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 477.

Where a Moonsiff refuses to attach property in execution which he is bound to attach, he may be compelled to do so by the High Court in the exercise of its powers of supervision. Monohur Paul v. J. F. Wise, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 246.

Where the finding of the first Court tended to show that the proceedings of the decree-holder were bonâ fide, and the lower Appellate Court found otherwise without giving any reasons whatever, the High Court held itself bound to interfere and restore the judgment of the first Court. Maharajah Dhiraj Mahlat Chand v. Modosoodun Bannerjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 162.

The Subordinate Judge of Nuddea having confirmed an execution sale of an estate in the towjee of that district, of which fifteen mouzahs were included within the 24-Pergunnah,—Held that the question as to how far a valid title to the fifteen mouzahs was created in favour of the purchaser, was one which must be raised between him and the judgment-debtor elsewhere, and not before the High Court in the exercise of its superintending powers. Habeebool Hossain v. Land Mortgage Bank, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 44.

A suit to recover Rs. 254 as arrears of rent, having been decreed by the Deputy Collector for Rs. 49, the defendant appealed to the Judge, but pleaded as mentioned in Clause 4, Section 300 of the evidence, the prisoner caused death with the knowledge granted by him to plead in the Court of Offender, the nature of the offence and the punishment in the mofussil. "Competent to investigate it," which is otherwise competent to try it, or to direct the trial by the High Court of an offence committed in the mofussil. The Sessions Judge on appeal, without trying the merits of the case, reversed the Sessions Judge's reversal of the Magistrate's conviction, upon the ground that his decision was wrong in point of law, and directed him to re-hear the appeal. The Sessions Judge had full power to make the order, and can enhance punishment. The High Court has, under Section 15 of Act XXI of 1863, has no power to withdraw a licence to practise as a pleader in the Small Cause Courts of Moulmein, is an exercise of power which comes under the superintendence of the High Court. The Recorder of Moulmein, under Section 17 of Act XXI of 1863, has no power to withdraw a licence granted by him to plead in the Court of Moulmein, "except for any sufficient reason." In the matter of John Thomson, 6 B. L. R., 186, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 257.

6.—CRIMINAL JURISDICTION.

When a Judge acquires a prisoner of murder, the High Court cannot, either as a Court of Appeal or as a Court of Revision, find that, according to the evidence, the prisoner caused death with the knowledge mentioned in Clause 4, Section 300 of the Penal Code; nor can the High Court, however wrong it may think the Judge to have been in acquitting of murder, or however inadequate it may think the sentence to be, correct the error, or enhance the sentence. Queen v. Toyab Sheikh, 5 W. R., Cr., 2.

The construction of Section 29 of the Letters Patent, 1865, is that the High Court has power, if in its discretion it thinks right to exercise it, to transfer the investigation or trial of any criminal offence committed in Calcutta to a mofussil Court, which is otherwise competent to try it, or to direct the trial by the High Court of an offence committed in the mofussil. "Competent to investigate it," does not include competency as regards local jurisdiction; but only competency with regard to the offender, the nature of the offence and the punishment. Queen v. Nahadwip Goswami, 1 B. L. R., O. Cr., 15.

The High Court, sitting as a Court of Revision, cannot interfere to set aside a verdict of acquittal by a Judge on the ground of misconduct by the Judge. Queen v. Chandrakant Chuckerbully, 1 B. L. R., A. Cr., 8; 10 W. R., Cr., 14.

The verdict of a jury cannot be reversed by a Court of Revision, even if it be a verdict of "guilty." The only remedy for the prisoner in such a case is an appeal (which can only be as a question of law), or an application to the Executive Government. Nor can a verdict, pronounced by a Jury, of "not guilty," be reversed by the High Court on revision, and it is clear that no appeal lies from such a verdict. Queen v. Gorachand Ghose, 3 B. L. R., F. B., 1; 5 S. C., 11 W. R., Cr., 29.

Sections 407 and 419 of the Code of Criminal Procedure do not apply to cases which the High Court, as a Court of Revision, thinks it right to take up. The High Court, as a Court of Revision, can interfere with a judgment of acquittal or conviction, and can enhance punishment. The High Court can act as a Court of Revision after it has acted as a Court of Appeal, in order to correct an error in law which could not be set right on appeal. The High Court, as a Court of Revision, cannot reverse the finding of a Jury. Queen v. Gorachand Gopar, 5 W. R., Cr., 45.

The power of the High Court to set aside a conviction, or order a new trial for any error or defect in the summing up, will only be exercised when the Court is satisfied that the accused person has been prejudiced by the error or defect, or that a failure of justice has been occasioned thereby. Elahee Buksh, appellant, 5 W. R., Cr., 80.

It is only when there is reason to suppose that the prisoner will not have a sufficient opportunity of showing that the High Court will transfer a case from one Magisterial officer to another. Queen v. Kisto Chunder Ghose, 2 W. R., Cr., 58.

The Sessions Judge on appeal, without trying the merits of the case, reversed the Magistrate's conviction in a case of theft upon a point of law, reading the Penal Code by the light of his knowledge of the English law. The High Court reversed the Sessions Judge's reversal of the Magistrate's conviction, upon the ground that his decision was wrong in point of law, and directed him to apprehend the accused, and re-hear the appeal. The Sessions Judge thought that the High Court had no power to order the re-apprehension of the accused, and, proceeding to re-hear the appeal in the absence of the accused, acquitted him. Held that the re-trial in the absence of the accused was a nullity; that if the accused had been convicted instead of being acquitted, the case must have been re-tried; but that as the Sessions Judge had declared his opinion that the evidence did not make out a case of guilt, it would be merely vexatious to the accused to insist upon the Sessions Judge obeysing the order of the Court, and re-trying the case in the presence of the accused. The High Court had full power to make the order, and the dissolved冕 of power which comes under the superintendence of the Sessions Judge and the course he thought fit to adopt were highly precarious. Queen v. Madaraz Chowdor, 3 W. R., Cr., 4.

The High Court, as a Court of Revision, under Section 404, Criminal Procedure Code, has no jurisdiction over European British subjects in criminal cases. Queen v. Thomas Brae, 3 W. R., Cr., 64.

After a sentence has once been passed by a competent authority, the High Court has no more power to interfere with it than a private individual, a Division in the mean-time, even for the concurrence of the suits, it, and undisturbed vested under the original order. 15, to take under Kant, in Chunder V Vict., cap. 44, by Morgan, kie, JJ., discretion of the suit, it arised, the a Division arises, the suit, and the judgment, a an order in Judge and by Morgan, kie, JJ., decided such an of judgment, issued by the disturb the majority of the Singh, 2 N.

except upon appeal, or on a reference, or by way of revision, as provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure. Queen v. Fuban, 7 W. R., Cr., 1.

The High Court, as a Court of Revision, has jurisdiction to set aside a finding of acquittal by a Session Court by virtue of Section 402 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 4 Mad. Rep., Rev. LXX.

Where a Subordinate Magistrate of the first class, acting without jurisdiction, held a trial and acquitted the accused person under Section 255 of the Code of Criminal Procedure,—Held that the High Court alone could set aside the finding under Section 255 of the Code of Criminal Procedure,—Held that the High Court alone could set aside the finding under Section 402, and that the Magistrate of the district had no power to do so under Section 435 of the Code as amended by Act VIII of 1869. 4 Mad. Rep., Rev. LXI.

Section 426 of the Code of Criminal Procedure allows no revision by the High Court in cases where, in the judgment of the Appellate Court, an accused person has not been prejudiced by an error or defect in the proceeding before the Magistrate (e.g., as in this case, by the alteration of the charge and the omission of the Magistrate to record before the Appellate Court points not raised before the trial court). An appeal is laid under Section 15 of the Letters Patent to a Full Bench.

The High Court has no power, under Clause 41 of the Amended Letters Patent of 1865, to grant leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from an order made or decision given in a criminal case referred by a Magistrate under Section 404 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Reg. v. Reay, 7 Bom. Rep., Cr. Ca., 77.

7.—DIVISION BENCHES.

In Section 1 of the Rules of 5th August, 1867, for the admission of appeals under Section 15 of the Letters Patent, the words "unless the Court, in its discretion, on good cause shown, shall grant further time," refer to the Appellate Bench of the High Court, and not to the Division Bench. Hurruch Singh v. Toolsee Ram Sahoo, 12 W. R., 458.

Where the contention before a Division Bench has reference to a single point only, and the Judges differing, an appeal is laid under Section 15 of the Letters Patent, it is not open to the parties to raise before the Appellate Court points not raised before the Division Bench. Sakajada Herzhun Begum v. Rajah Hossein, 12 W. R., 498.

When a criminal appeal is heard by two Judges, sitting as a Division Court, and they differ in opinion, the opinion of the senior Judge must prevail under Section 36 of the Letters Patent of the High Court of 1865, notwithstanding Section 420 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Queen v. Kasim Thakoor, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 25.

An appeal under Section 15 of the Letters Patent from the judgment of a Division Bench of the High Court must be preferred within thirty days from the date of the judgment, unless good cause be shown to the contrary. In the matter of Hurruch Singh and another, 11 W. R., 107.

The difference of opinion between Judges constituting a division bench of the High Court, which entitles parties to an appeal to the High Court under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent, must be a difference of opinion as to the final and complete decision of the appeal, and not a difference of opinion upon one or more of the points arising in the appeal. Amrma Begum, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 310.

A judgment of the senior Judge of a Division Bench of the High Court is final within the meaning of Section 36 of the new Letters Patent, even when the junior Judge entertains doubts and expresses no final opinion.

The junior Judge cannot refer a question for the decision of the Full Bench, without the concurrence of the senior Judge. Per Norman, J.—Where a Court added a third party as a plaintiff, and, in the absence of the original plaintiff, improperly dismissed the suit, it was held that the suit was still pending, and undisposed of by the lower Court as regards the original plaintiff; and the lower Court was ordered under the High Court's power of superintendence vested in it by the 24 and 25 Vict., c. 204, s. 15, to take up and try the case accordingly. Chunder Kant Buttacharjee and others v. Bindabun Chunder Mookerjee, 7 W. R., 277.

Section 13 of Acts XXIV and XXV Vict., cap. 104, and Section 27 of the Letters Patent of the High Court, apply to the Court in its revisional as well as in its appellate jurisdiction. Held by Morgan, C. J., and Turner, J., (Ross and Spankie, JJ., dissenting), that when a case is heard by a Division Bench, and a difference of opinion arises, the opinion of the senior Judge must prevail, and the order must issue in accordance with his judgment, a reference to a third Judge being beyond the competency of such Division Bench, and an order in accordance with the views of such third Judge and the junior Judge is not valid. Held by Morgan, C. J., and Turner, J., (Ross and Spankie, J. J., dissenting), that an application to set aside such an order is not in the nature of a review of judgment, and is cognizable by the Court.

Where an order has been actually issued by the High Court, a Division Bench will not disturb the same, unless in the opinion of a majority of the Court the order is bad. Queen v. Nyu Singh, 2 N. W. R., 117.

In cases heard by the High Court in its appellate jurisdiction, where the Judges are equally divided in opinion, a party desirous of appealing is bound to appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent before he can appeal to the Privy Council. The Court of Ward v. Rajah Lestamand Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 298.

K. sued R. for a sum of money due in promissory notes, and obtained a decree in the Judge's Court. R. appealed to the High Court and prayed that execution might be stayed till the appeal was disposed of. *The Court, under the provisions of Section 338, Code of Civil Procedure, ordered that execution might be stayed, provided good and sufficient security were given. Accordingly A. applied before the Judge and executed a security-bond binding himself, in the event of the appeal being dismissed, to liquidate the debt. The appeal was heard by a Division Bench, and, the Judges differing, the opinion of the senior Judge prevailed under Section 36 of the Letters Patent, and the appeal was decreed. From this judgment an appeal was preferred under Section 15 to a Full Bench. After the opinion of the Division Bench was pronounced, A. applied to the Judge for the return of his security-bond; but his application was refused pending the final decree of the High Court in the matter. He then moved the High Court for the cancellation of return of the bond. Held that there was no necessity that this motion should have been presented to the Judges who heard the appeal, for it related the matter beside the judgment, and a Division Bench may receive motions from all districts in reference to the division into groups. Held that the rule of practice, that applications referring to matters which have judicially arisen in a particular district, should be made before the Bench to which that district belongs, does not divest any Division Bench of the Court of the jurisdiction given to it by the Charter, nor can it be divested of that jurisdiction.

Held, also, that as the appeal was reargued upon that question before one or more of the other Judges; when the Judges of a Division Bench who differ in opinion, dismissing the decision to be given on any point, the opinion of the senior Judge is to prevail, subject, however, to a right of appeal from such judgment of the Division Court. The judgment passed on such appeal, and not the judgment of the Division Court, will be final.

In appeal under Section 15 of the Letters Patent of 1865 no point can be argued except a point on the which the Judges of a Division Bench have differed in opinion. [Roy Nandipat Mahata v. Urgahart, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 181; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 209.]

An order passed by the senior of two Judges of a Division Bench who differed in opinion, dismissing an application for the review of their judgment, is not appealable. Such an order is not a judgment within the meaning of Section 15 of the Letters Patent. Raku Bibi v. Khaja Mahomed Musa Khan, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 10.

§—Practice of High Court with regard to Mandamus, Rule Nisi, Habeas Corpus, &c.

Where a Magistrate has, in the exercise of his discretion, refused to proceed with a criminal charge pending a civil action in respect of the matter out of which the charge arose, a mandamus will not be granted to compel the hearing of the charge. Ex-parte P. Varadarajulu Nayudu, 1 Mad. Rep., 66.

A mandamus will not issue to compel a Magistrate to proceed with a criminal charge in respect of any matter involved in or affecting the merits of a civil suit still pending. The proper course for a Magistrate to pursue in such a case is not to dismiss the summons, but to adjourn the hearing pending the decision of the Court in the civil action. Queen v. T. G. Clarke, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 137.

By Act VI of 1857, Section 2 (for the acquisition of land for public purposes), it is enacted, that "wherever it appears to the local government that any land is required to be taken by Government for a public purpose, a declaration shall be made to that effect, under the signature of a Secretary to the Government, or of some officer duly authorized to certify the orders of Government," &c.

Therefore where the Justices of the Peace for the town of Calcutta were called upon by a writ of mandamus issued out of the High Court at Calcutta to "continue and maintain the existing Wellington Square tank as a public tank, and to cause the same to be supplied with water, or forthwith to substitute another such public tank," &c., and they returned that, by a notification published in the Calcutta Gazette on the 5th day of March instant, under the provisions of Act VI of 1857 of the Legislative Council of India, it was notified that, whereas it appeared to the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal that land was required to be taken by Government for a public purpose, viz., for the Calcutta Water-Works, it was thereby declared that for the above purpose a public tank and square known as Wellington Square, &c., was required, and proceeded to justify under this notification, &c,—Held that the return was bad. Regina v. The Justices of the Peace for the Town of Calcutta, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 214.

The prosecutor cannot, in India, both plead and demur to a return to a writ of mandamus, without first obtaining leave of the Court. Regina on the prosecution of Toosledas Nundy v. The East Indian Railway Company, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 244.

Case in which the Moonsiff held that the Municipality had expended more money than was necessary in cleaning the petitioner's tank, and the Judge on appeal set aside the Moonsiff's decision and gave the Municipality a decree on the ground that under the law the matter was purely within the description of the Municipality. Held that even though the rates charged by the Municipality were higher than those which could be obtained by other persons, that was no ground for the interference of the High Court. In the matter of Jogesh Chunder Dutt, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

Parties applying in the absence of the other side for the issue of rules nisi interfering with the rights of persons executing decrees, are bound fully and fairly to state all the circumstances within their knowledge which it is necessary for the Court to consider in granting the rule. In the matter of Brojo Coomar Mullick, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 55.

The High Court can grant a rule to show cause only in cases in which the arguments advanced in favour of the party asking for the rule are such that, if not displaced by the opposite side, the rule would be made absolute. Omrao Begum, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 318.

A writ of mainprize could only be issued where the party applying for it was bailable, and had offered security, but bail had been refused; it could not be issued to a prisoner confined under Regulation III of 1818, which authorizes his detention absolutely and unconditionally, and gives him no right to demand to be released on bail.

The writ is one which could be issued only on the Common Law Side of the Court of Chancery in England. The power of the Common Law Side of the Court of Chancery to issue such writ was not conferred on the Supreme Court, nor is there anything in the charter of the High Court to give that Court power to issue it. In the matter of Amee Khan, 6 B. L. R., 456.

Assuming the power of a Judge of the High Court to issue a writ of habeas corpus, and assuming the right of appeal against an order refusing such writ, — Held, that, it appearing that the prisoner was in custody under a warrant in the form prescribed by Regulation III of 1818, the detention was legal. The detention to be legal need only be covered by an actually existing warrant of the Governor-General in Council in the form prescribed, without regard to the lawfulness of the arrest. The Regulation is not confined to prisoners of war or foreigners held in confinement for political reasons.

The substance of Regulation III of 1818 was expressly re-enacted by Act XXXI of 1850 and Act III of 1858, and therefore as the result of these later Acts alone the detention would be legal. These Acts are not contrary to the powers conferred on the Indian Legislature by 3 and 4 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 43. Amee Khan, in the matter of, 6 B. L. R., 459.

A Mahomedan subject of the Crown was arrested in Calcutta, taken into the mofussil, and there detained in jail, under a warrant of the Governor-General in Council in the form prescribed by Regulation III of 1818. Held, that such arrest and detention were not acts of State, but matters cognizable by a Municipality Court.

On an application to the High Court to issue a writ of habeas corpus to the superintendent (a European subject) of the jail,—Held that the Supreme Court had power to issue writs of habeas corpus to persons in the mofussil, and that the same power is continued to the High Court.

Regulation III of 1818 was applicable only to natives and those subject to the jurisdiction of the Provincial Courts. It was passed under 37 George III., Cap. 142, Section 28, not 13 George III., Cap. 63, Section 36. It was passed by a legislative authority having full power in that behalf. Considering the circumstances under which it was enacted, Act III of 1858, which extended the effect of that Regulation to Calcutta, was not ultra vires.

As the person against whom the writ was applied for had acted under the written order of the Governor-General in Council, the Court would not direct the writ to issue. Amee Khan, in the matter of, 6 B. L. R., 392.

The return to a writ of habeas corpus must be taken to be true, and cannot be controverted by affidavit. In England, 56 George III., Cap. 100, Section 4, allows affidavits to be used to controvert the return in criminal matters, but that statute does not apply to this country.

The return to a writ of habeas corpus can, however, be amended. Queen v. Vaughan, in re Ganesh Sundari Debi, 5 B. L. R., 418.

The return to a writ of habeas corpus is not necessarily conclusive, and does not preclude enquiry into the truth of the matters alleged therein, although 56 George III., Cap. 100, does not apply to this country.

By Mahomedan law the mother is entitled to the custody of a female child, although married, until she has attained puberty.

Where a husband applied that his wife, stated in the return to a writ of habeas corpus to be an infant under the age of sixteen years, to wit, of the age of eleven years or thereabouts," might be delivered over into his custody; the Court, on the ground that she had not attained the age of puberty, and that her dower had not been paid, refused to order her to be taken from the custody of the mother, although the mother had taken her away secretly, in the absence of her father and husband, from Bandari, where they were all living together, to Calcutta. Khatija Bibi, 5 B. L. R., 557.

A writ of certiorari lies, as of course, to remove, before judgment, all cases commenced in the Calcutta Court of Small Causes, subject to the limitation imposed by Section 54 of Act IX of 1850, unless such cases fall within the usual exceptions recognized in English practice, so far as such exceptions may be applicable to the High Court.

Where a writ of certiorari is granted to bring up a conviction of Justices, in order to quash it, and a rule nisi to quash the conviction moved for, the certiorari should be returned into Court before the motion for the rule nisi is made. Regina v. The Justices of the Peace, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 293.

9.—THE CIVIL COURTS AND THEIR JURISDICTION.

Quaere,—Whether the Courts in India have any jurisdiction to determine a question involving a mere declaration of a right to perform religious ceremonies. Namboory Ssetapathy and others v. Kanoo Colanoo Pullia and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 7.

The Civil Courts are competent to give a decree for immovable property on the bare ground of illegal dispossession in a suit brought after six months from the date of such dispossession, in which suit the defendant has failed to prove his own title to the land.

In deciding the question, with special reference to Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, the object and effect of that section considered, and the bearing of Sections 318 and 319 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, with regard to cases of dispossession and the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts, illustrated. Khaija Enaetollah Chewhdhry v. Kishun Soondur Surma and others, 8 W. R., 386.

Where on an application made for the appointment of a manager to the estate of a deceased Raja, a Zillah Judge, notwithstanding a contention raised before him as to the extent of the minor's interest in the property, passed an order strictly within the provisions of Section 12, Act XI of 1865, his successor was held to have acted without jurisdiction in having, upon a subsequent application, passed an order specifying the shares of the minor and the party who raised the contention. The Collector of Tirhut v. Rajcoomar Deo Nuddun Singh, 10 W. R., 218.

A. obtained a decree in the Nudda Court against B., who had obtained a decree against C. in the Beerbhum Court. The latter was attached by the Nudda Court, and sold to A. in execution of his decree. A. then petitioned the Beerbhum Court for execution against C. Held that the Nudda Court had jurisdiction to attach and sell B.'s decree against C., and A. had a right to apply to the Beerbhum Court for execution thereof. Rambaksh Chetlangi v. Maharajah Banwari Godbih Bahadour, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 65; S. C., 10 W. R., 357.

In a suit for closing a new road opened by the defendants through the land of the plaintiff, and for opening an old road, which had been closed by the defendants,—Held by Markby, J., that the question of opening or closing a public road belongs to the Criminal Court, and not to the Civil Court. Held that the only question which can be tried in the suit is whether the defendants have trespassed on the land of the plaintiff by opening a road. The onus is upon the plaintiff to prove that the land belongs to him. Hira Chand Banerjee v. Shama Churn Chatterjee, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 351; S. C., 12 W. R., 275.

A lower Appellate Court has a right to grant a review of its own judgment for the purpose of correcting a clerical error, even after a special appeal from its decision has been heard and determined by the High Court. A lower Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to review its own judgment so as to modify its substance,—as, for example, to alter an award of costs after a special appeal from its decision has been heard and determined by the High Court. Woomanund Roy v. Maharajah Sutlal Roy, 9 W. R., 471.

Where a third party prays for the release of property attached by order of the High Court, pending an appeal to the Privy Council, a Principal Sudder Ameen has no authority to interfere. Anundee Koer v. Rane Soomet Koer, 9 W. R., 250.

It is incidental to every Court of Justice to be able, in its discretion, to restore to its files any case which it has itself removed therefrom undetermined. Deen Dyal Paramanick v. Ram Coomar Chowdhury, 9 W. R., 283.

A suit against an Agent to the Governor-General, on the part of Government, is substantially a suit brought against a public servant for acts done by him in his official capacity. Deen Dyal Paramanick v. Ram Coomar Chowdhury, 9 W. R., 283.

A charge of extortion can be entertained in a Civil Court. A Judge has power to grant a review of judgment, notwithstanding that a period exceeding 90 days has elapsed. Points of law may be referred under Section 28, Act XXI of 1861. Ramgutte Dass v. Gholam Ahmed Khondkar, 1 W. R., F. B., 85.

The plaintiff had borrowed money on security of a zur-i-peshgee lease of property which, after some years, he sued to redeem by payment of an alleged balance claiming credit for hucksgiree of the hypothecated land owing to him for the intervening period.

Held that even if the remedy sought by plaintiff involved in its details different jurisdictions, yet, as it was in itself one, he was justified in bringing his suit in the Civil Court, where alone he could obtain substantial relief. Sheo Golam Singh v. Ray Dinur Dyal, 12 W. R., 215.

On an application made to a Judge for the appointment of a manager to the estate of an insane person who had been and was in a lunatic asylum, situated in the district where the application was made, though his property was in a different district, the Judge was held to have jurisdiction under Section 2, Act XXXV of 1858. 'Jal Kallas and another v. The Collector of Backergunge, 11 W. R., 109.

Held that every Court has inherent authority to make enquiry into fraudulent abuses of its own processes. Mussumat Bheekun v. Mussumat Elahee Khanum, 11 W. R., 153.

A Judge has no jurisdiction to entertain a petition from, and order the release of, a judgment-debtor imprisoned in execution of a decree, while the execution proceedings are before the Subordinate Judge. Modhoosudun Ghose v. Ramanath Ghose, 12 W. R., 65.

If any part of property, however small, lie within the jurisdiction of the Court, it may try the whole case after obtaining the requisite permission, such permission may be obtained after registration of the suit. Gour Soonduree Dabee v. Sumboo Mojoondar, 12 W. R., 328.

A suit to recover the value of timber alleged to have been forcibly carried off by the defendants from a ghat in the district of Tirhoot, having been brought in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of 24-Pergunnas, that Court was held to have jurisdiction in the case, on its being shown that one of the defendants, at the commencement of the suit, personally worked for gain within the limits of the 24-Pergunnas. Motel Dossae and another v. Deeta Hurukram Singh, 11 W. R., 64.

A person aggrieved by the erection of a building in a public thoroughfare, or on the waste land of a town or village, may institute a suit in a Civil Court for its removal, instead of preferring a complaint to the Magistrate. Jina Runchod v. Jodha Ghelia, 1 Bom. Rep., 1.

A Moonsiff has not jurisdiction to try an action brought against a public servant for acts done by him in his official capacity. Deeta Hurukram Singh, 11 W. R., 64.

A person aggrieved by the erection of a building in a public thoroughfare, or on the waste land of a town or village, may institute a suit in a Civil Court for its removal, instead of preferring a complaint to the Magistrate. Jina Runchod v. Jodha Ghelia, 1 Bom. Rep., 1.

A Moonsiff has not jurisdiction to try an action brought against a public servant for acts done by him in his official capacity. Deeta Hurukram Singh, 11 W. R., 64.
enforcing payment of a revenue assessment sanctioned by Government does not, per se, preclude the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the suit. But acts done by Government through its executive officers, not contrary to any existing right, according to the laws administered by the Municipal Courts, although they may amount to grievances, would afford no cause of action cognizable by the Civil Courts. Sri Uppu Lakshmi Bhayamma Gum v. A. Purvis, 2 Mad. Rep., 167.

In a suit for the recovery of land situated within the territories of the Rajah of Pudukotta,—Held that the Civil Court of Trichinopoly had no jurisdiction. Rangaiyan and others v. Hari Krishna Aiyar, 2 Mad. Rep., 437.

The Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought by the alienee to compel the Collector to register and sub-assess a portion of a zemindary transferred in accordance with the provisions of Regulation XXV of 1802. Ponnusamy Tevar v. Collector of Madura, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 35.

—Held that the Judge has jurisdiction to hear, in appeal, cases of partition under Act XIX of 1862, where the objection raised by the party opposing partition is severality of holding by virtue of a former partition. Cundum Singh v. Choonna and others, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 44.

In a suit for illegal distraint, on the ground that a portion of the holding in respect of which the distress had been levied was held under a grant for religious purposes,—Held that the appeal lay to the Judge. Hurshunkur Pershad v. Doorga and others, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 59.

Where a balance was struck, and an agreement to repay the balance was drawn out at Cawnpore,—Held that the Cawnpore Court has jurisdiction to entertain suit on that agreement, and its jurisdiction is not affected by the fact of the transaction respect of which the agreement was given, having happened elsewhere. Haim Raj v. Ram Bux, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 115.

—Held that, though both suits were properly cognizable by the Court at Cawnpore, yet the Sudder Court's order, which it was competent to pass under Section 6, Act VIII of 1859, gave jurisdiction to the Principal Sudder Ameen of another district, whose decision was not liable to be set aside for want of jurisdiction, in reference to the provisions of Section 5 of that enactment. Ram Bukh v. Girdharee Lall, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 178.

Where the plaintiff alleges the defendant to be amenable to the jurisdiction of the Court, and the defendant denies its jurisdiction,—Held that the parties should be allowed to go into evidence to support their allegations, and the Court ought not to have rejected the plaint, without recording its reasons for the same, or taking evidence on the point, under Section 8, Act XI of 1841. Anoop Chund and others v. Shambhoo Mall, 1 Agra Rep., 222.

—Held that the Court at Furruckabad had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit against principals residing elsewhere, brought by the agents at Furruckabad.

—Held further, that the objection of jurisdiction having been raised and allowed at an early stage of the case, the plaint should have been returned to be presented in the proper Court. Khooshal Chund v. T. G. A. Palmer and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 280.

—Where the suit was brought upon the defendant's breach to deliver wood in pursuance of the terms of the contract,—Held that the mere fact that an advance was made within the local jurisdiction of a Court would not give that Court jurisdiction in such suit. Ajoodhya Perkash v. Gobind Ram and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 188.

—Held that the cause of action does not arise at Agra, merely on account of the bill of exchange having been sold at the latter place by a third party, purchaser from defendant. Kishen Chund v. Kishen Lall, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 123.

A regular suit lies to the Civil Court from the proceedings of a Magistrate ordering the removal of an encroachment not treated as a local nuisance. Anund Chunder Chatterjea v. Rokho Tarun Chatterjea, 2 W. R., 287.

If a house and two parcels of ground are held and enjoyed together, forming, as it were, one compound or set of premises, the suit as to the whole is amenable to the Civil Court and the tenant's documents; and as the defendant refused to admit having been sold at the latter place by a third party, purchaser from defendant. Biprodoss Dey v. William Wollen, 1 W. R., 223.

—Held that the Civil Court had jurisdiction in such a case, and that the omission of the Collector to register or reserve the plaintiff's property in his sale of the property of the defaulter, who was a separate party, did not affect the question. Oomadhur Bhus v. Mahomed Luteef, 1 W. R., 229.

A Civil Court may set aside a settlement of land erroneously made by the Collector as forming part of a resumed mehal, if the land has not actually been resumed. Abboo Bisse v. The Collector of Barrargunge, 1 W. R., 229.

The Civil Courts have jurisdiction to set aside an order by a Deputy Magistrate to open a road over lands. Kader Mahomed v. Mahomed Safer, 1 W. R., 277.

—An act done by a political officer interfering with the private rights of parties can be questioned in the Civil Courts. Rajah Mukhoond Narain Deo v. Rance Joy Coomaree Debia, 1 W. R., 16.

—The plaintiff, the purchaser of a putnee lease, sought to obtain a declaration of his title to land lying aside an alleged rent-free tenure in certain lands held rent-free from the time of a former talookdar, alleging that he had called for the defendant's documents; and as the defendant refused to produce them, the plaintiff instituted this suit before the Collector under Regulation II of 1819. The defendant pleaded a lakhiraj title from before 1790. The suit was referred to the Civil Court under the Bengal Act VII of 1862, and the plaintiff obtained a decree. On appeal by the defendant,—Held, per totam curiam, that, prior to the passing of Regulation II of 1819, under their ordinary jurisdiction, the Civil Courts were competent to entertain regular suits by zamindars for the declaration of their right to resume revenue illegally alienated subsequently to 1790, and for possession of the land held rent-free under grants or titles which had their origin subsequently to 1790.

Held by Trevor, J., Seton-Karr, J., Shumboonath Pandit, J., and Glover, J., that such suits were unaffected by the passing of Regulation II of 1819, Section 30, which related only to resumption of lakhiraj existing prior to 1790. Dissentientibus Norman, C. J., Phear, J., and Jackson, J., who held that, since the passing of Regulation II of 1819, regular suits for the resumption of all tenures held rent-free, in which the defendant alleged a valid rent-free grant, have been instituted, and down to the passing of the Bengal Act VII of 1862, might have been maintained or referred to the Collector under the 30th Section of that Regulation.

Held by a majority of the Court (dissentientibus Trevor, J., Seton-Karr, J., and Glover, J.) that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to try this cause was not affected by Section 28 of Act X of 1859. Sona Banerjee v. Abdul Furar, 2 W. R., 91.

A suit was brought for property situated in two separate districts, and the Principal Sudder Ameen of one of the two districts was permitted by the Sudder Court to try the suit for the whole. Pending the suit, the plaintiff withdrew his claim as to the property situated in the district of the Principal Sudder Ameen who was trying the suit. Held that the Principal Sudder Ameen had still jurisdiction to proceed with the suit as to the property in the other district. Syed Ameer Ali v. Mohendronath Bose, Behaus Coomaree v. Mohendronath Bose; Sukadora Bibee v. Mohendronath Bose, 2 W. R., 271.

A Civil Court may set aside a settlement of land erroneously made by the Collector as forming part of a resumed mehal, if the land has not actually been resumed. Abboo Bibee v. The Collector of Backergunge, 1 W. R., 255.

The Civil Courts have jurisdiction to set aside an order by a Deputy Magistrate to open a road over lands. Kader Mahomed v. Mahomed Saefer, 1 W. R., 277.

Plaintiff sued for rent in the Civil Court, and obtained a partial decree. On appeal by the plaintiff, Held that, though the Civil Court had not jurisdiction, yet the defendant having acquiesced in the jurisdiction of that Court, the decree might stand. Teekum Lall Doss v. Peter McArthur, 1 W. R., 279.

A suit to recover money deposited with the defendants to be applied in payment of rents (the deposit having been unsuccessfully pleaded in a suit for rent) lies in the Civil Court, and not before the Collector. Dabee Golam Singh v. Chunder Kant Mookerjee, 3 W. R., 109.

A suit for profits of property alleged to have been appropriated by a wrong-doer is cognizable by the Civil Court, and not by the Collector. Tekkat Roop Mongul Singh v. Anund Roy, 3 W. R., 111.

A suit for ascertainment and declaration of a shikmee talook is cognizable by the Civil Court, notwithstanding that it includes a claim for the assessment of rent thereon. Jugul Tara Chowdhrian v. Rajah Protab Chunder Singh, 3 W. R., 154.

A person is entitled to sue in the Civil Court to establish his right to land from which he has been ejected by his zamindar by virtue of a decree under Section 25, Act X of 1859, whether the plaintiff was or was not a party to the ejectment suit. Tooteem Kharah v. Ram Coomar Singh, 3 W. R., 170.

A party suing under Section 28, Act X of 1859, cannot, if he fail in that suit, bring another and similar suit in the Civil Court. Both Courts have concurrent jurisdiction, but a suitor must elect one or the other. Bhikaree Pandav v. Ajoydha Pershad, 3 W. R., 176.

A judicial investigation of allegations and facts sufficient to guide the Court should precede the admission or rejection of jurisdiction. Nusrun Beebee v. R. Watson and Co., 3 W. R., 215.

A decree of a Revenue Court awarding arrears of rent for a certain year under a kubuleut against a ryot does not bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in a suit brought by him for a declaration of his title as lakhirajdar in the same land. Tara Chand Mityee v. Nilambur Mundul, 3 W. R., 277.

The decision of a Revenue Court incidentally trying, for the purposes of a suit under Act X of 1859, a question of title, is not final so as to bar a suit in the Civil Court to establish a title declared by the Revenue Court to be invalid. Doss Mont Dosssee v. Huronuth Roy, 4 W. R., 2.

A suit brought by a putneedar to obtain a share of certain moneys paid by the Government to the zamindar on the occasion of taking up certain lands in the putnee for public purposes, is only cognizable in the Civil Court. A putneedar is entitled to compensation although there was no agreement to that effect. Joy Kishen Mookerjee v. Reasoonatisa Bebe, 4 W. R., 40.

A Court, when it finds that it has not jurisdiction to entertain a suit, should not proceed to determine the case on the merits. Rajkhishore Dasssee v. The Collector of Furedpore, 5 W. R., 144.

*Quaer.—Whether a suit lies in the Civil Courts against the Chief Priest of the Lingayats by the Swami or Chief Priest of the Smartava sect of Brahmins claiming, by grant from the supreme power of the State, the privilege of adavi pathi, of being carr.ed, on ceremonial occasions, in a palanquin borne crossways, so that the poles traverse the line of march. Sri Sunkur Bharti Swami v. Sidka Lingayah Charanti, 6 W. R., P. C., 39; 6 W. R., Mis., 40.

A Zillah Judge must execute his own decrees, and has no power to direct the Principal Sudder Ameen to take up and dispose of an application for execution. Rajeeb Ram Doss and others v. Mahomed Hossein, 6 W. R., Mis., 51.

The Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain a suit, which, if successful, would have the effect of setting aside and rendering inoperative an order of a Magistrate declaring a road to be a public one, and directing the removal of bamboo posts across the road, to be vacated. Ram Shodoy Ghose and others v. Jottaddhree Haldar and others, 7 W. R., 95.

Causcs of action joined in one suit may be tried by a Court which has jurisdiction as to the entire value, although the value of one of the causes of action is below the value cognizable by it. Thus, a
THE COURTS AND THEIR OFFICERS—THE CIVIL COURTS' JURISDICTION. 225

Principal Sudder Ameen has jurisdiction to try a suit for lands with mesne profits, notwithstanding that the value of the land standing by itself was under the value cognizable by him. Luchmeeper-saud Dooby v. Mussamut Koylasso, 7 W. R., 175.

A lower Court has no jurisdiction to review a judgment appealed from, nor has the lower Appellate Court jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the judgment so passed on review. Brajo Nath Koondoo Chowdhry and others v. Jumerooniissa Bibee and others, 7 W. R., 218.

A suit was instituted in a Court which, at the date of the filing of such suit, was in a non-regulation district, to recover possession of a piece of land situate in a village then within the jurisdiction of that Court; when the Regulations were introduced, the Regulation Court which succeeded the said Court was placed in a district different from that to which the said village was annexed.

Held that the village in which the suit arose having been transferred to a district different from that which included the Court which had succeeded the non-Regulation Court, this last-named Court had no jurisdiction to try and determine the suit.

Held, also, that an appeal to a Judge of one district from a decree of a subordinate Court in another district, when such an appeal was permissible, was not an appeal which could be referred by the District Judge for trial to a principal Sadr Amin under Regulation XVIII of 1831, Section 3.

Quaere,—When a district, or particular portion of a district, is for the first time brought under the Regulations, can the Regulation Court, which is established in the territory where a Non-Regulation Court previously existed, continue the trial of suits instituted in the Non-Regulation Court, if no provision have been made in the Act by which the Regulations became operative in the said territory, for the continuance of the trial of such suits by the said Regulation Court? Payáppa bin Sheshāpp Dánde v. Binode Lal/ Shamsood Márán Dámle, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 26.

A suit for a declaration that an alleged Hindu marriage was invalid as a suit of a civil nature and will lie in the ordinary Civil Courts. Ajona Dasi v. Prohlad Chunder Ghose, 6 B. L. R., 243, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 403.

A Civil Court alone has jurisdiction to try a suit for which is brought to recover possession of lands with mesne profits from one who is alleged to be in possession as a trespasser, notwithstanding the defence set up is that in respect of part of the land the defendant has a permanent ryoti-tenure. Hari Nath Das v. Sheikh Asmút Ali, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 118, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 171.

A plaintiff is justified in bringing his suit in a Civil Court when that is the only Court which can grant him substantial relief, although against one of the defendants a Revenue Court may grant him a partial remedy. Nubo Kishen Koondoo v. Gourée Kant Bannerjee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 331.

After a decision by a Revenue Court under Section 7 of the Indian Rent Recovery Act, 1870, a Civil Court may determine the legal title to the rent; and, when determining such title, the Civil Court may also determine whether any rent which may have been lost to a party by the decision of the Revenue Court may not be recouped to him. Shaikè Kofact Hossein v. Shaikè Shumihure Ali, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 458.

Held that after the orders of Government of 1867, dividing the whole of the jurisdiction of the Principal Sudder Ameen of Rajshaye into two portions, the Small Cause Court Judge of Pubna alone had jurisdiction to perform in the district of Pubna the duties which, but for those orders, would have been performed by the Principal Sudder Ameen of Rajshaye. Shamsooduuree Debía v. Binode Lal Pakrasha 14 S. W. R., C. R., 396.

A suit, of which the subject-matter did not exceed in amount or value Rs. 1,000, instituted one day after Act XVI of 1868 received the assent of the Governor-General in Council, was held to be cognizable by the local Moonsiff, and not by the Sudder Moonsiff of the District. Bungshu Budden, Dew v. Taríner Churn Dew, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 375.

In a suit in a Moonsiff's Court on a right of pre-emption, in which plaintiff undervalued his claim, the defendant, without objecting to the jurisdiction, allowed the case to go to trial, and, after passing through the subordinate Courts, to come up to the High Court in special appeal. It was remanded on a question of fact and came up again in special appeal, when the point was raised for the first time (though not taken in the petition of appeal) that the suit was not cognizable by the Moonsiff, and therefore that all that had been done had been done without jurisdiction. Held that the defendant was not at liberty to waive jurisdiction, and that the objection must be allowed to be taken even at this late stage. Held that the suit having been beyond the Moonsiff's jurisdiction, his judgment was not legal, and his decree, in the eye of the law, no decree at all and of no legal effect. Naunhoo Singh v. Tufan Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 248.

A non-commissioned officer or soldier not serving in the army but employed in the civil department and residing beyond military cantonments, is amenable to the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, even in cases below thirty pounds. Cohen v. McCarthy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 231.

Courts having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a suit in which a right is asserted, have also jurisdiction over a supplemental suit in which the plaintiff seeks to follow out that right.

In a simple question of possession all that a Criminal Court can dispose of is the necessary right, not the proprietary title. Kashee Nath Kooer v. Deb Kristo Ramanooj Dass, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 240.

In determining the jurisdiction of the Court in a suit for damages, the amount claimed, and not that eventually found due, must be taken as the valuation. Jey Doorgoo Dassie v. Manick Chand, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 248.

There being a deficit in the assets, a putneedar brought a regular suit against his zemindar and obtained an abatement of jumma to the extent claimed. This decree was confirmed in appeal. The zemindar, however, instituted a suit for the whole rent without deduction, and obtained a decree while the civil suit of the putneedar was pending, and realized the sum decreed by execution against him for recoverable and other properties of the putneedar. The latter then sued the former to recover the excess rent, with interest, realized in these executions.

Held that this suit ought to have been brought in the Civil Court. Rajah Nilmoney Singh Deo v.
A suit to recover the rents of land situated in district J., may be brought in district S., where the defendant is residing, although in such suit the plaintiff's title to the land in respect of which the rent is sought to be recovered may incidentally come in question. Chinatman Narayan v. Madhurad Venkatess, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 29.

Where the plaintiff sued to be declared entitled to the office of Mulki Patil in the village of Kota, and not in the village of Kota, had no right to share in the management of the watan, and had, in fact, until 1866, upon the death of the father of the plaintiff, never done so, it was held that the Civil Courts had jurisdiction to entertain the claim of the plaintiff. Ahfjji bin Sankroji v. Niloji bin Baloji, distinguished ; Vithu bin Makhu v. Amrit bin Jofi, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 72.

Since Act XVIII of 1867 came into force, suits for possession of land are cognizable in the Civil Courts, not in the Revenue, Courts of the Jhansi Division, and not in the Revenue, Court of the Bhonsle, 3 N. W. R., 85.

Where execution was sought of a decree which had been forcibly carried away by the defendant from Kerampani, where the defendant ordinarily resides, but that plaintiff may apply to the Political Agent for redress. Nilowsa v. Fakirappa, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 75.

Where execution was sought of a decree which was passed in 1850, and which could not be executed by the revenue authorities in consequence of the transfer of its jurisdiction in such matters to the Civil Courts,—Held that the Civil Courts had jurisdiction to entertain the application. Luckmee Kanti Ghose v. Bumun Dass Moonjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 472.

Held that the Mooniss of Dibrooghur had no jurisdiction in a suit to recover an elephant alleged to have been forcibly carried away by the defendant and the plaintiff's right or title is not sufficient to oust the order and remand the case for re-hearing. Sukram v. Kalamkar, 3 B. L R., A. C., 105.

The Statute of 1867 is clear and unambiguous. In a suit to set aside a sale by a Collector under Section 308 of the Criminal Procedure Code, an order was obtained by the defendant from the Magistrate of a district declaring a road to be a public road. The present suit was brought by the plaintiff to set aside that order, and to have the road closed. Held that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Held by Markby, J. that whenever an objection is made to the want of record of reasons for the decision, for the first time in the High Court, on special appeal, every presumption should be made in favour of the jurisdiction of the Courts below. E. G. Rook v. Pyari Lall, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 43; 11 W. R., 434.

The cause of suit, as stated by the plaintiff, appears to be within the cognizance of the Court of Small Causes, the mere denial by the defendant of the plaintiff's right or title is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the Court. If it reasonably appears to the Judge that a bona-fide question of right, which is not within his jurisdiction to decide, is fairly raised in the suit, his jurisdiction ceases. Ammalu v. Subburudyar, 2 Mad. Rep., 184.

The Civil Courts have jurisdiction in a suit by the purchaser of a mokurruree tenure against the ryots and the zemindar for illegal dispossess and for establishing permanent title to the property. Nobbo Doorga Dedea v. Kistareemees Dossee, 1 W. R., 48.

The mere pendency of a suit in the Supreme Court does not operate as a bar to the prosecution of a suit in a Zillah Court intended to be simply in furtherance of and supplemental to the suit in the Supreme Court. Nawab Sidhee Nazir Ali Khan v. Ojootharam Khan, 5 W. R., P. C., 83.

Occasional residence will not bring a defendant within the jurisdiction; he must be a fixed inhabitant of the district in which the suit is brought. Talun Tewaree v. Gobindeer Gossain, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 85.

In a suit to set aside a sale by a Collector under Act X of 1859, on the allegations that, at the time of the sale, a warrant of execution previously obtained against the moveable property of the judgment-debtor still remained in force, and that the deposit on the purchase-money was not paid until fourteen days had elapsed, it was held that such allegations, if proved, would amount to illegalities, and that a suit to declare such a sale null and void should lie in the Civil Court. Ali Buksh Shak v. Nubee Buksh, 9 W. R., 600.

If at the hearing of a suit it proves to be undervalued, and if the Court would not have jurisdiction-tion to entertain it if properly valued, the suit ought to be dismissed. Sheikh Muhash Ali v. Mussamatt Basoo, 8 W. R., 47.

Held that the Civil and the Revenue Courts have concurrent jurisdiction to hear and decide suits in regard to immediate possession. Ex-parte Nagavokam Garnar Ganda, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C., 108.

Where a decree is transmitted by one Court to another for the purpose of execution, the latter Court has no jurisdiction to alter the decree, or the amount mentioned in the order for execution. Sheikh Ally Hosein v. Jeogulkissore, Marsh., 244.

The plaintiff sued to recover money which she had paid as rent to the zemindar, under a decree of the Revenue Court, after she had already paid her rent to his harama. Held that the suit was not cognizable by the Civil Court. Srimati Sawdamini Dasi v. Srimati Thakamani Debi, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 114.

The Judge was held to have no power to interfere with the Moonsiff's order when all that the Judge had before him was the Moonsiff's order declining to reverse a former order of attachment by a former Moonsiff. Chowra Mahomed Sircar v. Shorno Lutlu Debi, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 311.

10.—Transfer of Suits.

A District Judge is not competent to transfer a case of execution of a decree which has been passed by his own Court, to the file of the Subordinate Judge for disposal. Such a case is not one of the "civil proceedings" referred to in Section 19, Act XVI of 1868, read with Section 362, Civil Procedure Code, and interpreted by Sections 26 and 27, Act VI of 1871. Chowdry Harmadollah v. Mutuoosina Bibee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 574.

A suit instituted in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen was transferred, under Section 6 of Act VIII of 1859, to the Court of the Moonsiff, who took further evidence, and decreed in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant appealed to the District Court, on the ground (amongst others) that part of the evidence had been taken by the Principal Sudder Ameen; and the District Judge reversed the Moonsiff's decree, not on this ground, but on the merits. The plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, objecting that the suit had been illegally decided by the Moonsiff, upon evidence recorded by the Principal Sudder Ameen; and that the onus of proving the bona fides of the transaction, which was the subject-matter of the suit, was thrown by the District Judge on the plaintiff, instead of on the defendant, who alleged the want of it.

Held (1) that the Moonsiff's having used the evidence recorded by the Principal Sudder Ameen was only an irregularity, which was waived by the plaintiff's not requiring the witnesses to be examined again, and proceeding with the suit, and producing other witnesses to be examined in support of his claim; and as this irregularity did not affect the merits of the case, the decree of the Moonsiff being in the plaintiff's favour, it was not a ground for reversing the decree on special appeal.

(2) That the onus was not thrown by the Judge upon the plaintiff in its proper sense, and so as to be an error in law, as the Judge did not hold that the defendant was entitled to succeed without giving any evidence, unless the plaintiff disproved the allegation of the want of bona fides. Naranbhai Virghukandas v. Narosh Sankar Chundra Shankaratal, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 98.

Quære,—Whether a case can be transferred from one Court to another, under Section 6, after the evidence has been taken in the former Court. Ramesh Ashen Koonvar v. W. Tayler; Syud Khorsed Ali v. W. Tayler, W. R., 1864, 15.

Held that a separate suit for refund of the money paid out of the Court, in satisfaction of a decree, is inadmissible under the provisions of Section 6, Act VIII of 1859, and Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861. The question should have been raised and decided in the Miscellaneous Department, when execution was sued out, not having been done, the suit was barred by the aforesaid sections. Tag and others v. Gungherhad, 2 Agra Rep., 45.

Section 6 of Act VIII of 1859, authorizing "a District Court to withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to such District Court and to try such suit itself, or to refer it for trial," &c., does not justify an order by the District Court for the calling up of execution cases from the files of the Subordinate Court, and for the appointment of a manager. Luchmenput Dokur v. Maharajah Jugutinder Bumwari Loll, Marsh., 195.

The mere transfer of a suit for the convenience of the public, or for the acceleration of business, from one Subordinate Court to another, does not affect the authority of the Judge of the District Court to transfer it to his own file, or to another Court, or to retransfer it, if he see sufficient cause for so doing; nor would the circumstance that a case had been up on appeal to the High Court on a preliminary point, and been remanded for a trial on the merits, limit the authority of the District Court Judge to bring it upon his own file, or to transfer it to the file of a Court other than that in which it was instituted. The omission of the Judge to assign his reason for transferring the case does not vitiate his proceeding.

When a Judge transfers a case to his own file, he is at liberty to amend the issues first laid down, and to raise additional issues, and to go into the whole case, except upon any question upon which there has been a judicial finding. Tarwoknath Mookerjee v. Gowree Churn Mookerjee, 3 W. R., 147.

Where a case was originally tried by a Zillah Judge, and on appeal to the High Court on its appellate side the Judges of that Court remanded it to the Court below for a fresh trial, intimating that it was a proper case to be transferred under Clause 13 of the Letters Patent (25 Vict.) constituting the High Court; and where it appeared that questions of English law were involved in the case; that the witnesses and parties were chiefly British subjects, and the plaintiff an officer of the High Court, and resident in Calcutta, the Court ordered the case to be transferred for trial...

The 13th Section of the Letters Patent (1865) of the High Court at Fort William gives the Court power to order a suit to be transferred for trial only where the transfer is agreed on by the parties, or for the purposes of justice; and in the absence of agreement it must be made out that there is not a useful purpose in the hearing the suit, or that if the case be tried in the Court in which it was originally laid the trial will be unsatisfactory.

The mere fact that it would be less expensive to try the case in the High Court is not sufficient of itself for the Court to act upon and order the case to be transferred. Rajah Ojoodeeram Khan v. S. M. N obin money Dossee and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 396.

Neither Section 8, Act XXV of 1837, nor the Code of Civil Procedure authorizes a District Judge to transfer execution cases from his own Court to the Court of the Subordinate Judge. Kedarnath Mahata v. Bungshee Dhar Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 45.

A decree in which no actual proceedings were pending in the Collector's Court at the commencement of Act III of 1870, B. C. (i.e., where an order for attachment had been issued, but the attachment came to an end), was held to have been properly transferred to the Civil Court under Section 3 of that Act. Huro Pershad Roy Chowdry v. Fool Kiskoree Dossee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 308.

Where by the operation of Act VIII (B. C.) of 1889 and Act III of 1870, a decree is transferred (e.g., from the Court of a Deputy Collector to that of a Subordinate Judge), any application as to a matter prior to, or which may affect the decree, (e.g., an application for a review) must be made to the Court which passed the decree. Sreekutty Fudodamba Dossee, in the matter of, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 75.

When a District Moonsiff has jurisdiction to try a suit as a Small Cause Court Judge, he cannot transfer it to the District Moonsiff's Court on any ground of expediency. Bodi Ramayya v. Perma Janakilamudi, 5 Mad. Rep., 172.

Civil Courts have no power to interfere with the vested rights of parties merely by way of penalty, unless they are authorized to do so by positive legislative enactment. Ramsahaj Singh v. Koldeep Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 80.

A suit within the cognizance of the Small Cause Court cannot be lawfully transferred for trial to a Moonsiff's Court. Foonbaj Chowkeedar v. Whelan, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 399.

Held that a Senior Assistant Judge is not competent to hear an appeal from an order made in the execution of a decree in a case in which he is not competent to hear an appeal from the decree itself. Nartherdham Kisandás et al. v. Navnindrám Kushirum, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 46.

The power given by Section 6 of Act VIII of 1859 to a Zillah Judge for the withdrawal of suits from Subordinate Courts should only be exercised upon cause shown, and ordinarily not without opportunity given to the parties to the suit to be heard upon the question.

The terms of Section 6 are inapplicable to suits which the Subordinate Court has received by order of remand from a Court to which the District Court is itself subordinate.

A suit sent by the High Court to a Subordinate Court under a remand to the High Court by Her Majesty's order in Council, and in which, under the Council's remand order, the plaint has been amended, a new statement filed, and new issues framed, is substantially a new suit. Mahomed Zahoor Ali Khan v. Thakooranee Rutla Kunwar, 2 N. W. R., 481.

Where an agreement in writing was signed by the plaintiff and the defendants at Secunderabad, in the territories of the Nizam, for a partnership in a tannery business to be carried on at Bakuram, near Hyderabad, and by the terms of the agreement the tanned skins were to be sent to the plaintiff at Madras, for sale or shipment to England, and hundies in respect of the goods sent to Madras were to be drawn upon the plaintiff at Madras and paid by him, and accounts of the partnership transactions were to be sent to the plaintiff once in eight days,—Held, in a suit for an account of the partnership dealings, that the cause of action had arisen in part within the original civil jurisdiction of the High Court, and, the leave of the Court to bring the suit having been obtained under Section 12 of the Letters Patent of 1865, that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

Held, also, that the jurisdiction of the Court was not affected by the circumstance that the defendants were non-resident foreigners. Bavah Meah Saib v. Khajee Meah Saib, 4 Mad. Rep., 218.

The power of a Civil Judge to transfer appeals to a Principal Su dder Ameen is confined by Clause 3, Section 8 of Act VII of 1843, to appeals from District Moonsiffs. Oliga Sundaram Pillay v. Muttian Chitty, 4 Mad. Rep., 227.

11.—Recorders' Courts in Burmah.

A Recorder, under Act XXI of 1863, being the holder of Bank of Bengal shares, has power to dispose of a suit to which the Bank is a party, in a case of necessity, as when the Commissioner also has shares in the Bank. The Bank of Bengal v. Golam Azim, 12 W. R., 185.

In a suit to make a judgment passed in the Court of Queen's Bench in London a judgment of the Recorder's Court in Rangoon, and to enforce the said judgment in due form of law within the jurisdiction of the Court last mentioned, it was held, with reference to Section 11, Act XXI of 1863, that the Recorder had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it not being a suit for land, and the defendant not dwelling, carrying on business, or personally working for gain within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction, and the cause of action not having arisen within those limits. Stevencing, Droop, and Co. v. C. E. Focke, 9 W. R., 215.

Trespass to personality in a foreign state (the title to such personality depending upon the right to land in such foreign state) is cognizable by the Recorder's Court, so as to rebut a prima facie title to such personality acquired within the Court's jurisdiction.

The Recorder's Court cannot take judicial cognizance of the fact that the country in which the rights of the party attempting to rebut such prima facie title accrued is lawless and unsettled, and possesses no tribunal capable of pronouncing a decision on the rights of the parties which the Recorder's Court could consider as the decision of a Court of competent jurisdiction.

Although the foreign state might be civilized, and have Courts competent to try the title, the Recorder's Court would have a right in a suit against a party subject to his jurisdiction to try incidentally the question of title to the land for the purpose of determining the right to the personality.

The Recorder's Court has the same powers in respect to the grant of probates to the estates of natives as the High Court before and after the passing of the Indian Succession Act, i.e., it cannot grant probates of the will of a Hindu in any case in which, according to the Hindu Law of Inheritance and Succession, the testator had no power to make a will; and, in dealing with the will after probate has been granted, the Court cannot give effect to it, so far as it is contrary to the Hindu Law of Inheritance.

Quere,—Whether the Recorder's Court has power to grant letters of administration, or such letters with a will annexed, to the estates and effects of a native of British India; but in all cases it must be guided in granting them by the Law of Inheritance or Succession of such native, and it cannot grant administration to the estate of a Hindu, Mahomedan, or Bhuddist which would interfere with such law.

The Recorder of Moulmein has no jurisdiction to execute a decree made by the late Court of the Town Assistant Commissioner.

There is nothing in the Recorder's Act (XXI of 1863) to justify the conclusion that the Small Cause Court at Rangoon is not properly constituted. Ko Shoay Dhoon v. Shajahgan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 331.

The Recorder of Moulmein, in trying an administration suit, valued at Rupees 13,000, found, as to Rupees 6,000 in value of the property claimed that it did not exist. The value of the amount decreed by him amounted to Rupees 7,000. Held that, under Act XXI of 1863, Sections 27 and 39, the appeal lay in the first instance to the High Court, and not to the Privy Council.

Under Act XXI of 1863, the Recorder of Moulmein has no power to order execution to issue on a judgment of the late Court of the First-Class Assistant Commissioner of the district of Amherst.

Act XXI of 1863, after establishing Recorder's Courts in British Burmah, and fixing the limits of their jurisdiction, enacts by Section 10 that, "save as in this Act provided, no Court other than the Recorder's Court shall have or exercise any civil jurisdiction whatever within the limits for the time being fixed as aforesaid."

Act XI of 1865, after declaring that the words "local government" should denote "the person authorized to administer the Executive Government in such part," enacts, by Section 3, that the Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, constitute Courts of Small Causes under that Act at any places within the territories under such government. By Section 3 the Judge of such Small Cause Court was to be appointed by the Local Government. Act XI of 1865 does not repeal Section 10 of Act XXI of 1865.

By notification dated 1st September, 1869, the Governor-General appointed a Judge of the Small Cause Court at Rangoon, extended the provisions of Act III of 1864 to British Burmah, and invested the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah with the powers conferred as a Local Government by that Act.

Act XXXVII of 1865 extended the jurisdiction of the said Court to an amount not exceeding Rupees 1,000, and notified that the territorial jurisdiction would be co-extensive with that of the existing Small Cause Court jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court at Rangoon.

Held that the Small Cause Court at Rangoon so established was properly constituted. There is nothing to show that the words "Local Government," as used in Act XI of 1865, were intended to include a chief commissioner.

Ko Shoay Door v. Shujahgan, 6 B. L. R., 196. The High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a reference from a Recorder relative to questions arising in execution of a decree in his Court.

Ashburner and Co. v. Currie and Co., 13 S. W. R., C. R., 27. The mere fact of errors of procedure having been committed in a trial before a Recorder would not warrant the High Court in saying that in pronounced against the validity of a will after investigation he had acted without jurisdiction, or in interfering with his decision.

In the matter of Mee Tsee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 351.

12. — MILITARY COURTS.

In a case where the question arose whether, notwithstanding Section 99 of the Mutiny Act, the defendants, residents of Sinchal and Jallapahar, who were ordinary persons amenable to that Act, were or were not within the jurisdiction of the Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling as ex-officio Judge of the Small Cause Court within the hill territory of the district,—

Held that the defendants were not amenable to the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court.

Held also that the word "place" in Section 99 of the Mutiny Act is not used in the limited sense supposed by the Judge of the Small Cause Court (who held that "a place must have limits," and referred to Webster's definition, "a fortified town or post, a fortress, a fort"). and that Sinchal and Jallapahar are places in India beyond the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court in Calcutta, and that the actions were cognizible only by a Military Court of

A native camp-follower attached to a European regiment is amenable to the Mutiny Act. Musseeroodeen v. Khoda Buksh and another, 10 W. R., 386.

The Military authorities have no right to appropriate to their own uses houses, the property of private individuals in cantonments, except subject to the conditions prescribed by the Military Regulations on the faith of which the houses were built or purchased. Held by the Appellate Court, that when a person was in the occupation of a house in cantonments he could not be ejected without due notice. Carey v. Robinson, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 88; Bourke's Rep., O. C., 399.

Where Government had permitted the Military authorities to use certain land for cantonment purposes, which land was subsequently resumed by the Government,—Held that the Military authorities had no power to make a grant of the land given for military purposes for a period longer than the land would remain in their possession, and that the term of limitation had expired to bar the ordinary right of Government as a landlord to demand rent. Baboo Ramchund v. The Collector of Mirzapore, 3 Agra Rep., A. C., 7.

A European soldier doing duty as an Army schoolmaster, not being liable to a Court of Requests, is not exempted from liability to a Cantonment Court of Small Causes. Marwudy Bejjarajooy v. Haynes, 6 Mad. Rep., 83.

The provisions of Act XII of 1842 apply to all the Courts established by Act XI of 1841, whether those Courts are held within or without British territory. It is incumbent on all persons claiming the privilege of suit given by these Acts, when residents within cantonments, to cause themselves to be registered. Tej Ram v. Moollan Mul, 3 N. W. R., 70.

An appeal lies to the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces, from the decree of a Military Court of Requests held at Morar, Gwalior. Sections 2 and 17 of Act XI of 1841 must be read together as regards persons amenable to Military Courts of Requests beyond British territory. Moollan Mul v. Gunsam Das, 3 N. W. R., 75.

A European British subject was convicted by the Cantonment Magistrate under Section 48 of the Police Act (Act XXIV of 1859). Held that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction, 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. XXV.

An appeal lies under Act XI of 1841. The term "rules in force" in Section 17 of Act XI of 1841 is to be interpreted as equivalent to "rules for the time being in force." It is not competent for a Court of Requests to pronounce a decree (by default) in favour of defendant without considering the evidence before it. The Code of Civil Procedure, except so far as its provisions enact rules for appeals from Subordinate Courts, does not apply to proceedings under Act XI of 1841 (Military Court of Requests Act). These proceedings are regulated by the Act, and Sections 114 and 119 of the Civil Procedure Code do not apply. Gunsam Dass v. Moollan Mul, 2 N. W. R., 192 and 229.

13.—COMMISSIONERS.

In 1855 the Privy Council decided against the right of the Bengal Government to resume and reassess the ghatwallee lands in the zemindary of Kurruckpore. In 1850 the Sudder Court, acting as Special Commissioners under Regulation III of 1828, at the instance of the zemindar directed the release of the resumed lands, but did not decide as to the right to the mesne profits which the Government had received from the ghatwals during the period of resumption, deeming this question beyond their competency as Special Commissioners. The zemindar having appealed to the Privy Council, complaining of the omission, and contending that the mesne profits should have been wholly adjudged to him,—Held that the Special Commissioners had jurisdiction to decide upon the true title to the whole money in dispute, and to direct the payment and disposition of the same with interest. Rajah Leela-nund Singh v. The Government of Bengal, 1 W. R., P. C., 20.

Plaintiff not having appealed to the Revenue Commissioner against the sale of his estate for arrears of Government revenue, the Civil Court is not competent, under Section 33, Act XI of 1859, to entertain a suit for the annulment of the sale. Mohun Lall Tagore v. The Collector of Zillah Tirhoot, 1 W. R., 356.

The High Court refused to express any opinion on a petition complaining of the refusal of the Deputy Commissioner of Hazareebagh to enforce a bond specially registered under Act XVI of 1864, and intimated that the petitioner's proper course was to appeal to the Judicial Commissioner, and if dissatisfied with his order to come up in special appeal to the High Court. Jungti Sahoo and another, petitioners, 6 W. R., Mis, 121.

Where the Assistant Commissioner in execution in 1857 acted without jurisdiction in giving interest when the decree did not award it, and the claim for interest was disallowed by the Deputy Commissioner, the Assistant Commissioner's order was a judicial one from which no appeal had been preferred,—Held by the High Court that it was too late now to interfere with an order passed so long ago as 1857, as the judgment-debtor, by neglecting to appeal, must be presumed to have acquiesced in that order. Rajah Ram Keran Doo v. Mussamut Fuhinda Bibee and others, 7 W. R., 37.

An Assistant Commissioner in Chota Nagpore exercising the powers of a Sudder Ameen has no jurisdiction to try a suit valued at Rs. 2,800. The suit is cognizable by a Deputy Commissioner who has the powers of a Principal Sudder Ameen. Dohdhey v. Munaran Tewary and others, 7 W. R., 356.

Assam does not come within the definition of a province, but of a district, for the purposes of Act X. and letters of administration under Section 235 of that Act, is vested, not in the Deputy Commissioner, but in the Judicial Commissioner.

The Court of the Judicial Commissioner, not of the Deputy Commissioner, is the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction in Assam, and the Judicial Commissioner is the officer to whom, under Act XI of 1858, the charge of minors and their property is committed. Thakoor Kristo Surma Adhikaree v. Basodee Bostomee, 12 W. R., 424.

Civil Courts have jurisdiction to enquire into the title of lands enfranchised by the Inam Commissioner, and the summons granted by the Commissioner may be annulled, without destroying its effect as an enfranchisement of the Inam. Cherukuri Vankanna v. Mantravathi Laksmi Narajana Sastrutu, 2 Mad. Rep., 327.

A suit will lie to set aside an order of the Commissioner of Chota Nagpore directing the plaintiff to pay Government revenue at a certain rate. Kebul Ram v. The Government, 5 W. R., 47.

A prisoner was convicted by one Court of criminal intimation, and on a charge by A., the conviction being confirmed on appeal by the Judicial Commissioner, but was acquitted by another Court of assault and robbery alleged to have been committed on the same day, on a charge by B. The latter Court pointed out to the Judicial Commissioner that the facts proved in B.'s case raised a strong presumption that A.'s case was a false one, the result of a conspiracy against the prisoner; and the Judicial Commissioner proposed to set aside the conviction of the prisoner in A.'s case, not on the evidence in that case, but on extraneous evidence derived from B.'s case. Held that the High Court had no jurisdiction in the matter, but that the Judicial Commissioner could apply to the Government for a pardon on the ground stated by him. Nussur Ali v. G. Hart, 6 W. R., Cr., 42.

14.—Miscellaneous Courts.

The Court of the Rajah of Independent Tipperah is not a competent Court within the meaning of Section 2, Act VIII of 1859. Mahomed Ahmed v. Alibor Gazee and others, 10 W. R., 337.

The Court of a Deputy Collector is a Court of Justice within the meaning of Section 237, Act VIII of 1859. John Concile and others v. Barbara Owen John Eliau, 10 W. R., 43.

The Coroner of Calcutta has no power to commit any person to prison pending an inquest.

In cases where he has authority to commit, a commitment to the officers deputed to receive prisoners by the statute in force is valid, and it is not necessary that the commitment be directed to the Sheriff. In re William Taylor, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 101.

Act XLII of 1860, Section 6, does not alter or interfere with the jurisdiction of the Military Courts of Requests constituted by Statute 20 and 21 Vict., c. 66, s. 67. Shanmuga v. Middleton, 1 Mad. Rep., 443.

The remedy by suit in a foreign Court continues open for the period prescribed by the law of that Court, without reference to our own Law of Limitation of suits. A foreign judgment is conclusive as between the parties when it cannot be questioned upon the ground of fraud, or want of jurisdiction, or that it was unduly obtained.

Suits on foreign judgments may be maintained within six years from the time the cause of action (the judgment) arose. Boloram Gooy v. Kameenee Dosshe, 4 W. R., 108.

An appeal, under Section 84, Act XX of 1866, from the order of a Deputy Commissioner in Chota Nagpore, must be made to the Judicial Commissioner, who exercises the powers of a Zillah Judge in all the districts of that division. Budhu Mahat, petition, 8 W. R., 266.

By Regulation XIII of 1833, Section 2, the Courts of Dewanny Adawul of Zillahs Ramghur and Jungle Mehsals were abolished. By the 4th Section the administration of civil and criminal justice shall be vested in an officer appointed by the Governor-General in Council to be denominated Agent to the Governor-General. By the 5th Section authority is referred to the Governor-General to determine in Council inter alia "to what extent the decision of the Agent in civil suits shall be final." In 1834, by an order of the Governor-General, it was ordered that no appeal should lie from the orders of the Agent to the Sudder Court. Held that an order of an Agent within the districts to which the Regulation applies, made previous to the passing of the Regulation, declaring A. to be the rightful heir of B., was not affected by the Regulation, and was not judicial in its nature; and that, therefore, in a subsequent suit relating to the inheritance to the same property, the heir of A., could not set up the order as conclusive. Musamut Binode Koomaree v. Purdham Gopal and others, Marsh., 80; and see W. R. F. B., 26.

It not being shown that the Court of Dewan Ahilkar of Cooch Behar is a Court within the British territories, or a Court established by the Governor-General in a foreign state,—Held, the Judge of Rajshahye had no jurisdiction under Section 284, Act VIII of 1839, to execute a decree of that Court. Jadab Chundra Toi Paramasiv v. Dinath Das, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 134; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 154.

15.—Court of Wards.

The Court of Wards is not prevented by Act XL of 1858 from taking a minor and his estate under their protection, by reason of a certificate of administration granted by the Civil Court under that Act. Mudhooosoodun Singh v. The Collector of Midnapore, 3 W. R., 83.

No civil action will lie against the Court of Wards in respect of anything done by it regarding the person and education of any minor entrusted to its superintendence. The Collector of Beerbhoom v. Mundakinesh Debia, W. R., 1864, 352.

The High Court cannot restrain the Court of Wards, whether acting with or without jurisdiction, from interference in the bestowal in marriage of a minor. Gujadhur Pershaud v. Narain Singh, petitioner, 5 W. R., Mis., 41.

The Court of Wards has authority, under Section 10, Regulation X of 1793, to determine the proper remuneration to be given to the manager of an estate under their charge, and the Civil Courts have no power to question the arrangements made by the
On a consideration of the provisions of Regulation L.I. of 1803 (the provisions of Regulation X of 1793 are similar), it was held that the mere fact that the Court of Wards has charge of the estates of a female did not necessarily disqualify her from contracting debts. That Regulation must be construed strictly, the provisions requiring the Collector to report to the Board a female as disqualified; and the subsequent procedure thereon should be strictly carried out, as not mere matters of form, but necessary preliminaries, before the female can be considered disqualified. From the absence of the observance of those provisions in the case of R. A., and the conduct of the Government officials representing the Court of Wards, the custody of the Court of Wards of her estates was held to be of such a character as did not render her a disqualified female incapable of contracting debts. The case having been framed incorrectly, it was, under the circumstances, remanded for trial by the High Court under special directions. Mahomed Zahoor v. Thakooranee Rutta Koer, 9 W. R., F. C., 9.

The Court of Wards has a perfect right to maintain a suit for the recovery of land belonging to a minor, which is in possession of a person not having a good title thereto. Bolakoo Sahoo v. The Court of Wards, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 34.

Under the provisions of Sections 9 and 12 of Act XL of 1858 the minor's estate cannot be made over to the Court of Wards, but the Collector should be directed, under Section 12 of that Act, to take charge of the estate of the minor, and he thereupon becomes invested with authority to appoint a manager of the property, and a guardian of the person of the minor. Sidhoo Lal, 2 N. W. R., 398.

In the management of estates under the Court of Wards the Collector acts, not in his ordinary capacity as an officer of the executive Government, but as a ministerial officer of the Court of Wards, and for misfeasance in that capacity he is made personally responsible by the regulation constituting that Court. Chowdoo Sheoraj Singh v. Collector of Muradabad, 2 N. W. R., 379.

Held that the Court of Wards has jurisdiction over a bond the amount of which is affected by Act XIV of 1859, Section 20. Coultroup and others v. Smith, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 204.

The judgment of the Judges of the late Supreme Court sitting under Act IX of 1850 (the Small Causes Courts Act) are judgments of a Court established by Royal Charter, and are therefore not affected by Act XIV of 1859, Section 20. Coultroup and others v. Smith, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 204.

Small Cause Courts in the Presidency Towns have no jurisdiction to entertain petitions and make decrees under the provisions of Sections 52 and 53, Act XX of 1866. In the matter of Nil Ramal Bannerjee v. Madhuan Chunder Dube, 6 B. L. R., 177.

In a suit upon a decree of the Small Cause Court brought by reason of there being no process of that Court whereby satisfaction of its decree could be obtained,—Held that the High Court had power to award to the plaintiff his costs of suit. Madhu Mohun Bose v. Lawrence, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 66.

It is no ground for removal of a cause by certiorari from the Court of Small Causes that a difficult point of law is likely to be involved in it. The proper course is to apply to the lower Court under Section 7 of Act XXVI of 1864. Madhuk Kissen Satt v. Gour Soonder Satt, Cor. Rep., 90.

In a suit brought in the High Court, where the plaintiff shall recover less than Rs. 1,000, no costs can be awarded unless the Judge shall certify that the action was fit to be brought in the High Court by reason of the difficulty, novelty, or general importance of the case, or of some erroneous course of decisions in like cases in the Court of Small Causes. Harran Chunder Gangooly v. Shib Chunder Mitter, 2 Hyde's Rep., 237.

The words "Local Government" in Act XI of 1865 were not intended to include a Chief Commissioner. Ko Shooy Doon v. Shooygan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 331.

(a) Their Jurisdiction.
(b) Suits not within their Jurisdiction. (c) Their Procedure.

A suit upon an instalment bond given for arrears of rent is cognizable in the Small Cause Court. Also a suit by a judgment-debtor to recover money paid by him to be applied in satisfaction of a decree under Act X of 1859, but not so applied by the decree-holder. Rajah Shitl Churn Ghosal v. Mahomed Ally; Thakoor Churn Roy v. Gopal Kisho Roy, 2 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 5.

Suit for money for which plaintiff agreed to let defendant tap certain date-trees and appropriate the produce for a single season. Held that such a suit was not one for rent, but for the breach of a contract in respect of which a Small Cause Court has jurisdiction. Deo Nath Ghose v. Pachoo Mollah, 6 W. R., 8.

Where an ijara constituted a mortgage of the rentals as a security for an amount due on a bond, with a stipulation that the balance, after paying the jumma payable by the mortgagee, should be applied by the mortgagee in payment of the bond,—Held that the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to try what amount was due on the bond, and also to try the question of payment by means of the rent assigned. *Mokhima Chunder Mookerjee v. Ram

A claim for money below Rs. 500 paid as revenue by one partner in an estate on account of another, in order to save the whole estate from sale, arises under an implied contract between them, and therefore is cognizable by a Small Cause Court. No special appeal lies in such a case under Section 27, Mohun Mookerdar*, 6 W. R., 325.

Temporary imprisonment beyond the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court was held not to bar the jurisdiction of that Court in respect of defendants who formerly resided within its jurisdiction and whose families continued to reside within it, there being, moreover, nothing to show that the defendants had no intention of not returning to their former place of abode on the termination of their imprisonment. *Gopal Chunder Sirce v. Kur-

A suit by a gomasta for excess expenses incurred by him, over and above the amount of rents collected by him, is cognizable by a Small Cause Court, notwithstanding that the nature of the defence may render it necessary to investigate the accounts of the mehal. *Prsomsa Chunda Roy v.
Sree Nath Sreemany and others*, 7 W. R., 422.

A case in which a zamindar sues a putneedar for dak expenses, according to his putnee-jumma, is of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes; and as such, by Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal will lie. Maharaheen Dajaj Makhtab Chunder Bahadoor v. Radha Binode Chowdhrty,
8 W. R., 517.

Held that a suit will lie in the Small Cause Court for damages sustained in consequence of deeree-holder fraudulently omitting to certify to the Court the payments made by plaintiff. *Bhugoban Tantee

A Court of Small Causes has jurisdiction in a suit for the recovery of damage under Rs. 500 sustained by the illegal removal of crops, and no special appeal lies. A lower Appellate Court should not decline jurisdiction in such a case, if, for the purpose of deciding upon plaintiff's claim, it is necessary to go into the question of the title of the reminders, although the decree would be binding, guarding the subject-matter of the suit, i. e., the value of the crops. *Ram Teebun Koyee v. Shahaasdee

A suit to recover money paid as price of land in consequence of vendor's failure to complete the bargain by registration of the deed of sale, is main-tainable in a Court of Small Causes, being substantially a suit for breach of contract for sale of land.

A suit by a zamindar against his putneedar for the recovery of money expended on account of remindaree dak charges, which the putneedar is bound by his contract to bear, is cognizable by the Court of Small Causes. *H. S. Ershins v. Trilochun
Chatterjee*, 9 W. R., 518.

Where, on the allegation that defendant had sub-let land to him for the purpose of raising crops under a contract to share the produce between them, plaintiff sought to recover the value of his share of the crop which defendant had appropriated, the High Court were of opinion that the claim was not for a sum exacted in excess of rent within the meaning of Section 10, Act X of 1859, and that, if proved, it might be enforced by the Small Cause Court. Goreeboolah Poramanic v. Fakere Maho-med Kholoa, 10 W. R., 203.

An action was brought in a Small Cause Court against a military officer residing at M., at which the only other military persons stationed were a staff officer and two sergeants. Held that the Court had jurisdiction to try the case, the suit not being one exclusively cognizable by a Court of Requests under Section 103 of the Mutiny Act of 1864.

Where the plaintiff sued for a portion of grain in the nature of nett rent which had fallen due, that amount being within its jurisdiction, although the whole amount payable from first to last under the agreement would be in excess of its jurisdiction,— Held that the suit was cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. *Narasidasvar v. Marana Kavun-

In an action for damages on account of defendant's refusal to take delivery of goods of the value of Rs. 3,699-6-8, sold to him by plaintiff, which goods were afterwards re-sold at a loss of Rs.
344-5-9.—Held that the Court of Small Causes had jurisdiction, notwithstanding that the original contact was for more than Rs. 1,000. W. Kuppy Chetti v. Chidambara Mudali, 8 Mad. Rep., O. J., 170.

A suit for debts against two defendants whose liability was joint, but one of whom at the time of filing the plaint is neither resident nor personally working for gain within the limits of the jurisdiction, may be tried by a Small Cause Court within whose jurisdiction the other defendant is resident at the time of the commencement of the suit, provided an order is obtained from the High Court under Section 4 of Act XXII of 1861. *Rungiam v. Chinn-

A razenama stipulating for the payment of a debt into Court by periodical instalments, provided beyond one week may be received and enforced in a Small Cause Court. *Chinnamyyapa v. Peer Amed

The Small Cause Courts in the presidency towns have, under Act IX of 1850, jurisdiction in suits for land under Rs. 500 in value. Rahakmany Boy-stamey v. Anundomoye Dabee and her husband, Dhurr Doss Banerjee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 144.

In a suit by a mortgagee, the prayer of the plaint was for a decree for Rs. 500 with interest, and for foreclosure or sale in default of payment. Held that it was an action within Section 9 of Act XXVI of 1864, and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to costs. Khettermohon Chatterjee v. Kissorimohon Bose, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 27.

A Small Cause Court has jurisdiction to give a simple money-decree in a suit upon a bond in which landed property is hypothecated. Doorkyar Roy v. Dulsingar Singh, 12 W. R., 367.

A suit properly brought as a malicious prosecution and special pecuniary loss resulting therefrom is cognizable in a Small Cause Court. Silarraman and others v. Susa Pillai and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 254.

Where a suit was brought for interest amounting to less than Rs. 500, due upon a bond for Rs. 1,000, not yet payable,—Held that a Court of Small Causes has jurisdiction to try the case, the plaintiff having had a separate and complete cause of action upon the bond entitling him to recover the annual interest as it accrued due. The fact that forgery of the bond is set up as a defence makes no difference. Anantha Narayananpattyyan and others v. Ganganaty Aiayan and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 459.

Plaintiff sued for recovery of a sum of money lent upon the pledge of personal property, and that the moveable property pledged may be declared liable. Held that a Small Cause Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit to enforce a contract pledging moveable property. Appan Pillai v. Subraya Mutphen and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 474.

In an action for damages on account of defendant's refusal to take delivery of goods of the value of Rs. 3,699-6-8, sold to him by plaintiff, which goods were afterwards re-sold at a loss of Rs. 344-5-9,—Held that the Court of Small Causes had jurisdiction, notwithstanding that the original contract was for more than Rs. 1,000. W. Kuppu Chetti v. C. Chidambaba Mudali, 3 Mad. Rep., O. J., 170.

The plaintiffs advanced Rs. 15,000 against the defendant's grain, consigned to Hong-Kong, to be there sold on his account by the plaintiffs' agents. The plaintiffs subsequently gave credit to the defendant for Rs. 14,115-3-3, alleged to have been received by them as the proceeds of the sale, and sued him for the balance in the Bombay Small Cause Court, abandoning the excess so as to bring the claim within the Court's extended jurisdiction of Rs. 1,000. The defendant disputed the correctness of the account sales forwarded by the agents at Hong-Kong, and contended that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the case. The Judge, subject to the opinion of the High Court upon the facts as stated, struck the case out of the list for want of jurisdiction,—Held that, as both the plaintiffs and the defendant were bound, by the nature of the transaction, to have the proceeds of the sale applied to satisfy the advance made by the plaintiffs to the defendant, the receipt by the plaintiffs of the amount, for which they gave credit in their particulars of demand, was in the nature of a part payment; and that the suit was, therefore, on a balance of account, and within the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes. Ewart, Latham, and Co. v. Haji Mahommed Sadali, 4 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 133.

If a plaintiff, A., claiming that B. might be ordered to fill up an excavation, or to pay him Rs. 25 as damages for the same, it appeared that there was no ground for the first relief sought. Held that the suit was cognizable by the Court of Small Causes.

Nanda Kumar Banerjee v. Ishak Chandra Banerjee, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 91; S. C., 10 W. R., 130.

A suit was brought in the Small Cause Courts to recover two sums of money, one cause of action being for money lent, and the other for goods sold and delivered. The amount of both claims was within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court, but the pecuniary claim in each case was cognizable by the District Moonsiff (the Small Cause Court side). Held, that the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Arunachellam Chetty v. Gangatharum Aiyyan, 5 Mad. Rep., 287.

A suit to establish the plaintiff's right to the exclusive possession of personal property, of which the plaintiff and her husband had been dispossessed by actual seizure in execution of a decree against the plaintiff's husband, is cognizable by a Small Cause Court. Janakiammal v. Vilkenadidien, 5 Mad. Rep., 194.

A Small Cause Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit by one of several debtors against whom a decree for rent had been enforced against his co-debtors for contribution. The meaning of the word "contract" in Sec. 6, Act XI of 1865, considered. Govinda Muneya Tiriruyan v. Bapu, 5 Mad. Rep., 200.

Where the defendant entered into an agreement in writing with the plaintiff (the widow of defendant's brother) to deliver to her every year a specified quantity of paddy by way of maintenance,—Held, that the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to entertain a suit for a breach of the agreement. Y. Pumpanna, widow of J. Venkata Reddy v. Y. Chinna Reddy and others, 5 Mad. Rep., 432.

A suit to recover arrears of revenue which the plaintiff was compelled to pay by the Revenue authorities, but which the defendant was liable to pay, is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Parasaram Chedumbraiyan v. Kruniayand others, 5 Mad. Rep., 462.

A Small Cause Court has concurrent jurisdiction to try suits for a sum not exceeding Rs. 10, cognizable by a village Moonsiff under Section 5, Regulation IV of 1816. Parasoraram Pillay v. Rumuswamy, 5 Mad. Rep., 45.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court to recover the value of certain nets, the property of the plaintiffs, of which the defendants had taken wrongful possession, and damages for the loss sustained by the plaintiffs, in that they were unable to carry on their business as fishermen by reason of the detention of their nets by the defendants. Held that the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Maduvthan v. Subbar, 6 Mad. Rep., 34.

A suit to assess rent at an increased rate upon the defendants, and for a decree for rent at such rate in respect of land situated in a town, and upon which either a house or shop stands, is not a suit for rent within the meaning of Section 6, Act XI of 1865, and is maintainable in the ordinary Civil Courts, and not in the Small Cause Courts. Joy Kishore Chowdrian v. Nubee Buksh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 178.

A Small Cause Court has jurisdiction in cases involving questions as to the validity or otherwise under the Hindu law of a deed of gift or a deed of sale. Grish Chunder Roy v. Gobind Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 88.
A notice was issued on defendant requiring him to quit the land or pay rent, and defendant refused to do either. Plaintiff therefore rightly brought his suit for damages, and not for rent, and the Court rejected the suit as being substantially one for rent, its order was set aside, and the suit ordered to be restored to the file of that Court. Bhoobun Mohun Bose v. Chundernauth Banerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 69.

A suit to recover money as damages, measuring on behalf of defendant money which defendant had agreed to pay to the purchase-money in order to save from sale in execution of a decree an estate which plaintiff had purchased from him, is a suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court, from whose decision no special appeal lies. Ramgutty Gangooly v. Kuralee Prusad Gangooley, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 446.

Plaintiffs having obtained a sum from defendants on a bond, let certain land to them in ijarah for a term of years on condition that the latter after realizing rents from the ryots would give credit on account of interest on the said bond, pay rent due to plaintiffs' landlord, and pay the balance to plaintiffs. Having failed in the engagements, defendants were sued in the Small Cause Court. Held that the suit was a suit on a contract, and could not have been brought anywhere else than in the Small Cause Court. Nobin Chunder Vodre v. Kedar Nanth Chuckerbutty, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 228.

Section 9, Act XI of 1865, is no bar to a suit against Municipal Commissioners being brought in a Court of Small Causes. Hurriss Chunder Tadaspulter v. O'Brien, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 248.

In a suit for damages for breaking down and removing bricks from a small area of land where defendant's plea was bond fide purchase for value from plaintiff's predecessor, and plaintiff replied that the sale was invalid, as one made by a Hindu widow without legal necessity,—Held that the suit was cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Shumboo Chunder Mullick v. Pran Kristo Mullick, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 195.

Suits for wages under Rs. 50 alleged to be due from an European British subject to a native can be tried in a Small Cause Court in the Mofussil. Mirza Ramjan Beg v. J. Cook, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 91, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 428.

Suits for defamation of character, where there has not been any actual pecuniary loss, are not under Clause 3, Section 6, Act XI of 1865, cognizable by the Small Cause Courts. Bhairub Chandra Chuckerbutty v. Mahendra Chandra Chuckerbutty, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 59: 13 S. W. R., C. R., 118.

Where actual pecuniary damages have resulted from personal injury, the suit for damages as a whole will lie in the Small Cause Court, even though it should include damages for loss of reputation. Ganga Narain Moityo v. Gudadhur Chowdry, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 434.

A suit for the price of trees cut down and removed is not the less a suit for damages, because the Court, in order to determine whether the plaintiff is entitled as damages to the value of his trees, has to go into evidence as to whether they belong to the plaintiff or not. Such a suit is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and no special appeal will lie. Shib Deen Tewary v. Bukhee Ram Protab Singh, W. R., 1864, Mis., 3.

Where a cultivator is a mere servant of the landlord, a suit for damages will lie against him in the Small Cause Court. If the cultivator is a tenant to whom the landlord has sub-let the land, a suit for non-fulfilment of his contract by the tenant will lie under Act X of 1859. Sreenath Dutta v. Dwary Dhallie, 2 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 2.

The jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court in a suit on a kubuleut for damages, not exceeding Rs. 500, is not affected because damages exceeding that sum may be payable under the same kubuleut. J. W. Smith v. Gopal Sheekh, 3 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 14.

If a co-sharer of personal property sells the property without the consent and authority of the other owner, that other owner may sue the purchaser for the price of his share. Small Cause Courts have jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. Radhakant Shaha v. Kaminee Soondery Dossee, 2 W. R., 37.

A suit to recover from the defendant Rs. 235 paid to him in excess of his share of the produce of certain lands, is cognizable in the Small Cause Court, and consequently no special appeal will lie in such a case under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861. Joynarain Manjre v. Muddoosoodun Gorait, 2 W. R., 134.

A suit upon a contract for the payment of a stipulated sum per annum to the owner for the leave granted by him to the defendants to use a path across his land is cognizable by the Small Cause Court. Wooma Persad Shaw v. Shumsher Sirdar Mehter, 4 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 10.

The Court which has jurisdiction in a proceeding to enforce payment, under the provisions of the Registration Act XVI of 1864, of a registered bond, is the Court in which a suit for the amount claimed is maintainable. Keshub Lall Mitter v. Mosadby Mundul, 4 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 11.

Suit for rent or hire of land which defendant used and caused to be used for passing and re-passing to and from his steamer, Held that, if there was no express hiring, the defendant ought to be sued for damages for trespassing upon the plaintiff's land; that, if he agreed to pay for the use of a way across the land, it would not be rent, and that in either case the Small Cause Court was competent to entertain the suit. Brice v. Toogood, 5 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 18.

(b) Suits not within their Jurisdiction.

No suit will lie for money paid out of Court in execution of a decree, without satisfaction having been entered on the decree. All such questions must be determined by the Court executing the decree. Alumjia Beebee v. Gooro Churn Roy, 2 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 5.

A Small Cause Court cannot entertain a suit for damages sustained in consequence of the destruction of indigo plants, in execution of an award under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859; nor for damages in the shape of the value of koli crop, recovered by the decree of a competent Court; nor for costs awarded by a competent Court in a possessory suit under the same action. T. J. Kenny v. Kolum Mundde, 5 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 1.

A suit for maintenance is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. Nobin Kalee Dabea v. Bindooabashinee, 5 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 5.

An action for cattle, or the value of cattle, cannot lie in a Civil Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of a Small Cause Court jurisdiction. Anonymous, 2 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 5.

Held that a suit for Rs. 100 would not lie in the Small Cause Court upon a deed by which the defendant conveyed to the plaintiff, in lieu of the amount (Rs. 100), due to her as a dower, a half share in all moveable and immovable property, and under which deed, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to a moiety of all such property, but could not sue for the sum originally stipulated for. Neeloo Beebe v. Misser Biswas, 6 W. R., 12.

A suit by one co-sharer of an estate who has paid Government revenue to save the estate from sale, against another sharer for his share of the Government revenue so paid, is not maintainable in a Court of Small Causes under Section 6, Act XI of 1865. Modoooodun Mozoondar and others v. Bindooabashinee Dosses and others, 6 W. R., 15.

A Small Cause Court has jurisdiction only as regards arrears of fixed maintenance, but not to determine the right to receive it. Bhugwan Chunder Bose and others v. Bindooabashinee Dosses, 6 W. R., 286.

A suit (valued at Rs. 500) for specific performance of a contract is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. Consequently no special appeal will lie in such a case. Nilkant Surma and others v. Bishen Bishee and others, 6 W. R., 322.

A suit by a co-sharer for contribution in respect of arrears of revenue paid by him in excess of his quota to save the entire estate from sale is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. Brommoroo Gorwamee v. Prannath Chowdry and others, 7 W. R., 17.

A suit by a co-sharer for contribution in respect of Government revenue paid by him in excess of his quota is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court, as the extent of the share in respect of which contribution is sought cannot be determined without deciding a question of title. Kali Nath Roy v. Nila Ram Poramonic, 7 W. R., 32.

The Small Cause Court at Kishnaghur has no jurisdiction to execute a decree against Government. If the Court should attempt to execute such decree the plaintiff who applied for that execution would be liable to be sued for damages. J. J. Doyle v. Dwarkanath Chatterjee and others, 8 W. R., 89.

Held that a suit by a widow for arrears of maintenance fixed by a Mooniss's decree, where defendent urged non-liability on the ground that the property of plaintiff's husband was exhausted, and that defendant had already brought an action in the Mooniss's Court for release from his liability, was not cognizable by the Small Cause Court. Kaminee Dassee v. Bishonath Shahak, 9 W. R., 214.

A suit for salvage, even when the saved property has been abandoned by those in charge of it, is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Kishore Singh and others v. Gunnish Mookerjee, 9 W. R., 252.

A Small Cause Court cannot entertain a suit for the possession of a tree, nor for the annual delivery of the produce, so long as the tree should be productive. But a suit for a definite quantity of the produce of the tree, or the value thereof, may be entertained by a Small Cause Court if the value be within the prescribed limit. Shanti Lakshminarasappa v. Veek Venkatramadas, 3 Mad. Rep., A., 237.

A suit brought to enforce a debt or demand not exceeding Rs. 500 which is secured upon, and must in law be prima facie satisfied out of, moveable and immovable property, is not a suit of a nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes under Section 27 of Act XXII of 1861, so as to exclude a right to special appeal. This is so though the plaint on the face of it seeks recovery in the alternative, either from the mortgagor personally, or from the mortgaged property. Atmaram B. Kagji v. Sadashiv Mahajan, 2 Bom. Rep., 1.

The Court of Small Causes, under Act IX of 1850 and Act XXVI of 1864, has no jurisdiction over suits of smaller value than Rs. 500, on the ground only of the cause of action having arisen within the limits of Calcutta. Lasarus v. Victor, 2 Hyde's Rep., 258.

A Court of Small Causes has no jurisdiction to try an action brought against a military officer in a military cantonment where a Court of Requests is established. Abbo Sait and others v. Arnott and another, 2 Mad. Rep., 439.

A suit set aside as a decree of a Small Cause Court when no defect of jurisdiction is manifest on the face of the proceeding, and where there is no reason to suppose that the decree was obtained by fraud or collusion, cannot be maintained in a Court of Small Causes. Bama Soonderee Dabea v. Kamme Beva and others, 10 W. R., 352.

A Small Cause Court cannot take cognizance of a suit for damages under Rs. 500, when there is no allegation in the plaint that any special damage of a pecuniary nature has resulted from the injury complained of. Raj Chunder Chuckerbully v. Pun-chanan Surma Chowdhry, 4 W. R., 7.

A obtained an ikrar from B. by which B. pledged to A. certain buffaloes which B. purchased with money borrowed from A. The ikrar also stipulated that B. would not alienate his rights in the buffaloes till the sum borrowed was repaid. A. obtained a decree against B. for the amount of the loan and attached the buffaloes in execution. This attachment was set aside at the instance of C., who purchased the buffaloes from B. after the date of the ikrar given by B. to A. A. sues C. (making B. a party) in the Small Cause Court, for the sale of the buffaloes pledged to him by B., or, in default of that, for the sum due to him. Held that such a suit is not a suit within Section 6, Act XI of 1865, to recover personal property, or the value of personal property, and is not cognizable by the Small Cause Court. Ram Gopaull Shah v. Ram Gopaull Shah and others, 9 W. R., 136.

A suit against a woman living under the protection of her husband is not cognizable in a Small Cause Court, if at the time of the commencement of the suit, the husband does not dwell, nor personally, or through a servant or agent carry on business, or work for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. Bowman v. Shawe, 10 W. R., 240.

The plaintiff held an under-tenure within a jote jumla held by B. within D.'s zamindary, and under an assignment from B. paid to the zamindar D. a sum of money as rent due by B. to D. Ultimately D., ignoring such payment, recovered the rent from B. by a separate suit in which no plea of payment was raised, and the latter again recovered his due from plaintiff by a separate suit. Held that an action was not maintainable in the Small Cause Court against the zamindar defendant D. Held that, in the absence of any authority from B. to plaintiff to set-off his payment to D. against the rent due to B., the Collector had no jurisdiction to try whether B. owed the plaintiff a sum equal to the rent, and that the Judge of the Small Cause Court was competent to try whether the plaintiff did pay money for the use of B. at B.'s request, and, if so, to give plaintiff a decree for the same. Deenan Mondal v. Bussun Moyee Dossia, 12 W. R., 190.

A suit brought by an owner to recover moveable property of which he has been dispossessed by an attachment order, may, when the value of the property is less than Rs. 500, be maintained in a Court of Small Causes, if the time that had elapsed, and the latter again recovered his due from plaintiff by a separate suit. Held that the small court had no jurisdiction to try a suit for rent where the defendant bona fide sets up by way of defence that the title to the land in respect of which the rent was claimed, passed from the plaintiff to others, since the creation of the tenancy between the plaintiff and defendant, and that the rent claimed had accrued due after the determination of the plaintiff's title as landlord. Venkatachalum v. Thimmunu Naikem, 5 Mad. Rep., 64.

A suit was brought in the Small Cause Court by a zamindar against a ryot for arrears of rent. The plaintiff alleged that he had tendered pottahs which the defendant was bound to accept, and the defendant alleged that the rent specified was such that he was not bound to accept the pottahs. Held that the suit was not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, there being no contract between the parties for the payment of rent. Kumara Venkatachula Reddiar v. Narayana Reddy, 4 Mad. Rep., 393.

In a former suit, A., as his late mother D.'s heir, sued B. for certain moveable property deposited with B., by D., claiming it as her stridhan, and obtained a decree. In the present suit D.'s grandson C. sues A. for the property, averring it to be ancestral and not stridhan, and alleging collusion between A. and C. Held that the present suit being in effect for a share or part of a share in an intestacy, was not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes; but that the High Court should not interfere with the decision in the former suit as made without jurisdiction, considering the time that had elapsed, and that the parties to the suit had made no application. Nobin Chunder Goswamee v. Dibo Mayu Debey, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 520.

The decree of a Small Cause Court was annulled as made without jurisdiction in a suit to recover money as personal property in respect of a share under an intestacy. Grish Chunder Singh v. Auna Dosses, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 46.

A suit brought by a decree-holder to decide whether moveable property taken in execution is, or is not, the property of his judgment-debtor, is not a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Jethababi Bhakti Chaund v. Bari Lakhoo, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 27.

A suit by an alleged sharer in a hakwartanee allowance to recover from the defendant, who received the whole of such allowance from Government, the plaintiff's share in it, was held not to be a suit recognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Venkaji Lakshman De Stipande v. Yamunabdi, 7 Bom.

Where moveable property has been pledged in a mortgage bond as security for a loan, and the amount due on the mortgage is tendered but denied, the mortgagee's suit for possession will lie in the Small Cause Court. But if there has been rendered and the suit is for possession after acsertainment of defendant's lien on the property, the Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction in the matter. Bhutobarnee Ghosany v. Juggernath Twe-arry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 58.

A suit cannot be maintained in a Small Cause
Court in the mofussil to enforce the decree of a Civil Court. Manchardam Kallandas v. Bakshe
Sahalee Mir Mainud Khan, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C.
J., 231.

A suit to recover money alleged to have been paid in excess of plaintiff's share of rent on account of his co-tenant was held to be a suit for contribution, and as such not recognizable by the Small Cause Court. Pitambur Chuckerbutty v. Bhryubnauth
Pault, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 52.

A. lent money to B. on a mortgage-bond, in which it was stipulated, that if the amount lent was not re-paid on a date specified, the lender was to cause the mortgaged land to be sold and to pay himself out of the proceeds, accounting for any portion of the debt, and covered by the procceeds,—Hold, accordingly, that a suit to recover on the bond in question was not recognizable by the Small Cause Court, which could not give plaintiff such a decree as the above or the remedy to which alone he was entitled. Lloyd's Bank v. Rimschiden, 14 S.

A suit to recover the balance of nikasee papers furnished by defendant in his capacity of tehsildar, there being an allegation in the plaint that the defendant verbally promised to pay part of the sum claimed under the circumstances mentioned therein, was held not to be recognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Skristedhur Bose v. Shama Churn
Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 53.

A suit on the part of an unsuccessful claimant to establish his right to personal property, and to recover the value of the same, is not recognizable by a Small Cause Court. Moudeen Gasee v. Dinob-

A suit, the object of which is not only the recovery of money due upon a bond, but also a declaration of the plaintiff's lien on the property mortgaged by the bond, is not recognizable by the Small Cause Court. Ram Narayun Mookerjee v. Srimati Saratu
Debi, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 39.

Their Procedure.

The Judge of a Small Cause Court, before refer-ing a case for the opinion of the High Court under Sections 7 and 8 of Act XXVI of 1864, ought to conclude the hearing of the case, and to give judgment thereon contingent upon the opinion of the High Court. Dosebola Kavasji v. Khubadji

The Judge of a Small Cause Court in the mofus-sil cannot review his judgment, except as provided by Section 11 of Act XI of 1865. Tadir Hossein Moozdeen v. Huseen, in the matter of the petition of, 6 B. L. R., 388, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 442.

A Judge of a Small Cause Court in the mofussil can direct the jailer to bring up before the Court, at the hearing of the suit, a defendant committed to custody, under Section 78 of Act VIII of 1859, without having recourse to the procedure under Act XV of 1859. Kilaram Majo v. Narayan Das,
5 B. L. R., 215, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 278.

Where a case has been referred from the Small Cause Court for the opinion of the High Court, at the request of the plaintiff, and they neither deposited any security for the costs of the reference nor appeared in the High Court,—Hold, the case was not properly before the Court, and an application for costs by the defendant, who did not appear, was therefore refused. Rajkumar Paramanuck v.

Where a case had been referred from the Small Cause Court for the opinion of the High Court, at the request of the plaintiffs, and they neither deposited any security for the costs of the reference, or appeared in the High Court,—Hold, the defendants, who appeared, were entitled to judgment and to an order that the plaintiffs should pay the costs of reference and other expenses connected therewith. Dissent v. Justice of the Peace for the

Under Section 29, Act XI of 1865, a Small Cause Court should not make a reference on a simple point merely on the application of the parties, unless it entertains a doubt upon the question.
Harris Chunder Talaputta v. O'Brien, 14 S. W.

Huts are not "moveable property" within the meaning of Act XI of 1865. Raj Chundra Bose v.
Dharma Chundra Bose, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 77; 10
W. R., 416.

At the date of the enactment of Act XI of 1865, suits for rent of land could not be entertained by the revenue officers of this presidency so as to bar the cognizance of such suits by the Small Cause Court. Gouri Anantha Parathesi v. Kaliappa

Section 19, Act XI of 1865, provides merely for cases in which the decree-holder wishes to have immediate execution, and makes an application for it, either against the person or against the moveable property of the judgment-debtor.

Notwithstanding Sections 19 and 20, Act XI of 1865, the provisions of Section 286, Act VIII of 1859, apply to Small Cause Courts. A decree of a Small Cause Court may be sent to another Court for execution, if no property is found within the jurisdiction of the Court passing the decree; and if the Court to which the decree is sent be in another district, the decree must be sent to the principal Court of original jurisdiction in such district.

Notice of intention to apply for a new trial under Section 21, Act XI of 1865, is an essential step in such application, and without such prelimiinary step an application cannot be entertained.
Petumber Shadhookhan and another v. Doyamon
Dossee, 12 W. R., 17.

Plaintiff held an under-tenure within a jote jumma held by B. within D.'s zemindary, and, under an assignment from B., paid to the zemindar D. a sum of money as rent due by B. to D. Ultimately D., ignoring such payment, paid the amount due by a separate suit in which no plea of payment was raised, and the latter again recovered his due from plaintiff by a separate suit in the Deputy Collector's Courts. Held that an action was not maintainable in the Small Cause Court against the zemindar defendant D. Deenan Mundul v. Bussunt Moyee Dassai, 12 W. R., 190.

A. withdraws a suit pending against B., in the Moonsiff's Court, on B.'s promising him Rs. 50, and sues to recover that sum from B., who denies that there was a valid consideration for the promise, inasmuch as the suit before the Moonsiff was already barred by limitation. Held that the suit is entitled to be recovered in a Small Cause Court, which cannot enquire into the question of limitation in the previous suit. Sreenath Banerjee v. Doorga Doss Nundy, 9 W. R., 216.

In an application to a Small Cause Court, under Section 53, Act XX of 1866, to enforce the agreement recorded by the registering officer, under Section 52 on the bond,—Held that the applicant would be entitled to a decree only on production of the original obligation and of the record signed, but not on a copy of the same. Sreeram Roy Chowdhrty v. Kolomaddee Molliah, 9 W. R., 477.

A quantity of rice having been recovered from the wreck of a boat, a portion was left on the river bank by the owner for the remuneration of the salvors, including some left as “huk zemindary,” which the owners of a neighbouring jote carried away. In a suit brought by the former against the jotedar for the value of the portion last mentioned, the Court of first instance went into the question of the custom entitling to property so saved,—Held that this question was only incidentally raised for the purposes of the suit, which was simply one for the value of moveable or personal property and cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and the value being less than Rs. 500, special appeal was not necessary under Section 52 on the bond. Th. Grand and others v. Mudkoo Suddon Singh and others, 10 W. R., 79.

When the judgment of a Small Cause Court is called in question by one of the parties on a point of law, such as that damages have been assessed on a wrong principle, his proper course is to apply for a new trial. The facts not being disputed, the Judge may grant a new trial as to what amount of damages were sustained; and in determining that question, he may alter his opinion as to the principle on which damages ought to be assessed, and upon the new trial assess them on the proper principle. Where a Judge considered it inequitable to reject plaintiff's books when made for him, viz., as to amounts lent to defendant, and to accept them when they were against his interest, viz., in the amount of repayments credited to defendant, and therefore disregarded both descriptions of entries equally, but gave a decree in plaintiff's favour for such entries as were proved, without deducting the items credited to defendant,—Held that entries in an account book, whether on the credit or debit side of the account, are not conclusive evidence either of amounts paid or of sums actually due which the Judge is bound to believe. The Judge was bound to look at the whole of the entries in the plaintiff's book to give credit to such of them as he believed to be true, and to discount those, if any, with which he believed he be false.

A question of law arising on an application for a new trial is a question which may be referred to the High Court for its opinion as a question within the meaning of Section 1, Act X of 1867, arising at any point in the proceedings previous to the hearing of a suit. The hearing in a new trial is a hearing within Act XI of 1865, Section 22. An application for a new trial is a point in the proceedings previous to the hearing. Isan Chandra Singh v. Haran Sirdar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 135; S. C., 11 W. R., 525.

In a suit for recovery of a sum of money less than Rs. 500, as money paid in excess of rent due,—Held that the suit being cognizable by the Court of Small Causes under Section 6, Act XI of 1865, no special appeal lay to the High Court. Shib Shaye Sukul v. Birchander Jubaraj, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 172; 11 W. R., 30.

In an action against a number of defendants, one of whom resides out of the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court in which the action is brought, an application to the High Court, after reception of plaint, is necessary under Section 4, Act XXIII of 1861. Subassuthi Mudali v. Mathusami Mudali, 2 Ind. Jur., O. S., 10.

Plaintiff sued for Rs. 314-13-1, money paid for the use of defendant's undivided brother. The defense was that plaintiff held family property, defendant's share of which exceeded in value the debt sued for, as also the amount for which a suit would lie before a Moonsiff under Act IV of 1863. Held that, provided it was proved in evidence that the money was paid out of plaintiff's self-acquired property, the suit was cognizable by the Moonsiff under Act IV of 1863. Held also that the share of the defendant being both in nature and amount, beyond the District Moonsiff's Small Cause jurisdiction, it was not available as a defense, even if it formed a fit object of set-off. Kattapemmal Pillai v. Panachadam Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 339.

An order from the High Court is necessary to enable a Court of Small Causes to entertain a suit against several obligors, one of whom at the time of filing the plaint is neither resident nor personally working for gain within the limits of its jurisdiction. Such order should be applied for after the reception of the plaint, upon a statement of the circumstances of the particular case. Section 21 of Act XLIII of 1860 is to have the same operation as if Act XXIII of 1861 had formed part of Act VIII of 1859 when it became law. Subhakati Maduli v. Muthesvami Maduli and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 103.

Where a suit appears from the plaint to be one of the nature cognizable in a Court of Small Causes, but a question of title has been gone into and decided by the District Court in appeal, a special appeal will lie. Dikshit v. Dikshit, 2 Bom. Rep., 4.

Small Cause Courts have jurisdiction to try questions of title which incidentally arise in suits cognizable by them. Roghooram Biswas v. Ram Chunder Dood, W. R., F. B., 127.

A suit is not maintainable at K. against a defendant who is employed as a domestic servant at M., and who is not shown to have any immediate or early intention of returning to K., where his family are continuing to reside; the word "dwell" in Section 8, Act XI of 1863, it being held, must be used in the strict sense of actual residence. Por
A judge of a Small Cause Court in the mofussil found a judgment-debtor guilty of resisting an officer of the Court in attaching property, in satisfaction of the decree, and fined him. Held that the Judge acted without jurisdiction. He ought to have sued the judgment-debtor before the Magistrate. In the matter of Mont Cunchdra Dass and others, 2 B. L.
R., A. C., 188.

The judge of the Court of Small Causes is only empowered, by Section 21 of Act XXIII of 1861, to inflict fine or imprisonment in cases where offences, under Section 175 of the Indian Penal Code, occur in the presence or view of the Court. The power of the Judge does not extend to cases in which the witness fails to attend, or the failure to comply with an order of the Court is merely inferred from other circumstances. Pavoaday Chetti, ex-parte,

A party specifically registered a bond, brought it into a Small Cause Court, and, without serving the obligors with any summons, got an ex-parte decree against them, and shortly after took out execution.
The judgment-debtor appeared within 30 days of the decree, and applied for stay of execution on the ground that the bond was a forgery. Execution was stayed on security given, a rehearing was granted in the presence of both parties, the original decree was reversed, and a fresh decree given. Held, that in this state of the facts, the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to grant a review and fresh decree, and that the procedure laid down in Section 21 of Act XI of 1865 was followed as far as it was applicable. In the matter of Mohun Sahoo, 11 W. R., 245.

Plaintiff sued in Small Cause Court for Rs. 1,000 as brokerage, but at the hearing it appeared that the claim was for Rs. 1,020; and the record was amended under Section 27 of Act IX of 1850. On a case referred, the opinion of the High Court was that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction to hear a case, unless there be an abandonment of any excess above Rs. 1,000, originally part of the amount in dispute between the parties.

Held that an abandonment of excess not stated in the summons is a splitting of the claim.

That the Small Cause Court has no power to amend the record under Section 27, Act IX of 1850, unless the abandonment be stated in the summons.
Gorachand Chunder Bose v. Charro Chunder Ghose, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 3; S. C., 1 Cor. Rep., 93.

A suit cognizable in a Court of Small Causes and for a sum not exceeding Rs. 50 may be heard within the local jurisdiction of another District Moonisflf's Court. The Moonisflf hearing such a suit is bound to exercise the powers of a Small Cause Court and, to proceed in conformity with Act XLII of 1860. Madras Act IV of 1863 does not take away the former jurisdiction given to the District Moonisflf in respect of causes of action arising within the limits of his jurisdiction. MCAF Timmayaya v. Tangather Kandaphd, 2 Mad. Rep., 82.

Where the cause of suit as stated by the plaintiff appeared to be within the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes, the mere denial by the defendant of the plaintiff's right of title is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the Court. If it reasonably appears to the Judge that a bona fide question of right which is not within his jurisdiction to decide is fairly raised in the suit, his jurisdiction ceases.
Ammalu Ammal v. Subha Vadiyar, 2 Mad. Rep., 184.

A suit for the materials, bamboos, post, verandah, &c., appertaining to four thatched huts, wherein plaintiff sought a decree to break up and remove them, or to obtain their value to the extent of 29 rupes 4 annas, was held to come under Section 6, Act XI of 1865, and to be a case in which, by Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal would lie. Kasheechunder Dutt v. Jadownath Chuckerbutty, 10 W. R., 29.

A decree-holder cannot sue, in a Court of Small Causes, to establish his judgment-debtor's right to property seized in execution, but subsequently released to a claimant under Section 246, Act VII of 1859. Ramdhu Binaws v. Kefal Binaws and others, 10 W. R., 144.

An order passed in execution of a decree of a Small Cause Court with respect to the liability of property to attachment and sale is not final, but may be questioned in a regular suit in the same manner as a like order might be questioned when passed in execution of a decree of an ordinary Civil Court. A suit in which the plaintiff sues for a declaration of his right to bring certain property to sale as the property of his judgment-debtor, cannot be entertained by a Small Cause Court. Ramaskur Kulwar v. Behari Seth, 3 N. W. R., 208.

The plaintiffs consigned goods to the defendant, and drew a bill for Rs. 2,711-9-6 against them on the defendant in favour of the Chartered Mercantile Bank. The bill was accepted by the defendant, and, when presented for payment, was dishonoured.
The bill was paid for honour by the attorney of the plaintiffs. The goods arrived, and (the defendant having refused to pay the bill) were sold by the plaintiffs, after notice to the defendant, at his risk, and realized Rs. 1,655-15-4. The plaintiffs refused to hold a survey on the goods unless the defendant paid the amount of the acceptance.
The plaintiffs sued the defendant in the Small Cause Court for the amount of his acceptance, giving him credit for the proceeds of the goods, and abandoning the excess. Held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to do so, as the claim on the bill was not brought within the jurisdiction of that Court by payment or admitted set-off. Thomas Shorit et al. v. Abdul Ruheimim, 6 Bom. Rep.,
O. C. J., 53.

A Court of Small Causes may try incidental questions of title which are indispensable to the decision of the claim before it, e.g., a right to land on which depends a party's right to cut trees.

In a suit upon one cause of action cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, against two defendants, one of whom resided in the local jurisdiction of

Act XI of 1865, the Small Cause Court had juris-

In a suit brought in a Small Cause Court to recover money, being a debt secured by a hissab enclosed on a leaf of a khattah book, where the defendant objected to the admission of the leaf as evidence because it did not bear a proper stamp,—
" Held that, under Sections 15 and 17, Act X of 1862, the Court was competent to the Judge to find on the facts before him, whether the absence of the stamp was owing to an intention to evade payment of the stamp-duty, and that no question arose for reference by the Small Cause Court.*

Plaintiff and defendant having been co-sharers in a decree in which the respective shares of the decree-holders were definitely fixed, defendant amicably received from the judgment-debtor his fourth on the share of the plaintiff. The plaintiff brought the present suit to recover the same from defendant, whose plea was that the amount had been paid to him by the plaintiff.

" Held that, if defendant acted as agent of the plaintiff, there was a contract implied between them that the former would receive what was due from the latter, and pay it over or account for it to her, and that therefore the case came within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court.

" Held that as the Subordinate Judge before whom the case came in appeal was also Small Cause Court Judge, he might have dealt with the case without referring the above point for the decision by the High Court.*

A plaint was rejected by a Court of Small Causes

A Small Cause Court is not bound to allow a plaintiff to withdraw a suit, on the ground that he has received payment from one of the defendants in the suit, that attempt to withdrawing having been made after the plaintiff had succeeded in getting a judgment against two defendants which had been lost on the ground that that Court had no jurisdiction.

Before granting the copy of the judgment and the

A clerk of a Small Cause Court is not authorized necessitate the personal attendance of the plaintiff in Court in the first instance; but that the plaintiff may appear by such other person as may, by the rules of the Court, appear for a party in a case.

When, however, the personal attendance of the plaintiff appears to the Judge to be necessary for the proper investigation of the case, he may privilege given by Section 40 of the Act. *Neukai

A Small Cause Court is not bound to allow a of plaintiff paying the first defendant's costs. *Rama

A plaint was rejected by a Court of Small Causes on the ground that that Court had no jurisdiction.
It had been filed in the Court of a District Moonisiff, who decreed for the plaintiff. On appeal to the Principal Sudder Ameen, it was objected that the Moonisiff had no jurisdiction, as the suit was one recognizable by the Small Cause Court. *Held (the Court having decided that the Small Cause

Court had jurisdiction) that the District Moon-isiff's Court had no jurisdiction; that the erroneous dismissal of a former suit for the same cause of action by a Small Cause Court does not warrant the institution of the suit in the District Moonisiff's Court; and that the Principal Sudder Ameen rightly concluded that the suit ought to be dismissed. *Panauti Madadi v. Srinivasa Madadi,

Where a case was determined by a former Judge of a Small Cause Court, contingent upon the opinion of the High Court upon the question submitted by that Judge, and the parties had an opportunity of appearing and being heard in the High Court before the Judges expressed their opinion,—" Held that when that opinion was expressed the case was at an end, and that it was irregular for the present Judge of the Small Cause Court to interfere in the matter. *Umanund Roy v.
Lora H. U. Browne, 7 W. R., 352.*

According to Section 22, Act XI of 1865, a Small of the case, and to refer it with the Court's own opinion. Denonath Addy v. Pay Serjeant W. Weller, 7 W. R., 165.

Per Peacock, C. Per Markby, J.—It is not competent for such Judge to raise this point and decide the case thereon, after the case of both parties is closed. A use of time does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court. Payne v. Constable, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 49.

Although a defendant may be temporarily absent from his dwelling-house, yet if he retains the same he will be held to dwell there within the meaning of the Small Cause Court Act XI of 1865. To dwell in a place is to have one's permanent abode there. Madho Dass v. Sitan Ram, 3 N. W. R., 121.

A hut is not moveable property within the meaning of Section 19 of Act XI of 1865. A Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to sell a hut. A court under a count for goods bargained and sold, and under a count for goods sold and delivered, in which the defendant took a highly technical objection to the form of the plaintiff's cause of action, it was held that it was the duty of the Judge of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta, under Section 27, Act IX of 1850, to rectify the mistake in the plaintiff's claim, whether the plaintiff made such a request or not; the Legislature never having intended to introduce the niceties of special pleading into the practice of the Court of Small Causes. A suit for damages not exceeding Rs. 500 on account partly for injury to reputation and partly for loss in business and professional position, comes within the provisions of Section 6, Act XI of 1865, and is not open to special appeal. Brojo Soondur Bhaodore v. Eshan Chunder Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 179.

An application having been made to a Small Cause Court Judge to set aside an ex-parte decree, the Judge found from the record that the defendant had been personally served with a summons. He accordingly requested the pleader to tell his client to be present 3 days after to be examined. As neither applicant nor his pleader was present on that date, the Judge rejected the application without issuing process. The plea to the point was not made, such issue not being raised by the defendant. Although a defendant may be temporarily absent from his dwelling-house, yet if he retains the same he will be held to dwell there within the meaning of the Small Cause Court Act XI of 1865. Where the same person holds the office of judge in two Small Cause Courts, and sits for the first half of the month in one Court and for the remaining half in the other, the next sitting of either Court after the close of its half-monthly term would be on the first day on which the Judge sat again in that Court. Where a Court is closed on the last of the seven days allowed for notice of application for a new trial, notice may be given on the first day thereafter. Giriij Bhoosun Halder v. Okhoy Nikarta, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 105.

A Small Cause Court decree having been given on the 6th November, the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th being days on which the Court was closed, notice of application for a new trial was filed on the 16th. A defendant desiring a new trial of a case decreed against him in a Small Cause Court must deposit in Court the amount of the decree passed against him, and costs, at the time of giving notice of his intention to apply for the new trial. A subsequent deposit, though made within seven days from the date of decision, will not entitle the party to ask for a new trial.

"Semble," "The next sitting of the Court" mentioned in Section 21, Act XI of 1865, refers to the next sitting after the decision complained of, and the words "within the period of seven days from the date of the decision" apply to cases in which the sittings of the Small Cause Courts are not held consecutively, by reason of the same Judge being the Judge of more than one Court. Kailas Chandra Sannel v. Dowlat Sheikh, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 57; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 42.

Growing crops are "immoveable property," and execution of a decree of a Small Cause Court cannot be had against them under Section 19 of Act XI of 1865. The sittings of the Small Cause Courts are not held consecutively, by reason of the same Judge being the Judge of more than one Court. Kailas Chandra Sannel v. Dowlat Sheikh, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 57; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 42.

A. obtained a decree in the Small Cause Court against B., in execution of the decree goods belonging to B., but in the possession of a pledgee, were seized by a bailiff of the Small Cause Court. The pledgee brought an interpleader suit, under Section 88 of Act IX of 1850, to recover the goods. Held, the pledgee was entitled to have the goods released to him and to have the costs of his suit paid by the execution-creditor. Bhinji Govindji v. Monohar Dass, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 31; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 303.

A question of fact cannot be reserved for the opinion of the High Court, under Section 7, Act XXVI of 1864, when there is a difference of opinion between two Judges of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta. Where the Judges differ on a question of law it ought to be expressly stated. In a case of a difference of opinion between two Judges upon the point as to whether there should be a new trial, no rule can be granted. Jardine Skinner v. Money, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 312.

Where a part of the military pay of a serjeant employed under the executive engineer was erroneously remitted by his superior to a Small Cause Court, which had directed execution against the serjeant's pay, it was held that the sum remitted should be refunded to the executive engineer. Cohen v. McCarthy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 441.

A Small Cause Court can sell the undivided right, title, and interest of a deceased debtor, to which the defendants succeeded, in the moveable property in satisfaction of a decree obtained against the defendants without infringing the 2nd proviso of Section 6 of Act XI of 1865. Until the judgment-creditor has exhausted that mode of proceeding he is not entitled to proceed against the deceased's moveable property under Section 20 of the Act. Ahabalasoo Chetty v. Venkata Kaunnamah, 5 Mad. Rep., 275.

A Court of Small Causes has not power to do more in execution of a decree against an undivided member of a Hindu family than issue process for the attachment and sale of the defendant's undivided right, title, and interest in the family moveable property. It would be for the purchaser at such a sale to obtain a partition. Jyahvien v. Chithambarien, 5 Mad. Rep., 312.

All sales by Small Cause Court Judges should be conducted strictly in accordance with Section 251, Act VIII of 1859; though where property of small value is being sold in execution of a decree for a considerable amount and is purchased by the decree-holder, a Small Cause Court might, on his application and as an exceptional case, order that his receipts should be accepted as cash, but provision must in that case be made for realizing all fees of Court. Indro Narain Deb v. Goibind Chunder Dhur, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 368.

A Small Cause Court in which a decree is passed is competent to entertain an application for its execution, even if the debtor's residence and moveable property are situate in a place which has since the decree been excluded from that Court's jurisdiction. In such execution the course to be pursued is that prescribed by Sections 285 and 286, Code of Civil Procedure. Kodoo Mundle v. Shusku Shiku, 16 S. W. R., L. R., 227.

(e) Revenue Appeals.

A suit in the Civil Court will not lie to set aside the decision passed by the Revenue authorities in the exercise of the power vested in them by Section 8, Act XIX of 1865. However irregular the proceedings be, and not in conformity to the provisions of that section, the proper course for the party aggrieved is by appeal in the manner prescribed by the Act. Bukhtia v. Musamat Gunja, 4 Agra Rep., 161.

A regular suit cannot be maintained to enforce a decree in a summary suit for rent which the Revenue Court has found to be satisfied, and therefore refused to execute (Steer, J., dissentiente). Anund Moyee Dossee v. Putlit Pauhnue Dossee, W. R., F. B., 118.

If a sale of A.'s tenure is made fraudulently under a decree of the Revenue Court for arrears of rent against B., the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to set aside the sale and to restore A. to his rights. Ramsoondur Poramanick v. Prosonno Coomar Bose, 5 W. R., Act X., 22.

The decision of a Revenue Court that a party is liable for rent to another as his tenant does not bar that party suing in a Civil Court to obtain a declaration of title on his general civil rights, either as proprietor by purchase or as mokurrureedar. Juddoonath Sen v. Rom Coomar Chatterje, 9 W. R., 359.

The purchaser of a tenure at an auction sale in execution of a Civil Court's decree offered to pay in certain arrears of rent, on account of which the tenure was at that time attached and about to be... sold under a decree in a suit under Act X of 1859. The Assistant Collector refused to receive payment, and the tenure was again sold under the law, Act VII of 1865, B. C.

Held that the purchaser's remedy was by appeal to the Collector, Commissioner, and Board of Revenue. Henry Buckland v. Aishoo Chandhrain, 9 W. R., 366.

A, suing B. for arrears of rent, on the allegation that B. held an outbundee jote from him on certain lands of plaintiff's jote jumma, obtained a decree for rent for one year, the period for which he sued. B. then brought an action in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right to the jote jumma in question, alleging that he held the land direct from the zamindar, and was not A's ryot; A pleading that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction after the Revenue Court had declared B. to be his ryot.

Held that the Revenue Court's decree was not conclusive as to the question of title, i.e., as to whose right it was to have the particular jote jumma as his property. Dhonye Mundul v. Arif Mundul, 9 W. R., 306.

Where a tenure has been sold in execution of a decree by a Revenue Court, a third person, not a party to the suit in that Court, alleging that the tenure was not transferable, and seeking to have his right to possession vindicated against the pretended transferee, is entitled to complain in the Civil Court, and to ask protection against the probable injurious consequences to himself of the Collector's decree. Joykishen Mookerjee v. Hurechur Mookerjee, 9 W. R., 286.

In executing a decree for arrears of rent, a Revenue Court has no power to seize and sell any other property than that of the judgment-debtor, even though such property had previously belonged to the judgment-debtor, e.g., a tenure which once had belonged to him but was sold in execution of a Civil Court decree. Pran Bundhoo Srirar v. Sorsobondee Jhun, 10 W. R., 431.

In a suit for rent the Revenue Court has no jurisdiction to enquire into the conflicting rights of plaintiff and intervenors. Nawab Jan v. Munoo Lall and others, 10 W. R., 433.

A Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit to set aside a sale by order of a Collector, under Act X of 1859, in execution of a decree for arrears of rent due on the tenure of which the sale was made. Haranund Dutt v. Ram Dhun Sein, 9 W. R., 1864, Act X R., 122.

A Collector acts without jurisdiction in ordering the sale of an estate in execution of a decree for rent against other land, property before proceeding against the tenure upon which the arrear accrued. A suit lies in the Civil Court to set aside the Collector's order as illegal. Jokee Lall v. Nursing Narain Singh, 4 W. R., Act X R., 5.

The cause of action stated, and the remedy sought by the plaintiff, and not the answer made by the defendant, must determine whether a suit is cognizable by the Revenue or the Civil Court. R. Watson and Co. v. Hedger, 9 W. R., 1864, Act X R., 25.

B. obtained a decree against B. for arrears of rent in respect of a saleable tenure. In execution of the decree, the Deputy Collector of Basseerhaut requested the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs to attach and sell any moveable property belonging to B. He accordingly caused "certain houses and buildings and some moveable properties" belonging to B. to be attached. On an application by B. to the High Court to set aside the attachment, the Collector was directed to show cause why he had no jurisdiction to attach the property. The decree could not be executed by the attachment of any immovable property except the tenure, before it was shown that satisfaction of the decree could not be obtained by execution against the person or moveable property of the debtor. Desaratulla v. Nawab Nazim Nasir Ali Khan, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 216; 10 W. R., 341.

Suit to set aside a sale made by the Collector of Burdwan of a putnee talook appertaining to a permanently-settled estate within the civil jurisdiction of the Judge of Beerbhoom, the land, however, being situate within the Burdwan Collectorate.

Held (1) that when a Collector in exercise of his lawful functions has assumed the jurisdiction to sell a putnee, it lies on the plaintiff who impugns that official act to show that it is done without jurisdiction; (2) that the jurisdiction of a particular Judge over a certain place does not necessarily imply the jurisdiction of a Collector, or more exactly the situation of that place within the Collectorate bearing the same name with the Zillah Judge. Kalo Koomar Mookerjee v. The Maharajah of Burdwan, 5 W. R., 39.

A suit for arrears of rent which had been instituted in the Moonsiff's Court before Act VII (B.C.) of 1869 came into operation, was decided by that Court after the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts had ceased to exist. Held that the Moonsiff had no jurisdiction in the case. Krillyamessuree Dossie v. Nanair Kyburto, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 241.

Before bringing suit to recover money which defendant had received in execution of decree, and which he was no longer entitled to retain, plaintiff is not bound to make application to him for the money. There is no express provision of law with regard to the Civil Courts. Kris Toander Gooplo v. Ramsoondor Sein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 14.

Held that it was beyond the power of a Collector to issue an order prohibiting the receiving of transit duties for the Holkar's government in British territory. Reg. v. Vithal Lakshuman, 5 Bom. Rep., Cr., 13.

Where a suit in which a decree has been passed by a Deputy Collector is transferred to a Moonsiff's Court under Act III (B. C.), 1870, an application for re-hearing under Section 58, Act X of 1859, can only be heard by the Moonsiff. Wooma Chaur Moojoomdar v. Chander Kant Roy Chewdrey, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 255.

In a suit to recover possession on the ground of illegal ejectment, a Collector has no jurisdiction to enquire into any matter having reference to the rights of the parties. Sheeb Chunder Makhnaas v. Brojonaht Aditya, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 301.

A Revenue Court is not able to administer equities between co-defendants, or between a plaintiff and a defendant who ought to have been joined as a co-plaintiff. Kalenath Bonerjee v. Mahomed Hossein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 506.

Section 24, Regulation XLVIII of 1793, and Section 9, Regulation IV of 1793, direct the Zillah and City Courts to transmit their decrees to...
Collector, but do not authorize these Courts to make any orders on the Collector as to how he shall enter the result of such decrees in his books. Nemaihuri Sing v. Kauchun Sing, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 44; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 162.

Prior to the passing of Regulation II of 1819, the Civil Courts were competent to entertain regular suits by zemindars for the declaration of their right to resume revenue illegally alienated subsequently to 1790, and for possession of the land held rent-free under grants or titles which had their origin subsequently to 1790. Such suits were unaffected by the passing of Regulation II of 1819, Section 30, which related only to resumption of lakaheraj existing prior to 1790. Son,tan Ghose v. Moultie Abdool, 2 W. R., 91.

Under Section 30, Regulation II of 1819, a Deputy Collector, although authorized to put the case in such a state of preparation as to facilitate the hearing and decision by the Collector, has no authority to pronounce a decision himself. Radhamadhub Ghose v. Kirinadnath Roy, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 84.

A suit will lie in the Civil Court for the recovery of land fraudulently sold in execution of a decree for rent, under Act X of 1859, against a party not in possession without suing specifically to set aside the sale. Noor Buksh v. Mean Jan, 6 W. R., Act X R., 60.

A Deputy Collector has not original jurisdiction to entertain a suit under Regulation II of 1819, Section 30. Kally Doss Banerjee v. Muty Li Chuckerbutty, 483.

A Deputy Collector has no jurisdiction to try a suit under Section 30, Regulation II of 1819, but should return the plaint, and refer the party to the Collector who has jurisdiction. Gourkeetam Banerjee v. Lali Mahomed Mollah, W. R., F. B., 70.

(a) Suits cognizable thereby.

Every Court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a suit incidentally has jurisdiction (unless expressly barred by law) to try all pleas in bar urged in such suit. Consequently the Revenue Courts, under Act X of 1859, can try the genuineness and effect of a pottah pleaded in bar in a suit for a kubuleut at an advanced rent. F. C. Sander v. Surroop Chunder Biswas, 2 W. R., Act X R., 11.

Plaintiff took from defendant a lease of a certain quantity of land at a stipulated rate. Finding, however, that the land fell short of the quantity specified in the lease, and that defendant notwithstanding realised the full rent from him, he obtained a decree for abatement under Act X of 1859. The present suit was brought in the Small Cause Court for the excess rent levied from plaintiff between the date of taking possession and of the Act X decree. Held that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction in the case. If the suit did lie at all, it would be a suit for an illegal exaction of rent, and such a suit must be brought in the Revenue Court, and not elsewhere. Sorbo Chunder Doss v. Woomanund Roy, 11 W. R., 412.

In a suit for rent, where the original landlord had in consideration of a loan from his tenant, made to him an assignment of the rents to some extent, plaintiff alleged that that arrangement had been put an end to, and the assignment had dropped by reason of the defendants having recovered the money in another way. Held that the Deputy Collector had full jurisdiction to inquire into the allegation, because plaintiff's cause of action was the original cause of action of the landlord, and the only effect of subsequent events was to deprive defendants of an answer to the claim. Ishan Chunder Stein v. Kenaram Ghose and others, 12 W. R., 381.

In a suit for a kubuleut, the defendant having, by giving a kubuleut for a portion of the land in suit, acknowledged himself to be plaintiff's ryot as to that portion, Held that the onus was on the defendant to prove his special plea of his not being the plaintiff's ryot as to the rest of the land. The Collector has jurisdiction, under Act X of 1859, in such a case. The Court will receive and adjudicate a point of jurisdiction, though not taken below, because as acts done without jurisdiction are acts of no legal effect at all, they must be set aside. Gooroo Persad Roy v. Fuggobundo Miosoomdar, W. R., F. B., 1862, 15.

The fact that a sum of money was deposited by the lessor with the security for the payment of the rent, does not remove a suit for rent from the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts. Jowahur Lall v. Sultan Aly, 12 W. R., 214.

A suit by a lumberdar for his share of the profits against another lumberdar is cognizable by the Revenue Court under Act XIV of 1863. Mahomed Ghous v. Mussamut Kareemoon Nissa, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 52.

A suit for enhancement of a julkur tenure is cognizable in a Revenue Court. Paraan Santra v. Shesh Tikooda, 5 W. R., Act X R., 34.

A suit for rents which were due when a durputnee lease was granted, and for which the durputneedar in his kubuleut covenanted to be liable to the zemindar in addition to the yearly rents accruing, is cognizable by the Revenue Courts. Ashoothosh Chuckerbuty v. Bance Madhub Mookerjee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 11.

A suit for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate on a kubuleut in which defendant had agreed to pay a fixed rent for plaintiff's share of the estate, and enhance the rents of the ryots, and pay over to the zemindar half the enhanced rent, Held that the suit was cognizable by a Revenue Court. Jowahur Lall v. Sultan Aly, 12 W. R., 214.

When A. conveys to B. an interest in land under a description as to title which turns out to be erroneous, a suit by B. against A. for diminution of rent on the ground of the erroneous description was to be brought in the Revenue Court. Rajah Nisamunoo Singh Deo v. Gordon, Stewart, and Co., 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 356.

A certain sum was paid to Government as nuzzera during the existence of the maafsee grant through a lumberdar, after the maafsee was resumed, and a Government jumma assessed upon it, the nuzzera continued to be paid until the interest of the holder of the resumed maafsee was confiscated for rebellion and sold at auction. After the confiscation, Government allowed the amount to the lumberdar, by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held that by such arrangement and Government's consent, the lumberdar, as trustee on behalf of Government such an interest in the estate as would enable him to sue and enforce such claim.

Held further that, under the circumstances, the payment of nuzzera being a present acknowledgment of proprietary title in the nature of a rent charge, the suit was cognizable by the Revenue Court under Clause 4, Section 1, Act XIV of 1863. Syud Zahoor Hossein v. Assud Ali, 3 Agra Rep., 178.

Defendants who were co-sharers with plaintiffs in a certain estate, held and cultivated as their nijote lands belonging to plaintiff's share, and resisted his endeavours to obtain rent from them. Plaintiff accordingly sued to establish his proprietary right, and obtained a decree declaring that defendants were liable to payment. He then brought the present suit to obtain wasilat on account of those lands,—Held that, as a landlord, plaintiff could not recover wasilat, which is a compensation for work done, but only rent, which is the value of lawful possession, and that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction in the suit. Gooroo Pershad Roy and others v. Bisummbhor Panjahan, 11 W. R., 504.

A took a farming lease from B., by which he agreed to pay B. a certain yearly rent, and stipulated further to pay to B. half of any enhanced rent which he might succeed in realizing from the ryots,—Held that a suit by B. to recover arrears of this moiety of enhanced rent would lie in the Revenue Court. Srimoti Bhabatarini Dassi v. Y. Grey, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 152.

A suit lies in the Revenue Court under Clause 2 of Section 1 of Act XIV of 1863, although plaintiff converts her own rents, and pays in separately her quotas of the Government Revenue. Muzzamut Salamat Bibee v. Bhugwan Doss, 2 N. W. R., 33.

A suit by a shikmee cultivator, or under-tenant, to recover possession of land from which he has been illegally ejected by the defendants, themselves only tenants, and not zemindars, is cognizable by the Revenue Court. Jey Singh v. Moorlee, 2 N. W. R., 98.

A suit by a lessor for arrears of rent is triable by a Revenue Court under Act X of 1859, if the principal matter demised under the lease is land, and if indigo factories on such land are merely the adjuncts or appurtenances. Sharoda Pershad Mookerjee v. Sreenauth Mookerjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 520.

Suits for rent between “goandahs” and those cultivating under them are cognizable by the Revenue Courts only. Likkun Pathuk v. Roop Lal and another, 3 N. W. R., 48.

A suit by a proprietor of land for an etmami kubuleut from his tenants at the prevailing rates is cognizable by no other Court than the Revenue Court. Mussurat Ally Chowdary and others v. Mohamed Kanoo Sirdir and others, 11 W. R., 541.

In an action for rent before the Collector, the tenant set up that by a tamasook entered into between himself and his landlord after his leases, it was stipulated that in consideration of an advance of money by the tenant to the landlord a part only of the rent should be paid, and the residue applied in satisfaction of the debt; and he claimed to be entitled to the benefit of that stipulation. Held that the Collector had jurisdiction to enquire into the validity of the alleged tamasook, and to allow the deduction, if satisfied that it was genuine. Mussamut Edwun v. Mussamut Buchun, Marsh., 409.

(b) Suits not Cognizable thereby.

Held that a suit to make up the deficiency of seer land of one puttee with another puttee of a joint undivided estate was not cognizable by the Civil Court, the remedy of the plaintiff being by a revenue suit for partition and separation of his share. Shok Golam Ghous v. Shah Fared Alum, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 246.

Where a mortgagor obtaining possession of the mortgaged property by redemption sued the mortgagee for the profits of certain years as due to him by the latter,—Held that the question being not between co-sharers, but between mortgagor and mortgagee, was not cognizable by the Revenue Court under Act XIV of 1863. Prain Sookk v. Abbas Ally, 2 Agra Rep., Revenue Court Appeals, 4.

A suit by a cultivator for the recovery of his holding, on the ground that he has been dispossessed by a person other than the zemindar, is cognizable by the Civil Court, and not by the Revenue Court. Mussamut Amirta v. Mundo Kishore and others, 3 Agra Rep., 333.

An application for partition of orchards not liable for a quota of the village assessment is not one cognizable by the Revenue Court under Act X of 1859 or Act XIV of 1863. Oodey Ram and others v. Sirajool Hussan and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 241.

Held that the suit by a lessee against a sub-lessee to obtain rent of a garden which is attached to a house, and is ancillary to the enjoyment of the house, is not cognizable by the Revenue Court, but by the Civil Court. Rajah Shyam Singh v. Mussamut Maharanee Punchum Majee, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 243.

Where the suit was not for ejectment under Act X, but the zemindar claimed to have the land restored to its original condition by the removal of trees illegally planted by the cultivator,—Held that such suit was cognizable by the Civil Court, and not by the Revenue Court.

The question whether tenants have a right to keep up or renew existing baghs by planting new trees without the consent of zemindar, must be determined with reference to the custom of the country. Thona Singh v. Neas Begun, 3 Agra Rep., 183.

Where the land in respect of which a kubuleut is demanded is occupied by a building used as an ordinary dwelling-house, manufactory, or shop. — Hold that a suit for delivery of a kubuleut in respect of such land is not cognizable in the Revenue Court under Act X of 1859.

If the land formed part of an agricultural holding and was auxiliary to its enjoyment it would form a portion of the holding, and the landlord would be entitled to demand a kubuleut in respect of the entire holding, not excluding the land on which the building is erected. The principle of this decision will apply equally to suits brought to obtain payment of poutjut as rent. Cottech Pandoo v. Mirza Inyat Ali, 4 Agra Rep., 49.

A. leased to B. for 25 years, commencing from October, 1855, certain aurings or pieces of ground situated in the zillah of Beerbhum, in the province of Bengal, at a certain rent payable monthly, B. entering into a covenant to pay the rent. The property leased was a loha mehal, or iron mine, and was auxiliary to its enjoyment. Held that the question whether the latter defendant was the party beneficially interested in the lease was not one which was intended by the Legislature to be tried by the Revenue Court. Kishen Bhuten Misrain v. B. L. Hickey, 11 W. R., 406.

Plaintiff and defendants were co-sharers in the same village. By a subsequent butwara defendant's dwelling-house was included in plaintiff's share, and the Collector, under Section 9, Regulation XIX of 1814, directed that it, together with 7 beegahs of adjacent land, should be retained by defendant on his paying plaintiff a half-yearly rent of Rs. 3 a beegah. Plaintiff then sued to enhance the rent. Held that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction to try a suit like this. Khairooden Ahmed and others v. Abdoal Bakee, 11 W. R., 410.

In a suit in the Civil Court to recover possession of lands which the plaintiff alleged he had leased to the defendant as manager of an indigo factory, and also of other lands over which he had given a zur-i-peshgilease, — Held that the suit was rightly brought in the Civil Court, and that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction. Held also that, as the defendant had made no objection to the manner in which the plaintiff had calculated damages in the Courts below, the question could not be gone into on special appeal. Charles McDonald v. Rajaram Roy, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 28; S. C., 11 W. R., 371.

At the date of the enactment of Act XI of 1865, suits for rent of land could not be entertained by the revenue officers of this presidency, so as to bar the cognizance of suits by the Small Cause Court. Madras Act VIII of 1865, equally with the prior enactments, abstains from authorizing the cognizance by the revenue authorities of suits for arrears of rent.

The cognizance of such a suit by a Head Assistant Collector is a proceeding coram non justice. Gauri Anontha Parathesw v. Kalilappa Sethi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 213.

A suit by the mutwallee of a mosque to obtain a kubuleut from a khandier, or subordinate servant attached to the mosque, will not lie under Act X of 1859. Hiddut Ali v. Kobeemalla Meenjee Mutwallee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 9.

A suit by a ryot, who has been dispossessed of his holding, against his lessors and two other ryots claiming under a lease granted to them by the lessors, should be brought in the Civil Courts. Mungne Roy and others v. Lall Khoonee Lall, 6 W. R., Act X R., 19.

Where a naib, without authority from his principal, had collected rents from ryots, and the principal's suits to recover his rents from the ryots were dismissed with costs in consequence of the admission of the naib that he had received the money sued for, it was held that a suit against the naib and... another acting in collusion with him, to recover the moneys collected, and damages, was cognizable by the Civil Court.

A suit by a landlord to recover possession of land from a ryot who had ceased to pay rents, but whom the landlord had omitted to sue when he first ceased payment, and set up an adverse title, must be brought in the Civil Court.

A landlord must first obtain a declaration in the Civil Court that the land in dispute is within the limits of his estate, after which he may proceed to assess revenue upon it in the usual course under Act X of 1859.

A suit by Government to recover what the defendant co-sharers, and others, had long held the land in dispute, could not have been brought in the Revenue Court.

When the dispossession of one ryot by another is not the direct act of the zemindar, the case is cognizable by the Civil Court.

A suit by a purchaser of a permanent transferable tenancy for a declaration of his title as tenant to possession is cognizable in the Civil Court, and not by the Collector.

In a suit for rent paid in kind, in which defendant did not deny plaintiff's right as landlord, but in which intervenors appeared and objected that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction, and pleaded, also, that defendant was their tenant and paid rents to them,—Held (by Loch, J.) that neither defendant's appropriation of the rent, nor the fact of his disputing plaintiff's share, nor the act of the intervenors in raising a question of right, altered the nature of the suit, or took it out of the cognizance of a Revenue Court.

A. died, leaving four sons, B., C., D., and E., by a wife deceased, and a widow K., and three other sons, F., G., and H., by her. K. brought a suit against B., C., D., and E., and against her three sons F., G., and H., to establish her title to a certain talook which she alleged had been conveyed to her by A. under a deed of gift. B., C., D., and E., set up a prior deed of partition, whereby the property of the deceased, including this talook, was divided between all his sons in the proportion of ten annas to B., C., D., and E., and six annas to F., G., and H. The High Court, on appeal, held that the deed of partition was genuine, and rendered the subsequent deed of gift ineffectual. Afterwards B., C., D., and E., instituted a suit in the Collector's Court for arrears of rent in respect of another talook also included in the deed of partition against the ryots, and F., G., and H. The ryots admitted that they held at the rent claimed, but stated that they had not paid their rent on account of a dispute between the brothers as to the shares in which they were entitled to the same. F., G., and H., raised the defence that this suit could not be maintained in the Collector's Court; a suit in the Civil Court should be brought for the determination of their shares, and the decision in the prior suit was no evidence against them. Held that the question was really one of title between the brothers, and such suit could not be maintained in the Revenue Courts.

Grish Chandra Roy Chowdhry and others v. Raj Chandra Roy Chowdhry and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C. 1.

A suit by plaintiff complaining of having been ejected by the defendants, who were not the zemindars of the land in dispute, or the persons entitled to collect rent from the plaintiff, cannot be entertained by the Revenue Court. The mere allegation of the defendants that they were the zemindars, unless admitted to be true by the plaintiff, will not give the Court jurisdiction. Kishun Mohun Singh v. Toolsee Singh, 2 N. W. R., 102.

A Deputy Collector, invested by a Collector with all the powers of a Covenanted Assistant, or with special power to determine claims under Regulation XII of 1816, is competent to refer cases under that Regulation for disposal to a District Moonsiff. The authority must be delegated under Section 3, Act VIII of 1857. 4 Mad. Rep., Rul. 1.

A suit brought to recover arrears of a cess is not a suit of the nature cognizable by Small Cause Courts. A suit for arrears of a cess, which is not in the nature of rent, cannot be brought in the Revenue Court under Act X of 1859. Kasim Ali v. Skuder, 3 N. W. R., 21.

A suit for rent due not solely for land, but also for building, is not cognizable by the Revenue Courts. Maharaja Dheeraj Mahatab Chaud Bahadoor v. Mukoon Bulbul Bose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 246.

A suit against a gomashtah and others, claiming under pottahs from the zemindar, in which the party entitled to receive rent had not been sued, was held not to be cognizable by the Revenue Courts. Punchanun Roy v. Troyuckomohinee Dassea, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 466.

Held that a suit by a cultivator to establish his right to cut and make use of the trees situate on the borders of his holding was not a suit of the nature triable by the Revenue Court, and was therefore a suit properly cognizable by the Civil Court, which Court should have determined the question of right and title with reference to ancient usage.

The wajiboober binds co-parceners who have verified and attested it, and is so far evidence of custom between co-parceners, but is not a conclusive evidence of custom between co-parceners and their tenants who were no parties to it. Puchoo v. Mahomed Jala Aswoodoolah, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 217.

The suit of a zemindar against a naib or a gomashtah for papers, accounts, and moneys collected, is not cognizable in the Civil Court, but by the Collector. Kalee Nath Ghosal v. Chundee Churn Sircar and others, 10 W. R., 51.

Under the provisions of Regulation V of 1799, Section 5, and Regulation V of 1827, Section 3, the Collector took charge of a sub-tenure as administrator of a deceased person to whom the sub-tenure belonged. Held, the Collector was in no sense the tenant of the superior landlord, and consequently no suit would lie against him under Act X of 1859 for rent alleged to be due in respect of the sub-tenure. Collector of Bograh v. Dwaraknauth Biswas, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 80; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 194.

(c) Practice and Procedure.

Where an appeal was preferred to a Collector from the decision of the Deputy Collector, whether the Collector had or had not jurisdiction, the Civil Court cannot entertain an appeal from the decision of the Collector. Ram Pershad v. Lal Sah, 4 Agra Rep., 250.

A suit to obtain a kubuleut for rent at an enhanced rate having been dismissed by the Deputy Collector was appealed to the Judge, who declared the defendant liable to enhancement at a specified rate. In special appeal it was urged that, as the subject-matter of the suit was rent within a town covered by buildings, the provisions of Act X had no application whatsoever.

Held that the decision of the Assistant Collector was passed without jurisdiction, and could have no legal effect, and that any affirmation or modification of it by the High Court would be inoperative and infructuous. C. Church v. Ram Tomoo Shaha and others, 11 W. R., 547.

When, on a re-hearing, a Deputy Collector set aside his former judgment as passed without jurisdiction, it was held that his proceedings under that judgment were of themselves null and void, and that it did not require any order in words to set aside the sale which they involved. Onungo Moonjuree Dassea v. Punchanun Bose, 12 W. R., 72.

Collectorate authorities under Act X have not the same powers as judicial authorities under Act VIII of 1859 to fix the first hearing either as final or for the fixing of issues. If the parties do not secure the attendance of their witnesses at the first hearing, and there are, on the examination of parties, issues upon which evidence is necessary, the Court is bound to fix a day for the hearing of such evidence. Rajah Enayet Hossein v. Beehe Khoobunnissa, 9 W. R., 246.

If in a suit brought in the Revenue Court on an allegation of the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant that relation is denied by the defendant, the Court (instead of declining jurisdiction by reason of that denial) should judicially determine the fact, and take jurisdiction or not according to the result. Huree Persad Malee v. Koonjo Behary Shaha, W. R. F. B., 29.

Where the Deputy Collector decrees in favour of the plaintiff in a suit in which he has no jurisdiction, but which ought to have been brought before the Collector, the Judge ought on appeal to reverse the decision, and remit the case to the Deputy Collector, with directions that he should return the plaint. Gouree Kant Banerjee v. Loll Mahomed Moullah, Marsh., 265.

A suit to recover rents of lands situated in various subdivisions of a district must be brought in subdivisions in which the greater part of the land is situated.

A Collector's decree which is right on the merits cannot be set aside in appeal merely because of an irregularity in the exercise of the jurisdiction which he had in the case. Chunder Kant Chuckerbutty v. Mrs. Elias, 5 W. R., Act X R., 79.

A suit will not lie in the Civil Court against an order of a Collector refusing to hold a sale of a tenure for arrears of rent. Roy Hurekhasen and others v. Nursingh Narain and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 63.

In a suit for kubuleut the Collector ought to confine himself to the matter of the kubuleut and to the previous receipt of rent. His going beyond his jurisdiction, and trying the question as to what the land belongs, will not oust the Civil Courts from their jurisdiction. Ram Nokun Dey and another v. Ram Swun Dey and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 93.

The Collector, when he has to enquire into contracts between the parties, and to determine whether a breach of any such contract has been committed, cannot, upon supposed considerations of equity, set aside that the parties have deliberately agreed upon between themselves, and substitute further terms of his own. Ram Coomar Bhuttacharjee v. Ram Coomar Sain, agent of Rughoosh Nath Pershaud Tewarree, 7 W. R., 132.

A Collector has no jurisdiction to allow a suit to be instituted in the Sudder Station instead of in the Subdivision Court.

We have the Collector wrongly exercised such jurisdiction in a case below Rs. 100.—

A Deputy Collector is competent to depute an officer of his Court to take evidence on commission if the place where the witness is examined is within his jurisdiction. Ram Chand Monkerjee and others v. Shuddar Begg, 13 S. W. R., Act X R., 36.

A Collector is incompetent to send a case to the Assistant Collector merely to record the evidence therein, and when this is done, all subsequent proceedings will be annulled. Musumut Zaiy-oornissa v. Adjoodya Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 198.

Held, that independently of Act X, there may be cases in which a Collector has power to admit a party to come in and be heard when a proceeding has taken place in his absence; and that every presumption should be made in such cases in favour of his having jurisdiction, especially where the party would have been without a remedy if the review had not been admitted. Radha Pershad Singh v. Sannaar Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 37.

A suit was dismissed by a Deputy Collector, who died before recording a legal judgment, whereupon it was made over by the Lower Appellate Court for trial to the deceased officer's successor, who decided the case in favour of the plaintiff upon the evidence as it stood on the record without any objection by either party.

Held that it was not the duty of the second Deputy Collector to remand the witnesses or to take additional evidence, unless requested to do so by the parties. Gour Chunder Sen v. Manick Ram, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 77.

A suit for arrears of rent, where the plaint contained also a prayer for ejectment, having been dismissed by the first Court, an appeal was preferred to the Collector, who heard the case without any objection as to jurisdiction, and decreed it solely upon the question of the extent and character of the land and the arrears of rent thereupon.

Held that the Collector exercised a jurisdiction which he had, no question of ejectment having been decided by the first Court, and no appeal having been made to him upon that point. Dursun Bheyut v. Mahomed Ali, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 438.

When a Collector discharged the defendant's witnesses, without taking their depositions, after keeping them in attendance for nearly a month, and afterwards verbally ordered the defendants to procure their attendance within three days, and on their failure to appear, decided the case in their absence, his proceedings were set aside as irregular. Sheikh Kamyab v. Mussumut Omda Begum; Abdoal Wakah v. Mussumut Omda Begum, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 88.

The defective procedure in the trial of this case by the Deputy Collector pointed out (1) as to the non-verification of the plaint; (2) as to the examination and cross-examination of the parties or their agents; and (3) as to the settlement of issues. Sreentath Dowhordhy and others v. Gokool Chunder Sen and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 6.

Held that reference to the Collector in a suit pending before the Deputy Collector was irregular, and his opinion and order on such reference had no weight at all, and could not amount to a decision which, not having been appealed against, would operate as a bar to the adjudication on the point referred. Sahib Singh v. Put Ram and others, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 17.

Where a suit is brought in a Revenue Court, upon an allegation by the plaintiff of the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant between himself and the defendant, the Revenue Court cannot decline jurisdiction, on the ground that such relation is denied by the defendant, or that intricate or difficult points are involved in the investigation. The Collector is bound to ascertain, on judicial investigation, if the relation of landlord and tenant is proved to exist or not, and to take jurisdiction or not according to the result. Hurree Persaud Mitter v. Koornjobehary Shome and others, Marsh., 99.

The issue whether or not there has been a binding enhancement of rent, whether or not the tenant has paid at the enhanced rate, involves no question of title or of right to enhance or vary the rent, and the appeal in such a suit properly lies to the Collector. Bahadur Singh v. Hura, 3 N. W. R., 173.

Where the Revenue Court (being the Court of first instance) has without jurisdiction decided a question of title, such erroneous procedure does not oust the jurisdiction of the Collector to entertain the appeal.

Where a suit for enhancement is dismissed on the ground that no notice was served, any decision as regards the mal or lakheraj character of the land is mere obiter. Mohoornauth Sircar v. Nilmone Deo, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 297.

An execution-sale by a Collector can be set aside by a Civil Court, if shown to have been fraudulently brought about, the onus probandi being on the plaintiff who alleges fraud. Deen Dyal Singh v. Danu Roy 13 S. W. R., C. R., 185.

In cases in which the determination of title is incidental to the decision of suits properly brought in the Revenue Court, that Court is bound to enquire into the title. Where a person ostensibly in possession as proprietor institutes a suit for rent, and the alleged tenant pleads that he is in possession as a proprietor, the Revenue Court is bound to raise and decide the issue respecting title. Ramgut Singh v. Ram Sarun Singh, 3 N. W. R., 141.

The Collector's order striking off an application because he thought it was only made "to keep the case going," without his saying that it was not bona fide, was set aside, and he was directed to hear the application. Krisno Bundo Chuckerbauty v. Sudurudda, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 67.

In a case between the purchaser of a putnee talook at an auction-sale under Act VIII of 1865 and a party claiming as durizaradar, the point to be decided is whether the latter was bona fide in possession by collecting rents. If he was, the question of the voidance or voidability of the tenure is not one which can be disposed of in the Collector's Court. Gunga Ram Santra v. Ramcomol Chatterjee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 69.

A suit under Section 33, Act X of 1859, where a defendant denies that he is the agent of the plaintiff, the Collector is bound to try whether the relation of principal and agent existed between the parties. If the relation did exist, he has jurisdiction. Oodoy Narain Sircar v. Kristo Chunder Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 433.

J. K. D. instituted a suit before a Deputy Collector, under Act X of 1859, against L. N. R. for money due from the defendant as his goomesta. The parties, before judgment, filed a petition of compromise, according to which it was agreed that the amount admitted by L. N. R. to be due (Rs. 325) should be paid by instalments, and it was stipulated that, on failure to pay any instalment, "the whole debt will be realized at once, and I (L. N. R.) shall accept the whole amount and interest should be realized in accordance with the terms of the compromise." The Deputy Collector decreed, "Let the case be disposed of in accordance with the terms of the compromise." J. K. D. assigned his interest under that decree to R. M. D. L. N. R. failed to pay an instalment. R. M. D. then applied to the Deputy Collector to execute the decree for the whole amount with interest, but his application was refused. Thereupon R. M. D. brought an action in the Civil Court against L. N. R. for the amount due, with interest. Held, the suit would not lie under Act X of 1859, while a warrant against his moveable property is in force. Nubee Buksh v. Dedur Buksh and others, 11 W. R., 326.

A Zillah Judge has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the judgment of a Deputy Collector in a suit to recover rent involving no question of title to or interest in land as between parties with conflicting claims. Gireeabala Dabea v. Dinonah Mooshkerjee, 10 W. R., 431.

A suit to recover possession as against a ryot will not lie under Act X of 1859. The only suits for recovery of possession that are cognizable by the Collector under that Act are suits by a tenant who has been illegally ejected by the person entitled to receive the rent of the land or tenure. Raj Coo-mar Singh v. Rajbunsee Koorer, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 108.

A ryot and zemindar were sued by a party who held a pottah under the zemindar. The ryot, defendant, alone appealed. Held that, though it was competent to the zemindar to object to the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, it was not competent to the ryot to do so.

Quare—Whether the zemindar having retired from the contest, and the case involving a question... of title between two ryots, it is not a matter to be tried by the Civil Court. Bhuggobuty Churn Mookerjee v. Huromohon Mookerjee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 55.

A zamindar having failed in a suit brought in the Revenue Court, under Section 28, Act X of 1859, to resume lands as forming part of his permanently settled estate, cannot sue in the Civil Court to try the same question over again, though he may sue in the Civil Court under Regulation II of 1819 to try the validity of the defendant's title to hold the lands rent free. Rajmah Roy v. Bebee Ommuttubool, 2 W. R., Act X R., 102.

The dismissal of a suit for rent in the Revenue Court for want of jurisdiction (the plaintiff not having proved that he was de facto landlord in possession) does not bar a suit in the Civil Court for declaration of right to the same rent. Dhurony Mojoomdar v. Bissamhur Mookerjee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 103.

An agent may be sued under Act X of 1859 for rents received by him, whether or not he has committed, with respect to such rents, an offence under the Penal Code. R. Skinner & Co. v. Rujub Ali Khan, 2 W. R., Act X R., 105.

The Civil Court has jurisdiction in a suit for ejectment in which the plaintiff expressly denies the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant, and treats the defendants as trespassers. Bante Madhub Banejee v. Joy Kishen Mookerjee, 4 W. R., Act X R., 17.

No suit will lie to set aside the sale of an estate in execution of a decree for arrears of rent at enhanced rates according to a prior decree for enhancement subsequently reversed on special appeal, on the ground of want of notice of the suit for arrears of rent. Doorga Pershad Pal Chowdry v. Jogesh Porkash Gongopadhya, 4 W. R., Act X R., 38.

Where shikmee talookdars have estates on the Collector's towjee separate from the zamindar's estate, and the payment of their revenue through the zamindar is only a matter of convenience amongst themselves, they are not subordinate to the zamindar, and the zamindar can only sue them in the Civil Courts for their share of the revenue. But when the shikmee talookdars are subordinate to the zamindar, who stands to them in the position of landlord, he can take the same measures against them to enforce payment of rents as against any other under-tenants. Chunder Kant Chuckerbutty v. Joy Gopal Chuckerbutty, 4 W. R., Act X R., 41.

When joint proprietors of an estate agreed that if before partition any one of them should cultivate the land, he should pay rent at a certain rate, — Held that a suit would not lie under Act X of 1859 against such shareholder by another shareholder for his share of such rent, whether there was a dispute or not as to the amount of the respective shares. Syed Hyder Ali v. Omrit Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 42.

A Collector has power, under Act X of 1859, to sell, in execution of a decree for the payment of money under the Act, not being money due as arrears of rent of a saleable under-tenure, only such moveable property as is capable of being manually seized; and he can issue process against immovable property only when recourse could not be had to the person or to the moveable property capable of being manually seized. Chandrakant Bhuttacharjee v. Jadaputtee Chatterjee, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 177; 10 W. R., 224.

A Civil Court can only determine the right to partition an estate paying revenue to Government. The partition itself must be made by the Collector under Regulation XIX of 1814. Mohsun Ali and others v. Nasum Ali, 6 W. R., 15.

A co-sharer sues for a kubuleut after determination of rent. It was proved that a custom exists by which one co-sharer has his own tenants. But as there was no proof that the defendants ever paid rent to the plaintiff, it was held that a tenancy had not been established, and that the case was therefore not cognizable under Act X of 1859. Joymuth Ag v. Gobind Persad Doss, 1 W. R., 42.

Quare,—Whether the Civil Court can interfere with a Collector's order, under Section 11, Act XI of 1859, opening a separate account with the recorded sharer of a joint estate. Shuroofunissa Bebee v. Huikmut Ali, 9 W. R., 533.

An adjudication for the purposes of settlement and assessment is not an authoritative decision of a question of civil jurisdiction or of proprietary right. G. N. Pogose and another v. The Collector of Sylhet and others, 12 W. R., 150.

The adjudication by revenue authorities of the boundaries of two districts is not an effectual settlement of the question of jurisdiction, which must be tried by the Civil Court itself, under Section 14 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Radha Pershad Singh v. Ram Jewnun Singh and others, 11 W. R., 389.

A Collector is bound to register and sub-assess a portion of a zamindary transferred in accordance with the provisions of Regulation XXV of 1802, such transfer not being opposed to Hindu or Mahomedan law, or the existing law. The Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought by the alienee to compel the Collector to register and sub-assess the portion of the zamindary so alienated. Bante Madhub Banejee v. Collector of Madura, 3 Mad. Rep. A. C., 35.

Some of the defendants had taken a lease in the benamee name of C. P. B., and were in actual possession of, and had paid rent for, the lands demised. The other defendants were sureties for C. P. B. A suit was brought in the Court of the Deputy Collector against those who were actually in possession of the land, together with the sureties, for arrears of rent. It did not appear from the lease how far each defendant was interested in or entitled under it. Held, per Peacock, C. J., whose opinion prevailed (Mitter, J., dissenting), that the Deputy Collector had no jurisdiction to enquire into matters extraneous to the lease, and that plaintiff's suit ought to have been dismissed,— Held (per Mitter, J.) that the suit was properly brought against the actual tenants, and not against the benamee, and that the Collector had jurisdiction,— Held by both Judges that the suit should be dismissed as against the sureties, who could not, as such, be sued under Act X of 1859. Roy Priyanath Chowdhy v. Behinbeharrig Chuckerbutty, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 237; S. C., 11 W. R., 120.

Where the real object is to obtain a division of the lands of an estate paying revenue to Government, the suit is not maintainable in a Civil Court.
REVENUE COURTS—REVENUE APPEALS.

253

Doorga Kirpa Roy v. Mohesh Chunder Roy, 15

(e) Revenue Appeals.

An application to a Collector under Section 25, Act X of 1859, is not a suit; consequently, the appeal from an order made by the Collector on such an application lies to the Commissioner, and not to the Judge. C. J. Phillip v. Shibnath Moitra, W. R., F. B., 118.

Where, on an application for partition, the Collector did not declare the right of the parties, but decided to act until the applicant had established her right by a decree of the Civil Court,—Held that the Judge had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from such an order. Mussamut Birja v.
Bholanath, 2 Agra Rep., 182.

Where an application to the Collector for partition was made on the basis of the Civil Court's decree, and the Collector did not adjudicate the question of title, an appeal would not lie to the Judge. Bustee Ram and others v. Mookh Ram and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 251.

Quaere,—Whether the appeal from an order of a Collector under Section 26, Act X of 1859, lies to the Judge or to the Commissioner. Deendyal Augusti v. R. Watson and others, W. R., 1864, Act
X R., 35.

In a suit for rent below Rs. 100, where the question was simply what, under the agreement subsisting between the parties, was the amount of rent due,—Held that under Section 153, Act X of 1859, the appeal lay to the Collector, and not to the Judge. Bacharam Saooh v. Dinobunder Paul,
W. R., 1864, Act X R., 104; and Kally
Doss Sircar v. Rajnarain Pattack, W. R., 1864,
Act X R., 130.

In a suit for rent, where the defendant pleaded a mokururee right,—Held that the case involved a substantial right, and that the appeal lay to the Judge. Lalla Gooro Sahoy Singh v. Bromo

Where a third party intervenes in a suit under Rs. 100, and the Deputy Collector substantially determines, not simply the question of possession, but the right of the zemindar to distrain for the rent due from the actual cultivator, the appeal lies to the Judge. In such case, the Court, in stead of simply declaring the zemindar's right to distrain upon the person in actual possession, ought to enquire who was the actual cultivator or ryot in possession of the land, and then who was in actual receipt of the rents from that ryot, and to determine the suit according to the result of that enquiry under Section 140, Act X of 1859.
Raj Chunder Surmeh Chuckerbutty v. Gourmohun
Deb, 6 W. R., Act X R., 12.

Held by Phear, J., whether the appeal from a Deputy Collector's decision should lie to the Collector or to the Judge, depends on the decision determining a question of law or a question of fact;
but if the former, it must be such a question as is properly incidental to the suit, and not any which the Deputy Collector may by caprice or error introduce into his judgment. Bhryrub Chunder Chunder v. Sheik Khuleel and others, 8 W. R., 493.

No appeal lies to the High Court from an order of a Collector refusing to sell an under-tenure in execution of a decree. Rajah Burodakant Roy v. Banee Madhub Ghose, 5 W. R., Act
X R., 35.

No appeal lies to the High Court for the maintenance of an order of sale made by an Assistant Collector, which order was set aside by a Deputy Collector, to whom the appeal was referred. Huro Peruksh Chowdhy v. Mohoor Mohun Mundul,
5 W. R., Act X R., 35.

An appeal does not lie from an order of a Deputy Collector setting aside a sale in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859. Nobo Doorga Dossia v. Goluck Chunder Sein, 5 W. R., Act X
R., 89.

An appeal does not lie to the High Court from the appeal of a Collector refusing to distribute amongst the shareholders the amount of their shares of the surplus proceeds of a joint undivided estate attached and administered under Regulation V of 1812. Jugo Moyee Chowdhrai v. The Government, 3 W. R., Mis., 17.

No appeal lies from the order of a Deputy Collector passed in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859. Huro Chunder Burmun v. Rajkissen Roy,
W. R., Act X R., 110.

There is no appeal to the Zillah Judge from an order passed by a Deputy Collector in execution of a decree for rent. Rajah Jadoo Bhoosun Deb Roy

No appeal lies from the determination of a Deputy Collector admitting the re-hearing of a case decided. Ex-parte Kunuckmoonee Debia v Gunga
Ram Doss, 3 W. R., Act X R., 135.

No appeal lies to a Collector from an order passed by a Deputy Collector in execution of a de-eree. Adwirenee Dossie v. Kamineesoomduree
Debii, 3 W. R., Act X R., 145.

No appeal lies from a Collector's order dismissing a suit for default on the non-appearance of the plaintiff after being summoned. Sheik Golam

The judgment of a first Court passed on the default of a party summoned to attend as a witness in a judgment open to regular appeal; but the Judge on appeal is not justified in setting his face generally against the summons of parties as witnesses. Chunder Mohun Mojoomdar v. Teetooram
Bose, 4 W. R., Act X R., 18.

No appeal lies from the order of a Collector passed after decree and relating to the execution thereof. Siridar Golab Singh v. Ram Buddun Singh,

The failure of a Deputy Collector to try the proper issue in a suit for rent below Rs. 100 gives no right of appeal to the Judge. Moheshchunder Sircar v. Augumnissee Bibee, 4 W. R., Act X R., 29.

No appeal lies from an order passed by an Assistant Collector setting aside a sale in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859. Dwarkanath Moonshee v. Shreeshteedhur Shikaar, 4 W. R., Act X R., 48.

No appeal lies to the Judge from a decision of a Deputy Collector under Sections 153 and 77 of Act
X of 1859, in a suit for rent under Rs. 100 when a third party intervenes, and the Deputy Collector decides on the receipt and enjoyment of the rent as between the plaintiff and the intervenor. Chundra

A Collector's judgment in appeal is final under Section 159, Act X of 1859, whether the judgment be passed on the merits, or the appeal be disposed of on a preliminary objection. Huro Mohun Mookerjee v. Kedarnath Doss, 5 W. R., Act X R., 25.

When the authority of a pottah is questioned, the appeal lies to the Judge, and not to the Commissioner. Joykishen Mookerjee v. Ramdhun Roy, 7 W. R., Act X R., 16.

An appeal from the order of a Deputy Collector dismissing for default a suit for more than Rs. 100, lies, not to the Collector, but to the Judge. Ram Chunder Roy v. Modhosuddon Mookerjee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 165.

The misapprehension by the Deputy Collector of the value and character of the documentary evidence before him is not one of the contingencies on the happening of which the Collector's decision in a suit for rent below Rs. 100 ceases to be final and becomes open to revision. In such a case, the appeal lies to the Collector, and not to the Judge. Futteek Chunder Gooho v. Mungul, 4 W. R., Act X R., 40.

In a suit for rent below Rs. 100 involving no question of the right to enhance or otherwise vary the jumma of the tenant, the appeal lies, not to the Judge, but to the Collector, under Section 155, Act X of 1859. Issur Dutt Chobey v. Beckwith, 5 W. R., Act X R., 67.

When a Deputy Collector determines an interest in land, the appeal lies to the Judge, and not to the Collector. When in such a case the Judge reverses the Collector's decision as passed without jurisdiction, the Judge should proceed to decide on its merits the appeal as from the decision of the Deputy Collector. Juggeshur Bhuitacharjee v. Juggobundo Nunder, 3 W. R., Act X R., 14.

In a suit for rent below Rs. 100, where a third party intervenes under Section 77, Act X of 1859, if the Deputy Collector decides on the title of the parties, and not on their receipt of rent, the appeal lies to the Judge, and the Judge is competent to determine the whole case, including the question of the receipt of rent, notwithstanding that the law bars an appeal to the Judge on that point. Biber Jumeerun v. Bhichuk Thakoor, 3 W. R., Act X R., 27.

18.—Advocates.

The Officiating Advocate-General having claimed pre-audience, the claim was questioned by a senior member of the Bar, but was allowed. Held that, down to the transfer of the Government of India to Her Majesty, the Advocate-General of the East India Company was not entitled as such to pre-audience in the Courts without a patent of precedence.

That the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General in England enjoy precedence as representing the Sovereign, and not by patent. That the Advocate-General and Officiating Advocate-General for the time being are entitled to similar pre-audience as the Attorney-General in England. Bourke's Rep., O. C., 224.

A counsel or pleader is entitled to appear and act on behalf of the prosecution in the Criminal Courts. Chundi Churun Chutterjee v. Chundra Kumar Ghose, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 70.

Appeal from orders of the High Court suspending appellant from practising as an Advocate of the Court, upon a report by a District Judge imputing improper conduct to appellant in the matter of an application made by him on behalf of a client for letters of administration to the estate of her deceased son.

Admitting that the District Judge was competent to report and complain to the High Court of the supposed mala praxis of a practitioner over whom he had no direct power, and that the High Court was justified in taking action on that report and complaint by calling upon appellant to explain his conduct,—and allowing that the omission of the High Court to place the conduct of the further proceedings against appellant in the hands of a third person was, for the reason stated by the Judges (namely, that they had not the means of doing so), not a fatal objection to the subsequent proceedings,—the Privy Council disapproved of the course taken by the Court in acting upon letters which came to their knowledge in the course of the first enquiry and framing new charges against appellant, and thus assuming the functions of accuser and Judge.

Upon the merits, the Privy Council were of opinion that, although appellant had been guilty of an irregularity in advising his client to make endorsements upon promissory notes as administratrix before she had obtained letters of administration, yet as he had been acquitted by the High Court of having acted with malus animus, which was a necessary ingredient in every fraudulent act, his conduct, though censurable, did not bear the character which the heavy sentence passed upon him would stamp upon it: at the same time, their Lordships expressed their unwillingness to weaken the hands of the Courts of India in pressing professional misconduct, and maintaining a high standard of honour amongst those who were admitted to practise before them. In re Thomas Newton, a Barrister, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 35.

A barrister enrolled as an advocate of the High Court is incapacitated from making a contract of hiring as an advocate, and cannot maintain a suit for the recovery of his fees. Smith v. Guneshu Lal, 3 N. W. R., 83.

Taking it that the rule of English law, that the relation of counsel or advocate and client creates mutual incapacity to make a binding contract of hiring and service either express or implied, governs the relation of advocate and client generally in this country, there must be the relation of advocate and client to give rise to the incapacity, and the incapacity is strictly confined to contracts relating to service as an advocate in litigation and matters ancillary to such service. Where the defendant, a barrister who was not admitted an advocate of the High Court, or specially authorized to plead in the Superior Court, accepted a vakalatnamah from the plaintiff to defend him upon a charge pending in the Session Court, and the defendant failed to appear on the day to which the trial of the plaintiff was adjourned, and the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover the amount of the fee paid,—Held that the suit was maintainable. *Kistna Rowe v. 19.—Officers of Court.

(a) Attorneys.

(b) Vakeels.

(c) Pleaders.

(d) Mookhtears.

(e) Receivers.

(f) Sheriff.

(g) Miscellaneous Officers.

Where an attorney had been merely guilty of negligence in allowing his clerk to act in his absence and file a false affidavit, and adopted it without enquiries into its character, he was suspended from practising in the High Court in its original jurisdiction for one year, but he was at liberty to practise as vakeel on the appellate side. It had not been proved that the clerk was acting as an attorney without a license, or had a share in the profits. Had this been so, the attorney would have been struck off the rolls. In the matter of Purnoo Chandra Mookerjee, an Attorney, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 377.

Where a client places himself in the hands of an attorney, he places himself in his hands in regard to all matters having connection with the suit, and the attorney must be held liable for any negligence, even though his client do not take prompt action in the matter. Madaroo Dowlah Nawab Ally Nuckee Khan v. William Anley, 1 Hyde's Rep., 134.

Where an attorney knowingly prepares a conveyance containing untrue recitals of the transaction between the parties thereto, and attests the deed and a receipt for consideration-money which, to his knowledge, was never paid, or intended to be paid, the production of such a document to the Court is sufficient ground for calling upon the attorney for an explanation of his conduct. But if such explanation be given, supported by evidence to the effect that there was no fraudulent intent, and if no fraudulent use of the deed has, in fact, been made or attempted, nor any injury caused thereby, it is not sufficient ground for striking the attorney off the rolls of the Court.

Semble.—The High Court in Calcutta is not authorized in striking an attorney off the rolls when such a step would not be sanctioned by the practice of the Courts in England. In the matter of A. Stewart, an Attorney and Proctor of the High Court, 1 B. L. R., P. C., 55; S. C., 10 W. R., P. C., 143.

An attorney may, subject to the sanction of the Court, have as many number of articled clerks at one and the same time. Articles, the covenants of which have been released, cannot be assigned. Re articles of clerkship of Calanoo Soobramaneyam, 2 Ind. Jur., O. S., 15.

There is no law in force in India to prevent an executor of an attorney from maintaining a suit for his business done by the attorney, without having previously delivered a bill of costs to the defendant, and left it with him for a reasonable time before bringing the action; and the fact that the defendant had notice that the bill was to be referred to taxation is immaterial.

Statute 3, James I, c. 7, has not been extended to this country. C. J. Wilkinson v. Abbas Sircar, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 96.

Where a mate and crew applied to an attorney to obtain for them their wages, in a suit against their ship, having first obtained an order for wages from the Magistrate, which order for some reason could not be enforced, the attorney thereupon stated that their case was a good one, and he required no money; but afterwards, finding that the master was suing the ship, and that the proceeds of her sale would not be sufficient to pay the wages of all, the attorney let the proceedings on behalf of the mate and crew drop, and refused afterwards to go on without funds,—Held that this was negligence and want of skill in the attorney sufficient to justify summary interference of the Court, and to warrant it in making an order for the attorney to proceed with the suit, and to deprive him of costs already incurred. In the matter of an Attorney or Proctor, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 305.

It is the duty of a solicitor, who has once undertaken a cause, to carry it to a conclusion. In re a Solicitor, 4 B. L. R., P. C., 29.

Any work which an attorney does jointly for several parties together, he can only make one charge for, and where he appears for any number of parties before the taxing officer at the taxation of the costs of a suit, he must be taken to represent them jointly.

(b) Vakeels.

A Zillah Judge has no authority to oblige a pleader to leave a Court in which he has been practising and to proceed to another. Petition of Mahomed Manaff, 10 W. R., 332.

A fresh vakalatnamah is not necessary in an application for a new trial before a Small Cause Court, when the pleader presenting the application is one who was employed in the original suit. Sutto Churn Ghosal v. Surrop Chunder Dass, 12 W. R., 405.

Although a vakeel is entitled to whatever charge his client agrees to, yet if he acts under an engagement constituting him his client's mookhtear and legal adviser, he is bound by the same rules as an attorney, and is therefore entitled only to such reasonable remuneration as the law allows. Rance Usmut Koowar v. W. Tayler, 2 W. R., 307.

A vakalatnamah given by a plaintiff, and couched in general terms, suffices prima facie to authorize the vakeel to apply on behalf of the plaintiff for leave to withdraw from the suit; and in the absence of anything to show that the vakeel acted contrary to his instructions, or otherwise was guilty of misconduct in making the application, the client is bound by the act of his vakeel. Ram Coomar Roy v. The Collector of Beerbhoom, 5 W. R., 80.

A consent by a vakeel of the party to a decree being made, binding property other than what the parties to the suit may have an interest in, is a consent to what is beyond the scope of the suit, and could be neither binding on the party, nor acted upon by the Court. Avol Khoddar and others v. Audhuset, 2 Mad. Rep., 423.

The rule under Regulation XIV of 1816, Section 30, that each of two vakeels appointed by a party to a suit shall be entitled to a moiety of the fees payable, applies only to cases where they are appointed by the same vakalatnamah. Kisaruk Rukkamma Ram and another v. Cripata Vyvyanadatakatulu, 1 Mad. Rep., 369.

A District Judge has no power to remove a vakeel against his will from a Court to which he has once been allotted, except for a criminal offence, misconduct, or neglect of duty. Wummajee Conarav's case, 1 Bom. Rep., 136.

The principle that, while the relation of client and attorney subsists in full vigour, the latter shall derive no benefit to himself from the contracts or bounty, or other negotiations of the former, applies with equal force to the relation of vakeel and client. Fuzelum Bibe v. Omda Bibe and Akah Jona Ali, 10 W. R., 459.

In a suit brought by a vakeel against his client for the amount of his fees, and instituted after the passing of Act I of 1846, but before the Pleaders and Mookhtears' Act XX of 1865 came into operation,—Held that, where the services in respect of which the fees were claimed consisted of the conduct of a suit which was dismissed for a deficient plaint, under Section 29 of Act VIII of 1859, the vakeel is not entitled to the full amount of costs under Act I of 1846, Section 7, or the scale fixed by Regulation XXVII of 1814, Section 25; but in the absence of an express agreement he is only entitled to a reasonable sum as remuneration for his work and labour as a pleader.

Note.—So much of Regulation XXVII of 1814, as was before January 1st, 1866, unenacted, and the whole of Act I of 1846, are repealed by Act XX of 1865, which came into operation on January 1st, 1866. Missumat Ameenunissa and others v. C. Chapman, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 334; 6 W. R., 108.

A vakeel of the High Court in Calcutta is entitled to practise as a pleader in the Calcutta Court of Small Causes. A mandamus lies from the former Court to the latter. In re Toolsee Dass Seal, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 133; 7 W. R., 228.

Ordinarily a vakeel who is employed to conduct the case on behalf of his client has no implied authority to compromise it. In the absence of any express provision in the vakalatnamah, he can make no compromise which will be binding upon his client, except with his consent. Prem Sookh v. Pirthe Ram and another, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 222.

The Court should not enforce an agreement to reward a pleader for his professional services by a share of the amount recovered in the suit in which he is retained. Where a pleader is to receive a remuneration under a special agreement contained in his vakalatnamah, or in a separate document, the document containing the agreement must bear a stamp of adequate value. Nuthoo Lali v. Budree Pershad, 4 Agra Rep., 286.

A vakeel has no authority under an ordinary vakalatnamah to give up a portion of the claim already decreed, and any such abandonment will not be binding on his client. When a case is remanded with the specific declaration that the plaintiff shall obtain "possession of the disputed property," the lower Court has no jurisdiction to debar the plaintiff from any portion thereof by reason of a relinquishment made by the vakeel. Sheikh Abdul Sahan Chowdhry v. Shibkristo Dov, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 15.

The rule under Regulation XIV of 1816, Section 30, that each of two vakeels appointed by a party to a suit shall be entitled to a moiety of the fees payable, applies only to cases where they are appointed by the same vakalatnamah. Kissera Rukkamma Ram and another v. Kripati Vyvyanadikhatatulu, 1 Mad. Rep., 369.

Where a party appealing to the High Court is himself a vakeel of the Court, he is not at liberty to certify his own grounds of appeal. Thakoor Doss Mookerjee v. Ameer Mandel, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 168.

A vakeel may be a "duly authorized agent," within the meaning of Section 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Kishoree Mohun Bose v. Gour Monnee Dassee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 198.

The vakeel retained by the plaintiff in a suit in which a decree has been given for the plaintiff, is competent to plead for his client in answer to a claim advanced (under the first portion of Section 246 of the Civil Procedure Code) to property attached in execution of such decree, without the production of a fresh vakalatnamah. Gopal Jayachand v. Hui gobind Khoshal, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 83.

A vakeel by his ordinary employment as vakeel enjoys no authority authorizing him to transfer a decree. Nakur v. Jaffer Hossein, 2 N. W. R., 195.

Suit by a vakeel for fees. The defendants retained the plaintiff as their pleader in their original suit, No. 2 of 1863, on the file of the Civil Court of Cuddapah, and executed a vakulutnamah to him in July, 1863, but no special agreement regarding fees was made. The plaintiff conducted that suit for the defendants as their vakeel until decree, which was made in September, 1864. The present suit was instituted in December, 1866. Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that as there was no special agreement, the plaintiff's right of suit did not arise until he had completely discharged his duty in the conduct of the suit, which he had done in 1864. Consequently, the present suit, having been brought within three years from that date, was not barred. Buckaputnam Thakacharlu v. Kujaerinya, 6 Mad. Rep., 265.

When a suit is remitted by order of an Appellate Court for re-hearing or finding on an issue, the proceedings are in the trial of the suit, and consequently under Section 22 of Regulation XIV of 1816, a vakeel cannot change sides and hold a vakalatnamah for the party opposed to the one for whom he appeared at the first hearing. 4 Mad. Rep., Rul. XLIII.

The defendant was junior vakeel for the complainant (the defendant in a case before the Magistrate), and was instructed by his senior to apply for an adjournment, but the defendant obtained a bond from the complainant and conducted his defence. The defendant was convicted of extortion. Held, that the conviction was bad. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. XIV.

Section 24, Act 11 of 1855, does not warrant a vakal's exclusion from the witness-box, though it may excuse his answering certain questions relating to communication between him and his client. Doolar Tava v. Ranjet Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 340.

The prisoner, a vakal, presented a vakalatnamah in the District Moonsiff's Court signed by the defendant in a civil suit authorizing the prisoner to appear for the defendant. The vakalatnamah falsely purported to have been executed before the Adighari of the village and to bear the signature of the Adighari. The prisoner was convicted under Section 193 of the Penal Code. Held, that the case was not brought within the section, and that the prisoner was entitled to his discharge from custody. Keilasum Puller, 5 Mad. Rep., 373.

Where, under the practice existing in the Courts, a vakal receiving a fee for prosecuting or defending a suit is bound to carry the suit to an end, and to make all necessary applications in the execution department without further fee, no second fee is allowable to a vakal for applications presented in the execution department, unless it can be shown that the services of the vakal originally employed were not available. Takee Ayl Khan v. Gool Mahamed Khan, 1, 3 N. W. R., 69.

Petitioner, a decree-holder, attached the defendant's property in execution. Subsequently to the attachment, petitioner's vakal presented a razi petition to the Court on behalf of his client, praying that the attachment might be removed and execution stayed. An order was made granting the petition and allowing the decree amount to be paid by instalments. Some months afterwards, the vakal, alleging that the vakalatnamah presented the former petition fraudulently and without authority, applied to have his decree executed. The Civil Judge refused to alter the former order or to notice petitioner's allegations against his vakal. On appeal, the High Court directed the judge to investigate these allegations. The Civil Judge found that the vakal was authorized to present the petition, and that his conduct was not fraudulent. Held, that such a petition as that presented by the vakal, even if within the scope of his duty, should not be permitted to alter the terms of a final decree.

The greatest caution should be exercised by the Courts before acting upon statements out of the ordinary scope of the vakal's authority in the particular matter for which he was employed. B. Venkatararamnna v. Chabela Atyyamma, 6 Mad. Rep., 127.

(c) Pleaders.

Held, that it is not within the ordinary scope of a pleader's duties to relinquish any portion of his client's case without express authority from the client, who is not bound by such relinquishment, unless it was authorized by himself. Gour Pershad Doss v. Smoked Ram Deb, 12 W. R., 279.

The dismissal of a pleader who had been charged with bribery and honourably acquitted was held to be illegal and contrary to the provisions of Act XVIII of 1852, and of all principles of justice and equity. Greesh Chunder Doss, appellant, W. R., 1864, Mis., 23.

A pleader is bound to move for an order immediately after the period for the return has expired. If he does not do so, the case is liable to be taken up in his absence. Hossetine Begum v. Dumuree Mahatoon, 2 W. R., Mis., 51.

The senior pleader who is present has the entire control of a case in the High Court, and it is not open to the junior pleader to take any ground of appeal which his senior has not thought fit to argue, except only when the senior has obtained the permission of the Court that the course should be taken. Sreenchbus Roy v. Umbics Churn Roy, 12 W. R., 375.

A pleader holding a certificate under Section 12 of Act XX of 1865 is not thereby entitled to be admitted to practise in the Court of Small Causes at Calcutta. In re Shashi Bhusan Bhadury, I. B. L. R., A. C., 45; 10 W. R., 82.

A Zillah Judge has no authority to initiate proceedings against a pleader of the lower grade under Section 16, Act XX of 1865, which requires that the enquiry should be made by the Court in which the pleader committed the act of misconduct. Komolakat Behal, petitioner, 11 W. R., 127.

Any charge of misconduct against a pleader or moohkhteer holding a certificate under Act XX of 1865, other than a recorded conviction of a criminal offence, must be made and substantiated, and a report submitted to the High Court, as provided by Section 16. Sudderodeen Mahomed, moohkhteer, appellant, 7 W. R., 316.

Not merely authorized moohkhteers, but other persons generally, are at liberty to appoint pleaders by vakalatnamah. Shaikh Nubee Buksh, moohkhteer, petitioner, 7 W. R., 481.

When a pleader appears in a regular appeal before the High Court, he is competent under that vakalatnamah, unless it is revoked, to appear for the client in the subsequent stages of that case, and in the appeal, if preferred to the Privy Council. Shah Mukhtam Khan and others v. Sreekishen Singh and others, 8 W. R., 92.

A Judge may refuse to hear a pleader further on the ground of misconduct; but, instead of adding to his order refusing to hear the pleader, an order dismissing the case with costs, he ought to dispose of the case on the merits. Lall Chand Doss and others v. Shaakeh Mahomed and others, 6 W. R., 67.

A Zillah Judge has no power after the 1st January, 1866, to make an order under Act XVIII of 1852 dismissing a pleader. He should proceed under Section 10, Act XX of 1865, and refer the matter, with his report, to the High Court. Even under Act XVIII of 1852, under which the Judge erroneously acted in this case, a pleader was liable to dismissal only on proof of conviction of a criminal offence by a competent Court, or on proof of a declaration or finding by a competent Court (in a suit or proceeding to which the pleader was a party) that he was guilty of a breach of trust, or for fraudulent or dishonest conduct in the discharge of his professional duty, and this also after notice and adjudication as prescribed by Section 4. Sheikh Ahmeenooddeen, petitioner, 6 W. R., Mis., 5.

When conduct is charged against any pleader of a Subordinate Court, which, if proved, would amount to an offence, that conduct should be enquired into, not simply as improper conduct, but as an offence to be made the ground, if established, of his dismissal under Section 14, Act XX of 1865. Gumesh Chunder Gangooly v. 13 S. W. R., C. R., 456.

A case tried under the provisions of Section 16, Act XX of 1865, where the Subordinate Court is of opinion that the pleader should be acquitted, it is not necessary that there should be any report to the Judge. Ram Kinkur Sein v. Heera Lal, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 107.

A pleader may appear in criminal cases, not only on behalf of an accused person, but also on behalf of a private prosecutor. Chunder Coomer Chatterjee v. Chunder Coomer Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 23.

In a case tried under the provisions of Section 16, Act XX of 1865, where the Subordinate Court is of opinion that the pleader should be acquitted, it is not necessary that there should be any report to the Judge. Ram Kinkur Sein, in the matter of, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 66.

The rule of law is that a judgment deliberately recording the admission of a pleader must be taken as irredeemable by an affidavit of the Judge's own admission that the record he made was wrong. Hur Qyal Singh v. Heera Lal, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 107.

A pleader may appear in criminal cases, not only on behalf of an accused person, but also on behalf of a private prosecutor. Chunder Coomer Chatterjee v. Chunder Coomer Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 23.

Case in which the High Court declined on the facts to strike a pleader off the rolls for using improper expressions during the argument of a case before a Zillah Judge, who recommended, after observing the requirements of Section 16, Act XX of 1865, that such punishment should be awarded. The Zillah Judge should have called the pleader to order, and required him to apologize. R. Cruize, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 53.

The acceptance of a vakalatnamah by a pleader of the High Court should in all cases be unconditional. Gopenauth Mudduck, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 7.

The rules relating to pleader's fees passed by the Court on 13th June, 1866, do not provide for the case of defendants who have separate interests, and who consent to a decree; the amount of costs to be allowed in such a case being in the discretion of the Court. Ramputty Kooer v. Kaleeclturn Sing/t, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 23.

A Zillah Judge has no power, under Act XX of 1865, to suspend a pleader of the High Court from practising in the Courts of his district on the ground of incompetency. His proper course is to make a representation to the High Court. Kiskoree Lall Sircar, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 217.

It is improper for a pleader to endeavour to influence a Court by reference to a course which another Court might think fit to adopt, or to the view which the Appellate Court might take of its proceedings. Jaggaumnath Sahoo v. Syed Mohammed Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 173.

The omission of a pleader to examine the record of the case before making an application to stay execution proceedings upon the ground of improver conduct, was held not to amount to grossly improper conduct. But his not verifying the statement of the parties who came to him and made their statements (one of them being a mookhtear) was considered at the most to amount to carelessness, but not grossly improper conduct; whilst his omission to obtain the authority or concurrence of the senior pleader in the case could not be said to be improper conduct within the meaning of Act XX of 1865, certainly not such grossly improper conduct as calls for the punishment of suspension for six months. Sreenath Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 405.

(d) Mookhteears.

A person choosing to act as a mookhtear or legal agent must submit to the rules by which the dealings of such parties with their clients are regulated. The interference of a third party does not necessarily affect the fiduciary relation between the legal

The plaintiff's mookhtear being unable to answer certain questions necessary for the statement of the proper issues, the plaintiff was called upon either to appear personally, and reply to the Court's queries, or to send some one who could reply. Having done neither,—Held that the lower Court was competent to dismiss the suit under Section 127, Act VII of 1859. Maharajah Nilmonee Singh Deo Bahadur v. Ram Huree Misser, 2 W. R., 161.

A client may dismiss a mookhtear for misconduct, without being obliged to go through the form of suing for the cancelment of the engagement, although the contract or agreement between them was for a fixed period. Issur Chunder Mookerjee v. Puddo Lochun Gooplo, 5 W. R., Mis., 18.

The High Court will not interfere with Zillah Judges in the selection and admission of mookhteas, under the 39th Section of the New Pleaders' Rules. Petition of Mahomed Hossein, 5 W. R., Mis., 49.

A Magistrate has no power to give a mookhtear "general dismissal" unless he is convicted of an offence involving moral turpitude or infamy. Queen v. Sham Chand Chowdry, 1 W. R., Cr., 34.

The mere bringing a plaint to a vakeel for his signature by a mookhtear not duly qualified, is not an acting as a mookhtear which renders the party liable to a fine under Section 13, Act II of 1865.

The Judge of a Court of Small Causes has no jurisdiction in such a matter, unless the plaint was one to be presented to that Court. Muddun Mohun Biswas, mookhtear, 6 W. R., 29.

There is no limitation of time for the grant of a certificate by a Judge, under Rule 39 of the Rules for the Admission of Mookhteas. H. C. Joakim, petitioner, 6 W. R., 120.

The 30th of the Rules for Mookhteas, lately issued by the Court, only requires that every person who has been practising as a mookhtear in the Criminal Courts should be at liberty to satisfy the Judge that he is a person of good moral character and qualified by his knowledge of law and procedure, before he can be entitled to admission under that rule. Mudder Momin Mookhtear v. Curzton Khan, 17 S. W. R., Cr., 389.

The power given to the Civil Court, by Section 92, of a mookhtear. Nil Kant Biswas, mookhtear, 9 W. R., 29.

Conviction by a Magistrate for practising as a mookhtear in the Revenue Court without a certificate.—Jurisdiction of Ramdyal Singh, in the matter of, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 89.

The High Court has power, under Section 15, Act XX of 1865, to suspend or dismiss a mookhtear from his office, when it sees "reasonable cause," although he might not have committed any act of "professional misconduct" under Section 16. Gholab Khan, mookhtear, 14 S. W. R., 179, and 16 S. W. R., Cr., 15.

Where a general mookhtear empowered to act on behalf of co-sharers does formal acts to enforce the rights of his principals (the reminders), it is not necessary to trace back his authority in each case to the explicit sanction of every single member of the family. Mookhteas must be considered to have a certain discretion, and, unless the contrary is shown, to do such acts as come within the ordinary scope of their duty with authority. Hurry Kisto Roy v. Motoe Laili Nunudee, 14 S. W. R., Cr., 36.

A case of a mookhtear who was reinstated by the High Court to his practice after suspension by reason of his having been convicted in two cases, the circumstances of these cases not showing that the mookhtear was guilty of any moral turpitude or that he was unfit to act in the Criminal Courts as a mookhtear. Koylshalnauth Chowdry, in the matter of, 16 S. W. R., Cr., 41.

Where a Magistrate suspended a mookhtear for three months for making a wilful false statement, it was held that the Magistrate had no power to suspend the mookhtear under Act XX of 1865, and his suspension was set aside. Re Banchanidhi Mahunty, 17 S. W. R., Cr., 6.

A mere mookhtear is not the recognized agent of the judgment-debtor on whom notice can be rightly served within the meaning of the Criminal Procedure Code. Kristo Chunder Gooplo v. Fuzul Ali Khan, 17 S. W. R., Cr., 389.

(c) Receivers.

The suit was brought by the plaintiff, as Receiver of the Tanjore Estate, to recover from the first defendant, a farmer, a sum of money alleged to be rent due to the Tanjore Estate under a written agreement executed in August, 1866, by the first defendant to the second defendant who then claimed to be owner of the estate. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes considered that the subject-matter of the plaint did not constitute a cause of action to the plaintiff, and dismissed the plaint subject to the opinion of the High Court. Held, that the suit was maintainable by the Receiver to recover the fair rent payable for the use and occupation of the land under the muchalku, which was good evidence of what was the fair amount of rent. The second defendant having been held to possess no title to the property, could not afterwards maintain an action for the non-payment of the rent of a portion of such property, due according to the terms of the muchalku.

Held, also, that the right of suit did not extend to recover anything as interest on the rent due. Morris v. Muthusami Pillay, 6 Mad. Rep., 365.
Act VIII, 1859, of issuing injunctions and appointing a Receiver pendente lite, should be exercised only in cases where property which it is essential should be kept in its existing condition, is in danger of being destroyed, damaged, or put beyond the power of the Court. Munshi Mihrunzab v. Ichamoye Dassee, 13 S. W. R., 486.

The Receiver in a suit is nothing more than the hand of the Court for the purpose of holding the property of the litigants whenever it is necessary that it should be kept in the grasp of the Court, in order to preserve the subject-matter of the suit pendente lite; and the possession of the Receiver is simply the possession of the Court. He has no personal rights in the property, nor can he take any steps with regard to it, without the sanction of the Court. If it is necessary for him to take action of any sort, he should be put in motion by the Court on the application of the parties to the suit; and whatever he rightly does with regard to the property, he does simply as the agent of the owners of the property.

Where the Receiver in a suit had, by order of Court, sold certain property in the suit, and had executed the contract of sale in his own name, a plaint praying for specific performance against the purchaser for refusing to complete the contract, was admitted with the receiver as co-plaintiff, he having obtained leave to sue. Wilkinson v. Gangadher Sirkar, 6 B. L. R., 486.

Semble.—A Principal Sudder Ameen cannot, like the Court of Chancery, appoint a Receiver in a case where the defendant has kept the plaintiff for a considerable time out of assets to which he is jointly entitled with the defendant. Joynarain Geeree v. Shibshershad Geeree, 6 W. R., Mis., 1.

It is not a matter of course, but when the circumstances are such that a special case is made out, the Court will appoint a Receiver, pending litigation to set aside probate. Sreematty Joykellee Dabee v. Shri Nath Chatterjee, Bourke's Rep., T. J., 5.

Where a judge, under Section 26, Regulation V of 1812, has appointed a Receiver to manage a joint undivided estate,—that is, "to collect the rents and discharge the public revenue, and provide for the cultivation and future improvement of the estate"—he has jurisdiction over the revenue with regard to the disposal of the surplus profits, and can order the Collector who holds the estate as such Receiver, under Regulation V of 1827, to pay the profits of the estate to the several shareholders, according to their respective shares. In the matter of the Petition of the Collector of Rungpore, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 178; 7 W. R. 273.

An appeal will not lie against an order refusing to appoint a Receiver under Act VIII of 1859, Section 92. Ex-parte Imbichi Patama, 1 Mad. Rep., 129.

In a suit by K. against B. and others, the Supreme Court ordered that the estate of R. (deceased) should be applied to the payment of his debts, legacies, &c., and appointed a Receiver of the rents and profits of his real property. It also ordered the defendants and persons claiming through them to give up to the Receiver such of the real property as might be in their possession. Subsequently, in the same suit, the High Court declared that K. was entitled to a moiety of the estate of R., after payment of costs and legacies, and directed the estate to be sold and the proceeds brought into Court. Afterwards the Receiver brought a suit in his own name against R. and one S., alleging that, though the property had been decreed to K. and himself jointly, yet K. had, by collusion, obtained sole possession of it, and that in execution of a money decree against her, it had been sold to S.

Held that, as Receiver of the High Court, plaintiff had no title as of right against S. to the immediate possession of the property, and no right to sue in another Court in his own person to receive possession thereof. Ram Lockun Sircar v. C. S. Hogg, 10 W. R., 430.

The rule in the original side of the Court, taken from the practice of the English Court of Chancery, is not to compel a party to a suit to give up to the Receiver possession of property unless an order of Court to that effect has previously been made upon him; the proper course being by proceedings in Court to fix an occupation rent, and to order the party in possession to pay the same. Ram Lockun Sircar v. C. S. Hogg, 10 W. R., 430.

f. Sheriff.

Where property is attached by the Sheriff after judgment, and the parties come to a compromise before the Sheriff sells any of such property, the Sheriff is only entitled to poundage on the amount received by the execution creditor in compromise of his claim. Bombay Joint Stock Corporation v. The Sheriff of Bombay, 6 Bom. Rep. O. C. J., 22.

If a Sheriff, upon the representation of a debtor's ill health, takes upon himself of his own authority to relax the debtor's imprisonment, by letting him reside out of jail, it is an escape for which the Sheriff is liable to an action for damages.

If the judgment-creditor voluntarily discharges the debtor out of custody, even for a week only, he cannot, by any agreement which he might have made with the debtor, afterwards retake him, although the debtor may have agreed that, if he does not pay the money within a week, he shall be retaken.

A debtor removed from prison under a rule of Court, whether with or without the consent of his creditor, and kept in charge of a Sheriff's officer in a private house, is still in the custody of the Sheriff. The Sheriff may, without a rule of Court, refuse to allow the debtor to reside out of prison, though the creditor may have consented to it. When the Sheriff and all parties consent to the debtor being kept in custody in a private house, the Sheriff is liable to an action for escape on proof of want of proper care and surveillance; but it would be a matter of fact for a Jury to consider whether the creditor, being in some measure instrumental to the escape, ought to recover against the Sheriff. Stafford Bettesworth Harries v. The East India Co., 4 W. R., P. C., 99.

Where a prisoner is arrested under a warrant of the High Court at Calcutta directed to the Sheriff, authorizing his arrest for the purpose of being brought before the Court, and committed to prison, and the commitment is ordered, but no warrant of commitment is drawn up, and the Sheriff delivers the prisoner to the jailer, with no other document than his own order to his bailiff to arrest the prisoner, and the latter, in consequence, is discharged from... custody by a Judge on application on a writ of habeas corpus.—Held that the Sheriff is not liable for an escape. Hudjee Mahomed Conjee v. H. Dundas, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 228.

In a suit brought in the Bombay Court of Small Causes to recover Sheriff's poundage on the amount endorsed on a warrant of arrest in execution of a decree obtained by the defendants, and under which the plaintiff, at the request of the defendants, arrested H., who applied to the High Court under Section 273 of Act VIII of 1859, and was ordered to be discharged from custody, the Judge found for the defendants with costs, subject to the opinion of the High Court.

Held (1) that the words "debt levied by execution" used in the table of fees for the Recorder's Court, and continued in the subsequent tables, being ambiguous, the rule applies that "if an instrument be an ancient one and its meaning doubtful, the acts of its author may be given in evidence, in aid of its construction;" (2) that as the Sheriff is the Officer of the Court, and his fees are received under its authority, it was unnecessary to refer the case back to the Small Cause Court in order that evidence of usage might be taken; (3) that having regard as well to the usage and practice of the Supreme Court as to the liability of the Sheriff at the time the old tables of fees were settled, the words used must be construed as entitling the Sheriff to poundage upon his executing a warrant for the arrest of a defendant in execution of a decree; and (4) that if the Sheriff's right accrues upon his executing the warrant, the subsequent discharge by the Court of the defendant from custody ought not to divest him of it. Uniyak Vasudev v. Ritchie, Steuart, and Co., 4 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 139.

Where a person had been taken in execution under a ca. sa. directed to the Sheriff under the old procedure, it was held to be sufficient to empower the jailer to detain him. The words "ordinary civil jurisdiction" are only used to distinguish the civil from the criminal jurisdiction. In re Amour Biswas, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 106.

(g) Miscellaneous Officers.

Where a Moonsiff appointed a person as sherifftadar in his Court, and it did not appear that the person so appointed was in any respect disqualified for the appointment, or that his appointment was open to any sort of objection whatever, or that the Moonsiff had neglected any of the preliminary enquiries or formalities prescribed for such cases,—Held that it was not competent to the Zillah Judge, merely on the ground that in his opinion the claims of some other persons were superior to those of the person appointed, to remove him from the office, and to direct the appointment of a different and specified person. Petition of Bhoyrub Chundra Deb, 7 W. R., 131.

A Zillah Judge may refuse to confirm the appointment, by a Subordinate Court, of a disqualified person as a ministerial officer, or may rescind such an appointment if not made conformably to the rules prescribed by the High Court, and require the Subordinate Court to make a fresh appointment after observance of the rules. But he has no authority, after allowing an appointment to stand for nine months, to displace the person so appointed, and to appoint another in his stead. 7 W. R., 224.

A Zillah Judge is not competent to remove a mohurrir from one Moonsiffsee without any fault of his, and to subject him to loss by requiring him to go to a distant Moonsiffsee. Hurghobind Biswas, 7 W. R., 246.

The opinions of pundits must not be taken on their authority to be a correct exposition of the law, when such opinions are discordant from works of current and established authority. The Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencala Narainapah, 2 W. R., 61.

When a plaintiff fails to appear before a Commissioner appointed under Section 180 of Act VIII of 1856, and the defendant appears, the plaintiff is liable, under Section 114, to have his suit dismissed with costs.

An appeal does not lie from such judgment by default. The proper course is to apply for an order to set aside the judgment; and if that application be refused by the Judge, to appeal against his order of refusal. Esanchunder Chuckerbutter v. Soorjo Lalt Gossain, W. R., F. B., 1.

All officers of a Moonsiff's Court are appointed by him, subject to the approval of the Judge, who should hear what any person aggrieved has to say, and determine whether the Moonsiff has rightly exercised his authority. In the matter of Gooroo-dass Bhuttacharjee, 11 W. R., 158.

A Judge is not warranted in interfering with the appointment of peons made in a Moonsiff's Court under Act V (B. C.) of 1863, and approved by the Moonsiff. In the matter of Someroodeen and another, 11 W. R., 159.

Under Section 9, Act XVI of 1868, the nomination and appointment of the ministerial officers of a Moonsiff's Court rests with the Moonsiff, subject to the approval of the District Judge. If the District Judge does not approve, he can refuse his sanction, but the law does not permit him to appoint any other person. In the matter of Rajcoomar Goppto, 11 W. R., 354.

Certain Commissioners, who had acted under a commission of partition, refused to give up the return they had made until they were paid their fees. On application to the Court, they were ordered to send in the return. Held that Commissioners, under a commission of partition, have no lien on their return, and that under the laws of Sree Mutty Rajmoheneey Daber and others v. Muddassooldin Dey and others, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 24.

Commissioners appointed by the Court are officers of the Court, and act by a majority; therefore where two of the Commissioners were agreed,—Held that they had power to make a valid return, notwithstanding the dissent of the third. Rajen...
In the matter of the appointment of a Serishthadar in a Moonsiff's Court, it was held to be no irregularity or impropriety on the part of a Judge to call the attention of the Moonsiff to a circular order of the High Court communicating the wishes of Government that preference should be given to certain discharged officers. Anonymous v. Chunder Chuckerburtle, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 376.

Act XVI of 1868 contemplates that the selection and appointment of persons to fill ministerial offices in the establishments of Subordinate Judges should be left to those Judges, the power of the Zillah Judge extending merely to the approval or disapproval of the person appointed. The latter's refusal of sanction must be based on grounds personal to the appointee; and he must not interfere and control the selection of persons so as to influence the inferior Judge towards the appointment of a particular candidate. Oolfut Hossein v. Chingun Lall, 2 N. W. R., 46.

The High Court has no authority to interfere in the case of a person who is not confirmed in an acting appointment of Civil Court Ameen for which the Judge considers some other candidate to be more fit. In the matter of Doorga Dar: Dan, 17 S. W. R., 166.

All litigants are entitled to the protection of the Court from extortionate claims made upon them by those whose professional aid they seek. Roop Narain Misr v. Kushi Ram Singh Teinbram, 2 N. W. R., 67.

Upon the application of the Collector, who was a party to a suit, an enquiry was held by the Subordinate Judge into the conduct of a Civil Court Ameen, who had made a local investigation in the suit. Ameen was acquitted, and the Collector ordered to pay his costs, including vakeel's fees. Roop Narain Misr v. Kushi Ram Singh Teinbram, 2 N. W. R., 67.

The Court has no jurisdiction as a Small Cause Court to take cognizance of a suit against defendants not resident within its jurisdiction. Anonymous, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 31.

A Moonsiff has no jurisdiction as a Small Cause Court to examine any of the parties, unless the legislative authority has given the Court power to do so. Anonymous v. Ramnarayn Matilal, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 3.

In the case of a person who is not confirmed in an acting appointment of Civil Court Ameen for which the Judge considers some other candidate to be more fit. In the matter of Doorga Dar: Dan, 17 S. W. R., 166.

A Moonsiff ought not to be called on to depose as to what took place before him in the course of a trial which he was conducting as Moonsiff, and he is entitled to exemption. 6 Mad. Rep., Rul. XLII.

The High Court has no jurisdiction under Section 29 of Regulation IV of 1816 to make an order for the execution of a decree in a suit tried before a Village Moonsiff. The section only applies where a Village Moonsiff has been guilty of corruption or partiality in the decision of a cause tried by him. Narayana Nageswar Naikur v. Vels Pillay, 4 Mad. Rep., 188.

The investiture of a Moonsiff with the powers of a Small Cause Court under Section 29, Act VI of 1871, does not deprive parties to pending suits of any right of appeal which they might have had; the general rule being that the law as it existed when the action commenced must decide the rights of the parties, unless the legislative authority expresses a clear intention to vary those rights. Ghotas Mundle v. Kojroo, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 227.

20.—Court Fees.

When a plaintiff in order to make proof under Section 281, Act VIII of 1859, that the defendant, for the purpose of procuring his discharge, without satisfying the decree, has wilfully concealed property, &c., chooses to examine the defendant, he must pay... the Court fees for the oath and the cost of reducing the deposition of the witness to writing. It is otherwise under Section 8, Act XXIII of 1861, in which case the fee is separately demandable, if at all, from the applicant. Edmond, J. M. v. Niersis, M., 16 S. W. R., C. R., 84.

When letters of administration are granted in respect of property which is subject to a mortgage, the value of the property for the purposes of estimating the ad valorem duty payable under Court Fees Act, 1870, is the value of that with which the Administrator is to deal, viz., the value of the entire property less the amount of the incumbrance. In the goods of Lieutenant-General Peter Innes, deceased, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 253.

No stamp duty is payable under the Court Fees Act, 1870, on probate granted to a second executor, to whom leave was reserved to take out probate when the first probate was granted. Bibee Ameerun, in the goods of, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 496.

Section 16 of the Court Fees Act refers to where a party losing substantially a portion of his claim is precluded from re-asserting it before the Appellate Court without paying the proper stamp fee. Bissonath Chatterjee Madhubmoney Dabee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 511.

Stamp duty upon an appeal filed after the Court Fees Act came into operation can only be levied according to the provisions of that Act, even though the original suit was valued on the principles laid down in Act XXVI of 1867, Musamut Bhagobutta Kooer v. Musamut Kustoree Kooer, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 272.

Under the Court Act, 1870, trust property descending on the death of the trustees is liable to the ad valorem stamp duty prescribed by Schedule 1, Clause 11, to that Act.

The term “property” in Clauses 11 and 12 of Schedule 1 of the Court Fees Act, includes not only property to which the deceased was beneficially entitled during his life-time, but all property which stood in his name as trustee, or of which he was benami for others. In the goods of George distinguished, in the goods of H. B. Beresford, and in the goods of T. H. Maddock, 7 B. L. R., 57, and 15 S. W. R., C. R. 456.

An application for review of judgment, such as is alluded to in Articles 4 and 5, Schedule 1 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), does not include an application for a new trial in a Small Cause Court in the mofussil. Gopinath Roy v. Ram Joy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 249.

A suit in which plaintiff seeks an account of his father's estate from the executor appointed under his father's will, and in which he claims damages to the extent of Rs. 35,000, in default of his obtaining the accounts, should be filed on the stamp required for a suit to recover Rs. 35,000 and not on a stamp of Rs. 10, which, under Clause 3, Section 17, Schedule 11 of the Court Fees Act, 1870, is the stamp laid down for a declaratory suit in which no consequential relief is sought and which cannot be valued. Ram Doolall Singh v. Gopal Kristo Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 156.

A petition for a new trial in a Small Cause Court is, under the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) properly stamped with a one-anna stamp. Chold Lai Fam-

In cases in which the value of property in respect of which a certificate of heirship is sought exceeds Rs. 1,000 the stamp duty should be calculated on the whole amount, and not on the excess over Rs. 1,000, under Act VII of 1870, Schedule 1, Article 12, but the exceeding Rs. 1,000 is the condition of liability. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. XIV.

With the exception of the depositions of the witnesses and the documentary evidence and copies of the final sentences or orders passed by Criminal Courts, which parties desirous of appealing from such sentence are required by Section 416 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to file with their petitions of appeal, when the party who of appealing is in confinement under the of the sentence or order at the time that for a copy of the same, copies of any record of a criminal trial can only be fi applicants on stamp paper. 4 Mad. Held, that the words "fresh goods" after the signature of A. S. constituted part of the contract into which the parties entered, and by which they were bound. Where a case has been heard by a single Judge of the Small Cause Court, and a new trial has been applied for, and the case has been re-heard by two Judges, the Court is bound, under Section 7, Act XXVI of 1864, to refer the case for the opinion of the High Court if requested to do so by either party to the suit, though the Judges do not entertain any doubt or differ in opinion. Mad-hub Chandra Rudar v. Amrit Sing; Amrit Sing
v. Madhub Chandra Rudar, 5 B. L. R., III.

The plaintiffs in London and the defendant in Calcutta had dealings, which consisted in the defendant shipping jute cuttings and rejections to the plaintiffs in certain quantities, and within certain limits as to price, the defendant drawing bills on the plaintiffs in respect of such goods, which the plaintiffs accepted. The plaintiffs alleged that there was an agreement between them and the defendant, that in case of shipments in excess of the limits given by the plaintiffs, they should at their option receive the goods on their own account, or treat them as consignments on account of the defendant, but the defendant denied there was any such arangement. The defendant made several shipments in excess of the plaintiffs' limits, and the plaintiffs treated them as consignments on the defendant's account, selling them on defendant's account and forwarding him account sales, and drawing bills on the defendant for any balance due to them in the transactions, which bills the defendant refused to pay. The plaintiffs forwarded accounts current to the defendant, in which appeared an item of £188 5s. 6d. as the balance of account current down to December, 1866. It appeared to have been due, however, in respect of an account for 1863. The defendant sent a letter, dated 22nd December, 1865, to the plaintiffs, which contained the following post-script: "F.S. Enclosed a remittance of £40 to old account." The suit was properly brought in the Small Cause Court. Meherwanji Mancharji v. Punja Velji, 5 Bom. Rep., O. C. P., 147.

Where a mortgagor allows the amount of his loan to remain in the hands of the mortgagee, taking a receipt for it,—Held that the transaction should be regarded as a deposit of money with a banker or agent, repayable on demand without interest. A suit to recover the balance of such moneys is in the nature of a suit to recover the amount of deposit. Nawab Taffree Begum and another v. Mahomed Zahoor Ahsum Khan, 2 N. W. R., 409.

It is now a settled law that every right may be renounced. The general rule is power of renunciation, but there are two marked classes of exceptions: There can be no renunciation of rights and consequent destruction of relative duties prescribed by an absolute law; nor of things inherent in man as man. A man may renounce a concrete right, but not one resulting from a natural condition. Semble,—A karvanan cannot part, by contract, so as to be unable to resume them, with the privileges and duties which attach to his position as a karvanan. N. A. Cherukomen alias Govinden Nair v. N. Ismala, 6 Mad. Rep., 145.

Plaintiff sued to recover Rs. 21,650-5-1, balance of principal and interest due. He alleged in his plaint that, between the 16th February and 23rd July, 1867, he paid at the request of defendant's father, the late G. F. Fischer, Rs. 25,000 on account of Shivagunga zemindari, that the defendant having assumed the management of the zemindari under an assignment from his father, gave plaintiff a receipt for the said sum of Rs. 25,000 under date the 7th August, 1867; that in October and December, 1867, defendant paid the sum of Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 3,000 respectively, in part liquidation of the debt, but since 20th December, 1867, refused any further payment. Defendant answered that this debt due by the late G. F. Fischer had been validly released by an assignment bearing date 29th July, 1871; and that the receipt given by defendant was a mere acknowledgment of the payment of Rs. 25,000 by the plaintiff to thelate G. F. Fischer, and imposed no obligation on defendant to pay the said amount; that there was no consideration for defendant's promise to pay Rs. 25,000; that when defendant executed the receipt he was not aware of the effect of the release, and that the part payments were made under a mistaken idea of liability. At the hearing it was not disputed that a release was executed, and that this claim was embodied and intended to be embodied in that written release, but it was attempted to set up a contemporaneous oral agreement, leaving this claim as a subsisting demand. The Civil Judge dismissed the suit, holding that this oral evidence could not be adduced to contradict the written release. Held, on regular appeal, that the Civil Judge was right. The principle is, Is the matter of the contemporaneous oral agreement so outside the scope of the written one that they can logically subsist together, so that the oral shall neither conduct nor modify the written? In the present case, to set up an oral agreement that the sum released should in fact be paid, is to deal with an object already embodied in the written agreement in a manner antagonistic to its provisions. It is not only to vary what the words do mean, but

A rule of construction is that the enacting words of a statute may be carried beyond the preamble, if words be found in the former strong enough for the purpose. Chinaiyan v. Mahomed Fokeeroooddeen, 2 Mad. Rep., 322.

Nand D., having taken a lease of certain lands, jointly gave a kuleulut, agreeing that if within the term of the lease they die, or if in any other way the concern passed into the hands of others, then their heirs, or those who would succeed to their rights, would pay the rent. After the kuleulut was given N. made over his interest in the lease to D.—Held that, in passing from N. and D. to D. alone, the lease had passed into the hands of "others" within the meaning of the kuleulut, and that D. occupied the position of the persons contemplated by the terms "those who will succeed to our rights." Bhobne Chandra Miller and others v. George MacNair and others, 10 W. R., 404.

The defendant requested the plaintiff to send coals to Sahebgunge and Rajmehal, and the plaintiff put the coals upon the railway at Raneegunge, where their depot is. In the absence of all proof as to the amount of coals delivered at Sahebgunge and Rajmehal, and of all notice of despatch and delivery to the consignee, the fact of delivery at Raneegunge was held insufficient to throw on him the liability for the coals sued for. E. Hanlon v. The Bengal Coal Company, 3 W. R., 163.

One contract does not displace another, unless something complete and effectual is done by the parties to the new arrangement. The onus is on the party alleging inequality of sample. The Ishera Yarn Mills Co. Limited v. Syeb Hadjie Abdool Kurreem, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 276.

If a party enters into a contract to provide and ship molasses at the risk and expense of the seller, he must be taken to guarantee that the casks are proper casks, and properly coppered for any voyage from Calcutta for which such goods may be reasonably ordered by the plaintiffs to be shipped. Palmer v. Cohen, 1 Hyde's Rep., 123.

Where there is a special agreement between two parties, and that agreement has been performed, and one of them has had all the benefit to which he is entitled thereunder, the other may sue him either upon the special agreement or upon what has been called the implied contract which arises out of the receipt of the benefit. A contract for "tallow" is fulfilled by the delivery, of the fat of sheep, goats, and other animals, besides oxen. Mahomed Ibrahim v. R. D. Lauder, Cor. Rep., 42.

A contract in writing to "take all your rope and Manilla rope at the following prices," construed to mean all the vendor's rope in a certain godown on a particular day. Tarracknath Paulit v. Sherbourne, Cor. Rep., 62.

A mortgage-deed contained a condition, that if the principal were not repaid by a certain day the mortgage should only be redeemed by payment of one murá of rice for each rupee of the mortgage-money. The mortgagee was in possession under a prior il dárawará mortgage, and rice rose in the market. Held that the condition was unreasonable, and such as should not be enforced in equity. Mailaraya v. Subbaraya Bhut and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 81.

Where a wajib-ool-urz contained a condition restricting the landlord's right to enhance,—Held that having signed it he must be held to be bound by it, until he establishes his right by a civil suit to have the condition in the wajib-ool-urz set aside. Such consent or such authority may be expressed in words or writing, or inferred from the acts or conduct of the parties. Girdharjee Lall and others v. Oomroo Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 249.

An agreement to put a party in possession of certain lands, if default be made in the payment of money lent, does not preclude that party from suing for the money lent, if he elect to do so. Annasami v. Narasayan, 2 Ind. Jur., O. S., 12.

When it is provided by conditions of sale of land that the vendor shall not be bound to show any title prior to an instrument of a certain date, the purchaser may insist upon a defect of title appearing aliunde and before that date, and if it be proved to exist may rescind the contract and recover back earnest-money, interest, and expenses. Muncherjee Pestonjee v. Narayen Luxamoyee, 1 Bom. Rep., 77.

Held that the word "adjacent" cannot so narrowly be construed as to confine the enquiry to places bordering on the land, or even lying very near or close to it. Taija Mull v. Oomroo and others, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 64.

Where a contract is partly printed and partly written, and there is a conflict between the printed and written part, the written part must be taken to control the printed part. Murlali v. Nutthmull Nowluckee, 2 Hyde's Rep., 242.

When a third person voluntarily consents to incur liability on account of another, and binds himself in a penalty for the due performance of his engagement, the nice technicalities of English law are not applicable, but the real intention of the parties must be looked to. In this case, there having been a bond-fide endeavour on the part of the respondent fairly to perform his engagement, and there having been a disposition on the part of the appellant to throw obstacles in the way of the performance, in order to obtain payment of the penalty consequent on non-performance, the appellants did disperse. Annu & others v. Masseyk and Kenny, 2 W. R., P. C., 43.

The appellant became security for the payment by the respondent of the Government dues in respect of a moohah then about to be sold for those dues, and by the first karamamah entered into by the parties it was stipulated that, on default of the respondent to pay any part of the instalments, the appellant was to be delivered in good merchantable order, free from dampness, carefully packed, the contents of each chest to be of one quality, and got up with the usual care of the mark, and if not so delivered such allowance to be made to the purchasers as shall be awarded by Mr. J. P. T." Held, the words "if not delivered" referred to all the several preceding stipulations, including the quality. And therefore inferiority of quality below that usually made at the concern was no ground for rejection of the indigo tendered, but only the subject for an allowance to be awarded by Mr. J. P. T. D. H. Macfarlane and others v. E. C. Robert and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 258.

By a contract for the cultivation of indigo, the defendants agreed, in consideration of certain payments, to prepare the land, sow the seeds that should be supplied, and reap the crops. And it was stipulated that in case the defendant should neglect to cultivate the lands the Amlah of the factory might cultivate them, and deduct the expense from the money payable to the defendant, and that if the lands were not prepared for the seed at the time of the full moon in the month of Magh "in consequence of the loss of indigo and its profits, the defendant should pay compensation at the rate of twelve sicca rupees per beegah." Held, first, that it was not obligatory upon the plaintiff to enter upon the lands and cultivate upon default by the defendant. Secondly, that the stipulation for the payment by the defendant of twelve sicca rupees per beegah, in the event of the land not being prepared for seed by the time mentioned, was a reservation in the nature of liquidated damages; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover more than that sum in respect of the breach of that stipulation, although loss to a greater extent may have been sustained. Macrae v. Jomneth Misser, 3 Mad., 25.

Where there was a written agreement between the first defendant's father and the Collector, in which the first defendant's father undertook to pay a certain rent "for ever," but these general words were qualified by the words that he is to pay the rent "as long as the village remains in his possession," and the document did not contain any express agreement or undertaking on the part of the Collector,—Held that the enjoyment of the land by the first defendant's father at a certain rent as long as he retained possession of it was ample consideration and motive for his agreement to pay the rent, and that it was not necessary, in order to prevent the consideration and motive for his agreement from being wholly defeated, to imply on the part of the Collector on agreement that he should hold the land for ever at that rent and no more. Sambilay Ammal v. Appakutti Ayangar, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 106.

A kuleleut having been executed in favour of a zemindar who died, leaving two daughters, one of them sued the tenants to recover a moiety of the rents due for a series of years under the kuleleut; but her claim was dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that she had not made out a "Received from C. M. —— bales of —— which the Commercial Transport Association in consideration of Rs. —— when paid to their agent at Howrah hereby contract and agree to deliver safely at Howrah," &c., &c., is a mere delivery order, and not a document of title, at all events as between European parties. The claimant under it must prove consideration. And a consideration passed at the time it came into the claimant's hands, as between himself and his immediate indorsee, will not support a claim on such a document. Assaram Burteah v. The Commercial Transport Association, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 113.

The defendant promised that in the event of his obtaining possession of certain land he would be answerable for all balance, ascertained to be outstanding, after comparison of the collection accounts for 1259 (1852). Held that the comparison of the accounts was a condition precedent to the defendant's liability, and therefore that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover such arrears, notwithstanding the defendant was let into possession and it was proved that there were such arrears, unless it was also shown that the accounts had been compared, or an opportunity of comparing them had been afforded to the defendant.

A., on behalf of her infant son B., contracted with C. that he should be allowed for the maintenance of his daughter whom he was about to marry, land situate at X., that should yield an annuity of Rs. ——, B., after coming of age, contracted at Y. to pay C. the annual allowance, and ratified the contract which had been made by his mother.

Held, first, that although the contract with B. was entered into at Y., yet, as by that contract he ratified the contract entered into by his mother, and which related to lands at X., the Court of X. had jurisdiction in a suit for recovery of certain of the yearly payments. Secondly, that a suit for annual payments which had accrued within twelve years of the commencement of the suit was maintainable, notwithstanding more than twelve years had elapsed since the contracts were entered into. Thirdly, that the Court might decline to allow interest on the arrears found to be due prior to the commencement of the suit, there being no stipulation in the contract for interest, and might award interest on the amount decreed from the commencement of the suit to the date of the decree and interest upon the aggregate amount and upon the costs, from the date of the decree until payment.

Where, on the face of the contract, it did not appear that either party was called upon to act first, it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, unless he proved performance of, or an effort to perform, his part. In the absence of any Yuggodumba Dossee v. Haran Chunder Dutt and others, 10 W. R., 108.

In one character the defendants claimed the whole 16 annas of certain churs as former proprietors; in another, as arrears of a small share of another hostile estate. In the former character, there was an agreement with the plaintiff that if he, at his own expense and trouble, obtained a settlement of the churs for them they would assign a 4-annas share of them to him. After some time the revenue authorities finally decided against the defendants' claim in the former character, but made a settlement with them in the latter capacity. Plaintiff now sues for his share under the agreement,—Held that, as the basis of that agreement was the establishment of the first right, and as that right had failed the plaintiff was not entitled to take from the defendants anything of that which they held in virtue of their second right.

Brindabun Doss and others v. Jugodeessuree Chowdhrain and others, 6 W. R., 165.

Plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement for the sale of the ship, who were thereby stated to be the absolute owners of a certain ship, to the plaintiff of the said ship. The defendants agreed with the plaintiff that they would immediately upon payment of the purchase money execute to the plaintiff and another a proper bill of sale of the ship. The defendants were unable to get a properly registered bill of sale of the ship made out, owing to infirmity of their own title, but were willing, so far as they could, to convey. The plaintiff had made part payment in respect of the ship, to the plaintiff of the said ship. The defendants were unable to get a properly registered bill of sale of the ship made out, owing to infirmity of their own title, but were willing, so far as they could, to convey. The plaintiff had made part payment in respect of the ship. The defendant was let into possession and it was proved that there were such arrears, unless it was also shown that the accounts had been compared, or an opportunity of comparing them had been afforded to the defendant.

 Held that, in a contract to sow indigo, not sow- ing would be prim-facie evidence of dishonesty; and that, in order to claim the benefit of Clause 4 of Section 5 of Regulation XI of 1823, it was necessary to show that the negligence to sow had been accidental. Lall Mohamed Biswas v. R. Watson and Co., 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 3.

Plaintiffs sued for certain lands under an agreement executed to their elder brother, Sundaruppa, by defendants in the following terms: "You have this day received a loan of Rs. 1,345-4-4 from D. Venkappa and from me, Brahmanna, for the purpose of remitting to the Court, in satisfaction of the warrant amount, in the matter of the suit No. 26 of 1835 on the file of the Provincial Court between your father, the late Umapati, appellant and Merala Venltappa and from me, Brahmanna, for the sum of Rs. 1,345-4-4.

Jyoprokash Bhuggul v. Bugwan Dass and others, Marsh., 589.

The plaintiff, a Hindu widow, on 26th March, 1866, sold to the defendant certain lands for Rs. 800. The price was paid to the plaintiff, who on the same day lent it to the defendant under an agreement that she should receive Rs. 6 monthly by way of interest, and that the principal sum should be repayable on demand. Interest was paid up to April, 1869, but afterwards discontinued. The plaintiff thereupon demanded payment of the principal sum of Rs. 800, but payment was refused by the defendant. On July 4th, 1870, the plaintiff sued for the recovery of the principal sum lent, with interest from the date when it was withheld up to the date of suit. Held that the obligations to pay Rs. 6 a month by way of interest, and to repay the principal on demand, must be construed to be alternative obligations. In this view of the contract a demand was necessary to complete the cause of action, and the cause of action arose at the date of the demand; the suit, therefore, was not barred by Act XIV of 1859, Section 1, Clause 9.

Per Norman, J.—By Hindu law a demand would be necessary. Brammamayi Dasi v. Abhai Charan Chowdary, 7 B. L. R., 489.

No time being fixed for payment or delivery by a contract for the purchase and sale of certain goods, the construction of law is, that the seller will deliver on payment of the price, and that the buyer will pay the price on receiving the goods, and either party is competent to call upon the other within a reasonable time to fulfil his part of the agreement, if ready to fulfil his own. Juggernath v. Been, 2 N. W. R., 60.

The plaintiffs contracted to supply the defendants with from 275,000 to 300,000 of ganny bags described as No. 6 quality, size 40 by 28 inches, the defendants to have the option of taking bags of a larger size, some being longer and some being shorter than the contract size, and refused to take delivery of the remainder. In an action for breach of contract in not accepting the bags, the Court held that the parties did not contemplate any large margin of difference in the size of the bags, and that the proportion of those which differed was large enough to justify the defendants in refusing to take delivery, and held that the tender of such bags by the plaintiffs was not a substantial performance of the contract. A. B. Miller, Official Assignee, v. The Gouripore Company, Limited, 8 B. L. R., 581.

In March, 1871, T. and Co., brokers in Calcutta, sold to S. and Co., on account of C. (an up-country seed merchant), 200 tons of poppy-seed, and allowed C. to draw upon them to the extent of the value of fifty tons before despatch, on the terms of a previous contract, by which they had allowed C. to draw against cotton to arrive in Calcutta before the drafts matured, C. authorizing them to receive payment on his account on goods sold and delivered through them. Towards the end of March, C. entered into an agreement with E., a merchant in Calcutta, under which E. accepted bills to a large amount for C., upon C.'s promise to cover the bills before maturity. In June, C. ordered the defendant Railway Company to consign all goods despatched from Fyzabad to E.'s address, and empowered E. to take delivery of, and give receipts for, all such goods. In the same month, C. despatched from Patna, in bags supplied by S. and Co., fifty-five tons of poppy-seed to Calcutta, and sent the railway receipt to E., who was therein named as the consignee. One of the terms printed on the receipt stated that goods would only be delivered to the consignee named in the receipt, or to his order. In advising E. of the despatch of poppy-seed, C. informed him that it had been sold to S. and Co., and that delivery was to be made through T. and Co., and E. had also seen letters which passed between C. and his agents, in which the following passages occurred: "Our Calcutta firm will deliver the poppy to T. and Co." and "Do your best, and hurry off despatches of fifty tons of poppy; the rest of the poppy and linseed can go to E." E. endorsed the Railway's receipt to S. and Co., who paid the freight, and sircars of E. and S. and Co. together went to the railway station and demanded delivery, which the Railway Company at first promised to give, but afterwards, under an order from C. to "deliver fifty tons to T. and Co., and to no other party, the rest of the seed to be delivered according to documents," they, at T. and Co.'s request, delivered the whole fifty-five tons to them. In an action by E. against the Railway Company for non-delivery of the seed to him,—

_Held (per Markby, J.)_ E. was mere agent of the vendor for the delivery of the goods; T. and Co. had superior title to the goods, of which E. had notice.

_Held (per Couch, C. J., and Macpherson, J., on appeal)_ the Railway Company was bound to deliver to E. The property in the goods and the right of possession was in him; he had an authority coupled with an interest which C. could not revoke; he had no notice of the title of T. and Co., which was an equitable right only. Eagleton v. The East India Railway Company, 8 B. L. R., 581; 17 S. W. R., C. R., 532

The defendants contracted to purchase from the plaintiffs "2,000 maunds of fresh, clean, and good up-country indigo seed, guaranteed growth of season 1870-71, at Rs. 11 per maund, to be delivered to the defendants' agent at Hajipur in all February next." In part performance of this contract, the plaintiffs delivered, and the defendants' agents at Hajipur accepted, 865 maunds of seed, no objection as to quality being taken. But when the remainder of the seed was tendered in February, the defendants refused to accept, on the ground that it was not according to contract. At the same time, and upon the same grounds, they refused to pay the contract price for the seed already accepted, and tendered instead the market price at the time of delivery. In an action to recover the contract price of the 865 maunds delivered, and damages for loss on re-sale of the remainder of the seed, the Judge of the Court below found on the facts that the seed was not "seed of the growth of 1870-71," as far as it was recoverable to procure it, and that, though there was evidence to show that seed of the previous season, if of good quality and in good preservation, was occasionally mixed with the new seed, and that seed so mixed had been accepted as a performance of contracts for 1870-71, yet there was no evidence that, under such contracts as the present, the seller was by custom at liberty to mix seeds of two crops, so as to bring the sample up to an average quality; and further, that a custom so directly at variance with the express terms of the contract could not, if proved, be allowed to prevail. Held also, that the defendants had waived any objection to the 865 maunds, which must therefore be taken as a good delivery, provided under the contract, and must be paid for accordingly.

Held on appeal (affirming the decision of the Court below) that the plaintiffs had not delivered seed according to the contract; but (reversing the decision of the Court below) that the contract was a contract for the delivery of the entire quantity of 2,000 maunds, and that the plaintiffs could only recover for the 865 maunds as on a new contract arising at the time when the seed was accepted, such contract being to pay for the seed according to its value, and not according to the rate stipulated for the 2,000 maunds. Magfarlane v. Carr, 8 B. L. R., 459; 17 S. W. R., C. R., 444.

Where parties distinctly stipulate that, in the event of a failure to repay the amount advanced with interest at a certain rate on a certain day, the lender was to be entitled to interest at a different rate, such stipulation cannot be regarded as a penalty, but the Court is bound to give effect to the contract entered into between the parties. Brojo Kishore Roy v. Madhub Pershad Misser, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 373.

Plaintiff sued, as managing trustee of a choultry to set aside certain mortgages of the lands with which it was endowed, made by the second, third, and fourth defendants to the sixth and seventh defendants, and for an injunction to compel payment of kist, which had been allowed to fall due, and which the plaintiffs were entitled to have set aside and added. Held that the amount of remuneration for the professional attendance of a medical officer on the family of a public servant, in the absence of an express agreement, should be determined with reference to the circumstances in each case, and that the principle adopted by the Judge in estimating the amount, that reference must be had not only to present means but to prospects, without considering other matters, was not correct. Held, under the circumstances of the case, that one-fifth of the monthly income of the defendant was the fair amount to which the plaintiff was entitled for his professional attendance for the year. J. W. Rawlins v. D. C. O. Daniel, 1 Agra Rep., 56.

A broker's bought note is not of itself evidence of a contract. It is signed by one only of the parties, the defendants. To complete the evidence of the contract, there should also be a sold note signed by the plaintiff, showing that the buyers had duly accepted his supposed obligation. W. Mackinnon and others v. Shichkundra Seal and another, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 354.

Verbal evidence is not admissible to vary or alter the terms of a written contract in cases in which there is no fraud or mistake, and in which the parties intend to express in writing what their words import, as, for instance, to show that a deed of absolute sale was intended to operate as a mortgage (dissentientibus Norman and Shumboonah Pandit, J.J.) Kasheenath Chatterjee v. Chundy Banerjee, 5 W. R., 68.

Oral evidence is not admissible to show that the parties did not intend that an absolute sale in writing should operate, not as an absolute sale, but merely as a conditional sale, in order to defeat a right of pre-emption (dissentientibus Norman and Shumboonath Pandit, J.J.) Mooolook Chand Surma v. Kooloo Chunder Surma, 5 W. R., 76.

Where there is an acknowledgment in writing of a debt due, parol evidence is admissible in order to show to what debt the acknowledgment related. Woomesch Chunder Mookerjee v. Eliza Sageman, 12 W. R., A. O., 2.

In a suit in a Small Cause Court to enforce a written agreement, the defendant has a right to set up and adduce parol evidence to prove such a state of facts as would show that the instrument did not correctly set forth the terms of the arrangement between the parties, and thereby justify the Court in

VALIDITY OF CONTRACT.

A contract between several persons to make separate tenders to Government, and that whoever should obtain contract from Government should share the profits with the others, although fraudu-been granted under a pottah, the Judge finding that no consideration had been given by the plaintiff, pronounced the contract a nudum pactum on which no action would lie,—Held that, as defendant had accepted the grant of the pottah, and contended that the whole of the lands had been made over to plaintiff's possession, no question of consideration could arise. Roop Narain Singh v. Chatooree Singh, 12 W. R., 283.

In a suit for (so-called) damages, on the ground that defendants, after executing an agreement by which they stipulated to sell fish every day in plaintiff's bazar, and to pay a fee per diem, and bound themselves to pay "damages" to a specified extent, in the event of their leaving his bazar and resorting to any other bazar, had left his for another bazar, where they were vending fish,—

Held that the suit could be maintained, being an action upon a contract, in which there was nothing illegal; but that the sum stipulated to be paid was merely a penalty. Madhub Chunder Roy v. Luchee Tellitee and others, 9 W. R., 212.

A contract compounding an assault is not illegal, and may be sued upon. The fact of two of the defendants being Mahomedans does not affect the principle of this decision. Motheranath Dey v. Gopal Roy, 5 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 16.

When the refusal to perform a contract can be proved by evidence, which shows that a party has utterly renounced the contract, or has put it out of his own power to perform it, the injured party may at his option sue at once, or wait till the time when the act was to be done. But the onus probandi in such a case is on the plaintiff. J. W. Smith v. Gopal Sheikh, 3 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 14.

The plaintiff entered into a contract with the defendant to deliver sulphur, to be imported by the ship Michael Angelo. No sulphur arrived by the ship, as he abides by it, he cannot have its extent, in the event of their leaving his bazar and resorting to any other bazar, where they were vending fish,—

Held that the defendant was not bound to accept sulphur not imported by the Michael Angelo. Bikari Lal v. Madhusudun Kundu, 2 B. L. R., O. C., 154.

In cases of contract in India, it has never been held that a contract made under seal of itself imported that there was a sufficient consideration for the agreement. Rajah Sahib Pershad Sen v. Baboo Budhoo Singh, 12 W. R., P. C., 6.

A Court will require strict evidence that a contract, per se legal, is intended to operate illegally. It is not necessary in order to support a contract that the plaintiff should have possession of the Government paper when the contract is entered into; it is sufficient if he is in a position and is ready and willing to deliver it at due date. A letter, stating "the bearer will hand over to you 7,000 Rs. 51 loan notes" is sufficient to establish the bond-fide nature of a transaction for purchase of Company's paper. Mohindro Nath Mitter v. Koylas Nath Banerjee, Cor. Rep., 1; 2 Hyde's Rep., 121.

*Where a party to a contract seeks release from its obligations, on the ground that, for some reason or another he is entitled to repudiate it, he must assert this right as soon after becoming aware of it as he reasonably can. Long inaction for must be held in equity to be a ratif contract. Ishan Chunder Mioomdar v. Nitish and others, 9 W. R., 116.*

He who would disaffirm a contract by mistake, must do so within a reasonable time and will not be allowed to do so unless he can be replaced in their original position. Mohdin v. Utsalal Umali and others, A. C., 390.

Where a judgment-debtor agreed to pay an additional sum, and obtained postpone sale of his property,—Held that the suit could be maintained, being an action upon a contract, in which there was nothing illegal; but that the sum stipulated to be paid was merely a penalty. Madhub Chunder Roy v. Luchee Tellitee and others, 9 W. R., 212.

A party to a contract seeks release from its obligations, on the ground that, for some reason or another he is entitled to repudiate it, he must assert this right as soon after becoming aware of it as he reasonably can. Mutchett, ignoring the above instrument, sued Newell for the Rs. 22,50 mentioned in it. Pestanji thereupon applied to be made a party to the suit, under Section 73 of the Code. His application was granted, and he joined as a co-plaintiff.

Held that Pestanji was properly made a party; but, as the validity of the instrument was disputed by Mutchett, that Pestanji should rather have been joined as a defendant than as a plaintiff. Pestanji Munchurji Widad v. Joseph Mutchett and Thomas Newell, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 10.

Where a mehtā without the knowledge of his master, agreed with his master's brokers to receive a percentage (called sucri) on the brokerage earned by such brokers in respect of transactions carried out through them by the mehtā's master, and no express consideration was alleged or proved by the mehtā, the Court refused to imply, as a consideration, an agreement by the mehtā to induce his master to carry on business through such brokers, and was of opinion that such an agreement would be inconsistent with the relation of master and servant between the same brokers engaged with the mehtā not to charge him brokerage on such private transactions as he should carry on through them, and the mehtā carried on private transactions through the brokers, it was held that the brokers were bound by that agreement, and could not maintain a claim for such brokerage. Vina Yak-rāu Ganputrāy et al. v. Rursordās Pranjiwandās, 7 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 90.

Where a ryot, in consideration of an advance of money, has stipulated to grow indigo for a certain number of years, the contract is not void as being without consideration, because, during the period it had to run, the debt due from the ryot is extinguished by the delivery of indigo leaves. The contract is one entire contract upon one entire consideration, and a contract which was at its commencement based upon a valid consideration cannot become void for want of consideration by any change whatever in the situation of the parties. W. Ledlie v. Gopaldas, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 91.

Where, to suppress a criminal prosecution for having accidentally caused the death of his wife, plaintiff voluntarily paid money to defendant, knowing the defendant to be the nearest relative of the deceased who could take a part in the prosecution, the contract was held to be void as against morality and public policy, and plaintiff was not entitled to sue for the money so paid. Jeteo Mahalo v. Manuram Mahulo, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 84.

The plaintiffs contracted with the defendant for the purchase from him of a certain quantity of hog's lard. The terms of the contract were contained in a letter which was drafted by the plaintiffs and sent to the defendant for signature. The defendant returned the letter unsigned, with two additional clauses. The plaintiffs not being able to agree to one of these clauses, had an interview with the defendant, when the defendant took the document away with him, and subsequently on 17th May returned it signed, but with the additional clause objected to by the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs had another interview with the defendant on 5th June, during which the additional clause objected to by the plaintiffs was struck out, one of the plaintiffs writing the word "cancelled" against that clause, and the defendant putting his initials against the word "cancelled." The plaintiffs then added to the contract the words "approved," together with "R. and C.," being initials of their firm. Other alterations had been made in the document, and, it containing many erasures, the plaintiffs on the same day sent a fair copy to the defendant for signature, but the defendant wrote repudiating the alleged contract, and refusing to sign the document. Held (confirming the decision of the Court below), there was no binding contract between the parties. The signature of the defendant put to the document on 17th May was not a sufficient signature by the party to be charged, so as to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. J. A. Charriot and others v. C. S. M. Shircore, 8 B. L. R., 305.

The plaintiff, a resident of Pondicherry, held a bond from one of the defendants (the 2nd) for a certain sum of money. This bond the plaintiff charged the said defendant before the French legal authorities with having fraudulently abstracted from his house in Pondicherry, and he obtained the arrest and extradition from the British territory of the second defendant, as also of his brother, the first defendant. The latter on his way to Pondicherry met the plaintiff, and a settlement of accounts took place. The fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth defendants made themselves liable by executing the bond sued on for the sum found due to the plaintiff, and took indemnity bonds to themselves from the first defendant, the consideration being the agreement of the plaintiff to discontinue further proceedings in the criminal charge. The Court at Pondicherry sanctioned the agreement as a compromise by civil redress, and suspended further proceedings in accordance with the law in force in the settlement. Held, that the contract was enforceable, the facts of the case not showing the compromise to be in its nature prejudicial as being in contravention of public policy under the Government of British India, or injurious to the good order and interests of society in regard to the administration of public justice.

The English Common Law rule, that contracts for the compounding or suppression of criminal charges for offences of a public nature are illegal and void, has no application to a contract for compounding the prosecution of criminal proceedings for an offence against the municipal law of a foreign country. The rule of international law, that the law of the place of a contract governs its validity, is subject to the qualification that every state may refuse to enforce a contract when it is for the fraudulent evasion of its law, or is injurious to its public institutions or interests. Subráyu Pillāl v. Subráyu Mudali, 4 Mad. Rep., 14.

5.—BREACH OF CONTRACT.

By a contract entered into between the plaintiffs and defendant, the plaintiffs agreed to sell certain goods ex a specific ship to the defendant, the goods to be taken delivery of within forty-five days, and ten days to be allowed for inspection, and claiming allowance for any damaged goods, the defendant to take the risk of damage from the date of the contract. The period for taking delivery and for inspection dated from the 13th May. The plaintiffs in case of violation of a contract by one party, June, and therefore we were not ready to perform our contract, had no right of action, notwithstanding that the defendant never, in fact, called on them to deliver the goods for inspection.

The words "as a certain ship" must be taken to mean that the goods are really landed, and not in course of being landed, and therefore, independently of the question of the necessity on the part of the plaintiffs to show their readiness to perform their part of the contract, the defendant was not bound to take goods on board ship, in respect of which, if the contract were binding upon him, he would have been found to take the risk of any damage or loss to the goods on board ship, or in the course of landing. Robertson Gladstone v. Kastury Mull, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 103.

If a person contracts to deliver goods at a specified place, he must be there in person or by agent, and be ready to deliver them; if to deliver them by a certain time, he must tender them so as to allow sufficient time for examination and receipt. But when a thing is to be performed at a certain place, on or before a certain day, to another party to a contract, the tender must be to the other party at that place, and that other party must be present at some particular part of the day before sunset, so that the act may be completed by daylight. Where a thing is to be done anywhere, a tender at a convenient time before midnight is sufficient. In case of violation of a contract by one party, the other party may ordinarily rescind it totally or partially, provided he himself is guilty of no default or violation, and exercises the right within a reasonable time. If, after default of the other party, he does an act recognizing the contract, he cannot afterwards rescind it. Kartick Nath Pandey v. Government, 11 W. R., 58.

Where a contract for sowing indigo was entered into, and advances made in part performance of an agreement of compromise between the parties to a suit for enhancement of rent,—Held that the non-completion of the agreement of compromise did not exonerate the defendant from performing his part of the contract for sowing indigo. Morris, Fitzgerald and Sandys v. Falkner, Chute and Sandeys v. Setul Mandal, 10 W. R., 430.

It is not imperative on the Courts, in cases of breach of contract for the supply of indigo plant, according to the provisions of Regulation VI of 1863, to award three times the amount of the advance. Where the breach is not fraudulent, the penalty should be adjudged with reference to the extent of the injury sustained, but not exceed three times the sum advanced. Where the breach is fraudulent, the extent of the injury sustained is, without any restriction whatever, the standard for regulating the amount awardable. Dhuleep Singh v. Seth Roshum Lall, 1 Agra F 69.

A ryot took advances from an indigo condition that he was not to repay any the same until the expiration of the agreement even then he was not to be bound to money in cash, but had the option, e. the same in cash or continue to cultivate indigo, and deliver the plants grown until the whole of the advances were satisfied that an action would not lie for a reasonable balance in consequence of the plaintiffs' delivery of the goods on board ship, or in the course of landing. Robertson Gladstone v. Kastury Mull, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 103.

If a person contracts to deliver goods at a specified place, he must be there in person or by agent, and be ready to deliver them; if to deliver them by a certain time, he must tender them so as to allow sufficient time for examination and receipt. BREACH OF CONTRACT.

been an express stipulation to that effect; that an impossibility of fulfilling the terms of a contract must be clearly established in order to avoid a liability for breach thereof; that when a place of delivery is specified in a contract, delivery must be made there; that the plaintiff having failed to prove alleged fraud in a deed, although entitled to relief under a distinct head of equity, will not be allowed to make a new case, and cannot, in the same suit, obtain a decree on foot of said deed; that amendment of a bill will not be allowed, if it appear that an account, being the relief attainable, would have been given if demanded, and that the plaintiff has not offered to perform his part of a contract and allow compensation for breaches thereof to the defendant, and to pay any balance that should be found against him; that the mode of ascertaining damages for breach of contract prescribed in the contract must be adopted, and the remedy by action at once accrues. Pole v. Gordon, 2 Hyde's Rep., 289; 1 Cor. Rep., 83; and Bourke's Rep., O. C., 1.

Where a contract was entered into for the carriage of coolies, the ship-owner was held guilty of breach of contract in appointing a master who was prohibited by an order of Government from commanding a ship carrying emigrants. Charles Eales v. Ruttonjee Eduljee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 131.

Where a contract was made by the defendant that a number of coolies should be brought by him to an estate, and remain at work on the estate for a specified time, and there had been a breach of the contract,—Held that the case was within Section 2 of Act XIII of 1859. 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 25.

A contract providing for a deduction being made in the rents of an ijaran in the Court of diminution, affords no ground for a decree owing solely to the ijaradar's negligence to collect the rents. Bisoroof Dutt v. Binderam Stein, 3 W. R., Act X R., 10.

Where a vendor contracts to deliver goods within a reasonable time, payment to be made on delivery, if before the lapse of that time he merely expresses an intention not to perform the contract, the purchaser cannot at once bring his action unless he exercise his option to treat the contract as rescinded. Musuk Das v. Rangayya Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., 162.

A party failing to perform his contract may be sued, at pleasure of the other party, either for specific performance or for damages. Munnee Dutt Sing v. William Campbell, 12 W. R., 149.

Defendant borrowed a sum of money below Rs. 500 from plaintiff, with a view to redeem a mortgage, on condition that after redemption he would sell the property to plaintiff. He did not, however, redeem the property. Held that the plaintiff's suit to recover his dues was one for damages as upon a breach of contract in which, under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal would lie. Khulleeil Mahomed v. Farsum Ally, 12 W. R., 269.

Coolies in Assam who have received advances in contemplation of work to be done may be proceeded against under Act XIII of 1859. Queen v. Gaub Gorah, Cacharee, and others, 8 W. R., Cr., 6.

Act XIII of 1859 relates to fraudulent breaches of contract, and does not apply where an advance has not only been worked off by a labourer, but an actual balance is due to him. Taradoss Bhuttacharjee v. Bhaloo Sheikh, 8 W. R., Cr., 69.

Where the parties to a contract stipulate for the payment of a specified sum for any breach of it, and the damages resulting from such breach are uncertain and incapable of accurate valuation, the sum agreed to be paid will be treated as liquidated damages, and not as penalty.

A plaintiff who sues for damages, and is entitled to them, cannot likewise be entitled to specific performance, or to an injunction against the further breach of the agreement, (1) That only one set of damages for one breach of contract alone could be recovered, and not a separate set of damages for each breach of failure to do each of the various acts specified.

(2) That one breach of contract could not commence before the close of the sowing season.

(3) That such stipulated damages should be for one year only, i.e., that the first breach involves a liability to pay once, and once only, the stipulated damages, and that the contract ceases and determines therewith (Shumboo Nath Pundit, J., dissenting). Mole Shahoo and others v. A. J. Forbes, 6 W. R., 278.

An agreement for personal service in conveying indigo from the field of the vats is not a contract the breach of which is punishable by Section 490 of the Penal Code. Re Newa Tewacee and Mullon Jha, 6 W. R., Cr., 80.

The plaintiffs entered into a contract in writing by which the defendant was to deliver 2,450 bundles of gingelly seed on being put in possession of the necessary funds. In a suit for damages by reason of non-delivery,—Held that the plaintiffs, before they could recover, must show that they paid or tendered the amount stipulated, and that the vendor's rights under the contract cannot be controlled by the course of dealing between the parties.

Defendants for a consideration granted to plaintiffs a lease of certain churs, which were an accretion to a zemindary, and had been in possession of Government, but were at the time under temporary settlement with the defendants. Subsequently defendants sold their zemindary to a third party, reserving to themselves the churs. Ultimate it was ordered by the Commissioner of Revenue that the churs should be settled, not with defendants but with the purchasers (the third party), as appertaining to the zemindary. Defendants having thus become unable to give plaintiffs possession, were sued for a refund of the premium or consideration-money.

Held that it was the duty of the defendants to take steps to call in question the decision of the Commissioner, and that their manager's admission of their liability to repay the premium with interest be executed a bond for Rs. 2,000, to bear interest from the date, the transaction to be completed within a specified period. D. was ready and willing to

D. contracted to sell to P. a piece of land for Rs. 4,500, of which he received Rs. 700 as earnest-money. A contract was drawn up, by which D. agreed to execute and register a bill of sale, and deposit a part (Rs. 1,800) of the price, and P. was to execute a bond for Rs. 2,000, to bear interest conditioned for the payment of that sum by a fixed date, the transaction to be completed within a specified period. D. was ready and willing to perform his part of the contract by the time named, but finding that P. would not complete the purchase, but demanded back the earnest-money, he sold the property to a third party for Rs. 3,800. P. then sued to recover the earnest-money and damages.

Held that P. was bound to show that the circumstances were such as to give him an equitable right to have back the earnest-money, and that had it not been deposited D. could have justly sued for damages to the extent of the loss incurred by the second sale, and therefore P. was not entitled to recover the Rs. 700. Rajcoomar Roy Chowdhry v. Rajah Debnendranarain Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

The sum agreed to be paid by a ryot as damages for breach of contract in respect to the sowing of certain lands with indigo must be regarded as liquidated damages, and not as a penalty. Talim Mundle v. R. Watson & Co., 17 S. W. R., C. R., 94.

Plaintiff delivered a certain quantity of jute to the Indian General Steam Navigation Company at Serajgunge, for delivery at the Eastern Bengal Railway Company's station at Sealdah, and it was arranged by the bill of lading (the contract in the case) that the freight from Serajgunge to Sealdah should be payable to the Eastern Bengal Railway Company at Sealdah, and it was so paid upon the delivery of the goods. A portion of the jute was not delivered, and the suit having been brought against the Eastern Bengal Railway Company for the value thereof, the Small Cause Court Judge was disposed to dismiss the suit without further enquiry, on the ground of want of privity between plaintiff and defendant. Held that it was premature for the Judge to say that the suit could not lie against defendant without proceeding with the further investigation of the case, and that although plaintiff might have a remedy against the Indian General Steam Navigation Company, it by no means followed that he had none against the defendant company also.

Where a written contract liable to an optional stamp is put in evidence by the defendants, the plaintiffs cannot recover a larger amount under it than (if stated) the optional stamp upon the instrument would have been sufficient to cover. In a suit for the recovery of money due under a written contract the defendants admitted that a sum of Rs. 6,328-4-0 was due to the plaintiffs, subject to certain deductions which they claimed to be entitled to set off against the plaintiffs' claim. The defendants put in evidence the written contract, the stamp upon which was only sufficient to cover the sum of Rs. 5,000.—Held that, notwithstanding the admission of the defendants, the plaintiffs could only recover Rs. 5,000 in the suit. Kistuasamy Pillay v. The Municipal Commissioners for the Town of Madras, 4 Mad. Rep., 120.

6.—Breach of Warranty.

A buyer may at once sue on a warranty of title if he can show that the seller has not a good title in accordance with his undertaking, and that he has sustained loss in consequence.

Sembie.—It does not follow as a matter of course that on proof of breach of warranty the buyer is entitled to receive back the whole of the consideration-money; or that on its being ascertained that the seller had no title the conditional sale is nullified.

The plaintiff applied to the defendant to sell him an ice-making machine capable of turning out 100 seers of pure ice per hour. The defendant supplied a machine which he represented as capable of turning out the required amount of ice.

It was in evidence that the machine was to be set up at Allahabad; that the defendants had undertaken not to sell another machine of the same sort to any one at Allahabad, so that practically the plaintiff would have had a monopoly, or nearly so, as an ice purveyor at that station.

The ice machine turned out eventually a quantity much less than 100 seers a day. Held that the plaintiff was entitled as damages to the amount paid for the machine, the expenses of ascertaining whether it would turn out 100 seers a day, and reasonable interest on the whole; the defendants to be at liberty to take back the machine. Lamouroux v. Eville, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 274.

A payer for honour, though entitled to the same remedies upon the bill as the party for whom payment was made, is not entitled to bring a suit in his own name and in his own behalf for the value of the goods for which the bill was drawn. Carmichael v. Brojonauth Mullick and another, 1 Hyde's Rep., 274.

Where the analogy between native hoondees and English bills of exchange is complete, the English law is to be applied. Sumboonauth Ghose v. Buddonauth Chatterjee, 2 Hyde's Rep., 259.

Held by the majority of the Court (dissentient Steer, J.) that when a hoondee returns dishonoured to the hands of the endorser, he may sue the drawer upon it; and if it appears that he is the lawful holder, may recover. Byjnath Sahoo v. Bacharam, 5 W. R., 86.

Although the English law of prompt notice by return of post does not apply to cases of native hoondees drawn by natives upon natives and endorsed by natives, yet reasonable notice of dishonour is essential. Radha Gobind Shah v. Chunder Nath Doss, 2 Hyde's Rep., 301.

Where a hoondee had been endorsed to purchasers who subsequently returned it to the endorsers, it was held by the Appellate Court (Steer, J., dissentient) that the Judge ought not to have decided against the endorser's claim, because he had not proved that the note had been endorsed back to him. The Court would assume from his possession that he had a right to it, unless the contrary were shown. Byjnath Shagho and others v. Bacharam and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 76.

To an action by the endorsee against the acceptor of a hoondee, the defence was a certain verbal contract between acceptor and payee, of which the plaintiff had notice; and that by the custom of shroffs the defendant was exonerated by such notice. Decree for the plaintiff.

Held that it is the custom of shroffs to make enquiries of the acceptors of hoondees before discounting them.

That a mere notice by the acceptor not to discount does not affect his liability to a person who takes a hoondee bond fide and for valuable consideration after such notice. Khosal Chund v. Luchuce Chund and others, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 151.

A party who receives a hoondee for a particular purpose must apply the same accordingly, and neither he nor any third person knowing the facts can by afterwards receiving the amount detain the same from the principal.

Quere—Whether a hoondee made payable "to order" is, according to Hindu law and the custom of native merchants, negotiable without a written endorsement by the payee. Rajprogram v. Buddoo, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 93; 1 Hyde's Rep., 155.

Held that a purchaser of a hoondee on its being dishonoured is at liberty to sue his endorser alone, and it is not absolutely necessary to implead the acceptor and drawer in the same suit; and if he does so he does not lose his right of suing against them so long as his action is within the limitation.

A purchaser is bound to present a hoondee for payment within reasonable time, and to give reasonable notice of dishonour, that is, within the time within which it is ordinarily given according to the custom of the merchants and bankers of the district, not the immediate notice required by English law in cases of bills of exchange. Gopal Doss v. Seeta Ram, 3 Agra Rep., 268.

Quare—Whether notice of dishonour of a bill of exchange is necessary as between Hindus.

Semble—It is a point to be determined by evidence of custom. Sumboonauth Ghose v. Buddonauth Chatterjee, Cor. Rep., 88.

Where, on account of a loan of Rs. 800, the lender gave the borrower two hoondees for Rs. 1,500, and took away Rs. 633-7 as discount for Rs. 700, and the borrower unable to discover the drawer of the hoondees sued the lender, not on the hoondees, but on two alleged loans of Rs. 800 and Rs. 633-7 respectively,—Held that the only right of action left to the borrower was on the hoondees themselves. Ram Lal Sircar v. Gopal Doss, 7 W. R., 154.

The plaintiffs, being holders of a hundi, sent the same to their koti in Calcutta without endorsement. The hundi was lost or stolen on the way, and came into the defendants' hands as endorsers, the endorsement of the plaintiff having been forged. The defendants without notice of the forgery paid full consideration for the hundi. Held, on appeal, reversing the decision of the Court below, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the hundi from the defendants.

Per Peacock, C. J.—It appeared from the evidence that the hundi in this case would pass, at any rate prior to acceptance, by delivery. Gouris-mull v. Dhausuk Dass, 7 B. L. R., 289.

A hundi which had been purchased by the plaintiff at Delhi for value was, he alleged, endorsed by him to the firm of R. B. D., of Calcutta, "for realization," and sent to that firm by post. Between Delhi and Calcutta the hundi was lost or stolen, and never reached the firm of R. B. D. It eventually came into the hands of the defendant, bearing no endorsement to R. B. D., but endorsed to U. D. H., and by U. D. H. The defendant alleged that he took it in the ordinary course of business, and for valuable consideration, from the gomastah of the firm of U. D. H., after the acceptors to whom it had been sold for that purpose had acknowledged their acceptance in favour of the firm of U. D. H., of Calcutta, by whom it purported to be endorsed to the defendants' firm. When presented to the acceptors for payment it was dishonoured, the acceptors stating that they had received notice not to pay the note, as it had been stolen. On the same day the defendant gave notice of dishonour to the firm of U. D. H., and demanded payment, but that firm stated that their endorsement to the hundi was forged, and refused to pay. It was proved that before taking the hundi the defendant had sent to the acceptor's koti to ascertain if their acceptance was genuine.

In a suit for the recovery of the hundi, or its value,—Held by the Court below that the endorsement of U. D. H. was genuine, and that the
The defendant having taken the hundi in the ordinary course of business, and after sufficient enquiry, was entitled to retain it; this was so notwithstanding the endorsement "for realization" on the hundi. The hundi was one which passed by delivery without endorsement, and therefore if the endorsement of U. D. H. was forged, the defendant still had a right to the hundi.

On appeal, the Court held that the endorsement to the firm of U. D. H. was not genuine, and this being so, the fact that the defendant took the hundi in the course of business, for valuable consideration, and without notice, did not give him a good title to retain it as against the plaintiff. The hundi was specially endorsed and specially accepted, and there was nothing to show that by Hindu law such a hundi would pass as one payable to the holder without endorsement. Thakur Das v. Futteh Mull, 7 B. L. R., 275; and 16 S. W. R., 453.

The plaintiff obtained a hundi from a banker, B., at Baluchar, for a certain amount drawn upon the firm of the latter at Calcutta. Afterwards on her representing to B. that she had lost the hundi, B. granted the plaintiff a duplicate, in the body of which it was stated that if the original had been accepted before presentation of the duplicate the latter was to become null and void. The duplicate was presented to the agent of B. at Calcutta, and payment was refused on the ground that the original had been presented and accepted and paid in due time. Held, that the plaintiff had no cause of action against B. for non-payment of the duplicate hundi, nor for money had and received on account of the original consideration having failed. Custom cannot affect the express terms of a written contract. Indur Chunder Dugar v. Lachmi Bibi, 7 B. L. R., 682; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 501.

The defendant, who resided and carried on business at Patna, was in the habit, several times in the course of the year, of sending goods to Calcutta by boat, and coming down himself by rail: he used to sell the goods himself, and put up some gomastah or agent of his own in Calcutta, but he sold them. He had no place of business, nor any gomastah or agent of his own in Calcutta, but he made the arrangement with S. A. in regard to the hundi was not communicated to the plaintiff. The agreement contained in the letter of 16th September was to make the defendant a surety only for S. A.; that the plaintiff had notice of this at the time of entering into the agreement giving time to S. A.; which therefore operated as a release to the defendant. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the amount of the hundi from the defendant, the Court found that it was not proved that the hundi had been accepted by the defendant, but held that, whether the effect of the agreement contained in the letter of September 16th was to make the defendant a surety only for S. A.; that the defendant was liable. Per Macpherson, J.—The agreement contained in the letter of 16th September did not alter the position of the parties so as to make S. A. the principal debtor, and the defendant his surety. Hurji Ban Das v. Bhugwan Das, 7 B. L. R., 535.

A promise to pay endorsed upon a hoondee after the due date, the plaintiff made the arrangement with S. A. which is embodied in the following letter from S. A. to the plaintiff, dated November 3rd, 1867: "Further, I discounted hundis for Rs. 5,000, which one Pitam Das coming to Calcutta were paid off in the following manner: a hundi for Rs. 2,500 drawn by Bhugwan Das on Bhugwan Das, value deposited by me on the 15th day of the light side of the moon in Bhadra, payable forty-one days after date in Company's Rs.; and a hundi for Rs. 2,500 by Gapi Shaw, Debi Shaw, Radha Shaw, Ram Sahayi Roy, value deposited by me on 14th day of the light side of the moon in Bhadra, payable forty-one days after date in Company's Rs. I discounted hundis of this description, and out of them I paid Rs. 2,200 in cash through Syad Mahomed Hossein Khan Sahib. The balance, Rs. 2,800, is due, the condition for payment of which is as follows (here follows the manner in which payment was to be made): I made an agreement of this sort, and I will pay the whole of the amount, inclusive of interest at 8-annas, and will take the two hundis from Bhai Ram Kissen Futteh Chaud, with whom they are kept. Should I not pay the money according to this condition, then you have the authority." For the defendant it was contended that the effect of the letter of 16th September was to make the defendant a surety only for S. A.; that the plaintiff had notice of this at the time of entering into the agreement giving time to S. A.; which therefore operated as a release to the defendant.

The agreement contained

Per Normam, J.—Notice of the defendant's position in regard to the hundi was not communicated to the plaintiff.

Per Macpherson, J.—The agreement contained in the letter of 16th September did not alter the position of the parties so as to make S. A. the principal debtor, and the defendant his surety.
a waiver of notice, was held to be good and sufficient evidence that the endorser had received notice that the bill had been dishonoured. Syed Ali v. Gopal Dass, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 420.

In order to charge the endorser of a dishonoured hundi, the holder must give reasonable notice of such dishonour to the endorser he seeks to charge. The demand of a petti cannot be deemed to be equivalent to a notice of dishonour. Megrog Jagannathu v. Gokaldas Mathuradas, 7 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 137.

An endorsee for purposes of collection of certain hundi, under circumstances detailed, ordered to cancel his hundi, and to re-deliver the hundees to the endorser. Such an endorsee, not having received the amount of the hundees, not liable to be sued for the value thereof. Gyanz Ram v. Pale Ram, 2 N. W. R., 73.

In a suit to recover the balance due on a hundi brought by the drawers against the drawees upon the insolvency of the acceptor, there was evidence not only that the drawers were merely the ordinary gomastahs of the acceptor, but also that they had no interest whatever in the bill when drawn, that it was the local custom for gomastahs in similar situations to draw bills on their principals without being thereby rendered liable for the defalcations of their principals, that the money when procured on the hundi was applied solely to the purposes of the acceptor, that the drawers considered the acceptor as their only debtor by receiving part payment of the hundee from him and giving him time to pay the remainder, and that the notice of dishonour was not sent to the drawers till ten months afterwards.—Huru Mohun Bysaek v. Krishko Mohun Bysaek, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 442.

Where there is a running account between the parties, a portion of which relates to amount due upon dishonoured hundees, plaintiff is not bound to sue upon the hundees, but may base his claim upon the running account. Ram Chand v. Fonna Lat, 3 N. W. R., 323.

A suit for recovery of the amount of a dishonoured hundi drawn at Shekobad and payable at Furruckabad cannot be brought in the Court of the Moonsiff of Shahjehanpore, the abode of the endorsee of the dishonoured hundi, but where none of the drawers or endorsers resided. Raghoboor Dyal and another v. Dwarka Dass, 3 N. W. R., 343.

The plaintiff brought a suit against three defendants under the following circumstances: The third defendant was the tenant of a village under the second defendant, the first defendant being the agent and manager of the second defendant. The third defendant owed the second defendant a sum of money on account of rent, and drew a hundi on the plaintiff for Rs. 1,000 to be paid to the first defendant or order, and containing these words: "For which amount I shall deliver over to you grain in that village and its hamlets, and for which the Dewan (first defendant) will issue an order to the above effect." The hundi was upon a 1-anna stamp. Plaintiff on receipt of this hundi drew upon the back of it another hundi upon his mother-in-law, in the following terms: "On demand please pay to Mahomed Radhatamulla Shaib, Dewan of Venkatagiri (first defendant), or to his orders, the within-mentioned amount for grain to be supplied me by Mr. Ward (third defendant) on the order of the said Mahomed Radhatamulla Shaib, the Dewan of Venkatagiri." This was signed by the drawee (plaintiff), and beneath his signature was that of the first defendant. The amount mentioned in the hundi was paid to the first defendant; the second hundi was unstamped. The plaintiff's case was, that the first defendant entered upon a binding engagement with him to deliver, or permit the delivery, of grain of the value of Rs. 1,000, and that he failed to fulfil his engagement. The Civil Judge decreed for the plaintiff. On appeal, held by the High Court, reversing the decision of the Civil Court, that the second hundi was not admissible in evidence, not being stamped, and that there was no evidence of such an agreement as that relied on by the plaintiff. Mahomed Rahmatulla Sahibgar and another v. Mr. J. T. Ward, 5 Mad. Rep., 391.

The mere noting on the bill, even if it disclose the name of the notary in full, is not evidence of the presentment or of the dishonouring of the bill. The Bombay City Bank, Limited, v. Moonjee Hordoss, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 274.

In an action brought in the district of Panna against the endorser and acceptors of bills of exchange, after a part payment by the acceptors, no objection having being taken as to the misjoinder of defendants, and the Judge having omitted to find whether the endorser had received notice of dishonour or not,—*Held that the case be remanded to ascertain, first, whether notice had been given within reasonable time; and if not, whether thereby the endorser had been injured or exposed to material risk of injury; and, secondly, whether (English law not being applicable to the case) by the usage of merchants at Panna, a part payment by the acceptors and receipt by the plaintiff discharges the endorser from liability. Gopal Dass v. Sheikh Syed Ali, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 198.

The drawer of a bill of exchange cannot plead agency, unless it is shown on the face of the bill that he drew it as an agent. T. M. Pigov v. Ram Kishen, 2 W. R., 301.

The drawer of a bill of exchange cannot plead that the holder discharged the acceptor, and that no notice of dishonour was given to him when the goods, on the faith of which the bill was accepted, were attached and sold, with the drawer's consent, in payment of his debt to a third party. T. M. Pigov v. Ram Kishen, 2 W. R., 301.
When bills or notes are assigned in satisfaction of a debt, and accepted by the ryots, the creditor on failure of the ryots to pay is bound to give the debtor notice of such non-payment within a reasonable time. Huro Lal Roy v. Maharajah Sumboon Singh Bahadoor, 5 W. R., 230.

The promissory note endorsed on the back of the plaintiff a bill of exchange drawn by N. S. & Co. and accepted by C. N. & Co. The bill, at the time it was endorsed to the plaintiff by the defendant, bore the previous endorsement of N. S. & Co. to the defendant. The bill fell due on December 3rd, 1870, which was a Saturday, and on that day the defendant sent his jemadar to C. N. & Co., the acceptors, to present the bill for payment. The bill was taken by A., one of the members of the firm of C. N. & Co., who gave a cheque for the amount, and took a receipt from the plaintiff's jemadar, striking out the signature of C. N. & Co. as acceptors, but without the plaintiff's consent. The plaintiff's jemadar took the cheque immediately to the bank, and the bank was closed. Thereupon he returned to C. N. & Co. and informed them that the bank was closed, and demanded cash. The plaintiff alleged that it was then stated that the cheque would be honoured on Monday. The plaintiff's jemadar then went and informed the gomastah of the plaintiff of what had been done. The plaintiff's gomastah sent him to the defendant's firm to give him notice of what had taken place. It was alleged that at this interview the defendant's liability was admitted in case the cheque was not honoured, and the plaintiff's jemadar was advised to wait until Monday, the defendant stating that he also had a cheque for Rs. 7,000 from C. N. & Co. This was denied by the defendant. On Monday, 5th December, the cheque was presented to the bank for payment, and was dishonoured. The plaintiff's gomastah went to the defendant's koti, and gave notice of the dishonour of the bill and cheque, and asked him to pay the amount of the bill. The defendant asked for the bill, and the plaintiff's gomastah sent C. N. & Co., and brought back the bill, with the name of C. N. & Co., which had been struck out, replaced. The defendant seeing the bill was over-due, refused to pay the amount. The cheque was thereupon returned to C. N. & Co., and the bill retained by the plaintiff, who, on 6th December, caused written notice of dishonour to be given to the defendant. Held that the cheque must have been merely a conditional payment; and when it was dishonoured the liability on the original bill revived. Held also that reasonable notice of dishonour was given, whether the bill be taken to have been dishonoured on the Saturday or on the Monday.

Semb.—Notice of dishonour, as between endorsee and endorser on bill transactions among Hindus, is not necessary, unless by want of it the endorser would be prejudiced. Sanurimull v. Bhairo Das Ichury, 7 B. L. R., 431.

Though a receipt on the back of a bill of exchange or promissory note prima-facie imports that the bill or note has been paid, yet the receipt is capable of being explained; and if it appears that the bill or note has not been paid, and that another bill or note was substituted for it, the Court will not be justified in concluding that the party who gave the note in that way meant that the debt secured by the note was to be considered to have been paid.

Ordinarily notice of the dishonour of a bill of exchange drawn in India and payable in England should be posted by the first mail which leaves England after the dishonour of the bill. The Unconvenanted Service Bank, Limited, v. Frederick Duffin, 3 N. W. R., 99.

(c) Promissory Notes.

A promissory note attested by a witness does not require to be stamped as a bond under Act X of 1862, Schedule A., Clause 10. The words in that clause, "not being a bond, instrument, or writing bearing the attestation of one or more witnesses," refer only to the preceding words, "other order or obligation for the payment of money." Also the words "bearing the attestation of one or more witnesses," apply only to the words "instrument or writing," and not to the word "bond." Gladstone and others v. Sadoo Churn Dutt, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 203.

In an action on a promissory note, in which the defence was want of consideration, it appeared that the note was given by the defendants to the plaintiff in respect of a transaction in which it was arranged that the plaintiff was to find sureties in a certain appeal case in which the defendant was acting as mookhtear or agent; the sureties were to be approved by the Collector, and were to be paid Rs. 10,000. The plaintiff found the sureties; they were duly approved by the Collector, but the plaintiff paid them a much less sum than Rs. 10,000. Held that there was good consideration for the note. Gunga Narain D054'v. Subramunder Sen, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 409.

In a written promise to pay "when I am able," those words are not to be treated as mere surplusage, but as a binding part of the contract. The promise's cause of action does not accrue until the promise is in circumstances to pay. R. Watson and Co. v. C. G. Blechynen, 1 W. R., 368.

A promissory note containing an agreement by the maker that, in case of any dispute or difference arising concerning the payment of the note or the subject-matter thereof, the same shall and may be sued in the Supreme Court, and "to the jurisdiction subject-matter thereof, the same shall and may be..." provision thereof, the same shall and may be sued in the Supreme Court, and "to the jurisdiction subject-matter thereof, the same shall and may be..."

In an action on a promissory note, where the note was made payable to A., who resided in Calcutta, and was executed and delivered to him in Calcutta, Held that the whole cause of action arose in Calcutta. B. executed and delivered to A. a promissory note, which was specially registered under Section 52 of Act XX of 1866. On the due date of the note, A. renewed the note in consideration of B's securing the debt by assigning to him by way of mortgage, his (B's) interest in certain landed property, Held that A. could proceed in a summary way upon the note, notwithstanding the

In an action for the balance due on a promissory note payable on demand, the Court refused to allow interest, there being no proof of a demand in writing. Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan, Limited, v. C. B. Wilson, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 41.

Where the wording of a promissory note bearing a one-anna stamp appears to be ambiguous as to whether it is payable on demand, the Court will take the evidence of the parties as to the intention, and will then decide whether it is properly stamped. Under such circumstances the Court will take evidence of usage. The Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan v. F. W. Sedgwick and J. Bulkeley, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 35.

A. S. purchased certain jewels at a sale by auction subject to a condition that if not paid for in three days, the goods should be sold at the risk of the purchaser. A. S., being unable to pay within the time stipulated, gave a promissory note for the price upon an agreement that the vendor should retain the jewels for him, but should not exercise the power of sale within three days.

_Held_ that the vendor could sue on the note, though he retained the jewels in his possession under the lien so created. Allen Hayes and others v. Anصندد Chunder Mundle, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 156.

The making of a promissory note is altogether the act of the maker, and delivery according to the promise is required to make it complete. Winter v. Round, 1 Mad. Rep., 202.

An instrument to the following effect:—"On the 14th December, 1861, we, A. and C., bind ourselves to pay, with interest to you, B. and C., Rs. 566-10, and the amount received this day from you in cash being the balance of dealings held with your firm, on account of stamp,"—Held to be neither a bond nor a hondee, but to be in the nature of a promissory note, and to come within the description in Clause 4, Schedule A of Act XXXVI of 1860. Hsntuman Sahib v. Gossain Sahib, 1 Mad. Rep., 152.

A promissory note is sufficiently stamped if the stamp covers the principal sum named in the note, without reference to the interest. Gomez v. Young and others, 2 B. L. R., O. C., 165; 12 W. R., O. C., 1.

Where a promissory note executed by a native bore a native date only, and was made payable in a certain number of months from such date, it was held that these months should be calculated according to the native, not the British Calendar. Ganspatdrav bin Rämji v. Mannu bin Mohunj, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 150.

A. B., by an instrument in writing, dated 6th August, promised to pay C. D., "on demand" Rs. 4,310-13-3. In the margin of the instrument was written "due 30th August," and annexed to A. B.'s signature was the following memo. —"The sum of Rs. 4,310-13-3 is to be paid forty-five days from the 5th of August." _Held_ that the instrument was properly stamped as a promissory note payable on demand, and ought to have been admitted in evidence.

_Per_ Peacock, C. J.—A promissory note payable on demand ought to be stamped as such, notwithstanding there may be a collateral agreement between the parties that the holder will not present it for a given time, or if paid on demand that the maker shall be entitled to discount. Chundrakant Mookerjee v. Kartikcharan Chail, 5 B. L. R., 103; 14 S. W. R., A. O., 38.

Where a promissory note payable by instalments stipulated that in default of payment of any one instalment interest should run at one anna per R. per mensem, this rate of interest was relieved from on payment of interest being made at nine per cent. per annum from the time when each instalment became payable until the time of payment. Motoji bin Rulnaji v. Sheikh Husen, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 8.

Where a promissory note payable by instalments stipulated for interest at two per cent. per mensem, and in default of punctual payment that interest be charged at one anna per R. per mensem from the date of the note, it was held that this increased rate of interest was a penalty which might be relieved from on payment of the lower rate. Rasuji bin Davuluiji v. Sayana bin Sagdu et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 7.

Under Section 28 of Act XVIII of 1869, a Court has no power to admit in evidence an unstamped promissory note (payable on demand or otherwise) upon the payment of the stamp duty, and the penalty laid down in Section 20 of that Act. Dods bhai Kadosji v. Kherbodji Hormasji, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 180.

The period of payment stipulated in a promissory note bearing both English and Native dates should, when the parties are Hindus, be reckoned according to the Native calendar. Babaji bin Lakshman Mârunji bin Rughoji, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 77.

_A promissory note payable on demand, given for interest due on a mortgage-deed, without interest on such interest, cannot be enforced by suit, there being no consideration for the making of such a note._ Rustamji Adehr Davar v. Rattangi Rustamji Wadia, 7 Bom. Rep., O. J., 9.

Section 5 of Regulation XX of 1812 (concerning the registration of bonds, promissory notes, &c.) is not applicable to hondees or other similar negotiable mercantile securities. Boistub Chun Doss v. Prem Chand Miller, 4 W. R., 98.

(d) Rulings under Act V of 1866.

Under the Summary Procedure in Bills of Exchange Act (V of 1866) the plaintiff is entitled to claim by his summons and obtain by his decree whatever sum, principal, and interest is, on the legal construction of the instrument, demandable. Desouza v. Rangaí, 6 Mad. Rep., 257.

The Court will give leave to a defendant to appear and defend in suits under Act V of 1866, where he shows a defence apparently real; but where there is a doubt as to the bona fides of the defence, payment of money into Court will be ordered, or security directed to be given. The Court has, in giving leave to defend, a discretion to order security for costs, not only where it doubts the bona fides of the defence, but also if it considers the matter of defence raised is unnecessary, though allowable. If the plaintiff has not been heard at first against the defendant's application, the Court will always allow him to have the order set aside, but the leave ought not to have been granted, or, if granted at all, in more stringent terms. Voulintzgy v. Narayan Singh, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 64.

In a suit under Act V of 1866, the summons should be returned in the usual way; and after the expiration of the required time, an order of the Court for a decree should be obtained. Schiller v. Markery, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 285.

A plaint was presented under Act V of 1866 by the endorsees of a promissory note endorsed as follows:—"Received for the Chartered Mercantile Bank.—J. M. Reid, Agent." The note had not been paid when presented, and the endorsement was struck out. Admission of the plaint was refused unless evidence was given that the note had been paid, and to explain why the endorsement was struck out. As under Act V of 1866 evidence could not be received, the plaint was not admitted. The Chartered Mercantile Bank v. Second, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 146.

Where, in a suit under Act V of 1866, the defendant is at such a distance as would make it impossible for him to put in an appearance within the seven days allowed by the Act, the Court will stay execution for a time long enough to allow him to appear.

Suits cannot be brought under this Act against persons resident out of the jurisdiction. Chundra-kant Roy v. N. P. Pugose, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 83.

An irregular service of summons on two out of three defendants to an action brought on a joint promissory note, does not give the third defendant, who has been properly served, ground for objecting to a decree which has been passed against him under Act V of 1866. Ewing and Co. v. Gosai Doss Ghose, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 7.

Although Act V of 1866, Section 3, only gives the defendant seven days to get leave to come in and defend an action on a bill, note, &c., the Court must be satisfied before granting a decree that the defendant has had a full opportunity to obtain leave to defend. Grob v. Palmer, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 395.

A notarial protest of any bill of exchange noted at any time before the passing of Act V of 1866 is prima-facie evidence that the bill has been dishonoured under Section 13 of that Act, although the sections relating to summary procedure on bills of exchange did not come into operation till May 1st, 1866. A hoondee, which contains a direction on sufficient consideration to the drawer, and accepted by him, is within the terms of the Act, and such a document is assignable without any regular form of endorsement, if sufficient cause appears in the handwriting of the endorsee to indicate an intention to assign it. The East India Bank v. Khojah Vallie Gootwany, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 247.

(e) Cheques and Currency

An order directing a servant to pay a certain sum of money to account of advance, is not a cheque. A person who receives a forged promissory payment is not (in order to entitle him to payment at the second time), upon discovering the forgeries, or in his power of traving notice of the forgeries, again accounts to the payee certain sums of money. If a sum of money lent by a female, whose estates were under a Court of Wards, and he was entitled to the same at the time a certain sum of money to be received, the plaint was not admitted. The same is transferred to another bond, by which R. A. transferred to them. A person who receives a forged promissory note is not entitled, except by regular suit, to a decree which has been passed against him. Held, further, that, as against the other defendants, except the principal female defendant, as his case against R. A. was based on the first bond, it did not create any charge upon the land.

"Though a bond may be genuine and duly executed, the receipt of consideration must nevertheless be proved. Baboo Ghansam Singh v. Chuchhowsree Singh, W. R., 1864, 197.

When the holder of a bond from the former proprietor of an indigo factory has made no demand on it for twelve years, nor apprised the assignees of its existence as a debt due by the factory, he cannot come down on the present proprietors, but must look to the obligor of the bond personally for satisfaction. Massamut Hueeboonissa v. J. Cox, W. R., 1864, 266.

The plaintiff, a creditor of the late Rajah Chatpal Singh, accepted, from the Collector in charge of the estate, a composition payment in adjustment of his claims. Held that he could not sue the Ranees, nor the infant son of the Rajah, on a contract or bond for payment of the balance. Mahant Jayram Gir v. Ranee Shiwraj Koer, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 98; 11 W. R., P. C., 41.

When the full sum specified in a bond was administered, the fact of the plaintiff having, on condition of the payment of half the amount by a certain day, agreed to remit his claim to the other half, cannot affect his right to recover the entire amount due on the defendant failing to fulfil the condition. Vengappayain v. Rajapayan, I Mad. Rep., A. C., 208.

A., B., and C. were uterine brothers, Mahomedans, to whom jointly a sum of money was due on a bond. A., the elder brother, sued the debtor for recovery of the debt, and, after successfully resisting the claim of B.'s widow to be made a party to the suit, obtained a decree for the principal and interest to the date of decree, together with subsequent interest and costs. A. realized the decree for the principal and interest to the date of decree only. B.'s widow, on behalf of herself and two minor sons, sued A. for the share of the decretal moneys which belonged to her husband's estate. She refused to join her daughters as parties. Held that she was entitled to recover a third of the amount realized under A.'s decree, minus the share of her two daughters. Nurunissa v. Beebee Roushan Jan, 2 B. L. R., Ap. 1.

An unregistered bond containing the condition that the lender will get possession of certain land in default of payment by the borrower within a specified time, is admissible in evidence in case the lender sues, not to enforce any charge or lien against the land, but seeks for personal relief in respect of the amount realized under A.'s decree. Where, in a suit on a bond which recites that consideration passed, the defendant admits the execution of the bond, but avers that he received no consideration or only part of the consideration, the onus lies on the defendant to show that the recitals in the bond are not correct. Where a suit was brought upon two native bonds executed by the defendant for the principal and interest reserved, and the bonds contained a statement that the principal had been borrowed and received in cash — Held that it was open to the defendant to show by evidence that only a portion of the principal sum had been received by him. Zemindar Sremutee Gauravallatee Rama-chundra Vellia v. Vereppa Chetti, 2 Mad. Rep., 174.

A bond stipulated for payment of principal and interest at one per cent. per mensem within six months from the date of the bond, and in default that the rate of interest should be raised to six and a quarter per cent. per mensem. Held that the higher rate of interest was not in the nature of a penalty, and that the plaintiff had a right to enforce payment thereof. Arulu Mustri v. Wabutchi Chinnayu, 2 Mad. Rep., 215.

A bond or other writing stamped after the death of the grantor is valid against his heirs. The personal representatives or other persons claiming as heirs and kindred of a deceased grantor, stand, with regard to Sections 13 and 14 of Regulation XVIII of 1827, in the same position as the deceased grantor would, and are not third parties within the meaning of Section 14.

The previous decisions of the late Sudder Court to the contrary overruled. Rughia v. Dhurmar Jhuttoo, 1 Bom. Rep., 52.

In a suit to recover money (principal and interest) alleged to have been due on a bond, defendant pleaded that subsequent to the execution of the bond plaintiff had taken from the obligor an ijara and a durijara and executed ijara-kubuleuts, agreeing to accept payment of the bond by setting off the rents due under the kubuleuts. It was found that the kubuleuts stipulated that during their term the rent should, year after year, and installment by installment, be credited in payment of the bond debt, and that at the end of the term of the ijara, accounts should be settled and the balance paid, neither party being at liberty to put an end to the lease. Held, that till the termination of the lease plaintiff could not sue on the bond, his right of suit having been suspended during the continuance of the ijara.
and durijara, the stipulations in which qualified the stipulation in the bond for absolute payment at the end of a specified period. Dya Chaund Oswal v. Moorketa Duber, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 24.

Plaintiff sued in a Small Cause Court, on an instalment bond for Rs. 81. The bond had been executed for nuzzur or salami contemporaneously with the execution of a potta and kubuleut, by which the defendants agreed to pay the plaintiff Rs. 335 a-year for two years, as rent for certain land. The potta and kubuleut had not been registered. A previous suit brought by the plaintiff under Act X of 1859, had been therefore dismissed, and no oral evidence was admitted to prove the terms of the potta and kubuleut. The defendants now claimed a set-off against the amount claimed under the bond, on the footing of a contract contained in the potta and kubuleut. The Judge refused to receive them in evidence, or to receive oral evidence of their contents, and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the High Court on four questions submitted by him.

Held, the suit on the bond was properly cognizable by the Small Cause Court as a simple debt due under the bond. It was clearly not for an abwab or illegal cess; whether it was nuzzur or salami was immaterial. The defendant having benefited in the Act X suit by the fact that no oral evidence had been admitted to prove the contents of the potta and kubuleut, it would have been contrary to rule and inequitable to admit such evidence now in support of his claim of set-off. Dinanath Mookerjee v. Debnath Mullick, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 1; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 597.

A executed an instalment-bond for Rs. 1,000, in favour of B., in which he stipulated that from the year 1271 (1864) to 1275 (1868), both inclusive, Rs. 200 should be paid in the month of Jaishita (May 13 to June 12) in each year, and that "in the event of any instalment being then due, all the remaining instalments should be deemed lapsed, and the principal should be paid with interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per mensem, from the date of the instalment-bond." The first instalment, which fell due on the last day of Jaishita, 1271 (12th June, 1864), was paid only on the 13th Falgun of the same year (13th February, 1866), other instalments were paid in Jaishita 1272, 1273 (1865, 1866). B. accepted payment of these instalments as part of payment of the principal sum due to him, and never made any demand for interest under the terms of the bond. The further instalments due in Jaishita 1274 and 1275 (May 13 to June 12, 1867 and 1868), were never paid. On 13th Kurtic, 1275 (30th October, 1868), B. sold the bond and all his interest thereunder to C. for Rs. 800. On 2nd Jaishita, 1276 (14th May, 1868), C. brought a suit against A. for the whole amount of the bond with interest thereon at 10 per cent. per mensem, from the date thereof till the date of suit, namely, Rs. 6,099, less the amount of Rs. 600, which had been realized by B. in the three instalments for 1272, 1273, and 1275 (1864, 1865, and 1866). The Judge awarded him only the amounts of the unpaid instalments for 1274 and 1275 (1867 and 1868), namely, Rs. 400, with interest from the date of the instalments till date of suit at one per cent. per mensem, in all, Rs. 488 odd, proportionate costs and interest on all at one per cent. per mensem till date of realization. On appeal to the High Court by C., held that the clause in the bond relied on was a mere penalty clause. The original obligee of the bond having waived the execution of any penalty, C. was not entitled to more than the whole amount of the bond. Boly Doby v. Sideswar Rao Baboo Roy Kur, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 92.

A executed a bond in favour of B., but failed to cause the registration of the same. Before the amount secured by the bond became due, B. sued A. for recovery thereof, on the ground that, as A. had agreed to get the bond registered, but failed to do so, B. was entitled to recover the amount advanced by him. Held that B. had no cause of action. Guru Prasad Roy v. Rai Baboo Dhupal, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 46; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 20.

Where a contractor's sureties give bonds for the performance by him of his agreement, the bonds are chargeable with duty, Article V Schedule I. Anonymous, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 353.

Suit upon a bond executed by the defendants to the plaintiff for the payment of a sum of money by instalments. The bond contained a proviso that on default being made in the payment of any one instalment the whole amount shall become due. Default was made in the payment of several instalments, but subsequently payments were made by the defendants and accepted by the plaintiff on account of the unpaid instalments.

The defendants pleaded the law of limitation. The suit was brought more than three years after the first default in payment of an instalment had been made, but within three years from the time when, taking into account the payments that had been made, the first instalment claimed became due. Held that these payments as regards both parties must be considered as if made at the time fixed; that the defendants could not rely upon the stipulation as making the whole debt due, and fixing the period from which the time of limitation run; and that, the first of the instalments claimed having become due within three years, the suit was barred. Ram Krishna Mahâ Deb v. Bayâji bin Santijit et al., 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 35.

Where a bond, by which money lent was agreed to be repaid within one year, bore a native date only, it was held that the year was to be calculated according to the native calendar of which the bond bore the date. Lulji Vaijnath v. Ruvji Abaji, 6 Bom., Rep., A. C. J., 136.

Where a bond or other instrument creating an interest in land also contains a distinct promise to pay the money due under it, such bond or instrument is evidence in a suit brought to recover the money only. Sangârâph bin Ningârâph v. Bâshârâch bin Parâshâh, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 1.

Where a bond is given in renewal of former bonds, such bond constitutes a new security, to take effect from its date. Hamed Bun v. Bindrabun, 2 N. W. R., 37.

Where, after default in payment of an instalment upon a bond, conditional that upon such default the whole amount of the bond should become due, plaintiff accepted payment of such instalment, as also of several subsequent ones.—Held, that by so doing the parties reverted to the old arrangement for payment by instalments, or made a new one to the same effect, and that the penalty occasioned by the first default could not be enforced. Gyan Chand v. Jawahar and others, 2 N. W. R., 83.

A bond, although under seal, does not in India of itself import that there has been a sufficient consideration for it. Mahomed Zaboor Ali Khan v. Thakooranee Kutta Kunwoor, 2 N. W. R., 481.

The obligee of a bond for Rs. 7,000 gave the obligor an assignment of Rs. 5,319 on account of rent due to the latter by the former, and the question in special appeal being whether the item of Rs. 350 paid on account of Government revenue had been twice credited as alleged by the obligor (appellant), the Court held that it had only once been credited. The respondent on cross-appeal claimed interest on the Rs. 350 for six years and eight months at twelve per cent. per annum, on the strength of a stipulation in the bond that, from a certain date, interest should accrue on the principal; but the Court disallowed the claim on the ground that payment of interest on the item paid as Government revenue was neither expressly stipulated nor contemplated by the parties, and because it was open to the respondent to take measures to realize the sum so paid instead of letting it lie over and double itself by interest. Maharranie Shibesurree Debia v. W. Ladly, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 71.

Where payment was made upon a bond, the amount paid being less than the interest due, held, the payment ought to go to reduce the amount of interest due, and the creditors in a suit upon the bond was entitled to a decree for the principal and balance of interest up to date of decree. Luchmevar Sing Bahadur v. Syad Luuf Ali Khan, 8 B. L. R., 112.

A stipulation in a bond to the effect that the obligor will make no transfer of certain property hypothecated by such bond until the debt thereby secured has been paid up, cannot be used by a third person, not a party to the bond, to defeat a subsequent charge upon the same property granted in favour of another creditor of the obligor. Koondun Lal v. Wasur Ali, 3 N. W. R., 295.

A bond contained a clause that the obligors would not dispose of any of the property moveable or immovable in their possession until the debt was paid. Held, that such a clause did not give the obligee of the bond a lien on such property, though he might sue for damages in respect of breach of contract. Rambuksh v. Lookh Dee and others, 1, 5 N. W. R., 114.

When a bond contains an agreement that no payment not endorsed on it should be recognized, a Court of Justice will receive evidence of payments not endorsed on the bond, notwithstanding such agreement. Nugur Mull v. Asseemoollah, 18 N. W. R., 146.

When a sum of money is payable under a bond by installments with a condition that, in default of paying one instalment, the whole amount shall then become due, and default is made, but the obligee subsequently accepts payments of one or more sums as an instalment or instalments due under the bond, such acceptance amounts to a waiver of the condition of forfeiture, and puts an end to the cause of action which had accrued, so that the bond is set up again as a bond payable by instalments, and no cause of action under the condition arises until some fresh default is made in the payment of a subsequent instalment. Sri Rajah Passamma Kuv Guru v. Toleti Venkiya, 5 Mad. Rep., 198.

9.—Bailment.

The general principles of the law of bailment are applicable in the Mofussil, and they are substantially the same as those which prevail under English law. Doomsun Feodah v. Shook Chand Paul, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 90.

Goods conveyed by the Government bullock-train are not entrusted to the Post-office for conveyance within the meaning of Act XIV of 1866.

In respect of the Government bullock-train, Government must be regarded as an ordinary bailee for hire, and not as a common carrier.

As such bailee, apart from any special condition limiting its liability, it is bound to take ordinary care of goods entrusted to it for conveyance, and if goods are stolen through the negligence of its servants, it is liable to make good the loss to the consignor. But it may, as may any other bailee for hire, limit its liability by conditions, provided those conditions are not repugnant to public policy or positive law.

A condition that it will not be responsible for loss occasioned by the negligence of its servants is certainly not repugnant to positive law, nor a condition repugnant to public policy. Deputy Postmaster of Bareilly on behalf of Government v. Earle, 3 N. W. R., 195.

The plaintiff, on leaving Calcutta in 1850, deposited a sum of money with A., B., and C., on which they were to pay him Rs. 9 monthly, and return the principal on his demanding it. Rs. 9 were paid to him monthly until within twelve months of this suit. A. and B. had died since the date of the deposit. This suit was brought against C. and the representatives of A. and B., to recover the amount deposited, and a decree was passed against C. on his own admission. But the representatives of A. and B. set up that the suit was barred. Held, that it was not a deposit under Section 1, Clause 15 of Act XIV of 1859. But held, also, in accordance with the English cases (from which, however, the learned Judge dissented) that the cause of action arose from the date of the agreement to repay the money on demand, and not from the date of the demand, and therefore the suit was barred. Parbati Charan Mookerjee v. Ramnarayan Maritil, 5 B. L. R., 396.

The custodian of a deed of sale is liable if he cannot give satisfactory explanation of his neglect to keep the deed entrusted to him. Bhee Hafizee v. Ashur Hossein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 328.

The plaintiff, the manager of the Oriental Bank, placed in the hands of D., a broker, thirteen Government currency notes for Rs. 1,000 each, on D.'s representation that there was some company's paper at a certain place which he could procure at a more reasonable rate than in the Calcutta market, if the money were given him to purchase it. If the company's paper was not procurable, the notes were to be returned to the plaintiff. D. did not go to the place stipulated to purchase the company's paper; but, meeting the defendant and others, he went into a house hired for gambling, and lost at cards, and paid away to the defendant some of the notes he had received from the plaintiff. the agent doing nothing but consenting to arrangements and giving hoondees on his employer's correspondence in payment. The goods were despatched and insured, but before reaching their destination the firm became insolvent, and the plaintiff proceeded to take possession of them, but was prevented on account of the goods being previously attached by the defendant, a judgment-creditor. It was held on plaintiff's suit that the plaintiff was an unpaid vendor, and had a lien on the goods for the price, and might detain the goods till he received or was satisfied about the payment for the said goods, a completed contract of goods notwithstanding.

An unpaid vendor, in case of the vendee's insolvency, may stop the goods sold in transit.

Agents for the purchase of goods have a lien on the goods when purchased for the money paid and liabilities incurred by them in respect to such purchase, and are not bound to deliver the goods until they are reimbursed or secured for such advances and liabilities, and an agent in this character is in the position of an unpaid vendor.

Where the vendor is not otherwise paid than by having received, the insolvent's acceptance, he may in the event of the purchaser's insolvency stop the goods, though he have negotiated the bills, and they are still outstanding and not yet at maturity.

Whilst the goods sold remain in the hands of the carrier employed to convey them to their original destination, as between buyer and seller, no case of constructive possession arises, unless when the carrier enters expressly into some new agreement, distinct from the original contract for carriage. So also the mere acts of making or sampling the goods, or giving notice to the carrier to hold the goods for the buyer, though done with intention to take possession, do not establish a constructive possession, or affect the right to stop in transit.

Where the right of stoppage in transit vests in the consignor, it cannot be defeated by the claims of other creditors of the consignee, the unpaid vendor having an elder and preferential lien.

A railway company is liable for injury sustained by goods committed to their care, if they have been guilty of gross negligence. The Assam Tea Company v. The East Indian Railway Company, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 39.

Held that a conviction by a Magistrate with full powers under Section 26 was illegal for want of jurisdiction. Reg. v. Lakshmukh Balaj, 3 Bom. Rep., 10.

By Section 35 of the Railway Act, District Police Officers in the Presidency of Bombay could punish to the extent of the power conferred upon them in petty offences any offence made punishable under the Act by fine not exceeding Rs. 21.

But Section 5 of Reg. XII of 1827 (authorizing the appointment of District Police Officers), and Section 41 of the same Regulation (defining the limits of their jurisdiction), being both repealed by Act XVII of 1862, —Held that a Subordinate Magistrate had no jurisdiction to impose a fine under Section 17 of the Railway Act. Reg. v. Tribhonna Ishvao, 3 Bom. Rep., Cr., 54.

The East Indian Railway Company cannot under Section 11 of Act XVIII of 1854, limit their responsibility as carriers in respect of ordinary goods, as not to be liable for loss or injury caused by gross negligence or misconduct, though possibly they may, with the consent of Government, limit their liability by contract or notice, for loss arising otherwise than by gross neglect. East Indian Railway Company v. F. J. Jordan, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 97, and 14 S. W. R., A. O., 11.

The Scinde Railway Company was incorporated by 18 and 19 Vict., c. 115, for the purpose of making and maintaining railways in India, and for other purposes. This was repealed by 20 and 21 Vict., c. 160, which authorized the Company to extend their operations and also their capital. And by Section 4 of the Act by Section 3, declared the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, to be incorporated with it. By Section 18 the Company have a "seal for use in India in lieu of the common seal of the Company, and from time to time may vary and renew it, and make regulations for its use; and except, as by this Act otherwise expressly provided, every document sealed with such seal, in conformity with such regulations, or in pursuance of any order of the directors, or of any authority given by the Company under their common seal, shall be as valid and effectual as if the common seal were affixed thereto." By Section 54, "the Company from time to time may appoint and remove such committees, persons, or person as the Company think fit to act on behalf of the Company in India or elsewhere, with respect to the making, maintaining, managing, working, and using of the railways and other works of the Company, and the control and conduct of any of the affairs in India or elsewhere of the Company; and may delegate to any such committee, person, or person respectively all or any of the powers of the Company, and of the directors and officers thereof, which the Company thinks it expedient that such committee, persons, and person respectively should possess for the purposes of his or their respective appointment." In January, 1867, E. was the agent of the Company in India, and he entered, it was alleged, on their behalf into a contract with the plaintiffs for sixty sets of iron work for low-sided waggons. The plaintiffs' firm did not deal in iron work, and they had to get the goods manufactured for them in England. The Board of Directors were at the time supplying iron work for the Company. There was nothing to show that E. had been appointed under the provisions of Section 54 of the Act 20 and 21 Vict., c. 160, but there was no evidence of such appointment.

Held that the statute has not the effect of restraining the power of the Court to allow interest in other cases, in which interest was allowed before the Act. Therefore interest may be allowed on payments of revenue made by one co-sharer on behalf of others, notwithstanding no demand of interest may have been made before suit. Golam Ahmed Shaw and others v. Behary Lal and others, Marsh, 239.

The enactment of Section 20 of Act X of 1874, that arrears of rent, unless otherwise provided by written agreement, shall be liable to interest at twelve per cent. per annum, does not make it imperative on the Court to award interest in a decree for arrears of rents, but the Court has a discretion in awarding interest in such a case. In an ordinary suit for rent, the question whether the rent is fixed or variable is not involved. Beckwith v. Khishto Jeebun Buckshoe, Marsh, 278.

Interest may be claimed on the interest of Government promissory notes withheld by another. Tarucknath Mookerjee v. Gourcchurn Mookerje, 3 W. R., 147.

In the case of money under attachment with the Collector, and invested by him in Government four per cent. promissory notes, the difference between that and legal interest is only claimable from the date of release from attachment. Rajal Saheb Parklad Sein v. Boodhoo Singh, 3 W. R., 228.

According to the usage of native bankers at Mooshedabab, interest is claimable on hooondes drawn at 111 days' sight. Dunput Singh Doogar v. Maharajah Jagut Indur Bunwaree Gobind Deb, 4 W. R., 85.

Section 6, Regulation XV of 1793 (prohibiting the Courts from awarding as interest a sum larger than the principal) is not applicable to a suit instituted after the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855. Even under Regulation XV of 1793, it was the practice of the Court to allow interest in excess of principal where the interest had accumulated owing to reasons not ascribable in any degree to procrastination on the part of the creditor. Huromonee Gooftia v. Gobind Coomar Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 6.

Held that the deposit of the principal due, and a sum equal to the principal by way of interest, was sufficient under the law applicable to the case, and that no sum could legally accrue due as interest during the year of grace, as the law prohibited the recovery of interest beyond the principal. Sheoburis and another v. Dharee Thakoor and others, 3 Agra Rep., 194.

Both parties stipulated for payment of rent on certain dates, and, if not so paid, of a certain rate of interest until paid. The rent not having been paid at the time agreed on,—Held that the landlord's omission to claim interest, instalment by instalment, for the fractional time that the rent was not paid after it became due, did not justify the plea that the interest stipulated for was not due, or warrant the belief that the plaintiff had waived his claim to interest. Rutly Kant Bose v. Gungadhur Dewas, W. R., F. B., 13; S. C. Ind. Jur., O. S., 6.

Plaintiffs in execution of a decree against A. attached certain money deposited in the Collector-ate to which A. was, entitled, but were opposed by B., alleging that A.'s rights in the money had been transferred to him. The plaintiffs finally succeeded in obtaining the money, and then sued B. for interest upon it during the time he prevented them from obtaining it. Both Courts decreed the claim.

A mortgage is entitled to interest on account of the balance of putnee rents paid by him. Brojonath Singh Roy v. Sreemuty Bhagobutty Dassee, 1 W. R., 133.

A transaction having all along been treated by both parties and by the Courts hitherto as a mortgage for a loan, on which interest was not only due, but had in part been paid, it is not competent to one of the parties or the Court on remand to raise the question that, by the terms of the ikramah, no interest was due. Gunga Phul Ojah v. Gopal Oopadhya, 1 W. R. 136.

Where there was no time fixed or agreed for payment of the price of goods bought, nor was any demand of price made accompanied with an intimation that interest from the date of demand would be charged,—Held that interest could not by law be decreed for the period prior to the institution of the suit. Palmer v. Madhoo Persaud, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 131.

In this case the Judge, after the lapse of six months, rejected the original application, on the ground that the decree-holder asked for costs and interest on costs, whereas, on enquiry, it was found that the decree did not specify interest on costs. The decree-holder thereupon presented a corrected application, which the Judge rejected as barred by limitation. Held that interest was chargeable on costs whether actually stated in the decree or not; and that, even if the Judge was right in ruling that interest could not be paid, the second application must be considered merely a correction of the original, and was therefore not barred by limitation. Chowdhry Purludh Mohapattur v. Chowdhry Jonardun Mohapattur, 6 W. R., Mis., 15.

In a suit to recover arrears of rent at enhanced rates, the onus of proving both the quantity and the rates is upon the plaintiff; and where the rates are to be fixed by a Court of Justice, the plaintiff is not entitled to interest and damages, on the ground that the defendant did not pay the enhanced rates demanded by the plaintiff. Golam Ali v. Gopal Lall Tagore, 1 W. R., 56.

When an enhanced rate of rent is required to be fixed by a Court of Justice, interest or damages should not be awarded. Sumeera Khatoon v. Gopal Lall Tagore, 1 W. R., 58.

When a note of hand promised repayment of a loan, with interest at five per cent., without stating either per mensum or per annum,—Held that the construction that interest was to be calculated without a time stipulated to times was contrary to all practice, and that the ambiguity was one which might fairly be explained by previous transactions between the parties and by custom. Mahomed Shamsooddeen v. Abdool Hug, W. R., 1864, 379.

In a suit upon a bond, when the genuineness of the bond and the defendant's liability under it are clearly established, the plaintiff is entitled to interest from the time the defendant declined payment of the sum due upon the bond. Gunga Risshun Tewarry v. Roy Mohun Lall Miller, W. R., 1864, 291.

Where a decree did not specify the rate of interest,—Held that the Court ought not to have allowed a higher than the usual Court rate, namely, twelve per cent. Mussamut Soobadra Bēe v. Skeo Churn Lall, 7 W. R., 375.

Where a contract of hire stipulated that the legally demandable rate of interest should be five per cent., it was held that a claim by the creditor of interest at eight per cent. founded upon a bare promise of the debtor to pay eight per cent., or upon the fact that the debtor had in account voluntarily debited himself with eight per cent., in lieu of five per cent., could not be maintained in law for want of consideration, amounting merely to nudum pactum. Charles Selton Guthrie v. Frederick George Lister, 6 W. R., P. C., 59.

When a lessor who has agreed to deduct rents in case of his special appeal being unsuccessful, compels payment of such rents notwithstanding a decree of the lower Court being against him, he must pay interest if the result of the litigation shows that he had no right to the money. Taramoney Dasse v. J. Mackintosh, 9 W. R., 272.

When neglect on the part of a decree-holder in executing his decree is not proved, there is no warrant for limiting the amount of interest claimable under the decree to the original sum due as principal. Dwarkanath Sandial v. Parmeshur Singh, W. R., 1864, Mis., 32.

When a decree of the Privy Council does not give interest, the Court executing such decree has no power to allow interest. Joy Kissen Bose v. A. Wise, W. R., 1864, Mis., 37.

When a bond under Section 52, Act XVI of 1864, is enforced on a decree, no interest is to be allowed on it, if the bond does not provide for interest after the date on which the debt was payable. Kothuram Baboo v. Doorgenath Talookdar, 10 W. R., 175.

A decree for interest upon mesne profits from the date on which they are ascertained was held to mean from the date on which they are ascertained by the Court, and not by an Ameen. Doorga Soon dare Debia v. Sibersuree Dabia and others, 10 W. R., 391.

Where a decree-holder, under a misconception of the law, asked to receive interest, calculating that he was not entitled to more on account of interest than the principal sum decreed, and the judgment-debtor did not pay in the money,—Held that the decree-holder was entitled to fall back upon the original decree, and execute it according to its terms. Abed Hossein and another v. Assud Aly, II W. R., 29.

Where in a previous suit on a bond, which suit was lost on account of want of jurisdiction, the plaintiff sued for a specific sum, and for interest as from a certain date, he was declared, in a subsequent suit instituted by him on the same bond, entitled to interest on the bond only from the date from which he sued for it in the first suit, to the date of the present decree of the Judicial Committee. Narain Dass v. The Estate of the ex-King of Delhi, 10 W. R., P. C., 55.

Where a debt or law-suit has been purchased, interest ought not to be given thereon for the whole period during which the purchaser allows the claim to be outstanding, nor necessarily on the whole debt when the purchase-money is very much below the amount of the principal. Unnoda Soonderee Dossor v. Oodhub Nath Roy, 11 W. R., 125.

A Court is justified in giving interest at the rate specified in the bond down to the date of decree. After that date the decree-holder recovers such interest as according to the course and practice of the Court is allowed on debts for which the creditor has the security of the decree. Raskessur Surmah v. Kalekanath Surmah and another, 11 W. R., 455.

A decree-holder is not bound to accept a sum tendered to him in part satisfaction of his decree. He is entitled to require payment of the principal and interest in full; and the refusal to receive a part of what is due to him will not deprive him of his right to interest. Kunye Singh and others v. Tooydun Singh, 7 W. R., 20.

Where, under Section 6, Regulation XV of 1793, interest upon the principal prior to the institution of the suit was adjudged to the plaintiff, limited to a sum equal to the principal, although that Regulation was repealed when the suit was brought, yet looking to the time when his contract was made, the plaintiff was held not entitled to any further interest before suit, but interest upon the principal was allowed to him from the date of suit to the date of decree. Thakoor Gobnath Singh v. Kureemun Bibee, mother and guardian of Kureem Khan, minor, and others, 7 W. R., 172.

When a payment is made into Court by a judgment-debtor in full satisfaction of the decree, but which the Court accepted and retained as a payment on account, the judgment-creditor can have no right to claim interest upon the whole amount of his decree. The Court executing the decree has a discretion in allowing interest, which will not be interfered with in special appeal. Pares Nath Mukhopadhyya v. Kiisto Mohan Saha, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 5.

Where a decree of a lower Appellate Court, awarding interest to a suitor from the date of the institution of his suit, was affirmed by the High Court in special appeal, it was held that the decree-holder was entitled to recover interest for the period allowed in the decree, notwithstanding a subsequent declaration of the Judge of the lower Court that his meaning was not to allow interest, except from the date of his own decision in appeal. Jumoona Moyee Debia v. Doonga Soondur Roy, 9 W. R., 386.

Interest may be decreed with arrears of rent, but it should not be decreed upon instalments of rent as from dates during the currency of the year, unless the parties had agreed that the rent should be paid by instalments at those dates. Bharath Chander Roy v. Bepin Beharee Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 149.

When the proceeds of an eventual sale are less than the price bid by a defaulting purchaser, the difference leviable from him under Section 254; Code of Civil Procedure, must be levied without interest. Soory Buksh Singh v. Sia, 9 W. R., 500.

When rents are withheld, the def to pay interest, whether provided for or not. Lalla Sheo Sahuh Singh v. Missa Begum, 2 W. R., 125.

A tenant who, instead of paying due rent, compels his landlord to sue for pay interest thereon. Ngossom v. Toonnisa, 2 W. R., Act X R., 96.

As long as a decree-holder does not receive a sum of money equal to the amount of the principal, he has the security of the decree. Modhoo Soodun Roy Chowdry v. Chowdry, 5 W. R., Mis., 11.

Interest runs on sums decreed, course, unless a specific order is to the contrary. Luchmere Narain v. Shud, 5 W. R., Mis., 12.

Regulation XV of 1793 (prohibiting interest in excess of principal) applied only, and not to interest which is not compound interest, but is allowed through the neglect of the judgment-debtor. Shad Chunder Goopio v. Dossia, 5 W. R., Mis., 22.

The Court in execution cannot on a decree on the principal decreed, while it is silent as to such interest. Nu Pitambur Sein, 5 W. R., Mis., 28.

The purchaser of a decree may a cation of an error in the calculation if a decree awards interest from a certain sum ascertained at the time of the decree (consisting of the interest thereupon up to date), that is not compound interest decreed-holder is entitled to it. Dwarkanath Chatterjee, 1 W. R., M.

Costs carry interest, whether so decreed or not. Haradhun Sandyal Dossia, 2 W. R., Mis., 21; Singh Churn, 3 W. R., Mis., 21.

The attachment of a decree does not impair the interest to which the declared entitled. Wooma Persha, Collector of Beerbhoom, 3 W. R., Mis., 21.

Act XXXII of 1839 (authorizing the attachment of a decree to be levied upon the average price of opium at public sale).

Quaere.—Whether the discretion in allowing or refusing to allow interest in certain cases does not a tangible in amount and time of beco a wager's contract for the payment of the amount of interest. Juggomohun Ghose v. Manick Chur, 3 W. R., Mi.

Under the present law, a Court en forces an agreement between the parties in respect of interest. Jago Koo Pay Yah and another.

Interest cannot legally be awarded prior to suit in cases governed by the provisions of Act XXXII of 1859. Abdool Kursem Khan v. Shiek Meah Jan, 6 W. R., 288.

A Court executing a decree can award interest, from date of decree to date of payment, on the amount decreed to be paid by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder, if the Court which passed the decree made no order on that point. Beer Chunder Joobray v. Ram Coomar Dhar, 6 W. R., Mis., 26.

If a decree-holder gives up a portion of his claim and verbally agrees to receive the remainder by instalments, he does not thereby give up interest to which he is entitled under the decree. Mahanund Mojoomdar v. Rajah Purbat Chunder Singh, 6 W. R., Mis., 121.

When a bond is silent as to any interest to be allowed after the due date of the bond, it is in the discretion of the Court to fix the amount of interest, if any, to be paid from the due date of the bond to the date of the commencement of suit. Sitranath Bose v. Mathoora Nath Roy, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 105; S. C., 11 W. R. 68.

Where part payments were made on a bond, and credited in discharge of the principal, and an action was brought for the balance of the principal and for interest, and the lower Court allowed a sum for interest as due at the date of the plaint which was greater than the principal, the High Court disallowed the excess.

The provision in Section 4 of Regulation XXXIV of 1802, against an award of interest in excess of the principal, refers only to the amount claimed for interest at the time the suit is brought. The rule of Hindu law as to recoverable arrears of interest. Kakarlapudi Sitaramarajav. Uppalapadi Jana, 1 Mad. Rep., 5.

The obligor having offered to pay the principal and interest into Court,—Held that he should be relieved from interest from the date of such offer. Gudi Janakayya Guru v. Gannuda Guru, 1 Mad. Rep., 123.

The provision contained in Act XXVIII of 1855, that any rate of interest which the parties may have agreed upon shall be awarded, in no way prevents a Civil Court in India, which administers both law and equity, from examining into the character of agreements made between persons, such as mortgagee and mortgagee, trustee and cestui que trust, between whom a relation exists, enabling one party to take advantage of the other, and from declining to enforce such agreements when they are shown to be unfair and extortionate. Vinajak Sadashib Voze v. Raghi, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 202.

Under Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), Section 21, it is discretionary with the Judge to give interest at 12 per cent.; he is not obliged to award interest to that extent. Miharaja Dhiraj Mahtab Chund Bahadur v. Srimati Debkumari Debi, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 26.

In a suit relating to balance of accounts, probabilities are not sufficient to support a decree for interest in the absence of a contract for interest. Joy Narain Bhuggut v. Kashee Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 148.

The defendant was invited, by an injunction issued upon him in another suit, to deposit in Court the money admittedly due under the bonds now sued upon, but having refused to do so, was held liable to pay interest from the date of that injunction. Ram Dass Gossamee v. Prosseno Moyee Dossee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 297.

Whether interest on decratal-money is payable up to the date that it was deposited in Court by the judgment-debtor, or up to the date on which the decree-holder applied to get it from the Court, will depend on whether the decree-holder had any notice of the money being so deposited to his credit. Kalu Dass Ghose v. Puran Roomarc Bibee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 304.

In the absence of accounts or other evidence to show the profits of a business, interest is awarded at 12 per cent. per annum. Bibee Hurun v. Bibee Marian, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 87.

In a suit to recover money lent upon an agreement, to the effect that it should be repaid with interest at 8 annas per cent. per mensem, by instalments payable in a particular month of each year, and verbally agreeing to receive the remainder by instalments paid in four years the interest would be at the rate of one rupee per cent. per mensem, where plaintiff demanded interest on the allegation that the instalments had not been paid for five or six years,—Held, that as the first rate was below the ordinary terms on which money is lent in this country, and the penalty was but the ordinary rate to be imposed in case of delay in payment, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. Pelambur Chatterjee v. Kalee Churn Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 436.

In a suit to recover a sum of money due on an agreement under the term of which interest for fifteen days only was payable at the rate of one rupee per diem,—Held, that as no rate was agreed upon after the expiration of the fifteen days, the Court had power to fix a reasonable rate of interest subsequent to that time. Moizooody Shaik, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., 450.

It is in the discretion of the Court to allow interest on arrears of rent. Rajah Satyanand Basool v. Zahir Sikhandan B. L. R., Ap., 9.

A Small Cause Court Judge has no discretion to allow interest at a rate below that stipulated in the bond. Nobo Coomer Bose v. Gobind Chunder Poddar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 431.

Interest may be allowed in a suit for contribution, although no demand for interest may have been made before suit. Nullit Biswas v. Prossono Moyee Dossee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 179.

When the rate of interest stipulated for in a bond is exorbitant, and there is no express understanding that the interest is to continue at the same rate after the expiration of the period fixed for repayment, a Court need not assume that the parties are bound by contract to that rate after such period. Mirza Mahommed Hossein v. Shahzadah Tuqueerodeen, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 284.

Where a party borrowing money entered into a bond stipulating to pay Rs. 24 per cent. per annum as interest until the whole debt, principal, and interest, was paid off; and if the whole was not paid within the time mentioned, that the bond should be enforced as a registered deed,—Held that the rate of interest was not a question of discretion, but must be paid at the rate stipulated. Shaitkh Reasut Hossein v. Jusmnat Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 396.

11.—SET-OFF.

A claim for rent cannot be pleaded as a set-off in a suit for money paid by the plaintiff on account of revenue to protect a lease in the nature of a mortgage held by him. Heera Lal v. Bishen Sahaye, 1 W. R., 296.

Decrees as to set-off will be dealt with in the High Court upon the principles of English Courts of Equity, or of the Roman law of compensation, and no right will be given to objections derived from the peculiar language. Ramagopal v. Majeti Malikarjan, 1 Mad. Rep., 396.

If the cultivator suffer damage, in execution of a decree of the Civil Court, he may sue and claim compensation for such damage; but until such damage has been ascertained and decreed, it cannot be set-off against a claim for rent. Rai Gobind Singh and others v. Soonder Pal and others, 3 Agra Rep., 177.

A widow is liable for a debt contracted by her husband. Such debt may be set-off against a debt due to her. Grish Chunder Lahory v. Koomarce Dabea, 1 W. R., Mis., 23.

In a suit for house rent, the tenant cannot be allowed to set-off a sum expended by him in repairing the house without authority from the plaintiff. Mussumut Zummeerunissa v. E. Gayer, 6 W. R., 26.

Where a decree for the plaintiff has been obtained in a suit, and a cross-suit is pending, the Court will not stay proceedings in execution of the first suit, or order the proceeds of that decree to be paid into Court to abide the result of the second. Mooclhund and others v. Rojinarain Ghose, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 330.

A. had dealings with a firm consisting of a father and two sons, who carried on business jointly. Shortly after the father's death, the two brothers separated, and A. dealt with each separately, having notice of the separation.

A cannot set-off, against a claim made by one of the brothers in respect of the separate dealings between himself and A., a debt due to himself from the former joint concern. Dhumpat Singh v. A. F. Forbes, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 354.

A liquidated sum due on a bond is capable according to law, even without an agreement to that effect, of being set-off against sums due for rent. Watson and Co. v. Makarane Brojooondare Debia, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 225.

Setting-off an unascertained sum against another is a mode of settlement which, if suggested to the parties as a compromise, may, with their assent, be a fit end of a litigation, but cannot properly be made the basis of a decree between hostile litigants. Mussumut Bibeh Bachun v. Sheik Hamid Hossein; Mouliev Abdool Asuz v. Sheik Hamid Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 113.

The right of set-off exists where there are cross demands arising out of one and the same transaction, or where these are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover and the defendant be driven to a cross suit. In a suit to recover money due under a contract made between and defendants.—Held that the defendant entitled to set-off the amount of due the defendants had proved they had reason of the plaintiff's breach of the on. Kistnasamy Pillay v. The Missioners for the Town of Madras, 120.

In a suit for money due upon an at the Judge ought not to go into the q off, but should confine himself to giv decree for the amount which may be due upon the account stated. K Chuckerbunty v. Huro Chunber Chu S. W. R., C. R., 177.

12.—WHOLESALE AND RET

Held by a Division Bench (Peaco Hobhouse, J.) that a sale of a quare seed, which was not required by the tenants for their own private use, but with making oil, which was sold, is a wholesale.

Held by the Full Bench, that a suit of goods sold wholesale, if there was agreement, must be brought within from the time the cause of action a Clause 9, Section 14 of 1859. Lal v. Mookhab Ratee, 9 W. R., 193.

A jeweller in the ordinary course of business sold a customer a large quantity of pearled, which the pearls were articles sold by the meaning of Act XIV of 1862. Jhurry v. Sreenath Stein, 1 Ind. 114.

A joint debt cannot be amalgamated by a colourable assignment with a personal debt, so as to give the assignee the right to sue in respect of both debts. Sreekurry Paul v. Nilmoney Sen, 1 Hyde's Rep., 169.

Where a party who assigned over a decree was liable under a cross-decree for a considerable sum to the judgment-debtor,—Held that, until the respective liabilities of the two parties had been settled, the Court was justified in refusing to allow one of them to assign the decree to a third party. Jodoonath Roy v. Kam Buksh Chulungu, 8 W. R., 202.

In the practice of the Courts of India, it is lawful to assign choses in action, where there is neither fraud against individuals nor special violation of the rule of public policy. Hurrinath Muzoondar v. Moran and Co., W. R., 1864, Act X R., 127.

L. M. died in 1856, having bequeathed certain personal property to Mrs. J. S., who then was and still is a married woman, executed a power of attorney for A. G. and Co. to receive payment of the legacy, and to execute a settlement of a portion of the same according to articles contained in the powers. This settlement was made, and under it a portion of the legacy was assigned to trustees, who did not execute the deed or undertake the trust, and no other trustee was substituted for them. A. G. and Co. at various times advanced money to Mrs. J. S., and in acknowledgment received promissory notes from her for a portion of such advances; and in a suit by A. G. and Co. to revive the amount of these advances, it was held that A. G. and Co. standing in a fiduciary relation to Mrs. J. S., before they can avail themselves of her acts, must show that she did them with a full knowledge of the circumstances of the case and of her own position with regard to it. Julia Smith and others v. Adam Steward Gladstone and others, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 292.

If a trader or other person in this country assigns his stock-in-trade or effects to another, and such other person enters into a contract with him to pay the debts of the concern, or a certain portion of such debts, the contract and assignment create a liability to the creditors in whose favour the assignment is made, which they may enforce by suit. An assignment of the stock-in-trade, under such circumstances, cannot be defeated by the creditors, nor can anything that takes place between the assignor and assignee affect the right of the creditors as against the original debtor. The creditors cannot compel the assignee to pay any debt which, as between himself and the assignor, he is not bound to pay, and the creditor is not bound to elect between the original debtor and assignee, but may look to either or both for payment, the assignee being sued as co-defendant with the original debtor, there being nothing to prevent the joinder of parties as co-defendants whose liability is not strictly joint.

A person covenaniting can obtain relief from the express terms of his contract, if he can show that it was a mistake, and that the actual contract was to pay something less than was expressed in the writing.

Ordinarily the purchaser of a factory will not be liable for the debts, unless by express agreement. Where any debt is a lien against particular property, it must be enforced by a suit to declare such property liable, and to obtain payment for it, and not by an ordinary action for debt against the person who has taken the property subject to the debt.

The case was remanded by a majority of the Court to try the nature of the real agreement between the assignor and the assignee with reference to the debt. Dissentientibus Steer, J., and Seton-Karr, J., who objected to the remand, on the ground that, in contracting to take over the dema-pwna of the factory, and publishing the same by the act of registry, the assignee made himself liable for all the bond-side debts of the factory; and that the private agreement between the assignor and assignee was of no force. D. H. Kearnes and others v. Bhowaneczhurn Miller and others, W. R., F. B., 167.

Choses in action are assignable in this country, and they are also assignable in England, although at law the assignee cannot sue in his own name. Juge Mohun Lall v. Massamut Buddun Koer and others, 9 W. R., 243.

Choses in action are assignable by Civil Courts in this country, which are not merely Courts of Equity. The purchaser of a decree-holder's rights and interests in decreed land may sue to recover possession, even if the thing purchased have no actual existence, but rests on mere possibility: if legally saleable, it was equitably an assignable cause of action. Munrunjun Singh and another v. Leela Nund Singh and others, 11 W. R., 5.

Semble.—There is nothing in equity which prevents a suitor, pending a suit, or any other legal proceedings, from assigning the whole or any part of the subject of litigation. Per Phear, J., in Grose v. Amirtamayi Dasi, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 1.

14.—LIEN.

The sale of property mortgaged to A., in execution of a decree against B., will not extinguish A.'s lien, whether notification was or was not given at the time of sale. Jungee Loll Mahajun v. Brijo Beharse Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 21.

Where a plaintiff's bond gives him a separate lien on each and all of several mouzahs pledged as security, he is free to elect for sale whichever of the mouzahs he thinks most likely to satisfy his claim. Massamut Bibee Susekun v. Khajah Mahomea Hubeboollah Khan and others, 8 W. R., 379.

An innocent holder of property given in pledge for the payment of a debt, without notice of his debtor being a benemeed owner for others, is entitled to maintain his lien on all the property in satisfaction of the debt, and on that ground should succeed as against the parties who by their acts enabled the benameedar to deceive him and take his money. Bamasonduree Debia v. Rashmonee Debia, 4 W. R., 36.

Where C. entered into a contract with the Government to construct a railway feeder, and purchased coal from a coal company, and after the coal had been delivered and deposited at a certain place C, absconded.—Held that the Government had no right to detain or claim the coal, or to take the same out of the possession of the coal company, who were entitled to retain possession of the coal against any claimant but C. himself. Gordon, Stuart, and Co. v. The Executive Engineer of the Calcutta and Jessore Road Division on the part of Government, 7 W. R., 426.

Where a party having a lien on account of a debt upon certain property belonging to another, and holding also a money decree for the same debt which he could satisfy by attachment and sale of other property belonging to her judgment-debtor, entered into a kistbundee with the latter, in which, in consideration of other properties pledged by its terms, she gave up her right of executing the decree against any of the judgment-debtor's property,—Held that the kistbundee did not extinguish the original debt, nor do away with the lien. Ram Churn Lal and another v. Rughoober Singh and others, 11 W. R., 481.

To constitute a lien on any property, there must be a clear agreement for the specific appropriation of the property, and further the property must be in the possession of the party who claims the lien. Deynarain Bose v. Lish, 2 Hyde's Rep., 267.

The act of one of two holders of a bond cannot destroy the lien of the other on property pledged to both as security for a joint debt. Indurjeer Koowar v. Brij Bilas Lal, 3 W. R., 130.

Where certain shares were deposited with a bank as security for the depositor overdrawing his account for a time, which, in fact, he never did, and other documents were deposited as security for drafts drawn on Eccles, Cartwright, and Co., against cotton, to which these latter documents referred, Eccles, Cartwright, and Co. failed,—Held that the bank had no lien on the shares in respect of the cotton transactions. Gentle v. The Bank of Hindostan, China, and Japan, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 245.

Agents for the purchase of goods have a lien on the goods when purchased for the moneys paid and liabilities incurred by them in such purchase, and are not bound to deliver the goods until they are reimbursed, or have security for such advances and liabilities, and an agent in this character is in the position of an unpaid vendor. Bhola Nath v. Baij Nath, 2 Agra Rep., 11.

A suit to enforce a lien on land which has been mortgaged will lie, and the land as it stood at the time of the mortgage free from subsequent encumbrances may be sold, although a decree for money due upon the mortgage has been obtained, and the right, title, and interest of the mortgagee thereto have under such been once sold. Biswanath Mukhopadhyya v. Gossain Dass Baramaduk, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 140.

R. as mortgagee sued the D.s for possession after foreclosure. A razeenamah and safeenamah were put in and a decree passed thereon under which the D.s and others as principals, and their co-sharers as sureties, bound themselves not to alienate any portion of their property in the estate till the debt was satisfied, and that on failure the decree should be executed, the shares of the principals being sold first. After this the co-sharers granted a putnee of a portion of the estate to the defendants in this suit. Subsequently the rights of the D.s were sold in execution to B., who again sold them to plaintiffs, who had previously acquired twelve annas of the right and interest of R. under the razeenamah and safeenamah and decree, the remaining four annas having passed to C., now represented by defendant K.

The present suit was brought to set aside the putnee-lease as being in derogation of plaintiffs' right. Held that the plaintiffs, to the extent of their share, had a valid lien upon the estate, and were entitled to priority over any right under the putnee lease and to hold possession until their claim was satisfied. Dhunkristo Sein v. Erskine and Co., 16 S. W. R., C. R., 54.

The question in this case was, whether a right of lien and power of sale by virtue of a power of attorney over certain shares pledged with plaintiffs by defendant as security for the repayment of a loan originally secured by a first promissory note, was lost by the plaintiffs subsequently taking from defendant a second promissory note in lieu of the first, which was receipted and returned. Held that the original debt continued to exist; that the first promissory note and the shares were given as a security for that loan; that the second promissory note was also given as a security for the loan, no new debt being created; that the plaintiffs had a right to exercise the power given to them of selling the securities; that the act of the defendant in trying to prevent such exercise of power by revoking the power of attorney was unjustifiable, and that therefore the plaintiffs were right in coming to the Court to have that proceeding of the defendant set aside and declared inoperative. A. Stewart v. The Delhi and London Bank, Limited, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 201.

Hypothecation of property as security for a debt gives the party so secured a right to the application of such property, or its sale proceeds, in satisfaction of his claim. But if such property has been sold under execution of another decree, the secured party cannot cause re-sale without obtaining a decree for that purpose in a fresh suit. Gajadhor Pershad v. Dathee Pershad, 1 N. W. R., Part. I. p. 29.

The fact that property is sold under a decree obtained by a plaintiff in respect of a debt due to him does not of itself prevent such plaintiff from insisting upon the lien to which he is entitled under a prior hypothecation to him, for another debt of the same property.

A decree obtained under the summary procedure prescribed by the Registration Act can be for money only, and not for the enforcement of a lien. Jugnen Nath v. Kimal Singh, 3 N. W. R., 123.

A suit will not lie against the purchaser of property subject to lien to recover from him personally the amount of the lien, but the lien is not lost by the sale, and a suit may be brought against the purchaser with the object of obtaining a decree for the realization of the lien by the sale of the hypothecated property. Jugernath v. Fahidoy, 3 N. W. R., 207.

15.—Torts.

(a) Miscellaneous.

Held that a suit for the closing of a door on account of apprehended trespass will not lie. Parma
The plaintiff let a cargo-boat to U. C., who had been employed by the defendants to land certain goods. During the landing of the goods, a dispute as to the terms of hiring arose, and U. C. refusing to pay what was alleged by the plaintiff to be due to him for the hire of his boat, the plaintiff refused to give up 53 bales then remaining unlanded from his boat. U. C. communicated the circumstances to an assistant in defendants' firm, who afterwards went with U. C., and forcibly took the goods from the plaintiff's boat, without satisfying the plaintiff's lien thereon, and the defendants received them into their godowns. It was proved that U. C. and the assistant acted without the knowledge or authority of the defendants, and that the defendants received the goods without any knowledge of how they had been obtained.

Held that, in the absence of such knowledge on their part, the receipt of the goods by them did not amount to a ratification of the wrongful act of their assistant and U. C., so as to render them liable in an action by the plaintiff for damages of the same.

A. Girish Chandra Dass v. Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., 2 B. L. R., C. C., 140.

In a suit for the reopening of an old road which the defendants had closed, and for the closing of a new road which they had opened in land alleged to belong to the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court made a decree declaring the new road to be within the plaintiff's premises, and directed that it should be closed, and the old road restored.

Held that the decree was only in the nature of a declaration; that the act of the defendants in making a new road was a trespass; and that upon this question it was conclusive in point of fact and law. Heera Chand Banerjee v. Shama Churn Chatterjee, 12 W. R., 275.

The latter portion of Section 13 of Act III of 1857 having been repealed by Act XVII of 1862,—

Held that the offences created by that section may be dealt with by the ordinary criminal tribunals, subject to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Reg. v. Mathur Pershotun et al., 4 Bom. Reg., Cr., 13.

The ground upon which a person is restrained from using another's trade mark which is the property of another. It is not necessary to prove intentional fraud, or to show that persons have been actually deceived. It is sufficient if the Court be satisfied that the resemblance is such as would be likely to cause the one mark to be mistaken for the other. Ewing v. Grant, Smith, and Co., 2 Hyde's Rep., 185.

This suit was brought to recover the value of certain articles stolen from the plaintiff's rooms at a hotel in Bombay. The defendant was the licensed proprietor of the hotel, who was in the habit of entertaining, for shorter or longer periods, all comers willing to pay the usual charges, and the plaintiff was an exchange broker, doing business in Bombay, who had lived at the hotel for more than a year, paying for his board and lodging at first by the day, and afterwards by agreement at the rate of so much a month, but neither was the plaintiff under any obligation to remain, nor the defendant to accommodate him for any fixed time,—

Held that the relation of innkeeper and guest (and not that of boarding-house keeper and lodger) subsisted between the parties; and that the defendant was prima-facie, and without proof of actual negligence, liable to make good the loss sustained by the plaintiff. There is no law but the Common Law of England to regulate the relation of innkeeper and guest in Bombay, in a case between a European and Parsee. Whately v. Palanjie Pestanji, 3 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 137.

When a trespasser tortuously enters upon the land of another and builds a house thereon, the party injured is entitled to recover possession of the land by destroying the house, if there is no proof of acquiescence on his part in the act of injury done. Gobind Puramanick v. Gooroo Churn Dutt, W. R., 71.

To maintain a suit for false and malicious prosecution, the plaintiff must show that the criminal charge was instituted maliciously and without probable cause. Nowcouree Chunder Shurmah v. Birmomoyee Debea, 3 W. R., 169.

A suit will lie in the Civil Court to recover damages for breach of contract by defendant to certify, or for his fraudulently omitting to certify, in consequence of which, on an execution fraudulently issued against the plaintiff, his property was seized. Soojan Mundul v. Wooser Mundul, 6 W. R., Civ. Ref., 20.

Suit by the secretary and manager of a Government-aided school for damages against the owner of the school premises for breaking down the building and removing the materials belonging to plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff, as secretary and manager, could maintain the action for the benefit of the school; that on the facts the plaintiff was not entitled to greater damages than he had been awarded to him for the value of the materials removed by the defendant, or to compensation for the improvements made by him to the building; and that there was no presumption of gift in the case. Sreedhury Roy v. James Hills, 6 W. R., Civ. Ref., 21.

Held that male members of a family cannot sue for the injury or insult which they have sustained indirectly in consequence of ill-treatment of certain female members of the family, and that if there was any remedy by suit for such grievance or dishonour, it was open to the women themselves, and not to the plaintiffs. Oodai and others v. Bhownee Pershad, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 264.

A suit will lie for damages sustained by a lessee by his lessor's breach of contract to put him in possession of a portion of the property of which he granted the lease. Firingee Singh v. Shah Amed Hossein, 7 W. R., 22.

A suit will not lie between joint owners of an undivided estate for damages sustained by the plaintiff, by the sale of the estate at an inadequate price, in consequence of the default of the defendants in paying their share of the Government revenue. Odoit Roy and others v. Radha Pandey and others, 7 W. R., 72.

An action will lie for damages for mere abuse. Ossemoodeen v. Futteh Mahomed, 7 W. R., 359.

A suit will lie to establish a prescriptive claim to irrigation from a running stream, and for damages caused by the stoppage of the water by the proprietors higher up the stream, erecting dams on their own lands. Buddun Thakoor v. Mohunt Shunker Doss, W. R., 1804, 106.

The plaintiff’s naib (now dead) sent her a hoondee (found by the first Court to have been a forgery) on account of collections from her elephant, which hoondee was on presentation accepted, but finally dishonoured. Held that the hoondee is a cause of action; that she has, if she can prove her case, suffered a direct injury to the extent she alleges; and that she is entitled to redress. Ranee Surnomaye v. Dwarkanath Ghose, 2 W. R., 178.

Where plaintiff had in a former suit brought to recover a part of the consideration-money, together with the excess rents paid by him on a putnee settlement which defendant had induced him to take on a false representation regarding the lots included in it, obtained consequential damages,—Held that he could not succeed in a second suit to get back so-called excess of rent paid by him in terms of the putnee pottah since the institution of the first suit. When once the cause of action is matured, the subsequent occurrence of further damage, after or before adjudication of the original matter, does not originate a fresh cause of suit. Raja Nilmoney Singh Deo Bahadoor v. Issurchunder Ghosal, 9 W. R., 121.

Where parties in possession of certain lands sued for a declaration of title, not only on the allegation that defendant had caused a demarcation to be made behind their backs, annexing a slice of their lands to defendant’s estate, but had also under colour of this proceeding, sued plaintiff’s tenants for rent under Act X, and proceeded to the maintenance of the action. It is essential to authorized, or whether it was done by the order of the Government. Malice is not a necessary ingredient of the proceeding, sued for a declaration of title, not only on the Act Vl (B. C.) of 1862, it was held that acts had been done hostile and obviously injurious to the plaintiff’s interests, is not enough. Tlmas Ealzs Rogers v. Obbard, 2 Hyde’s Rep., 57.

Two notes are stolen from A. which B. (not a bond-fide holder for valuable consideration) tenders to C. in payment for certain articles. C., not knowing B., refuses to deal with him, whereupon B. brings D., who is known to C., and the purchase is made by him. Held that the part which D. performed in the transaction amounted to a “conversion of the notes to his own use,” and that he is liable to A. Kissormohun Roy v. Rajnarain Sen, 1 Hyde’s Rep., 263.

Held that a suit will not lie for damages against the holder of a bond pledged as security for his omission to sue on that bond within the period of limitation. Makund Lall v. Rughoput Doss, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 83.

To sustain an action for negligence, there must be an obligation on the part of the defendant to use care, and a breach of that obligation to the plaintiff’s injury is an act contrary to law. Suami Nayudu v. Subramabia Mudali, 2 Mad. Rep., 158.

In execution of a decree against a judgment-debtor, his right, title, and interest in an elephant was sold. In a suit by a third party against the decree-holder and the purchaser for recovery of the elephant or its value, on the ground that the elephant was his property, and not the property of the judgment-debtor,—Held, that the decree-holder, as well as the purchaser, was liable to make good the loss caused by such sale. Kanai Prasad Bose v. Hirchaund Manu, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 71; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 120.

An assault made by parties proceeding together and acting in conjunction as to time, place, and assault, is a single act, and the cause of action is common to all parties. Rameswar Bhattachurje v. Shibrarain Chuckerbutty, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 419.

The plaintiff let to the defendants a godown, on an upper story over his own godown, for the purpose of storing goods, the only stipulation in writing being that no combustible or hazardous goods should be stored there. The plaint alleged that the premises were taken by the defendants on the understanding that the defendants should use the same in a tenant-like manner, yet the defendants used them in an untenant-like manner, and loaded an unreasonable and improper weight on the floor, whereby it broke through and damaged the plaintiff's goods below. The evidence showed that the godown had been used by former tenants for storing light goods, but, in addition to light goods, the defendants had at the time the floor broke stored upon it several casks of white and red lead, and some cases containing tin plates. The evidence of professional witnesses showed that a warehouse-floor ought to be able to bear 14 cwt. per superficial foot, and there was evidence to show that the pressure on the portion of the floor which fell was at the time 1 cwt. 1 qr. 6 lbs. The floor gave way in the part where the heavy goods were stored, but there was nothing to show that they were improperly stored. Evidence was given that it was not usual to store heavy goods on an upper floor, but that heavy goods were sometimes stored on upper floors. The evidence of the professional witnesses was to the effect that the floor was not a proper one upon which to store merchandise, but that 14 cwt. was not a dangerous weight for a warehouse-floor to bear, and that no unprofessional person could have anticipated danger from it in the present instance. There was also evidence to show that the girders were not sufficient for the floor of an upper story to be used as a godown. In a suit for damage sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the breaking of the floor, the jury will lie in the Small Cause Courts, unless actual pecuniary loss has resulted from such injury to the plaintiff. When there is no such pecuniary loss, the suit for damages will lie in the ordinary Civil Courts, and a special appeal will lie to the High Court, although the damages claimed are below Rs. 500. Ali Buksh v. Sheikh Samiruddi, 4 B. L. R., A. C. 31, and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 477.

Deprivation of the right to a rise of water in an irrigation; and a claim to repair a bund for the purpose of securing such right, is not answered by the tender of another bund quite as good. Shunteek Sahoo v. Gurbhoo Sahoo, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 216.

In a suit for damages for the demolition of a single or embankment intended to keep in surface water, if the embankment was situated on the defendant's land, such demolition could only be a cause of action where it not only infringed a defendant's right, but caused actual damage. Secta Rum v. Sheikh Kummer Ali, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 250.

A settlement having been made out of Court between a decree-holder and his judgment-debtor, the latter handed over certain property to the former, who undertook to release him from all liability under the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder, ignoring the settlement, took out execution against the judgment-debtor, but did not attach any of his property or otherwise endeavour to realise by an act done vexatiously for the purpose of annoyance, acts done wrongfully and without reasonable and probable cause, acts done wantonly and without the exercise of any caution in investigating the necessity for them, have been held to be malicious. Bengal Coal Company, Limited, v. Elgin Cotton Company, Limited, 2 N. W. R., 13.

A party whose conviction before a Criminal Court is reversed on appeal, and he himself released from confinement, cannot maintain a suit against the complainant for damages to his personal honour, unless he can prove that the complainant had no reasonable and probable cause for making the complaint and charge. Kazaee Kothesoolook v. Moter Peskher, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 276.

In a suit for damages for an assault, the previous conviction of the defendant in a Criminal Court is no evidence of the assault. The factum of the assault must be tried in the Civil Court.

No suit for damages occasioned by personal injury will lie in the Small Cause Courts, unless actual pecuniary loss has resulted from such injury to the plaintiff. A settlement having been made out of Court between a decree-holder and his judgment-debtor, the latter handed over certain property to the former, who undertook to release him from all liability under the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder, ignoring the settlement, took out execution against the judgment-debtor, but did not attach any of his property or otherwise endamage him in any way, and the execution case was struck off for default. Thereupon the judgment-debtor sued in the Court of Small Causes to recover the amount of the property which had been made over to the judgment-creditor.

He held, that as plaintiff was not endangered by the conduct of the defendant, the suit was properly dismissed. Mehim Mundle v. Kalez Chund Naik, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 147.

Proof of malice is essential to support a suit for damages for the wrongful suing out of mesne process. By malice in its legal sense something less is meant than malevolence or vindictive feeling, acts done vexatiously for the purpose of annoyance, acts done wrongfully and without reasonable and probable cause, acts done wantonly and without the exercise of any caution in investigating the necessity for them, have been held to be malicious. At the same time, to make an act malicious, it must be shown that it was done with a wrongful intention. Acts done in good faith and without any wrongful intention, though they may be such as a cautious person would have abstained from, are not necessarily malicious. From proof of the absence of such cause as would influence a man of ordinary caution, malice may be presumed, but this is an inference which it is optional with the Court, and not compulsory on it, to draw, and it may be rebutted by proof of good faith. When the persons against whom malice is to be proved are not themselves present, but acts through agents at a distance, the inference of malice should not be drawn.

A registered proprietor of the copyright of an ornamental design within the United Kingdom, under 5 and 6 Vict. c. 100 (amended by 6 and 7 Vict. c. 65, 13 and 14 Vict. c. 104, and 21 and 22 Vict. c. 70) cannot sustain an action against any person who applies such design to articles, or who sells any articles to which such design has been applied, in British Burmah. Baker and others v. Sutherland and others, 8 B. L. R., 298; 16 S. W. R., C. R., 90.

Action for malicious prosecution. The defendant had charged the plaintiff with cheating by personation in falsely pretending that his (plaintiff's) wife had been delivered of a son, and procuring a child and passing him off as the son so born. The case was dismissed by the Magistrate, and the plaintiff brought the present suit. The defendant alleged reasonable and probable cause and the absence of malice. The Civil Judge awarded Rs. 50,000 damages to the plaintiff. Upon appeal, it was contended that the charge was not malicious, though the facts upon which it was based were allowed to be false. Held, that this depended upon the question of the absence of reasonable and probable cause, and in case of the absence, upon the cogency of the inference derivable from it. The test which has received the most approbation is partly abstract and partly concrete. Was it reasonable and probable cause for any discreet man? Was it so to the maker of the charge? Upon the facts of this case,—Held, that if defendant's conduct was mere negligence, it was dissoluta negligentia. That the facts alleged in support of the charge were such as, if believed at all, could only be believed and acted upon through such negligence that the inference of malice was irresistible. In a suit for malicious prosecution, the expense of counsel is not a proper element in the calculation of damages awardable to a successful plaintiff. The damages were reduced to Rs. 10,000. The Honourable Godory Narain Gopatthi Rau v. Sri Ankitam Venkuta Narsing Rau Guru, 6 Mad. Rep., 85.

Suit for damages sustained by plaintiffs by reason of injuries caused to a line of railway, the property of plaintiffs, by the bursting of defendant's tank. Negligence on the part of the defendant was not alleged in the plaint. Upon the findings—(1) that the tanks were existing before living memory; (2) that they were breached by an extraordinary flood; (3) that they were tanks constructed in the ordinary manner, with escapements sufficient for all ordinary floods and such as are universally employed; (4) that they were absolutely necessary to human existence, so far as it depends upon agriculture; (5) that the railway was constructed with a full knowledge of their existence,—Held, that the suit was rightly dismissed. Rylands v. Fletcher (L. R., 3 H., 530) discussed; Madras Railway Company v. Zamindar of Kuratinggur, 6 Mad. Rep., 180.

Limitation in the case of a malicious act must be computed, if not from the time when the malicious act was committed, at least from the time when damage resulting from the injury was actually suffered. Damages are not usually awardable under the express head of "mental anxiety"; but in all cases in which damage arises from a tort, as distinguished from a breach of contract, the Courts in awarding damages are not co the damage too precisely, but a damages which may effectually party from a repetition of the Hossein v. Fussel Hossein, 1 N 209.

The plaint alleged that the plaintiff's possession had been by water escaping from defendant's property, and at the time of the his control, but the plaint di direct allegation of negligence part. The Civil Judge dismiss ground that the plaint disclosed Held, reversing the decree of the case stated in the plaint call the part of the defendant. Ma. Srimun Mahamundaleswara Karujiy Vunthay, 5 Mad. Rep., 1

_Held_ that, in cases of defamation, the onus of proving the statement, or at least of showing that he had reasonable ground for believing it to be true, and was actuated in making such statement not by malicious motives, but by an intelligent zeal for the public interest, lies on the person making the statement. *Altaf Hossein v. _Suit for damages for libel._

The lower Court decreed the full amount claimed, viz., a lac of rupees, which on appeal was reduced to Rs. 500, on the ground that when two parties in this country litigate, the credit of either is little affected by the use of strong expressions in the petitions filed by them in Court. Mirza Eklal Bahadoor v. R. Sofer, 2 W. R., 163.

_Suit for libel in describing the plaintiff, who was a Jounpore bunya, as a Telee, whereby the plaintiff lost his caste,* &c. The alleged libel was contained in an answer to a suit. _Held_ that the action was not maintainable, as it did not appear that the plaintiff had lost his caste or otherwise been damaged, or that defendant had knowingly misdescribed the plaintiff. Futtick Chund Sahoo v. Markend Jha, Marsh., 224.

_H. M., an inspector of the O. G. Co., on visiting the Company's works at N., was informed that the Superintendent, W. M., had misappropriated the Company's money, and obtained money wrongfully from their workmen, and otherwise mismanaged the factory._ On further enquiry and inspection of W. M.'s books, his suspicions being confirmed, he communicated them by letter to the Resident Director. The Company having declined to prosecute, L. M. presented a charge of breach of trust against W. M., on which he was arrested, and after a magisterial enquiry the charge was dismissed. It appeared from the evidence that the defendant had reasonable and probable cause for supposing that the plaintiff was guilty of the misconduct he was charged with, and there was no proof that the defendant was actuated by malice. Suit dismissed with costs.

_Held_ that a communication such as the above is "a privileged communication." That when an overseer has reasonable and probable cause for supposing that a workman has committed a breach of trust, and prosecutes him for it, the employers having declined to, no enquiry is to be made into the motives that prompted him to do so. Thomas Whitehead Mills v. Lawrence Mitchell, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 18.

16. DAMAGES.

_(a) Miscellaneous._

A having a right to sell an indigo factory pledged to him, subject to the rights of B., under his prior mortgage, has no right to invade or disturb the possession of the prior mortgagee by placing peons upon the property, in order to attach the factory as a step towards the judicial sale. B.'s resistance of A.'s unlawful attachment does not bar B.'s claim to damages for losses sustained by him consequent on the attachment.

In actions of tort, a plaintiff is never precluded from recovering ordinary damages by reason of his failing to prove the special damage laid, unless the special damage is the gist of the action. No case having been made for taking fresh evidence with a view to the assessment of damages in India, the Privy Council assessed the damages themselves. Mohan Doss v. Gokul Doss, 5 W. R., P. C., 97.

Before a tenant can obtain any decree for damages on the ground of illegal distrain, he must prove what loss he has actually sustained. Oojan Dewan and others v. Prannath Mundal, 8 W. R., 219.

_A suit for damages for personal injury cannot be tried by a Court of Small Causes, unless some actual pecuniary damage has resulted from the injury._ Ali Buksh v. Sheikh Sumeroodeen, 12 W. R., 477.

If a decree-holder has omitted to do what he is legally bound to do, and has thereby caused injury, the party injured may claim damages. Syud Ruznudeen Hossein v. Mussamut Fuzalun, 3 W. R., 120.

_A suit for damages to recover the value of personal property plundered and other consequential damages is governed by the limitation prescribed by Clause 16, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859._ The objection as to the measure of damages assessed by the lower Appellate Court is not admissible in special appeal. Sheikh Ahmedoolia v. Hur Churn Pandah, 2 W. R., 236.

Defendant borrowed a sum of money below Rs. 500 from the plaintiff, with a view to redeem a mortgage on condition that, after redemption, he would sell the property to the plaintiff. He did not, however, redeem the property. _Held_ that plaintiff's suit to recover his dues was one for damages as upon a breach of contract in which, under Section 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal would lie. Khulle Mahomed v. Furzan Ally, 12 W. R., 260.

The defendant bought a house belonging to the plaintiff, and standing on his own land, on the condition that, as long as the house was not removed, he would pay the plaintiff a certain sum per month. The house not having been removed, the plaintiff sued for the stipulated sum from date of purchase. Held that this was not an action for rent, but a suit for liquidated damages, and as such cognizable in the Civil Court. Debnath Roy Chowdhry v. Kally Kisto Roy Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 2.

Plaintiff had leased his share of an estate to defendant, and, with it, certain zerayat lands, which he cultivated within the estate as a ryot; but at the expiration of the lease, defendant, in giving him back possession, retained the zerayat lands, claiming to hold them from another co-sharer. Plaintiff sued to recover possession.

Held that the suit was cognizable by a Civil Court, the Revenue Courts having no jurisdiction in the matter.

Held that, as defendants had taken no exception in the lower Courts to the way in which plaintiff had calculated the damages he alleged himself to have sustained during his (defendant’s) unlawful possession, he could not be allowed in special appeal to object to the amount claimed. Charles Macdonald v. Rajaram Roy and others, 11 W. R., 371.

A suit for damages for an amount not exceeding Rs. 500 is within the competency of a Small Cause Court to decide, notwithstanding that it involves an enquiry into a question of right. No special appeal lies in such a case. Luckich Deb Prasad Dutt v. Sheikh Mallick, W. R., 1864, 237.

In a suit to obtain damages for defamation contained in a letter written and sent by the defendant to the plaintiff, where the only damage alleged was the injury to plaintiff’s feelings, it was held that, as the letter was received and read by the plaintiff alone, this did not constitute publication. Komulchunder Bose v. Nobin Chunder Bose, 10 W. R., 184.

If a having reasonable grounds for believing that his property, medicines kept in a storehouse, had been stolen, the acquittal of B. is no ground for recovering damages in a civil suit against A. Mokundnath Dutt and another v. Koylash Chunder Dutt, 6 W. R., 245.

Held that there being no proof that the defendant acted maliciously, or without probable cause, the suit was not maintainable; and under the circumstances, the defendant was entitled to his costs. Michel Patrick Dunne v. William Francis Legge, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 38.

In a suit for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff is entitled and bound to show that the prosecution was malicious and without reasonable and probable cause; and if want of reasonable and probable cause is shown, malice may generally be inferred. Vengama Naikar v. Raghava Chary and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 291.

To sustain an action for malicious prosecution, the prosecution must have been malicious and without reasonable or probable cause. Swami Nyandu v. Subrama Nia Mundali, 2 Mad. Rep., 158.

The proposition that a man whose possession was unlawfully invaded by a wrongful attachment ought to have given effect to that invasion, because it was made under colour of legal process, by moving the lock of his own store-house, is untenable; and though the plaintiff might have received permission to use his own property, he was neither bound to accept the permission so accorded to him, nor, if he had accepted it, would he have lost his right of action, and he was entitled, at the very least, to a judgment for nominal damages.

The principle ordinarily applicable to actions of tort is that the plaintiff is never precluded from recovering ordinary damages by reason of his failing to prove the special damage he has laid, unless the special damage claimed had accrued at the time of the bringing of the suit. Sri Vishnunath Penu v. Sri Sri Sharda Khanna Charana Samanty, Mad. Rep., A. J., 111.

Where a plaintiff sued for damages for value of timber carried away by Government after being washed on to his estate, and to have his right declared as against Government to all timber that in the future may be washed on to his estate,—Held, with regard to the loss sustained in 1864, that plaintiff’s right to recover depended upon whether or not the special damage claimed had accrued at the time of the bringing of the suit. Debnath Roy Chowdhry v. Kally Kisto Roy Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 2.

In a suit to recover damages for loss caused during the years 1862, 1863, and 1864, by defendant’s interference with plaintiff’s right to the flow of water from a canal,—Held, with regard to the loss sustained in 1864, that plaintiff’s right to recover depended upon whether or not the special damage claimed had accrued at the time of the bringing of the suit. Moulvi Gholam Hossen Vakeel v. Sheikh Mallick, 9 W. R., 97.

When one of two co-sharers in a property violates a secret engagement between them by selling to a stranger, the other cannot claim specific penalty, but has his remedy in an action for damages. Sheik Tossaidib Hoossein v. Sheikh Monjan, W. R., 1864, 337.

Plaintiff having paid arrears of rent to defendant as his landlord’s authorized agent, was afterwards sued for those arrears by the landlord, who obtained a decree, the Courts holding that the payment to the mookhtear was one which did not bind the landlord. Plaintiff then sued the mookhtear who had received the money. Held, that the suit was an action for damages, which the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain. Bykuntunath Sandyal v. Kalee Churn Paul, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 359.

In a suit for recovery of damages, the Court which tries the case must, before passing a final decree, assess the damages, and not leave them to be assessed in execution of the decree.

The practice of the original side of the Court discussed. Mussumat Bibi Maniram v. Musummat Bibi Masithun, 4 B. L. R., Aps., 66.

Regard being had to the constitution of the Courts of this country, which are Courts of justice, equity, and good conscience, a decree-holder should be reimbursed damages for the time during which he is kept out of possession by the wrongful act of another party, whether his claim for subsequent damages be made in the execution of the first decree or in a regular suit. Kasheo Nath Koore v. Deb Kisto Ramamooff Dass, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 240.

Where a person whose cattle have been illegally displaced fails to take advantage of the remedy provided by Section 14, Act III of 1857, he is not thereby prohibited from bringing an action for damages in a Civil Court. Nomos Mollah v. Lal Mohun Tagadgire, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 279.

A suit to recover damages for abuse will lie in the Civil Court, but not in the Small Cause Court, and an appeal will lie also. Kaloo Coomar Mitter v. Ramgatta Bhuttacharjee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 84.

The failure of an injured party to institute criminal proceedings does not deprive him of his right to bring a suit in the Civil Court to recover damages for abuse. Sreenath Mookerjee v. Komul Kurmokar, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 85.

Where a false charge led to a party being prevented going to his house until he had furnished bail, he was held to have suffered inconvenience and loss of reputation, for which an award of Rs. 20 as damages was not unreasonable. Madho Chunder Sircar v. Banee Madhub Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 339.

In a suit for damages on account of a charge brought by defendant in a Criminal Court, which charge was ultimately dismissed, plaintiff must prove in the Civil Court that there was no reasonable cause for bringing the accusation: the proceedings in a Criminal Court are not evidence in the Civil Court. Aghorenath Roy v. Radhikee Pershad, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 85.

A party who took from certain proprietors of an estate a lease of their interest therein without advance or premium, not having been put in possession, and finding another party in possession with an adverse title, commenced a suit against him, which was unsuccessful. He then sued the lessors and their representatives for damages to recover the expenses of the litigation, and the whole of the profits he had expected from the lease.

Held that the plaintiff had no right to recover from the lessors the expenses of the litigation, and as it was not contended that the lessors had wilfully misrepresented things, he was entitled only to nominal damages. Mahomed Esa Khan v. Baboo Keshub Lall, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 382.

The term "damages" in Section 6 of Act XI of 1859, include damages to crops, and a suit to recover damages for the wrongful reaping and carrying off the produce of certain fields is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Daur Sinha v. Rughunundun Sinha, 3 N. W. R., 101.

A suit lies against a vendor and another for recovery and registration of a document wrongfully taken back from a registrar upon such registrar’s refusal to register the same on account of certain false statements made by the parties objecting to the registration. Mitter Sein v. Narain Singh, 1 N. W. R., Par. 12, p. 206.

A suit will, notwithstanding Section 206 of Act VIII of 1859, lie for damages for an alleged breach of contract in not certifying to the Court a payment of money in satisfaction of a decree, made out of and not through the Court, in consequence of which the same was fraudulently recovered a second time by the person omitting to certify the said payment. Motee Lall Mookerjee v. Kandha Lall, 18 N. W. R., 155.

A complainant who put the criminal law in motion against a person by whom he had been aggrieved, such prosecution not being malicious or groundless, should not be held civilly responsible for any injury or loss thereby sustained by the person prosecuted. Enaeth Hossein Khan v. Kisnoree Lall, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 11.

The difficulty of assessing the amount of the damages, or the risk of numerous actions of the kind in the Civil Courts, form no ground for dismissing a suit for damages for injury done to a plaintiff’s social position and estimation, if a legal ground of action is shown.

A plaintiff may be entitled to substantial damages for being beaten with a shoe, notwithstanding that he may not have lost his caste, or sustained a pecuniary loss, or physical injury by the act complained of. Bhyran Pershad v. Isharee, 3 N. W. R., 313.

(b) Liability to Damage.

A party is not liable to damages in respect of an attachment made under a warrant issued by a Court. Raj Bullab Gope v. Issan Chandra Hazrah, 7 W. R., 355.

In a suit for compensation on account of damages done to plaintiff’s reputation by defendant having, on the occasion of a theft in his house, given information to the police against plaintiff, who was acquitted by the criminal Court,—Held that, as the accusation was made in good faith,—ie., with good and reasonable cause (defendant having, in common with other villagers, suspected plaintiff, and having, on being asked by the police, given them formal information)—it was not made with any malicious purpose. Ruttun Sircar v. Nobin Ghuttack, 12 W. R., 402.

Where certain inhabitants of a village which was flooded applied to the Magistrate to open a bund and let out the water, and the Magistrate without jurisdiction made an order that the bund should be cut, and the bund was cut by police officers,—Held that the applicants were not liable for damages. *Purceage Singh and others v. Jugeessur Suha, 3 N. W. R., 111."

Where a cause of action is established, the plaintiff is entitled to some damages. His claim ought not to be dismissed altogether by the lower Appellate Court because the first Court assessed the damages at too large a sum. Parusnath Shaha and others v. Brjolal Gossain and others, 8 W. R., 44.

A decree in the nature of penal damages should be construed strictly and literally, and enforced only against the persons at whose application and instance the act complained of took place. Deb Narain v. Gour Pershad Saheb, 2 W. R., Mis., 55.

In an action for damages against N. for bringing a false and malicious charge, and against M. for being the instigator, and others for giving false evidence in the case,—Held that the failure to prove instigation on the part of M. did not affect the claim against N., and that if the charge were proved to be false it would lie upon the defendant N. to show that he had reasonable and sufficient cause for bringing it, and if he failed to show such cause, malice might be inferred. Held, further, that plaintiff could not recover damages against the defendants who were witnesses, but his proper course was to obtain the leave of the Magistrate to proceed against them for perjury. Bishonath Rubhik v. Ramdhone Sircar and others, 11 W. R., 42.

Under Section 10, Act X of 1859, the power of a Judge to award damages for receipts withheld is discretionary only as to the amount to be awarded. Under Act VI of 1862 (B. C.) the power to award damages on arrears of rents is within the discretion of the Judge. Zumerroo Dinmossa Khanum v. C. F. Philipse; Sadut Ali Khan v. C. F. Philipse, 1 W. R., 290.

A ryot injuring his land by taking or allowing another person to take earth for the purpose of making bricks, is liable for damages to his landlord for the permanent damage thus done to his property. Kadumbine Dabee v. Nobeen Chunder Adak, 2 W. R., 157.

Damages under Section 10, Act X of 1859, are recoverable only in respect of money actually paid as rent. Sumeena Bebev. Koylash Chunder Roy, 6 W. R., Act X R., 79.

In estimating damages for a malicious prosecution, a Civil Court is not necessarily wrong in taking into consideration the plaintiff's feelings. Huru Lall Biswas v. Huru Chunder Roy, 12 W. R., 134.

Injury might result to a man's feelings from abuse such as would entitle him to damages. Shaikh Tukee v. Shaikho Khoshdel Biswas, 6 W. R., 151.

In a suit for damages for defamation of character, the plaintiff is not required by any absolute rule of law to give affirmative evidence of the falseness of the charge.

Quere,—Before a suit can lie in a case of this kind is it necessary to presume that actual pecuniary damage has resulted? Dhumro Doss Koondoo v. Koylash Kaminee Dabee, 12 W. R., 372.

In an action for damages for a severe assault, the defendant being unable to prove provocation, the lower Court's decree against him was in the main upheld; but as, looking to the position of the defendant, the damages awarded were deemed beyond his means, they were reduced on condition of the defendant tendering to the plaintiff a written apology expressing his regret for what had passed. F. K. Macleuer v. Shungskidi Dutt, 6 W. R., 95.

Suit for damages caused to the plaintiff's land by the bursting of the defendant's bund. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages, if the bund was made in a lawful manner, and if the breach was owing to no fault of the defendant. Gooroo Churn Mullick v. Kam Dutt, 2 W. R., 43.

Damages are not awardable for a groundless and malicious charge of abetment of riot and murder. 5 W. R., 134.

Where a party holding a dur-putnee lease virtually abandons possession, and takes a putnee of the same property, he cannot afterwards recover as damages the consideration he had paid for the dur-putnee. Dwarknath Misser v. Sree Gopal Paul Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 240.

Damages under Section 2, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.) are awardable, in addition only to rent and costs, and are to be regarded as in substitution for, not in addition to, the interest awardable under Section 20, Act XI of 1859. Nobobanath Dey v. Rajah Borodakhan Roy Bahadoor, 1 W. R., 100.

Suit to recover damages for trees cut down contrary to terms of lease. Held that the farmer and his surety were liable, but not the purchasers of the trees from the farmer. Gopeekishen Gossain v. Sheikh Dowlut Mean, 1 W. R., 156.

Suit for damages by a six-anna owner of a vessel for vessel and cargo which sank while under attachment by the defendant in execution of a decree against the ten-anna owners. Held that, if the defendant merely attached the vessel, he is not liable for damages. But if he discharged the crew, and left the vessel in the charge of an officer of the Court without any efficient crew on board, or did anything to prevent the plaintiff from taking proper care of his property, he is liable in respect of any damage proved to have been done. Assud Ali v. Sheikh Noburak Ali, 1 W. R., 138.

In a suit to obtain damages for defamation contained in a letter written and sent by defendant to plaintiff, where the only damage alleged was the injury to plaintiff's feelings,—Held that such injury was not in itself a ground for giving damages in a civil action. Komul Chundra Bose v. Nobin Chundra Ghose, 10 W. R., 184.

In a suit for money claimed on account of the carriage of goods in which defendant pleaded non-indebtedness and a set-off on account of damage caused to the goods,—Held that defendant could not answer the claim with the set-off on account of damages; though the extent, if any, to which defendant was entitled to draw back might be put in issue, after which it would still be open to defendant to bring an action against plaintiff for special damages. Scanlan v. Herrold, 10 W. R., 295.

Proof of infringement of a right, without proof of actual loss, does not necessarily entitle a plaintiff in this country to a verdict for nominal damages. Nobakrishna Mookerjee v. The Collector of Hooghly, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 276.

A landlord who ejects his tenant illegally and holds possession as a wrong-doer, although he settles another tenant on the land, is liable, not only for the rent he receives under such possession, but also for the damages incurred by the tenant whom he has ejected, in consequence of the ejectment. Mahomed Asmul v. Chadee Lal Pandey, 12 W. R., 104.

Special damages are not necessary to be proved in a case of slander and assault. Meer Hossein v. Meer Bakir Ali, W. R., 1864, 302.

A joint owner who secures the estate paper, and thereby deprives his joint owners of the means of collecting the rents and other debts due to them, is liable to be sued for damages. Pittamber Doss v. Rutton Bullub Doss, W. R., 1864, 213.

LIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

The invasion of privacy by opening windows is not treated by the law as a wrong for which any remedy is given. Komathi v. Gurunada Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 141.

Suit to recover damages for a malicious prosecution. The case for the prosecution having been that the plaintiffs had dishonestly broken open the defendant's grain-pit, and the defence that it was done under a claim of right, the Joint Magistrate convicted the accused. His sentence was reversed by the Court of Session, and then this suit was commenced. Held that, in the absence of any special circumstances to rebut it, the judgment of one competent tribunal against the plaintiffs affords very strong evidence of reasonable and probable cause. Párimi Bépéraju v. Bellamkonda Chinning Venkayya, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 238.

A. recovered from B., under the terms of his lease, a refund of the excess of rent paid by him in respect of the years 1861, 1862, and 1863. While that suit was pending, B. recovered from A. rent at the same rate in respect of the three succeeding years. Held that A. was entitled to bring another suit against B., for damages in respect of the excess of rent paid by him during the years subsequent to the institution of the prior suit. Ganesh Singh v. Ram Raja, 3 B. L., R., P. C., 44; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 36.

The refusing or accepting of bail is a judicial, not merely a ministerial, duty, and a mistake in the performance of that duty, without malice, will not be sufficient to sustain an action. Paramkansam Narasoya Pantulu v. Captain R. A. C. Stuart and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 396.

Where a charge has been made against a person of having given false evidence in a judicial proceeding and the circumstances of the case show no reasonable suspicion, the Court will, on suit brought, award substantial damages. Anunddoll Doss v. Jointee Chunder Sen and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 93.

A. sent cotton to B.'s screw-house, to be screwed. It was placed in B.'s godowns, in charge of which was a servant of B.'s who kept the key of the godowns and removed unscrewed, rent had been paid; and it was allowed that it was for the mutual interest of both parties that the cotton should be so kept. The custom was that the screwing charges should be paid by the purchasers of cotton, to whom it was delivered by B., by the direction of the vendors. In an action by A., for the non-delivery of some of his cotton, Held that, in a suit for compensation for damage done to property, each and every one of the persons was equally responsible to make compensation for the loss sustained, when he happened to be a part of the common assembly and executed a common purpose, and not in proportion to his share of the plunder received, or of the damage done by him. Coercion to form a member of the assembly, or bear a part in the damage, is no excuse from responsibility in a civil suit for compensation. Ganesh Singh v. Ram Raja, 3 B. L., R., P. C., 44; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 36.

(c) Liquidated Damages.

Defendant agreed to supply 100 kautlams of jaggery by a specified rate at Rs. 45 per kautlam, and received Rs. 100 advance. Defendant further agreed that in default he would pay interest at one per cent. per mensem, and paid at Rs. 7 per kautlam. No delivery was made by defendant.
In a suit by the plaintiff to recover Rs. 7 per kautlam and the interest,—Held that the amount sued for was in the nature of liquidated damages which plaintiff had a legal right to enforce, and not a penalty against which the Court would relieve.

The doctrines of the English and Roman law upon the subject of penalties and liquidated damages examined. Adanky Ramachandra Row v. Indukari Appalaraju Garu, 2 Mad. Rep., 451.

(d) Measure of Damages.

The damages to be recovered from a trespasser for wrongful occupation should represent compensation for what the owner has lost,—that is, what would have been fair and reasonable rent for the land if the same had been let to tenants. W. Chardon v. Ajit Singh, 12 W. R., 52.

When two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive, in respect of such breach of contract, should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered either arising naturally from the breach itself, or such as in the contemplation of the parties at the time they made the contract, the plaintiff would have had a reasonable ground of expectation of, in the event of the breach of it. Palmer v. Cohen, 1 Hyde's Rep., 123.

Principles on which the Court grants injunctions, and assesses damages in the case of obstruction of ancient rights. Lackerstein v. Tarrucknauth Poramanick, Cor. Rep., 91.

The proper measure of damages for wrongful detention of property is the difference between the value of the property when seized and its value when restored. Nunderam Singh v. Indershund Dagor, Cor. Rep., 89.

In a suit to obtain specific performance of the conditions of a lease, and not to cancel the lease, or eject the tenant from his holding,—Held, on the construction of the lease, that it was not to determine on the change of ownership in the zemindary, but was to operate till determined by the landlord or the tenant. Held further that the plaintiff may be entitled to recover any damage directly consequent on the breach of contract, but he is not entitled to claim speculative profits which he might have derived from the most hazardous crops. Abdool Ghunee and others v. Gudree Rai, 2 Agra Rep., 102.

In a suit brought for damages for breach of a contract to admit the plaintiff into partnership,—Held that the damages to be awarded, although they should be estimated with reference to the profits which the plaintiff might ultimately have derived from the partnership, ought not to have been assessed at such a sum as would place the plaintiff in the position which he might have held at the conclusion of the partnership. Where the partnership was to endure for two years,—Held that one year's profits would be a fair award of damages. The appellant continuing to impute fraud to the respondent, which he could not sustain, was deprived of his costs in appeal. Lewin v. Morrison, 2 Agra Rep., 151.

Defendants assigned their mortgage rights under two deeds to plaintiff, stipulating to make good any loss which the latter might sustain by reason of the opposition or resistance of the mortgagors. Plaintiff, in a suit against mortgagors, failing to establish one of the mortgages, sued the original mortgagees to recover damages, with interest and costs, incurred by him in a suit against the mortgagors. Held that the measure of damages or loss to which the plaintiff was entitled is not the sum paid by him as consideration, but the value of the thing which he has been deprived of; and that the suit being in its nature a suit for unliquidated damages, plaintiff was not entitled to the interest on such damages. Musamut Parbuty v. Misser Chimman, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 82.

Held that the limit of damages recoverable under Clause 4, Regulation VI of 1823, is three times the amount advanced, and that the amount of advance itself cannot be included or considered, except as the mode of measuring the damages. Zyn-oodeen v. G. A. Wright, 3 Agra Rep., 77.

Where a ryot took advance from a planter for the cultivation of indigo, stipulating to deliver a certain number of bundles of the plant, and further stipulating that, if he failed to do so by neglecting to cultivate or cut, he would pay as damages the price of manufactured indigo for the bundles ascertained to be due,—Held that, if the ryot's failure to supply the bundles stipulated for arose through his neglect to cultivate, he was bound to pay as damages the profit which the planter would have derived from converting the indigo plant, which ought to have been delivered, into indigo, and selling that indigo at a fair price: the risk of failure in the course of manufacture to be reckoned in estimating the damages. A. Hills v. Budu Khan, 12 W. R., 533.

Under an indenture of lease A. and B. covenant to give C. and D. possession of premises comprised therein. The lease was executed by A., C., and D., and B.'s assent was comprised therein; but he refused to execute.

On breach by A. in an action for damages against A. and B,—Held, B. was not liable; but as against A., there being no allegation of special damage, the measure of damages will be the difference between the rack rent and the rent that was agreed to be paid. Goberdhun Dass and Nobin Chunder Aush v. Nittanund Mullick and Choytun Chunder Mullick, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 41.

Suit for damages in respect of the value of trees, cut down by the defendant, not as a wrongdoer, but as one having some claim of right to justify him. Held, that the computation of damages in such a case is not a matter of exact calculation, but must be left to the discretion of the Judge who hears the evidence. A. J. Forbes v. Meer Mahomad Kassem, 1 W. R., 236.

Suit on breach of contract to cultivate and deliver indigo, for recovery of the amount specified in the contract.

Held (1) that the stamp duty depended upon the amount of consideration for the undertaking; and (2) that unless it was clear that the intention of the parties to the agreement was to treat the sum mentioned as liquidated damages, behind which the Court should not look, the Court could not award damages beyond the amount of injury actually sustained. Sheikh Hingun Sowdagar v. Boistum Churn Ojah and others, 6 W. R., 5.

When a breach of contract to sow indigo arises, not from accident, but presumably from dishonesty, it can be said that the agreement falls within Clause 6 of Regulation VI of 1823, which limits the amount of penalty to three times the sum advanced, but the plaintiffs are entitled to recover an amount of damages not exceeding the sum which the defendant stipulated to pay on failure by him to perform his contract. Lal Mahomed Biswas v. R. Watson and others, 4 W. R., 62.

In a suit for the non-delivery of goods agreed to be sold by the defendant to the plaintiff in a case where no money has passed, the measure of damages is in general the difference (if any) between the agreed price and the market value on the day when the goods ought to have been delivered. Sharman v. Gour Shah Bungally, Marsh., 542.

In an action by a vendee against a vendor for non-performance of a contract to deliver goods, which specifies no time for delivery, the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and that which goods of a like description bore on the lapse of a reasonable time for delivery. Manuk Dass v. Rangayya Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 162.

In an action by the vendee against the vendor for breach of a contract to deliver goods “in two or three days,” the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and the price which similar goods bore on the lapse of a reasonable time for delivery, not less than three days from the date of the contract. Ramji Mudah v. Ranga Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 168.

In assessing damages caused by a wrongful act, the injury sustained should alone be considered, not the punishment to be inflicted. Bulobuddur Singh v. R. Solano, 5 W. R., 107.

The amount of damages to be awarded is a question for a Jury to decide, and one with which the High Court cannot interfere in special appeal. Hera Chand Banerjee v. Bane Madhub Chatterjee, 10 W. R., 164.

Suit for damages sustained by plaintiff during the period she was out of possession of an indigo factory with appurtenances. Held that the lower Court was right in taking, as the basis of its calculation of damages, a bond-fide agreement entered into between the plaintiff and her lessee, showing the amount of rent which she would have received yearly but for the illegal act of the defendant; that, as the indigo land was an appurtenance to the factory, by ousting the plaintiff from the factory all benefit derivable from chur lands fit only for indigo was lost by her, and that the sum which represented that loss had been rightly included in the calculation of damages to which plaintiff was entitled. Hurisk Chunder Koondoo v. Mahurance Bama Kalee Debia, 5 W. R., 194.

In a suit to recover the value of crops alleged to have been plundered by defendants, where, on the intervention of a third party, the Court of first instance dismissed the suit,—Held that the Judge in appeal, who believed the plaintiff’s witnesses and decreed the full amount claimed, was bound to have ascertained, upon evidence, whether the crop and damages had really been as extensive as alleged, even if no evidence had been recorded on this issue by the first Court. Kheedoo Roy and another v. Heero Persad Singh, 10 W. R., 252.

In a suit against the Collector personally, for damages on account of loss sustained by sale to the second highest bidder, the difference between the two bids is the proper measure of the plaintiff’s loss, and not the actual or probable value of the estate. Cornell v. Mussamuit Oody Tara Chowdhraeen and others, 8 W. R., 372.

Damages should be awarded according to the loss caused to plaintiff by the wrongful act of the defendant; and, where such act renders it probable that plaintiff will be a loser in future time, the award should embrace prospective loss. Koomaree Dosses and another v. Bama Sooderree Dosses, 10 W. R., 202.

In a suit in which it is proved that defendants maliciously and from gross negligence allowed their cows to trespass on plaintiff’s lands, and to destroy the indigo plants thereon, knowing the value of the crops to the plaintiff, it was held that the case was one of tort, in which the wrong being deliberate and malicious, the plaintiff was entitled by way of damages, not to the mere value of the growing plants destroyed as the actual loss sustained, but to substantial damages sufficient to compensate the plaintiff for the loss of profits which would have been obtained from the indigo plant. Srechury Roy and others v. James Hill, 9 W. R., 156.

In a suit for damages on the ground that the defendants, after executing an agreement by which they stipulated to sell fish every day in the plaintiff’s bazar, and to pay a fee per diem, and bound themselves to pay damages to a specified extent in the event of their leaving his bazar and resorting to another bazar, had left his bazar where they were selling fish,—Held that plaintiff was not entitled to recover, as damages, anything beyond the damages he had actually sustained. Madhub Chunder Roy v. Luckee Jellance and others, 9 W. R., 212.

Striking an average on the amounts stated by several witnesses is not a proper mode of assessing the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff in respect of injury done to his crops by the defendant’s cattle. Suriutollah Chowdhry v. Madur Bux Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, 363.

In a suit for damages for loss of cultivation by the cutting of a bank, the plaintiff is entitled not merely to the rent of the land, but also to the profits of cultivation. Rummun Singh v. Sheikh Meher Ali, W. R., 1864, 365.

In a suit for damages for an assault made without provocation, the damages given should be commensurate to the injury and annoyance caused, even though there has been no serious personal injury sustained. Ramjoy Moxomdar v. Dr. C. M. Russell, W. R., 1864, 370.

In estimating the measure of damages to be paid for breach of contract to cultivate indigo, the period of the breach should be taken as the time for estimating the damages. Generally, the natural and immediate consequence of the breach of contract should alone be looked to, and not some possible remote result. Supposed profits ought not to be
In a suit for malicious prosecution on a false charge of dacoity, a Civil Court in awarding damages is not limited to the amount mentioned in Section 270 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Shamachurn Halder v. Beharea Lal Kolay, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 443.

Ordinarily in a breach of a contract of sale the vendor can only recover as against the purchaser the difference between the price contracted for and the price at which the vendor might or could have sold the goods at the time of the breach. Sooren-deranth Roy v. Rughooberdulg Awusta, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 392.

In a suit for damages for breach of contract to supply wood which defendant had engaged to supply for the construction of a house, where the intention was found to have been that the plaintiff should from time to time give defendant notice of the different articles of woodwork required,—

Held that defendant was only liable for damages to the extent of the wood which he did not supply according to the order given to him, not for the wood for which requisition had not been made. Radha Gobind Shaha v. Inam Buksh Ostagur, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 217.

In a suit for damages occasioned by abuse and assault, the plaintiff's position should be considered or the purpose of seeing how far the compensation awarded is commensurate with the injury inflicted, but not for giving a decree against the defendant beyond any possibility of his ever satisfying it, simply because the plaintiff is a man of a somewhat high position in life. Joypal Roy v. Mukoon Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 286.

The plaintiff entered into a contract of charter-party with the defendants, whereby it was agreed between them and defendants “acting for the owners” that “the steamer Atholl” has the passage to Calcutta, being tight, staunch, and strong, &c., shall receive on board from the charterers a complete cargo of merchandise, to consist of 700 tons dead weight, &c., and being so laden shall there with proceed to London, with liberty to call for any legal purpose at any intermediate port or ports, &c., freight to be paid on the above cargo on right delivery of the same at and after the rate of £4 2s. 6d. per ton. Charterers to have the option of cancelling the charter-party, if the steamer has not arrived in Calcutta on the 15th April, 1871.

The defendants signed the charter-party as “agents of steamer Atholl.” The steamer was not, at the time the charter-party was entered into, on her way to Calcutta; being then in the port of London, she did not start for some days after the date of the charter-party. She touched at Madras and Colombo on her way, and did not arrive in Calcutta until 11th April. Rates of freight having declined since the middle of March, at which time it was alleged, the steamer ought to have arrived, the plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages. Held, the defendants were liable. The statement in the charter-party, that the steamer was on her passage to Calcutta, was a condition precedent. The measure of damages was the difference between the value the steamer would have been to the plaintiffs as an instrument for earning freight at market prices, if she had been put at their disposal at the time when she ought to have been under the contract, i.e., a fortnight or three weeks earlier, and what she was worth to them in the same view at the time when she actually was delivered. F. Schiller and others v. J. Finlay and others, 8 B. L. R., 544.

Plaintiff and defendants, occupants of neighbouring houses, were joint tenants of the party-wall. Defendants unroofed their house, raised the wall, and placed beams on it to rebuild their house. The lower Appellate Court found, that, in consequence of this alteration, the rain from defendants' house descended upon plaintiff's verandah and caused damage to plaintiff, and decreed that defendants should restore the wall to its former height, and remove the beams placed on it. Held, on special appeal, that taking the finding to be that the alternative created "stillicidium," where it did not exist before, or that it rendered more burdensome an existent "servitus stillicidii," it would be very dangerous to hold that every trifling excess in the exercise of a servitude should justify the pulling down of the building creating the excess; that in the present case the damages should be assessed and awarded, and the injunction to remove the roof of the house and reduce the wall be made conditional upon the defendants not removing the cause of the nuisance. In such a case, the measure of damages is the amount which will induce the defendants to abate the nuisance. Akilandammal v. S. Venkata Chalu Mudali, 6 Mad. Rep., 112.

1.—Rights of Vendors.

In a suit claiming possession of land purchased by the plaintiff from the defendant, the Moonisiff threw out the claim for want of consideration; but the District Judge found that the plaintiff was entitled to have the land, and that the defendant might sue for the purchase-money.

Held that the equitable doctrine of the vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money applied to the case, but as the District Judge had not decided whether the defendant had succeeded in proving that the purchase-money had not been paid, the suit should be remanded for a finding by him on that issue.

Default by a purchaser in payment of the purchase-money, or any portion of it, does not necessarily invalidate the sale, and in a suit brought to redeem the purchased property, the mortgagee cannot avail himself of the objection, that the full amount of purchase-money has not been paid. The mortgagee has only the right to be satisfied that the person claiming redemption is not a stranger, but one to whom the equity of redemption has been transferred by a bond-fide sale. Heera Singh v. Rughu Nath Suhasi and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 30.

Persons who allow a property to leave their possession before the purchase-money is complete cannot recover from third parties who are bond-fide purchasers, even if those persons had notice of the amount of the consideration-money remaining unpaid. Jogoo Koonwar v. Parbutty Koonwar, 3 W. R., 139.

Where A. sold land to B., reserving a right to re-purchase by payment of a certain sum at a specified time, and before such time had arrived, B. re-sold to C. for valuable consideration without notice, and A. failed to make the payment, and forfeited his right to re-purchase,—Held that he had no title unless relieved against the forfeiture, and that such relief could not be given as against C. Samakkauandam v. Perumul Chetti, 2 Mad. Rep., 14.

Where a sale by two co-parceners in favour of another was set aside, on the ground that the sale by a co-parcener without the consent of the others was illegal,—Held on the suit of the vendee to recover the purchase-money from the descendants of the vendors, that the purchase-money was like a debt, and payable by the heirs, in proportion to the shares inherited by each. Oomdee and another v. Cheda Lall and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 264.

In a suit for recovery of a sum of money alleged to be due under an agreement for the sale of land, dated 26th January, 1851, the lower Court decided that, on the construction of the agreement, the plaintiff was to put defendants in possession of the lands, besides assigning over the title-deeds to them. Held that the terms of the original agreement did not warrant such a construction.
In the Sale even the acide to the title of a property is with not, a tenant's title vendee cannot be ordered to refund the consideration. [C. 159].

In a suit by the plaintiff the District Court entitled to sue might sue. Held that the lien for unpaid but as the defendant purchase-money be remanded, Yellappa bi Bom. Reg.

Default by money, or to invalidate the purchase himself of purchase-money has only the claiming rights whom the person by a bond, etc., Sukai and others. Persons in possession cannot recover, not warrant such a construction.
Where there is a contract of sale of land, an action can ordinarily be brought by the vendor for purchase-money, whether or not the Court in which the action is brought has jurisdiction over the seat of the obligation which it is sought to enforce. John Young v. Mangalapilly Ramaya, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 125.

No action will lie against a vendor alone to compel him to procure the transfer by the revenue authorities to the name of the vendee of the property sold. The Collector (the registering officer) must be made a party to the suit. Rangamma v. Tunmapaiya, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 134.

A vendor legally conveying all his title cannot be sued for money had and received, although the title prove defective. Accordingly, where the plaintiff bought two kanam claims, and sued upon them unsuccessfully, Held that he could not recover the purchase-money from his vendor's representatives, on the ground that the consideration for the payment had failed. A purchaser cannot recover the purchase-money in equity when the conveyance has been executed by all necessary parties, and he is evicted by a title to which the covenants do not extend. Muhamud Mohiddin v. Ulliyil Umache and another, 1 Mad. Rep., 390.

Where a bond-fide sale is accompanied by a power to re-purchase, this will not make the transaction a mortgage, if such does not appear to have been the intention of the parties. Test of such intention. Sundaramarti Mudali v. Valinayikka Ammal, 1 Mad. Rep., 465.

Pleas set up in former suits for rent brought against a vendor by persons who have omitted to protect their interests by having their names inserted in the putnee pottah, do not constitute notice of their title to an innocent purchaser for valuable consideration. Omul Chunder Chaklaymavis v. Charjee and others, 10 W. R., 194.

Nothing subsequently done or suffered by a vendor can affect the rights acquired by the purchaser at the time of the sale. Bissonath Singh v. Brojonath Doss and another, 6 W. R., 230.

When the purchaser of an estate paid earnest-money, and no time was fixed for the payment of the balance, and the vendor re-sold the property within a week,—Held that the vendor was bound to have waited a reasonable period; that the second purchaser took nothing; and that the first purchaser was entitled to a decree for specific performance. Muthur Ali v. Sheo Sahoy Singh, W. R., 1864, 281.

A mere agreement to sell a certain property, without any consideration passing, cannot bar the right of the vendor on the same day to sell a portion of the property to a third party, or invalidate the third party's purchase. Bhunukre Deba v. Tariny Chatterbutty, 7 W. R., 58.

Where it was made a distinct condition of sale that the property should be sold to the highest bidder, without any restriction of the purchaser being a rebel or not,—Held that the Government may, like any other seller, impose any condition it pleases in reference to the property which it offers for sale, prior to sale, but is not at liberty subsequently to the sale to disaffirm or annul it on a ground not only novel but directly at variance with the terms on which it offered the property for sale. Seva Lall v. Sheikh Mahomed, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 160.

A. sold land to B. and continued in possession as B.'s tenant. More than two years after the sale A. and B. agreed that A. should have the right to re-purchase within a fixed time, but that such right should be forfeited if the conditions of the lease were not kept. The clause of forfeiture was so vaguely worded as to have the appearance of a mere threat. At the date of the agreement, A. was in arrear with his rent. Held that his right to re-purchase was not forfeited by his having incurred further arrears.

A party selling land may refuse to give delivery until the consideration is paid; but having given delivery, he has no right to retake possession and pay himself the purchase-money out of the usufruct. Prem Soondery Dossia v. Grish Chunder Bhuttacharjee and others, 10 W. R., 194.

Although ordinarily in a transaction of sale, it may be reasonable to suppose that the seller does not intend to pass the property to the purchaser, until the purchase-money has been paid or secured, it is not an absolute rule of law that the non-receipt of the consideration-money in full entitles a vendor to make void a sale which is otherwise complete. The intention of the parties from their acts should be ascertained; and when a deed is executed and delivered to the purchaser, a subsequent default by the purchaser in the due payment of purchase-money would not, in the absence of fraud, make void the sale, or give any other right to vendor than a right to sue for the money.

Further, if it be proved that the vendor intended to retain possession until full payment, the Court may pass a decree establishing the purchaser's right subject to execution or payment of consideration. Mohun Singh v. Mussanmut Shib Koonwar, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 85.

2.—Rights of Purchasers.

A bond-fide purchaser is entitled to refund of purchase-money in a case where some dispute having arisen as to the purchase, the matter was referred to arbitration; and it was held that the vendor had no authority to sell. The principle of caveat emptor does not apply to such a case. Kishen Mohun Saha v. Ram Chunder Dey, 3 W. R., 28.

In the absence of any reservation or restriction, the purchaser of a fraction of a share of an estate acquires a right either to cultivate a proportionate share of the lands cultivated by his vendors on the same conditions as to favourable rents as those under which they, as proprietors, cultivated it, or to claim his share of the rents of these lands just as he would from any ryot of the estate, but without any other sum as mesne profits. Chytun Singh v. Kayessur Koonwar, 5 W. R., 117.

Under a decree in a suit on a bond against the widow of the deceased obligor, property to which her son, of whom she was guardian, was entitled as heir, was sold. In the advertisement of the sale the property was described as that of the widow, and the interest to be sold was described as that... of the debtor. Held that the purchaser at the sale acquired the property of the deceased debtor in the estate, and had a good title against the heir. Isham Chunder Mitter v. Buksh Ali Soudagar, Marsh., 694.

A bond-fide purchaser should not be deprived of the benefit of an honest purchase, even though the sale to his vendors was fraudulent, if he had no notice of the fraud. Sheikh Golam Ahea v. Digmundur Singh, W. R., 1861, 225.

A purchaser under a conditional sale takes the property, with all bond-fide incumbrances created by his vendor previous to the sale. Raj Mohun Deb v. Nund Lall Dey, 7 W. R., 363.

A, having two daughters, B. and C., granted a putnee talook of certain lands in their zemindary to them in their infancy, and transacted the business connected therewith as manager down to the time of his death. After his death, B. sold her interest to her sister C., and C. sold the putnee talook to D. The heirs of A. brought a suit against D. for the lands. Held that the lower Court might, upon these facts, infer that the grant of the putnee talook by A. to his daughters was by way of provision for them, and that it was not a case in which the daughters held namee for the father. Secondly, that even if it were so, D. acquiring by a bond-fide purchase and without notice had a good title against the heirs of A., since they claimed through the person by whose act the apparent ownership was vested in his vendor. Obhoy Churn Mookerjee v. Punchanun Bose, Marsh., 564.

A party purchasing with notice that his vendor's title is contested, must take his chance if that title turns out invalid. Bhikoo Sahoo v. Teik Ali Khan, 9 W. R., 86.

The plaintiff agreed to purchase land and paid down the purchase-money, taking from the vendor an agreement that if he did not register the conveyance, he would return the purchase-money. The plaintiff entered into possession; but failing to register the conveyance, he sued to recover back his purchase-money. Held that he was entitled to a refund of the purchase-money. The purchaser who had obtained possession might or might not, according to the particular circumstances of the case, be liable to pay the vendor a reasonable amount for the occupation of the land; but when no set-off is pleaded, the vendor could only claim such amount by a separate action. Court of Wards v. Nitta Kali Deb, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 353; 12 W. R., 287.

Held that the plaintiff had no right to sue for the enforcement of the promise made in favour of the person from whom she bought, who did not convey to her the right to sue upon or otherwise enforce it. Mussamut Kishore v. Joy Kishore Doss and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 46.

The purchaser at a sale under a decree recovered in a suit by a mortgagee, is not bound by leases made by the mortgagor, after the date of the decree, unless he has recognized the lessees as his tenants, as, for instance, by receiving rent.

When a party is declared entitled to a decree for mesne profits, he is entitled not only to recover as these profits such sums as may have been collected and appropriated by others in wrongful possession, but also such sums as he would have collected had he been in possession, and which he has been prevented from collecting by having been kept wrongfully out of possession.

If the plaintiff in a suit for mesne profits claims only rents and profits collected and received by the defendant, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover in respect of rents not received, but which by the wrongful disposition he has been prevented from collecting; but if there is an appropriate allegation, he will be entitled to recover in respect of such rents.

In a suit for recovery of the possession of land in which the plaintiff recovers a decree, it is no ground for exempting a defendant from costs that he did not himself occupy any part of the land if he has denied the plaintiff's title in the suit, or was instrumental as the agent of others in disposing of the plaintiff. Mussumut Koormoontissa Begum and others v. Hunuman Doss, Marsh., 122.

Where land was sold by A. at a fraudulent sale to his vendors was fraudulent, if he had no notice of the fraud. Sheikh Golam Ahea v. Dig. and others v. Hunuman Doss, Marsh., 122.

In suits arising out of the default on both sides to complete a contract for the purchase and sale of land in the mofussil, the Court should proceed as a Court of Equity, and should look to the acts and conduct of the parties subsequent to the making of the contract, as well as the language of the contract itself; and where the contract has been partially performed and the purchaser put into possession of a portion of the land and allowed by the vendor so to continue long after the period fixed for completion of the contract has elapsed, further time should be given by the Court for the performance of the contract in specie (Tucker, J., dissentiente). The Court should not by its decree make for the parties a different contract from that which they themselves had entered into. Balavatalad Sanka v. Gabaji B. Kalkaru, 2 Bom. Rep., 175.

Held that the mere fact that the sale to the plaintiff was instigated by some discharged mortgagee does not of necessity make void the plaintiff's right as purchaser, if it be found that the vendor to the plaintiff had some right or interest in the property by inheritance, and transferred it for valuable consideration, with the intention that it should take effect as a transfer of his rights as heir.

Held further, that the mere circumstance of the existence of a debt due from all the co-sharers is by no means of itself enough to confer authority on some of several co-sharers to dispose of the other share. Mahomed Fais Ali Khan v. Gunga Ram and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 89.

principles of justice, equity, and good conscience, as to whether the sale ought to be set aside or not. Abool Hye and others v. Nawab Raj and others, 9 W. R., 196.

Where a plaintiff sued on the alleged purchase by him of the rights and interests of certain parties in an indigo concern, it was held that the rents collected and appropriated, and the indigo manufactured and taken away before the date of the purchase, could not form part of the stores and assets sold to the plaintiff, unless the sale of the assets, &c., had been as from some date prior to the date of purchase. Chunder Coomar Roy v. C. F. Wilkinson and others, 10 W. R., 311.

Property purchased in execution of a decree is not subject to any lien in favour of a person claiming under a bond and deposit of a hibbanamah pledged as security for a loan. Syed Wooseer Alleet Hosseem Chowdhry v. Mussamut Luckee Beebee, 1 W. R., 143.

Section 2, Act I of 1845, does not protect purchasers in the name of third parties from the operation of decrees against the persons beneficially entitled to the purchased property. Ameeroonissa Beevee v. Binode Ram Sein, 2 W. R., 29.

Where property hypothecated for a debt is sold in execution of a money decree passed under the bond hypothecating, if without any additional order in the decree for enforcing the lien on the property, and the holder of a subsequent similar bond, who has obtained an order on his decree directing the sale of the property, seeks to enforce his lien upon the property so purchased, the purchaser is entitled to go on the previous lien, as he not only stands in the shoes of the debtor, but has purchased all rights in the property if hypothecated for a debt when his hypothecation was made, and has thus also acquired the rights of the decree-holder to satisfy whose due the property was sold when this purchaser purchased. Sheo Prason Singh v. Brojo Sahoo, 7 W. R., 232.

Held that non-payment of the consideration-money can be pleaded by the seller, and enquired into by the Court, the admission of the seller at the time of registration before the Registrar being no conclusive proof of payment of the consideration-money, with reference to the practice which obtains of preparing the sale-deed and register it before payment. Under the ordinary rule of law, purchaser has a right to sue for possession when a portion of the consideration-money has been paid, unless the contrary be shown to be the intention of the parties, and the seller has a right to sue for the balance of price. Goor Pershad v. Nunda Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 160.

Where the damages claimed in a suit exceeded Rs. 500, and the Court gave the plaintiff less than Rs. 500 damages,—Held that the right of appeal is not taken away by Act XXIII of 1861, Section 7. Where A. conveys to B. an interest in land under a description as to title which turns out to be erroneous, a suit by B. against A. for diminution of rent on the ground that the erroneous description ought to be brought in the Revenue Court. In the absence of fraud or express warranty of title in a sale of land, the vendee cannot recover from the vendor the expenses incurred in defending a suit for possession brought against him by a third party having a better title. Rajah Norgin money Singh Deo v. Gordon, Stuart, and Co., 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 356; 6 W. R., 152.

If a purchase is made of property in litigation while such litigation is actually going on, the purchaser is affected in the same manner as if he had notice of the dispute, though in point of fact he had no express notice or actual knowledge of the circumstances. Ameeroonissa Khatoon v. Kumola Kant Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 117.

A party purchasing what he knows to be the right and title of some one else than his vendor, cannot claim the character of an innocent purchaser, and is not entitled to compensation for improvements to the property so purchased by him. Syua Singh v. Keala Bible, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 169.

Where a party has purchased joint family property under circumstances which prove that he must have had notice of its having been dedicated to religious purposes, and does not show that he made enquiries as to his grounds for supposing that the trust was legally at an end, he cannot exonerate the property from the trust attached to it. Juguwtmoheezeb Dossar v. Sookhemoney Dassree, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

The purchaser was held entitled to recover the amount paid by him on account of previous mortgages, when, in making these payments, he merely acted for the debtor who had borrowed the money from him, and what he did was to see that that money so borrowed was properly applied in clearing off the debts which rendered his own purchase unsafe, and of the existence of which he was at that time cognizant. Where the whole property was sold, and the purchasers agreed among themselves what shares they were to take in the property, the Court was unable, because of the apparent misconduct of one of the purchasers, who, after having acted as pleader for the other party, had now become one of the purchasers of the property which he knew had been previously sold to his clients, to limit the extent of that sale, or to declare that the pleader was not entitled with the other purchasers to the whole sixteen annas. Syua Wajee Hossein v. Hafiz Ahmed Rezath, 17 S. W. R., C. R. 480.

The plaintiff purchased an estate from a Hindu widow in possession, and after his purchase he paid a debt, for which the property sold had been mortgaged by the late husband of his vendor. Subsequently the daughter of the vendor claimed the property as heir of her father, and recovered possession of it from the purchaser by suit. The purchaser now sued the heir for a refund of the amount of the mortgage-debt paid by him. Held, that the purchaser was entitled to recover. Poran Misra v. Harisaran Misra, 8 B. L. F., Ap. 35.

Section 26 of Act I of 1845, which enables auction-purchasers at sales for arrears of revenue to eject tenants in the province of Benares, is by Section 1 of Act X of 1859, made subject to the
The purchaser of property actually in litigation pendente lite, need not be made a party to the suit. The title acquired by the purchaser is subservient or subject to the rights of the parties in litigation.

Where a purchaser, by the institution of a suit for the reversal of the sale, had full notice of the defect of his title, the sale having been reversed in that suit, he was held liable for mesne profits.

3.—LIABILITY OF PURCHASERS.

Where a man buys in the face of hostile claims, whether he honestly thinks he has reason to disbelieve them or not, he cannot afterwards set himself up as an innocent purchaser without notice. Namboodiripad vi. Tinker Ram, 8 W. R., 399.

When personal property is sold by one co-sharer without the other's authority, the purchaser may be sued for the price of the share of the non-consenting party. Rahaman v. Kewl, 8 W. R., 37.

A purchaser of immovable property in the name of B, and allowed B. to occupy and retain possession of the property. B. mortgaged the property to C. for a valuable consideration. Held that A. and those claiming through him were stopped from asserting as against C., his or their title to the property, and that the mortgage was valid. Kallydass v. Chunder Paul, Marsh., 569.

A party who purchases the rights of one of a number of co-sharers comes into all arrangements made in respect to the collections; any express consent by him is not necessary for the payment of his share of the rent to any one else. Ram Nath Singh v. Gondee Singh, 10 W. R., 441.

The purchaser of property actually in litigation, pendente lite, need not be made a party to the suit. The title acquired by the purchaser is subservient or subject to the rights of the parties in litigation.

Where a purchaser, by the institution of a suit for the reversal of the sale, had full notice of the defect of his title, the sale having been reversed in that suit, he was held liable for mesne profits.

Where a purchaser of immovable property deals with a person having a qualified power of dealing with that property, it lies upon the purchaser to give some reasonable account of the need which actually existed, or was alleged to exist for the sale.

A ganteedee having assigned over his gantee tenure to A., who agreed to pay to the zemindar not only the gantee rent reserved, but also Rs. 100 a year until a debt due from this ganteedee to the zemindar was paid off, Held that when the assignee having mortgaged his tenure, it was subsequently sold by the mortgagee, the purchaser was liable to pay the Rs. 100 annually as well as the original gantee rent reserved. Mokima Chunder Ghose v. Rajah Burodakant Roy, 2 W. R., 121.

A purchaser of the equity of redemption, who had obtained a decree against his vendor's mortgagee for possession in satisfaction of the debt, was held to be bound to such mortgagee alone, and not to be bound to see whether the mortgagee had made any subsequent transfer of his interests or effected any other mortgage. Makoo Chowdhurain v. Ram Duksh Sahoo, 11 W. R., 53.

In a suit by a purchaser of immovable property to recover a deposit, paid by him on account of the purchase-money to the auctioneer, the vendor having refused to convey to the purchaser, save by a deed, which should describe the premises by reference to another deed, not shown to the purchaser at the auction, and of the contents of which he had not then any notice, Held (1) that the purchaser was not bound to have tendered a conveyance in consideration of the money having been deposited with the auctioneer as a stakeholder, and being in his hands the action to recover it lay against the auctioneer and not against the vendor. Estheji Adamji v Bhimji Purshotam, 4 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 125.

If the purchaser of an estate for value takes with notice, actual or constructive, of a trust, he is bound by such trust to the same interest and in the same manner as the person from whom he purchased.

A person purchasing an estate where there is a tenant in possession is bound to enquire into the title of such tenant, and if he neglects to do so he takes subject to such rights as the tenant may have.

The equities are the same where there is a person in possession as the object of a charitable trust and under the trust. Mancharji Sorabji Chuta v Kongseo et al., 6 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 59.

purchase-money on the defendant registering the deed. It was found that no consideration was paid, and that the deed was retained in the seller's possession. Before declaring the equities, the case was remanded for an issue and finding as to the intention of the parties respecting the time of payment, and whether (as alleged by the defendant), in consequence of non-payment by the plaintiff, the defendant was jeopardized as to his other property and had to sell at a loss. Gourahoy Singh v. Sheikh Futteh Ali, 1 W. R., 372.

A suit based on a deed of sale by a father is materially affected by his son accepting a deed substituting another agreement and transaction in lieu of his father's deed of sale. Rajah Saheb Perked Sin v. Boodho Singh, 3 W. R., 228.

The mere non-recital in a deed of sale by a mother during her son's minority of the legal necessity for the sale does not vitiate the deed. The necessity may be proved by other evidence. Womach Chunder Sticar v. Degumbarre Dossee, 3 W. R., 154.

A deed of sale should not be deemed authentic merely from the fact of registration and production in other cases. Act XIX of 1843 contains independent proof of the authenticity of the deed. Shikhedur Lushkure v. Kala Chand Lushkure, 3 W. R., 216.

A Court is not bound to consider a deed of sale to be a deed of absolute sale, and not take into consideration the acts and conduct of the parties in their own view and dealing in regard to the transaction. Thus, where the parties treat a transaction as a deed of conditional sale, the Court must not necessarily hold it to be a sale. Rakhesur Dossee v. Wooma Churn Dossee, 5 W. R., 104.

The non-delivery of a registered deed of sale to the purchaser until after the creation of a fresh bond in favour of a third party will not render the deed inoperative, or subject the purchaser to fresh liens not within his knowledge. Maharajah Mohanur Buksh Singh v. Lalla Sonnar Chand, 5 W. R., 109.

A deed of sale, though not strictly of a complete and final character, yet if genuine and duly attested, may be sufficient to bind the property and to give the purchaser the right to demand a specific performance of the contract and the execution of such further assurances as might be deemed necessary to invest him with a complete title to the property. Such a deed would necessarily prevail over any intermediate attachment of the property for debts due from the original proprietor. Lalla Chonetal Nagindas v. Sawaiuchund Namadas, 5 W. R., P. C., 111.

Where a mooktearnamah was duly executed by A, authorizing B, to sign her name to a deed of sale, notwithstanding that the mooktearnamah was not verified until after A's death, the sale under that deed made after A's death was held to be valid as regards the right of a purchaser to recover the purchase-money. Issur Chunder Chowdury v. Sheikh Amernoodleen Ahmed, 6 W. R., 174; Kanhya Lali and others v. Mahadeo Singh and others, 6 W. R., 293.

In a case where a purchaser is a near relative of a debtor, it is not sufficient to decide that the deed of sale is proved to have been executed. Proof of the bona fides of the transaction is also necessary. Feitlips Roy and others v. Sheikh Kunurooddien, 6 W. R., 310.

In a suit for possession under a bill of sale, the defendant pleaded that a large portion of the purchase-money still remained unpaid. Held that the mere fact of a decree having been subsequently passed in another suit, could not affect the validity of the defence relied upon in this case. Doobha Thakoor v. Ram Lall Sahee and others, 8 W. R., 218.

When a bill of sale, though signed and registered, has not been delivered, and no part of the purchase-money has been paid, the vendor cannot be compelled to complete the transfer. Lalla Indurjeet Lali v. Musamut Jumooana, 5 W. R., 248.

A bill of sale, though duly executed, was not delivered to the purchaser, but was deposited with a third party, to be held by him until the purchaser should perform certain acts; the performance of which was the consideration for the sale. The purchaser subsequently by a trick got possession of the bill of sale before he had performed all the acts in question. Held that, under such circumstances, no effect could be given to the bill of sale as against the vendor, so that a suit for possession of the lands covered by it would not lie. Raj Chunder Chowdury v. Raj Nath Chowdury, W. R., 1864, 222.

A deed of sale executed in 1201 (1794) was subject to the condition that if the vendors, "from the year 1202 to the year 1203, should repay the whole of the consideration-money, they should receive back the deed of sale, which shall then become null and void; and if within the said period they fail to pay the said consideration-money, this conditional sale shall become absolute, and be considered irrevo cable." Held that Regulation XV of 1793 did not operate to prevent the assignment becoming absolute after the expiration of the time limited for re-payment of the consideration, and that Regulation XVII of 1806 had not a retrospective effect, and therefore did not apply; and that even if the entire amount of the purchase-money were satisfied out of the proceeds of the estate before the time for the conditional sale becoming absolute, the vendees would acquire a perfect title. Buldeo Singh v. Dhakrun Singh and others, Marsh., 632.

A sale might be complete, and it still might be a condition of the contract that the purchase-money was to be paid afterwards, and the deed in evidence of the contract may not be completed. The bare fact of the deed not being registered would not annul a sale if, by mutual agreement, a sale had already been made. Kally Churn Giree Gossain v. Lalla Madun Kishore and others, 7 W. R., 317.

Mere inaccuracy of language or misdescription will not vitiate a sale certificate. The intention of the parties must be looked to. Sheik Mula Buksh v. Huruck Lall and others, 7 W. R., 245.

A deed professing to be a will, but making a gift of property during the testator's life-time, is held to be a deed of absolute gift. Hurrro Soodurree Dossee v. Chunder Mohinee Dossee, 3 W. R., 200.

A deed of sale executed by judgment-debtors according to an agreement with a decree-holder, need not be set aside because of the failure of the judgment-debtor to register the decree-holder’s name. Bhooman Mundar v. Badree Singh, 1 W. R., Mis., 25.

Where several properties are comprised in one deed of sale, the purchaser runs the risk of having his title in all the properties shaken should the purchaser as to one of them be called in question in a regular suit. Raisona Bibee v. Kunee Mah and others, 8 W. R., 453.

An alteration made in a deed, without the consent of the parties who originally executed the deed, and with the fraudulent view of benefiting him who propounds it, vitiates the deed only. The materiality or otherwise of the alteration does not affect this rule of law. Kallee Coomar Roy v. Gunga Naraive Dut Roy and others, 10 W. R., 250.

A deed of sale is complete on the day when it is signed and attested by the Cazee, and consideration is paid for it. Delay in the delivery of the deed does not invalidate it. Bhikun Singh v. Mussamat Jumela Koonwar, W. R., 1864, 62.

In construing deeds, where their terms are doubtful, it should be ascertained in what manner the terms of the deed were understood and acted upon by the parties during the years immediately succeeding the grant.

The suit was properly entertained in the Revenue Court, as the plaintiff’s position was not that of a mere non-proprietary tenant. Shunker Lall and others v. Poorun Mull and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 150.

A sued B. in 1841 to recover possession of certain tracts of land in Gujrat. B. produced a deed purporting to be a conveyance by way of mortgage by A.’s ancestors of their 6-16ths share in villages to B.’s ancestors. A. at first denied the genuineness of the deed, but, the suit of 1841 having been withdrawn by consent with a view to arbitration, took no steps to have the question decided until the deed was again produced (from the records of the Court, where it remained meanwhile) in the present suit brought in 1859 by A. against B. to recover the same villages.

Held, in the absence of evidence to show that the defendants had by their conduct during the interval admitted that the deed was not genuine, or that they did not intend to rely upon it, so as to mislead the plaintiffs, that the time which elapsed must be taken into account, and that they ought not to be required to prove the deed in the same way as they might have been when it was first produced and relied upon by them.

Held also, that the High Court sitting in special appeal will not examine the evidence with a view to determine whether such a document be genuine or not; nor will it consider the question whether there is any evidence to connect the plaintiffs with the parties to the deed, when the suit appears to have been conducted in the Courts below as if this was admitted. Denaji Boyaji et al. v. Gadadhbai Godebhat et al., 2 Bom. Rep., 28.

Whatever may be the real intention amongst themselves of some of the members of a Hindu joint family in executing a deed of partition, purchasers from them have an undoubted right to bind them, by the execution of the partition and their public acts attending it, to the fulfilment of those obligations which such public acts cast upon them. Srimati Sukhimani Dusi v. Mahendru Nauth Dutt, 4 B. L. R., P. C., 16; 13 S. W. R., P. C., 14.

Where the bona fides of a conveyance is called into question, it is not sufficient for the claimant under such conveyance to give formal proof of the transactions involved, amounting simply to what might be expected if the transfer were benevolently Bebee Zakrah v. Bhujwan Dass, 16 S. W. R., C., 211.

Where a dispute in a Hindu family as to legitimacy and the right to succession resulted in a family arrangement as to the mode in which the estate was to be held by the sons,—Held that such a document ought not to be construed narrowly by a strict interpretation of the literal meaning of the words, but that the object and general spirit are the best keys to the interpretation.

Where a family arrangement, if construed strictly would have given a talook in the event of the death of a younger son to such of the lawful widows as should have male issue,—Held that, as such a disposition would contravene the ordinary rules of devolution of Hindu property, and be contrary to the usages of Hindus, and as there was no mention of any change of intention as to the proprietary right, a construction which would postpone male issue to their mothers was inadmissible. Sr. Gajaputhi Rudhika Pattu Mahudebi Guree v. Sr. Gajaputhi Huri Krishna Debi Guree, 6 B. L. R., 202, and 14 S. W. R., P. C., 33.

When several persons join in a conveyance and convey "the whole and entire property absolutely, they must be taken to have exercised every power which they possess, and to have parted with their whole interest, whether in possession or expectation Mohunt Kishen Geer v. Busgut Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 379.

A document obtained by the chief male member of a family from a purdah woman should receive a strict construction. Sookyabaye Ammul v. Latchm Ammul, 13 S. W. R., P. C., 3.

This case turned upon the construction of an agreement by which (according to appellant’s contention) the mortgagee was entitled to the payment of the principal and interest on the debt, but the payments of interest carried no interest thereon. The Privy Council, according to their construction of the agreement, were of opinion that the parties intended that the interest might be set off from time to time against the rents and profits and that the mortgagee was only to account to the mortgagee for any rents and profits and interest on the same which he might have received over and above the interest due to him upon the debt; and held that Section 7, Regulation XV of 1793, did not apply to transactions of this kind. Rudhabenoa Misser v. Kripa Moyee Debia, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 262.

A zamindar on giving up a four-anna share which he had theretofore held, but had mortgagee stipulated for the retention of the holding in suit, held that the retention of the holding was intended not only for the benefit of the proprietor himself and to inure during his life only, but also for the benefit of his heirs.

The absence of words of inheritance in a deed of grant of land is not of itself conclusive to show that such grant was not intended to be in perpetuity, but the hereditary character of the tenure may be inferred from evidence of long and uninterrupted enjoyment, and of the descent of the tenure from father to son. Gyan Singh v. Kooer Pectum Singh, 1, 6 N. W. R., 73.

5.—COVENANTS.

The members of a Hindu family, jointly and severally interested in a certain house and premises, covenanted for themselves, their heirs, and executors, that the said house and premises should never be partitioned, except by the unanimous consent of the contracting parties. Held by the lower Court, and confirmed on appeal, that where covenants are dependent or independent, commented upon. John Young v. Mongalapilly Ramaiya, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 125.

Where defendants sub-rented an abkari farm for one year, from 31st July, 1864, under a muchalka, by which the defendants covenanted to pay monthly instalments of rent to plaintiff, and plaintiff covenanted to furnish defendants with the accounts of the farm from the month of July, 1864, during which period the management was in the hands of plaintiff's agent, in action by plaintiff for rent due to him, and the value of arrears supplied by him,—Held that the non-performance by the plaintiff of the covenant to furnish accounts was not sufficient to justify the entire dismissal of his suit against the defendants. G. Ramaiya v. G. Narayanansamy, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 209.

A received from B. the use of his ground rent-free, which he thus acknowledged in writing:—

"Building a house thereon, I shall enjoy so long as I and my kinsmen live therein. I shall have no right to sell the ground to another." A house was built on the site and inhabited by A. and his heirs for several years, until it was destroyed by fire, when the heirs commenced to build a new house upon a portion of the ground, having leased another portion of it for building upon, and having mortgaged the whole of it.

Held that the heir of B. was entitled to recover possession of the ground, as the conditions of the grant had not been observed, and that the word "sell" must be construed as prohibiting alienation of any kind. Râdhâkâr v. Nârîyanbhat, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C., 63.

In the case of covenants in restraint of trade, the deed of covenant must show a good consideration. The Courts will not enter into the question of the adequacy of the consideration. A covenant giving appallatt the exclusive right to convey passengers to and fro on the road from Ootacamund and Metapollium, is not a contract in hoiar restraint of trade, and therefore is one which the law will enforce. Achterlong v. Bill, 4 Mad. Rep., 77.

The plaintiff sued to recover a sum of money with interest on a mortgage deed, which contained the following clause:—If, by sale of the above land, the money receivable by you be not satisfied with charges, then you will realize the proper amount by selling my other landed properties, to which I will make no objection or excuse." The plaintiff asked for a simple money decree. The defendant had other landed property besides the property mortgaged. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a simple money decree, available against his movable property only. Jogesmar Dutti v. Nitaichund Chuckerbutty, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 48.

6.—CAVEAT EMPTOR.

Principle of caveat emptor not applicable to a case in which a bonus has been paid for a putnee in existence. Krisioliot Motro v. Nobbo Coomar Roy, 5 W. R., 49.

T. sold a mouzah, of which he was owner, to Z. At the time of sale, the mouzah was under attachment in execution of a decree obtained against T. by R. Z. paid the amount of that decree to prevent the property which she had purchased being sold in execution. Z. was under no obligation otherwise to pay the amount of the decree.

Held that Z. was entitled to recover against T. the amount so paid. Musti Zahuran v. W. Tayler and another, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 87.

Where a party purchases an estate sold in execution after notice that parties other than the judgment-debtor claim rights and interests in the property, the rule of caveat emptor applies. Shahooboodeen Chowdhry v. Ramgutty Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 556.

Plaintiff in 1862 purchased a house of first defendant, which was already hypothecated to second defendant. In 1873 second defendant sued first defendant in the Small Cause Court for the debt on account of which the hypothecation had been made, and got a judgment. He then had the house attached and put up to auction, bought the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in the premises, and entered and continued in possession. Plaintiff claimed in the present suit to recover possession in right of his purchase in 1862.

Held that, as first defendant had no interest whatsoever in the property at the date of the purchase, second defendant's purchase was not a purchase from the debtor in part satisfaction of his debt. Second defendant's claim still existed, and he could pursue his remedy, either against the person or the property; and that as he was in possession, he had a right to demand the liquidation of the debt due to him before submitting to be turned out.

Held also that the obligation of the first defendant gave the second defendant a two-fold remedy: one against the person, and the other against the thing. Moni Reddi v. Venkata Reddi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 241.

7.—REGISTRATION.

(a) Miscellaneous.

The owner of a share in a talook granted a se-patni pottah thereof to the plaintiff, but before registration granted a se-patni to the Bengal Coal Company. In a suit against the owner and the Company for possession of the se-patni talook, for damages caused by the refusal to register, and also for compelling registration of the se-patni pottah,— Held that three distinct causes of action were improperly joined; that the suit was not maintainable in a Civil Court, as the plaintiff's title rested upon an unregistered deed; that there was no cause of action as against the Company to enforce registration of the pottah; and that a distinct stipulation is not necessary to bind a person to cause registration of a deed required by law to be registered, but he virtually agreed to do it by a registered bond to be sold, which by the law in force requires registration. Pruthram Haara v. T. M. Robinson, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 49; 11 W. R., 398.

A certificate of registration is evidence that a bond was registered, but not that it was executed. Kripa Nath Tullapattur v. Bhaskraye Moollah, 6 W. R., 105.

A suit does not lie to compel registration of a lease executed when there was no law in force by which registration was necessary to give effect to such lease. Held that when there has been no express covenant to register. Ashuna Begum and others v. Kheerum Singh and others, 10 W. R., 360.

All instruments of gift of immovable property must be registered, whatever be the value of the property. Putona Kolita and others v. Mutia Kolita, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 46; 11 W. R., 334.

In execution of a money-decree, the decree-holder caused the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in a certain property which had been mortgaged to him by a registered bond to be sold, which without notice of the existence of such lien. He afterwards obtained a decree upon the bond, and sold it to the defendants, who caused the same property to be attached. The purchaser intervened under Section 246, but without success. On suit by the purchaser to establish his absolute right,— Held that, as the defendants' vendor had suppressed the fact of the charge, and thereby induced the plaintiff to purchase as the absolute property of the judgment-debtor, he is to resume possession of the property, if it be proved to the satisfaction of the Court, that there was no reason why plaintiff should not be permitted to show that non-registration is owing, not to any fault of his own, but to the fraudulent conduct of his adversaries. Meer Helalooodeen v. Chowdhry Abdool Sattar, 9 W. R., 351.

A person cannot claim, under an unregistered prior verbal contract, to the detriment of a party holding bond seised, under a subsequent registered deed. Kylath Chunder Chatterjee v. Gopal Chunder Chatterjee, 1 W. R., 78.

The act of registration after a proclamation under Section 20, Regulation XXXVII of 1793, amounts to a public, open, and notorious assertion of title, and the omission to register, unless with good ground, is the proof of the ill health of the claimant, or absence in a distant country, or ignorance, affords an equally strong presumption of the non-existence of any title on the other. Meer Usudoollah v. Bebee Imamun, 5 W. R., P. C., 26.

The necessity for registration must be determined by the value of the consideration stated in the deed. Rohinee Debia v. Shib Chunder Chatterjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 558.

Where a kubuleut for one year contains a provision extending its term to more than that period, it cannot be admitted in evidence without registration. Kisto Kalee Munshee v. Agemma Behu, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 170.

The defendant deposited certain title-deeds with the plaintiff as security for money due on a bond executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff. The deeds were sent with the following letter from the defendant to the plaintiff's attorney:—"I have the pleasure of handing to you the title-deeds of a house, 36, Lower Circular Road, as a collateral security for the Rs. 20,000 which falls due this day. Please let me hear from you as to the instrument of transfer, if any, at my expense."

In a suit for an account of what was due to the plaintiff on the security of the deeds,—Held, that the letter needed registration, as being a document which created an interest in land, and therefore being unregistered was inadmissible in evidence. Dwarkanath Mitter v. S. M. Sarut Kumari Dasi, 7 B. L. R., 55.

An order of a Civil Court directing the registration of an instrument of which registration has been refused, and as to which the person complaining of non-registration has presented no appeal to the registering officer under Section 83 of the Registration Act, nor made any application to the District Judge under Section 84 of that Act, would be illegal, as directing a public servant to do that which, by the express language of the Registration Act, he is prohibited from doing; and in so far as a person by suit seeks to obtain the registration of such an instrument, the suit will be dismissed. Nor can the person complaining of non-registration obtain a declaration that the unregistered instrument creates a valid charge upon the immovable property therein hypothecated. But he may obtain adequate relief by a properly-framed suit. Sarpae Singh v. Mussumut Chunder, 2 N. W. R., 166.

In a case where it is made to appear that the cause of suit arises upon a document which by law requires registration, but has not in fact been registered, the plaintiff cannot be permitted to establish a claim independently of the document, the existence of which is shown. Ramphershad v. Mussamut Ranee Mewa Kooper, 2 N. W. R., 12.

Held that a bhadekhat is an agreement between a lessee and a lessor in the nature of a counterpart of a lease, and that an instrument of this character must, for the purposes of the Registration Act, be treated as a lease.

Held also that a provision in the bhadekhat, that the lessee might after six months remain in occupation on a monthly rent, till the lessor called upon him to vacate, did not extend the term for which the lease was granted, as to the conclusion of that term the lessee would be only a monthly tenant of the lessor. Moro Vitheel v. Tukdrasir Mulkuri, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 92.

The mere circumstance of a bond not registered is not sufficient by itself to establish the evidence if it is generally satisfactory in proof of the validity of the bond. Baboo Gonga Persaud v. Mouwje Lall, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 30.

By a bond specially registered under Act XVI of 1864, the obligor stipulated to pay the entire amount secured thereby, with interest at the rate therein mentioned, on a day therein mentioned. There was a further stipulation that, on default of payment, the bond was to be enforced as a decree. On failure of payment, the obligee applied for execution under Section 53, Act XX of 1866, but the Subordinate Judge ordered the payment to be made by instalments. On an application to the High Court under Section 15 of the Charter Act,—Held, that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to pass a decree on the bond altering or varying its terms. Section 194, Act VIII of 1859, did not apply. Khettra Mohun Baboo v. Rashbehari Baboo, 5 B. L. R., 167; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 252.

Whether an action will lie against the maker of an instrument requiring registration to render it valid, for a refusal to get such instrument registered, depends upon the question whether there is a contract, express or implied, on the part of the maker to register it. Such a contract is not to be implied in every case. Girdhar Dalput v. Haribhdi Narayan, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 3.

Where a party borrowing money gave the lender an ekrar agreeing to execute a conveyance of certain landed property,—Held that the instrument was in substance an agreement the registration of which was optional, and which might be given in evidence in a suit for specific performance of the agreement to execute the conveyance for which it stipulates. Asgur Ali Shikdar v. Methoora Nath Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 354.

An order by an officer officiating for a Sub-Registrar refusing to register a document tendered to him for registration, is appealable to the Registrar-General. Sarkies v. Sungram Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 194.

A dowl-durkast, being only a preliminary to a lease, does not require registration. Bibee Mehroonissa v. Abdool Gunna, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 509.

An action lies in a Small Cause Court for the recovery of costs incurred by the plaintiff in a suit to compel registration of a document. Chenguwa Kidy Modali v. Thungwuchi Amndil, 6 Mad. Rep., 192.

Registration can give no efficacy to a fraudulent and collusive deed. The remedy given by the Registration Act by appeal, where a registry officer refuses to register, does not affect the remedy by suit to compel the vendor to do all that is legally requisite to complete the sale, including the registration of the deed. Ramphul Lall v. Chunbee Pershad, 1 N. W. R., Par. 12, p. 204.

The plaintiffs by letter dated October, 1864 (before Act XVI of 1864 came into force), ordered from the defendants twenty-one bales of cotton at so much per bale, and in the said letter the defendants said, "We will send the hoondee in another letter." Held, in a suit for balance of account in respect of the cotton sold, that such a letter was a written contract within the meaning of Clause 10, Section 1 of Act XIV of 1859, and that it was not an obligation for the payment of money within the meaning of Regulation XX of 1812, and being so, was incapable of registration. Held further, that the limitation applicable to such a case is six years, under Clause 16, Section 1, of Act XIV of 1859. Chunder Sein v. Gujadhur Lall, 1, N. W. R., Par. 8, p. 148.

(b) Priorities.

Where, under the circumstances, it appeared that a sale of the share for which plaintiffs held a conditional sale deed had substantially taken place, in satisfaction of two decrees obtained on two bonds, one unregistered and the other registered, and of a prior date to that of the plaintiffs' mortgage deed,

-Held that the share was not liable to alien created by a sale of the share for which plaintiff held a conditional sale deed, the ordinary rule being that the prior date must take effect as against defendant. Umáaji Válád Manáji Palil Damale v. Prahlad Misserv. Udit Narain Singh, 1 B. L. R., 30.

Where a bond has been bond or, before a subsequent date, the former having been registered, and the latter not, it would be prima facie entitled to priority, and a defendant opposing it could not succeed without proof that he was a bond or, purchaser for value. Maharajah Mohessur Buksh Singh Bahadoor v. Bhiku Chowdhry, 1 Ind. Jur., 30.

The purchaser under a decree for sale in satisfaction of a registered mortgage, is entitled in priority to the purchaser under another decree for sale in satisfaction of another unregistered mortgage, although the latter mortgage be of an earlier date. Praklal Misser v. Udit Narain Singh, 1 B. L. R., 197; 10 W. R., 291.

A person cannot claim under an unregistered prior verbal contract to the detriment of a party holding bond or under a subsequent registered deed. Kyiilash Chunder Chatterjee v. Gopal Chunder Chatterjee, 1 W. R., 78.

The benefit of priority over an earlier unregistered deed of sale does not extend to a registered document, which, although in form a deed of sale, is in truth a fraudulent deed of gift. Nettro Gopal Chunderv. Dwarkanath Mullick, 1 W. R., 314.

-Held that a registered mortgagee, although without possession, is entitled to priority over a subsequent purchaser. Sunder Tagjivan v. Gopal Eshvan, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 68.

The rule giving a registered document preference over an unregistered one does not apply to deeds of different descriptions. Khettur Balsee v. Gou Harrée, W. R., 1864, 387.

The first part of Clause 1, Section 16, Regulator IX of 1827, is unrepealed, and therefore a purchase claiming under a deed of purchase duly registered is entitled to be preferred to a mortgagee claiming under a deed of mortgage executed before his purchase deed. Sunder Jajivan v. Gopal Eshvan, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 68.

A entered into an agreement with B. to convey to him a certain portion of land for a consideration of Rs. 98, of which Rs. 60 had been paid as 'james money. The agreement contained a proviso that on A.'s refusal to convey the property within the time mentioned in the agreement, this document should operate as a conveyance, and A. should forfeit his claim to the balance of the consideration. Where the expiry of the time mentioned in the agreement, A. sold by a registered deed, a portion of the property mentioned in the agreement, on suit by B. for possession of the property and for declaration that the agreement operated as a conveyance, -Held, that under Clause 1, Section 18, and Section 50 of Act XX of 1866, the subsequent registered conveyance had priority over the unregistered agreement. Shama Chunrn Negozi v. Nobin Chundi Chowdhree, 6 B. L. R., Ap. 1; and 15 S. W. R., C. R. 239.

As Act XIX of 1843 has been repealed, and the new Registration Act (VIII of 1871) contains a provision for the priority of registered deeds over any others, save in the cases of optional registration, the ordinary rule applies that the priority conveyed must prevail. Rachuri Venkubaiyamm v. Guduree Ramanna Pantulee, 6 Mad. Rep., 391.

In a suit by a purchaser of a howla tenure whic defendant was proceeding to sell under an ex-parte decree, which he had obtained upon a mortgage bond executed by plaintiff's vendor, -Held the plaintiff's registered purchase, though of a subsequent date, must take effect as against defendant's unregistered mortgage, which might have been registered. Ali Asim Khan v. Islam Khan, 14 W. R., C. R., 483.

In a suit for possession and ejectment founded upon a deed of sale, where plaintiff's conduct to the vendor was found to be fraudulent, it was held that the mere fact of the deed being registered gave him no priority over defendant's deed of sale, which was earlier though unregistered. Bikhdharee Singh v. Kanh Lall, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 24.

A lien created by verbal contract and deposit title-deeds of immoveable property in the island Bombay by a Hindu in favour of a Hindu u held.

Where such a lien was created before the 1st January, 1865, when the first general Registration Act (XVI of 1864) came into force, and a Gajuri document (unregistered) was subsequently (the 13th of June, 1865) executed by the giver the lien was set out its particulars, and acknowledged the benefit of the loan on account of the lien was given: it was held that the original oral contract of lien, being in itself a perfected transaction, was not merged in or invalidated by the subsequent document, and that, therefore, the fact of the latter not being registered did not affect the validity of the prior transaction. Section 48 of Act XX of 1866, which enacts that all instruments duly registered under that Act and relating to moveable or immovable property shall take effect against any oral agreement relating to the same property, does not apply to oral agreements completed before Act XVI of 1864 came into force.

-Held that a registered mortgagee, although with- out possession, is entitled to priority over a subse- cted the lien which set out its particulars, and acn the receipt of the loan on account of whi

The English equitable doctrine of notice, where there is a contest as to the priority of a deed registered under Act XVI of 1834, or Act XX of 1866, over an unregistered deed of a date prior to those Acts, is applicable in India. Firdausi Khatri v. Firdausi Nandhani, 7 Bom. Rep., O. J., 45.

An unregistered mortgage prior in date cannot take effect against a subsequent registered mortgage, whether the holder of the latter deed has or has not notice of the former. Sunkur Sahoy v. Sookool, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 270.

Held that a deed of sale of immovable property, duly registered under Act XX of 1866, was to be preferred to a prior verbal sale of the same property accompanied by possession, where it appeared that it was the intention of the parties to the verbal sale to complete the transaction by a deed.

Semble,—That the effect would have been the same if there had been no such intention. Bhundu Valad Ramram v. Damaji Valad Firooji, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C., 59.

An unregistered mortgage without possession, upon which a decree has been obtained but not executed, has not, by virtue of such decree, priority over a subsequent deed of sale which is registered. Kisam Khandar v. Krishna Bhulaji Shet, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 147.

Where a conditional mortgagee had been in possession under an unregistered deed from 1853,—Held, that his title could not be defeated by a purchaser under a registered sale-deed executed in 1867. Sheodyal Aher v. Gool Mahomed Khan, 2 N. W. R., 296.

The 50th Section of the Registration Act applies to instruments of which the registration is optional, giving priority between such instruments to the one which is registered, but not to a case in which the registration of one instrument is optional, but of the other compulsory. Hamed Bux v. Bindra Bun, 2 N. W. R., 37.

A judge should record a distinct finding of fraud or collusion on the part of the holder of a registered deed, with the grounds on which it proceeds, before he gives an unregistered deed priority over it, and unless he does so, the case will be remanded to the District Court. Gouri Kanti Roy v. Girishchand Roy, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 8; 12 S. W. R., C. R., 486.

A lent B. Rs. 75, on 6th Asar, 1273 (June 19th, 1866), and B. executed a mortgage of two bigas of land, for the amount, in A.'s favour. On 23rd Asar, 6th (July 5th) B. sold to C. one biga of the same land.

His mortgage was not registered, C.'s deed of sale was subsequently brought a suit against the amount held by B., and sought to attach the land engaged to him in execution. A., preferred a claim to the property attached, on the ground that the land was his; his petition was allowed. A. now sued to have the property mortgaged to him sold in execution of his decree, and to set aside C.'s purchase.

Held, that under Sections 18 and 50, Act XX of 1866, C.'s registered deed of sale must have preference over A.'s unregistered mortgage. Gyaram Masumdar v. Madhusudan Mazumdar, 4 B. L. R., Ap. 73.

(c) Registration Act XIX of 1843.

A registered deed of sale does not invalidate a prior unregistered mortgage under the provisions of Act XIX of 1843. A bond-fide purchaser for value without notice is not entitled to priority over a prior unregistered mortgagee. Maharajah Moheshur Buksh Singh Bahadoor v. Bhikha Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 61.

Held that the registration of a deed fraudulently got up and registered after the commencement of the suit does not give it the effect of invalidating a former unregistered deed of sale. The words in Act XIX of 1843, “provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the Court,” were introduced in order to prevent any supposition that registration would give to a merely fictitious transaction any effect which it would not otherwise possess. G. Narasanna v. R. Gavappa, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 270.

A registered deed of sale gives the vendee no preferential right, under Act XIX of 1843, to avoid an unregistered lien given by the vendor to his judgment-creditor. Bissonath Singh v. Raj Chunder Roy, W. R., 1864, 141.

A subsequent registered mortgage was held, under Section 2, Act XIX of 1843, to invalidate a prior unregistered bond. Gopal Doss v. Doomee Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, 226.

The want of registration of a contract by A. to sell land to B. at some future time, on receipt of balance of sum agreed on, not then paid, is no bar to B.'s preferential claim over C., a subsequent purchaser, whose sale has been registered under Act XIX of 1843. Ramtonoo Surmah Sircar v. Gour Chunder Surmah Sircar, 3 W. R., 64.

Act XIX of 1843 does not give a registered kobala priority over a prior unregistered mortgage under which enjoyment has actually taken place. Syed Fursund Aliy v. Syed Abdhoil Rahim, 4 W. R., 30.
Act XIX of 1843 does not apply to pottahs, consequently a subsequently registered pottah cannot prevail over a prior unregistered pottah. Anwul Chunder Chowdhrv v. Chundernath Roy, 5 W. R., 205.

The words "any knowledge or notice of any such unregistered deed or certificate alleged to be had by any party to such registered deed or certificate notwithstanding," in Section 2, Act XIX of 1843, refer not only to the mortgages and certificates mentioned in that part of the section which immediately precedes these words, but extend also to the deeds of sale or gift which are mentioned in the earlier part of the section.

The words "provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the Court" in the same section, point not merely at the exclusion of a forged deed from the benefit of the Act, but also of a deed tainted by fraud, although in other respects genuine. Sreenath Bhuttacharjee v. Ram Comul Ganggoely and others, 3 W. R., P. C., 43.

A registered deed of sale, though subsequent in date, invalidates as against the registered purchaser a prior deed of sale unregistered, notwithstanding that notice of the prior deed be alleged. Act XIX of 1843, Section 2, construed. Is'rirhnasami Pillai v. Venkatalella Aryan, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 270.

 Held that the preference given under Act XIX of 1843 to the latter of two deeds of sale of immovable property when registered over the earlier unregistered deed, is not confined to cases in which the first deed has not been carried into effect, as every duly registered deed of sale, if authentic, invalidates any other deed of sale which may not have been registered. Parabhudus Hirachand v. Dhonda Bhikaree Bhat, 2 Bom. Rep., 233.

If a vendor sells the same property to two parties, and it is found that they both bought bonâ fide, the second kobala, if registered, will, under Act XIX of 1843, take precedence of the first one, if not registered. Syud Nuzar Ali v. Syud Emad Ali, 1 W. R., 30.

Under Act XIX of 1843, a registered deed is entitled to priority over any unregistered deed of an earlier date. Mushapa bin Kurviropah v. Gospa bin Ningopa Sketonecker, 1 Bom. Rep., 10.

Act XIX of 1843 gives the preference, generally speaking, to a subsequent kobala which is registered over a prior one unregistered. To avoid its operation, plaintiff must show that the vendor not only sold and parted with his rights in the property, but actually made over possession to him. Mussmamul Butooor v. Mussamul Ozeerrun, 8 W. R., 300.

The words in Act XIX of 1843, "provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the Court," are introduced in order to prevent any supposition that registration would give to a merely fictitious transaction any effect which it would not otherwise possess. G. Narasama v. R. Gdnappa, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 270.

 Held that a registered miraspatra was entitled, under Act XIX of 1843, to precedence over an unregistered miraspatra of prior date, accompanied with possession. Harnamgir v. Spiers, 2 Bom. Rep., 1864, 213.

Where an instrument was executed under the Registration Act XIX of 1843, and was a valid instrument conferring a right or interest on the party in whose favour it was made, it does not become invalid by reason of the party not getting it registered within 12 months, nor is priority over it obtained by a subsequent conveyance which is registered under the Registration Law of 1864 or 1866. Doolal Bibee v. Nada Shaka, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 446.

(d) Registration Act XVI of 1864.

For the purpose of impeaching a deed of sale registered under Act XVI of 1864, so as to prevent the operation of Section 68, it is necessary to show that the deed was fraudulently executed, and that the purchaser was wilfully and intentionally a party to the fraud of the vendor, or at least that the deed was executed without consideration. Ram Chand Koomar v. Modhoosoola Mozoomdar, 7 W. R., 119.

Under Act XVI of 1864, a decree to enforce registration cannot be passed in respect of a deed presented for registration four months after the execution of the deed. Oojul Mundul v. Hera-tootah Mundul and others, 7 W. R., 150.

A Civil Court was held to have done right in giving priority to a lease registered under Act XVI of 1864, as against an unregistered conveyance of an earlier date. Gobind Chundhr Roy v. Poomo Chundra Sein and others, 10 W. R., 37.

B. sued for possession of certain lands, on a contract embodied in a document which purported to grant B. possession of these lands for a period of six years, on payment of Rs. 99.— Held, that the document in question was not a lease, but an usufructuary mortgage, and that the consideration-money being less than Rs. 100, its registration under Act XVI of 1864 was merely optional. Ishan Chandra v. Sujan Bibi, 7 B. L. R., 14, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 331.

A Judge should record a distinct finding of fraud or collusion on the part of the holder of a registered deed, with the grounds on which it proceeds, before he gives an unregistered deed priority over it; and unless he do so, the case will be remanded to him for retrial. Goure Kant Roy v. Giridhir Roy, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 8; 12 W. R., 436.

Section 13.

It was not intended that compulsory registration under Section 13, Act XVI of 1864, should apply to deeds, like amuldustuks, which are merely preliminary to the main contract or engagement, or to deeds which are steps in, or mere parts of, a transaction, should be registered before they can be used as evidence.

Where A. in a suit against five defendants, B. to E., sought under an alleged contract by B. to E., to grant him his property to his five sons, subject to certain charges, and among other things directed
A suit B. for recovery of possession of land which he alleged had been sold to him by B. under a bill of sale. The bill of sale had been duly registered, and was not disputed by B., but B. produced an unregistered ikramnamah, executed by A., to prove that the sale was not absolute, but only by way of mortgage. B. alleged that the terms of the bill of sale were qualified and explained by the ikramnamah. Held that the ikramnamah was inadmissible in evidence, as it had not been registered under Section 13 of Act XVI of 1864, but that the Court might look at other and independent evidence—viz., the acts and conduct of the parties—to throw a light upon their intention.

It has always been the policy of the Courts of this country not to apply the strict rules of English law to natives of this country. Sheikh Parwadi Shani v. Sheikh Mahomed, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 37.

Held that a suit for possession based merely on an unregistered sale deed must fail; such unregistered sale deed being inadmissible as evidence in any civil proceeding under Section 13, Act XVI of 1864. Held also that a suit to enforce registration lay where one of the parties to the deed refused to register it. Raja Krishen Kishore Chand v. Mahomed Zookahoolah and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 148.

A hibbah-namah executed before Act XVI of 1864 came into operation is admissible as evidence, though not registered. Section 13 does not apply to deeds executed before 1st January, 1865, and Section 17 contains no penalty for non-registration. Bama Soodwrey Dossia v. Madhub Chunder Goo, 8 W. R., 69.

Sections 15, 16, 17, and 18.

A party, after purchasing a property, applied to have his deed registered; but the vendor not attending to admit the execution, the Deputy Registrar refused, under Act XVI of 1864, to register, and referred the applicant to the Civil Court. Application was accordingly made, under Section 15, to the Principal Sudder Ameen, who, after hearing the vendor's plea, that the whole consideration had not been paid, ordered the registration to be made, and this was accordingly done on 2nd February, 1866.

Held that though the Deputy Registrar's order was a proper one, the application to the Civil Court was warranted by the terms of Section 15, and the Civil Court had jurisdiction in the matter. Ram Lall Singh v. Thakoor Dyal, 9 W. R., 576.

A sells certain property to B., and receives part of the purchase-money in advance, the rest to be paid after registration of the deed of sale. When the deed is executed, and taken to the registry office, A. objects to the registration, on the ground that the full price has not been paid, and the Deputy Registrar returns the deed to him, and he sells the property to other parties.

Held that, as the application for registration was made on the 27th March, 1866, before the new Registration Law (XIX of 1865) came into operation, it was lawful for any person interested to institute a regular suit to establish his right to registration.
under Section 15, Act XVI of 1864, notwithstanding the provisions of Section 84, Act XX of 1866.

Held, however, that the case did not come under the provisions of Section 15, Act XVI of 1864, nor of Section 84, Act XX of 1866. It was a suit to enforce a contract from which the vendor has receded, and notwithstanding the subsequent sale to a third party, and registration of such subsequent deed, there was nothing in the Registration Law to prevent plaintiff from enforcing this contract. Bhoomi Baradwells v. Mussamut Olimissa, alias Begum Jan and others, 8 W. R., 422.

Held, in a suit to compel registration under Act XVI of 1864, Section 15, that where Courts found that the requirements of Section 29 of the Act had not been complied with before the registrar, he was justified in refusing to register the deed. Bhagvan Jayaram v. Vishob Govind, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 140.

Where it is necessary to institute a suit under Section 15 of Act XVI of 1864 (Registration Act) in order to enforce registration, the suit should be limited to that object. The Court will not, after making the order to compel registration, suspend the further hearing of the case until registration has been effected, and then proceed to consider and decide upon the rights of the parties. Hakim Chadar Shaib v. Thadar Shibi, 3 Mad. Rep., O. J., 149.

Section 15, Act XVI of 1864, applies only to cases in which the Registrar has improperly refused to register an instrument. Gooroo Doss Dutt v. Dwarka Nath Manna, 6 W. R., Mis., 61.

A Registrar to whom a deed is presented for registration has nothing whatever to do with its recitals or its possible operation as regards third parties who are not parties to it, but is bound to register it if the party applying for registration has complied with the provisions of Section 29, Act XVI of 1864.

According to Section 15 of the same Act, a regular suit, and not a miscellaneous application, must be brought to compel a Registrar to register. Multukdharee Lal v. Sheikh Fussul Hossein and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 131.

Where it is necessary to institute a suit under Section 15 of Act XVI of 1864 in order to enforce registration, the suit should be limited to that object. The Court will not, after making the order to compel registration, suspend the further hearing of the case until registration has been effected, and then proceed to consider and decide upon the rights of the parties. Hakim Khadar Shaib v. Khadar Bikoo, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 149.

Where the registration of the sale deed was refused by the Registrar,—Held that a regular suit to prove the right of having the deed registered would lie under Section 15, Act XVI of 1864. Shaik Inayet Ali and Vilayet Ali v. Syud Fursan Ali, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 21.

A suit under Section 15, Act XVI of 1864, is not a summary but a regular suit, and full fees should be awarded for pleaders. Morwa Buksh v. Bahadar Ali Khan, 9 W. R., 101.

The words "any deed, bond, contracts, or obligations," in Clause 7, Section 16, Act XVI of 1864, include a promissory note which may therefore be registered. Official Assignee v. Fraser, 14 S. W. R., A. O., 51.

In a suit, under Section 15 of Act XVI of 1864, to compel the defendant to join in the registration of certain documents, the defendant admitted the execution of the documents, but set up a collateral agreement which would render the documents of no legal force. The Lower Courts found that the agreement relied on by the defendant was come to with the plaintiff.

Held (reversing the decrees of the Lower Courts) that, execution having been admitted, the documents ought to be registered. Manamud Cherly v. Virgassamy, 4 Mad. Rep., 425.

Where the Registrar for any cause refuses to register a deed of sale presented for registration under the provisions of Section 17 of Act XVI of 1864, the law does not provide that the applicant can bring a suit against the vendor to enforce registration, unless there is an express condition or contract to register. Musasamor Butter v. Musasamul Boodhassere and others, 10 W. R., 313.

Section 17, Act XVI of 1864, does not say that deeds executed prior to the passing of the Act shall not be received as evidence in Courts. It was intended merely to encourage parties to register old deeds at once. Haroolall Thakoor v. Dhoonal Mundul and others, 8 W. R., 86.

There is no provision in Act XVI of 1864 obliging or empowering a Registrar to register a deed after the expiry of the time specified in Section 18, whether under a decree of Court or otherwise, except in cases which come under the provisions of Section 15. Monmohinee Dossee and others v. Bishen Mevy Dossee, 7 W. R., 112.

Where the sale deed was executed, and consideration paid, but the deed was not registered within four months owing to the seller's fraud,—Held that such fraudulent vendor cannot benefit himself by pleading the provisions of the law (Section 18, Act XVI of 1864) as a bar to the purchaser's claim. Purgas Rai v. Juggun Singh, 2 Agra Rep., 201.

Section 29.

It is not necessary, under Act XVI of 1864, Section 29, that the Registrar of Assurances should be satisfied of the validity of the title of the person applying to have an instrument registered; he should merely enquire whether the person who purports to have executed the instrument did, in fact, do so; if he is satisfied of that, he should not refuse to register. Raj Chandar Bundoo v. Rajeswary Dossee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 240.

Section 51.

Section 51, Act XVI of 1864, does not require a Registrar to record the agreement there spoken of entirely with his own hand. The signature of the Registrar is sufficient.

Before enforcing a duly registered bond, without a suit, proof of the signature or handwriting of the Registrar is not necessary. The bond, with the further agreement endorsed thereon when registered, becomes a record, and is itself prima-facie proof of the registration, and this with reference to the further agreement, as well as to the instrument itself. Humbo Banbu v. Meer Hossein Ali, 5 W. R., S. C. Ref., 14.

When a bond was registered under Sections 51 and 52 of Act XVI of 1864, and by its terms a fixed amount of interest was to be paid at the end of every month.—Held that, by virtue of special registration, the obligee was entitled to move for execution in respect of each installment of interest due. Manthareswara Ali v. Kamala Naik, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 88.

Section 68.

Under Section 68, Act XVI of 1864, registered deeds are entitled to preference over unregistered deeds, even of that class the registration of which is compulsory, if unregistered, will not be received in evidence at all; whereas deeds the registration of which is optional will be received in evidence, notwithstanding the absence of registration, though they may give way to registered documents of subsequent dates relating to the same property. Munsoor Ali v. Ahmut Ali and others, 9 W. R., 282. See also Groo Doss Daw v. Kooshoom Koomeree Dassey, 9 W. R., 547.

Where two parties claimed the same property by conveyance from the owner under registered deeds of sale of 1772, plaintiff's purchase and registration being of anterior date to those of defendant, who, besides being in possession, pleaded that he had previously to plaintiff's purchase obtained possession under a parol contract of sale, it was held that plaintiff was entitled to a decree, and that defendant could not set up the parol sale against the plaintiff's registered kobala of the same year, in the face of Section 68, Act XVI of 1864. Bykantonauth Sett v. Russick Lall Bormono, 10 W. R., 231.

(e) Registration Act XX of 1866.

The plaintiff lent defendant Rs. 20,000, and received a document in the following terms:—"On demand we promise to pay S. V. Mutu Ramen Chetty and C. T. A. Chiniah Chetty the sum of rupees twenty thousand, value received." Memo.—"For the above promissory note, the grant of the dockyard and offices to be deposited in three days, and a proper agreement drawn out. The time of credit to be one year or eighteen months, the interest at Rs. 1-10 per cent. per mensem." In a suit to compel specific performance and for damages in breach of the agreement contained in the above memo.—Held that the memo contained an agreement of which a Court of Equity would grant specific performance, had not defendant rendered specific performance impossible. Held also that the document did not contain an agreement creating an interest in land, and registration was not therefore necessary to render it receivable in evidence under the Registration Act of 1866. The fact that the document was received in evidence without a stamp, was no reason for reversing the decision in appeal. Mark Ridded Currie v. S. V. Mutu Ramen Chetty, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 126; 11 W. R., 520.

A genuine deed of sale given by the owner of an estate at a time when registration was not compulsory, cannot be invalidated by a subsequent deed given by that owner's heir and successor, the registration of which was compulsory by Act XX of 1866, merely on the ground that the last deed was registered, and the first was not. Imrit Singh and others v. Koylasha Koer and others, 11 W. R., 559.

An unregistered document, requiring registration as affecting an interest in land, is admissible in evidence for any purpose for which registration is unnecessary. Luchmiput Singh Dugar v. Mirza Khairut Ali, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 18; 12 W. R., F. B., 11.

Under Act XX of 1866, a Registrar has no power to refuse to register a deed, on the ground that the full consideration there mentioned has not been paid. His duty is, when the parties appear in person before him, simply to ascertain whether the deed has been executed by the persons by whom it purports to have been executed. In the matter of Act XX of 1866, and of the petition of Brindabun Chunder Shaw and Nobodeep Chunder Shaw, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 47.

The Registrar officer is not authorized to register a deed in the absence of the vendors and their agents, merely because he is satisfied that there has been a sale pursuant to a previous agreement. The Registration Act, 1866, contains powers for compelling the attendance before the Registrar of persons whose presence is necessary for the due registration of deeds; but there is no provision enabling registering officers to proceed of their own authority to register in the absence of such persons.

Unless a deed is registered according to the provisions of the Act, it must be regarded as unregistered, though, in fact, it may have been improperly admitted to registration.

Decree-holder cannot be delayed or prejudiced by any incomplete arrangement between his judgment-debtors and third persons to which he is a stranger.

Where appellant satisfies the Court that he has been substantially injured by no issues being framed by the Judge previous to his decision, effect will be given to such objection. Sah Koonun Lall v. Makkun Lall, 1 N. W. R., par. 2, 168.

Section 2.

The right to take juice from date-trees is not, according to Section 2, Act XX of 1866, a right to immovable property, but falls under the definition of movable property. Jalu Namdar v. Becha Namdar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 394; 12 W. R., 366.

Section 17.

Where defendants had contracted to execute a mourosee pottah of certain land at a given rent for a consideration of which a portion was paid as earnest-money, and the balance was to be paid within fifteen days, and had agreed that, if they failed to execute the pottah, the baena-pottah was to be considered a pottah, and plaintiff on allegations of failure sued the defendants for possession on the footing that the baena-namah was a mourosee pottah.—Held that the deed under which the plaintiff sued was a pottah, and under Clause 2, Section 17 of Act XX of 1866, an instrument the regulation of which was compulsory. As an unregistered document, it could not hold its ground.
against a registered pottah put in by intervenors, Nund Ram Ghose and another v. Maunoo Bibee and others, 10 W. R., 177.

A deed of bye-bil-wafa, or conditional sale, is a deed which, under Section 17 of Act XX of 1866, requires registration before it can become admissible. But so far as it is a covenant or agreement for the repayment of the money lent on a particular day, it is not an instrument requiring registration; and therefore for such purposes, notwithstanding Section 49, it is admissible in evidence. Nilmadhav Singh Dass v. Futteh Chund Soha, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 310.

A bond for money, in which land is pledged as a mere collateral security, is not one of the instruments defined in Clause 2, Section 17, Act XX of 1866, the registration of which is compulsory; but is one of which the registration is optional under Clause 7, Section 18 of that law. Woodoo Chand Jann v. Nitye Mundul and Poresh, 9 W. R., 111.

The plaintiff sued as the assignee of a mortgagee of immovable property to recover the amount of the debt from the mortgagor in pursuance of an express contract to pay the debt contained in the mortgage.

The mortgage was executed before the Registration Act (XVI of 1864) came into operation. The assignment to the plaintiff was executed after the last Registration Act (XX of 1866) became law.

Held, per Bittleston, Innes, and Collet, JJ., that the assignment, being an instrument operating to create an interest in immovable property, and as such requiring to be registered under Section 17 of Act XX of 1866, was not admissible in evidence in a suit to enforce the personal obligation only; but is one of which the registration is optional under Clause 7, Section 18 of that law. Avund Ram Ghose and another v. Maunoo Bibee and others, 10 W. R., 177.

An instrument operating to create an interest in immovable property only as a collateral security for the payment of money, and is also a simple contract or bond for the payment of a debt, and where effect is sought to be given to the instrument only as a simple contract, it is admissible in evidence in a suit to recover the debt, though it has not been registered. So far as it is a contract for the payment of money, it is an instrument, the registration of which is made optional by Section 18 of Act XX of 1866. Vellaya Padyachu v. Moorthy Padyachu, 4 Mad. Rep., 174.

Sections 44 and 49.

A testator deposited his will in a sealed cover with the Registrar of Assurances at Bombay under Section 44 of Act XX of 1866; and upon his death, his executors applied to the Registrar to deliver over to them the will, in order to enable them to apply to the High Court for probate thereof. The Registrar gave a copy of the will under Section 46 of the Act, but refused to part with the original.

On application by the executors for a citation to the Registrar-General to bring the will into Court, and deposit it with the Ecclesiastical Registrar, —Held that the original should be brought into Court, where alone the factum of the will could be tried and determined; and that a copy, authenticated under Section 65 of the Act, was not sufficient. The Registrar-General should not, after the death of the deposer of a will, part with it otherwise than by order of Court. In the goods of Nagindos, deceased, 3 Bom. Rep., C. J., 135.

Where possession of immovable property has been given under an unregistered lease, a subsequent grantee of a registered lease cannot maintain a suit to evict the lessee in possession, on the ground of the priority of his deed under Section 48, Act XX of 1866. Nursing Porkaet v. Mussummут Bown, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 86.

An instrument acknowledging the payment of the consideration-money for what was to be ultimately an absolute sale of the property in question—for what in equity did presently operate as a sale of the property—is an instrument which by the 2nd Section of Act XX of 1866 is required to be registered, and cannot be received in evidence under Section 49, if it has not been registered. Futteh Chund Sahoo v. Leekumbur Singh Doss, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 26.

An unregistered deed of sale, so far as it is a receipt or acknowledgment of money paid, or an acknowledgment for old debts, is admissible in evidence, notwithstanding Section 49, Act XX of 1866.

A portion of an unregistered document requiring registration is admissible in evidence, when such portion does not relate to immovable property. Shib Prasad Doss v. Anna Purna Dayi, 3 B. L. P., 451.

contract of sale, though not such as absolutely to require registration, according to Section 49, Act XX of 1866, in order to be admissible as a negotiable instrument (even if sufficiently complete to pass rights of property from the vendor to the purchaser), cannot have any priority against any other authentic instrument of conveyance executed afterwards by the vendor, and duly registered. Mofussul Hossein v. Gholam Ambia, 10 W. R., 196.

A registered deed cannot, under Section 49, Act XX of 1866, prevail against an unregistered deed under which possession has been delivered to the alienee. Selam Sheik v. Baidonath Ghutchuk, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 312; 12 W. R., 217.

A document which gives or purports to give a right to have immoveable property brought to sale, with a view to the recovery, out of its proceeds, of the right to have immoveable property brought to sale, which creates an interest in immoveable property, and as such cannot, under Section 49 of the Indian Registration Act, be received in evidence without being registered. Kala Chund Mundul v. Gopaul Chunder Bhattacharjee, 12 W. R., 163.

Sections 50, 51, 52, and 53.

A registered lease to take juice from date-trees cannot, under Section 50, Act XX of 1866, have priority over an unregistered one of a prior date. Jaiul Namdar v. Becha Namdar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 394; 12 W. R., 366.

In this case the bond was executed at Arrah, and provided that payment should be made to plaintiff in person, and though it described plaintiff and defendant as inhabitants of Patna, yet the plaintiff having been admittedly a resident at Arrah at the time the bond was executed and for some years previously,—Held that the intention of the parties was to make the money payable at Arrah, and that consequently the Judge of Shahabad had jurisdiction. Nirban Singh v. Kumla Sahay, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 345.

A contract to pay money on a certain day with interest, wherein land is pledged as security for the payment, is an obligation within the meaning of Section 52, Act XX of 1866, and a Subordinate Judge was held to be acting within his jurisdiction in enforcing such a contract in the summary manner allowed by that section. Wooma Churn Mookerjee v. Hurry Churn Bose, 11 W. R., 60.

An agreement recorded on a bond or obligation under Section 52, Act XX of 1866, binds the obligor only, and not his heirs, who cannot be summarily called upon to show cause why a decree should not be passed upon them. Ram Narain Doss Biswas v. Sreenath Poddar, 9 W. R., 498.

There is no appeal from an order refusing to allow the amount due under a decree passed upon an obligation specially registered under Section 52, Act XX of 1866, to be levied by instalments, and directing immediate enforcement of the decree. Petition of Rash Behary Baboo, 7 W. R., 130.

The managing partner of a firm executed a promissory note in the name of his firm in favour of the petitioner, and specially registered the note under Section 52 of the Indian Registration Act, 1866, signing the special agreement also in the name of his firm. Held that, under Section 53, the petitioner was only entitled to a decree against the partner who actually signed the note and special agreement.

In the matter of the petition of Baktrum Badrinath, 6 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 131.

A bond payable two years after date contained a stipulation, that in case of default being made in payment of interest on the principal sum secured, the principal sum, with interest due to the due date of the bond, should at once become payable. The bond was specially registered under Section 52 of the Indian Registration Act, 1866. Held, that such an agreement did not come strictly within the words of Sections 52 and 53 of the Act, and could not, therefore, be summarily enforced by petition under Section 53. In re Ganpat Manikji Patil, 6 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 64.

A suit to enforce an obligation was held to be taken out of the operation of Section 53, Act XX of 1866, by the fact that it was brought against the representative, the one of the original obligors, coupled with the fact that its object was to enforce a lien upon surplus sale proceeds in deposit in the Collectorate. Boistub Churn Dignatry v. Gobind Pershad Tevarree, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 203.

A kubulet in which a ryot agreed to hold land under a pottah for a specified year, the agreement between the parties being that at the close of that period a fresh settlement would be made, was held to be a lease for one year, and not to need registration under Act XX of 1866 as being a lease for more than a year, although a clause intervened between the above clauses to the effect that year by year the ryot would pay rent at the above rate. T Jagadesh Chunder Biswas v. Abdollah Mundle, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 68.

It is beyond the power of a Civil Court, under Section 53, Act XX of 1866, simply on the production of a registered bond and the petition of the bond-holder, either to make a decree to the effect that the amount decreed shall be realized out of the property mentioned in the bond, or to decree the whole amount of the bond on default to pay an instalment. Greesh Chunder Chowdry v. Krishto Sooldeer Sandyal, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 277.

Where the lower Appellate Court passed a decree on a specifically registered bond, setting aside a subordination made by the first Court for payment by instalments and its order about interest,—Held that Section 55 of the Registration Act applied to the case, and that the High Court was competent in subsequent execution proceedings to make an order under Section 243, Code of Civil Procedure, appointing a receiver, or giving opportunity to the judgment-debtor to pay off the decree by mortgage of the estate. Kishen Coomaree Bibe v. Golub Coomaree, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 477.

Sections 52 to 54, Act XX of 1866, contemplate money bonds only. A bond for the delivery of paddy without specification of its money value, or of the amount to be paid on it, cannot be summarily enforced under Section 53 of that law. Jadub Mundle v. Bishoo Sirdar, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 369.

In a suit under Section 53 of the Registration Act XX of 1866 to recover two instalments, one of which had fallen due more than a year before the institution of the suit, the Small Cause Court came to the conclusion that the bond was not executed by the defendant and was not properly registered, and for that reason dismissed the suit. The High Court on a reference refused to allow the plaintiff to waive the first instalment and to alter the nature of his suit, with a view to his obtaining a decree for an instalment to which he was not entitled upon the finding of the Small Cause Court after hearing the evidence. Dhununjo Ghose v. Bemal Dhara Bagdee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 514.

Under Act XX of 1866, Section 51, the time for bringing a suit for money lent under a bond registered under Act XVI of 1864 is six years.

A decree obtained by the plaintiff upon a specially registered bond under Act XX of 1866, and set aside under Section 55 of that Act, held not to bar a regular suit upon the bond. Utkab Narajain Chowdry v. Chitra Raka Gupta, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 92; and 17 S. W. R., C. R., 154.

The plaintiff brought a suit upon a specially registered bond, under Section 53 of Act XX of 1866, to recover the whole amount secured by the bond. The bond contained a stipulation that the amount should be paid by three instalments, and that in default of payment of any one instalment the whole amount should become due immediately. Default was made by the obligor.

Held that the summary remedy provided by Section 53 of Act XX of 1866 was not available to the plaintiff to recover the whole amount secured by the bond.

Bonds containing hypothecation of immovable property are not excluded from the provisions of Sections 52 and 53 of Act XX of 1866. Gobind Shunkeree v. Girdharee Singh, 14 N. W. R., 90.

The summary remedy under Section 53 of the Registration Act is made applicable only as between the immediate parties to the registered obligation. Such remedy cannot, therefore, be enforced by the representative of an obligee. Subowijyan, petitioner, 4 Mad. Rep., 233.

The Small Cause Court in Calcutta has no jurisdiction to pass a decree in cases of special registration under Sections 52 and 53 of Act XX of 1866. Nicolomui Bonnerjee v. Muddoo Soodun Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 478.

Section 53 of the Indian Registration Act does not apply to a case where the decree is sought against the alleged personal representatives of a deceased obligor. Pudyafaragil Mamy v. Madakarall Amarun Kitti, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 199.

Upon a case referred,—Held by the majority of the Court (Holloway and Collet, JJ., dissenting) that Section 53 of the Indian Registration Act (XX of 1866) does not apply to a case where the decree is sought against the alleged personal representatives of a deceased obligor. Reliance is placed upon the special registration as a substitute for any investigation by the Court; and when any question arises as to the matter subsequent to the registration, the summary remedy fails. It can only apply to cases in which the parties to the registration will also be the parties to the decree. Pudyoferagil v. Madakarall Amman Kitti, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 169.

No appeal lying against a decree made under Section 53, Act XX of 1866, the petition was directed to be returned, with a view to its being presented to the Court, if desired, by way of motion.

In cases of application to the Court under Section 53 of the Registration Act XX of 1866, the Court ought not to summon the defendant, but the application is entitled to a decree merely on production of the obligation and the record duly signed.

A summary application under Section 53 of Act XX of 1866 by the assignee of a bond cannot be entertained. Gourmohun Dass v. Ramput Mosoomdar, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 42; 10 W. R., 84.

A bond, payable by instalments, stipulated that, in case of default in payment of two successive instalments, the whole amount secured should become due. Held that a petition in a summary way could not be presented under Section 53 of Act XX of 1866. In the matter of the Indian Registration Act, 1866, and in the matter of Lachmipat Singh Dogar Roy Bahadoor and others, 2 B. L. R., O. C., 151.

A petition for payment of a bond, which had been specially registered under Act XVI of 1864, was presented on the 3rd April, 1866. Held that it must be considered as having been presented under Section 53 of Act XX of 1866, by virtue of the 3rd Section of that Act, which repealed Act XVI of 1864; consequently the decision of the Principal Sudder Ameen, to whom the petition was presented, was, under Section 55 of Act XX of 1866, final. There could be no appeal from that decision, therefore the Judge had no jurisdiction to reverse the Principal Sudder Ameen's decision. Grish Chundra Dutt v. Buxul-ul-Huq, 5 B. L. R., A. C., 68; S. C., 11 W. R., 417.

Sections 83 and 84.

Section 80, Act XX of 1866, in no way empowered the Registrar-General to pass any rule directing by what particular description of evidence a person producing a deed to be registered shall prove his right to have it registered; nor could it empower him to frame a special law different from the ordinary law of evidence as to what fact shall be proved by oral and what by documentary evidence. Where all the executants of a deed admit before the Registrar-General that they have executed the deed, that officer has nothing to do with the recitals of the deed, or with its possible operation as regards third parties, e. g., a minor whose rights are reserved in the deed. The representative, assign, or agent, mentioned in Section 36, means the representative, assign, or agent of one of the executors of the deed. Ram Chunder Biswas, in the matter of, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 180.

Act XX of 1866 does not give any appeal against an order refusing to exercise the authority given by the first part of Section 32, neither does such an order fall under the operation of Section 83, nor is it an order made under Section 82. Sarkies v. Sungrow Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 194.

When a party to a document appears before the Registering officer and admits execution, but refuses to sign on the back as admitting the execution, or do any other act towards its registration, the Registering officer cannot, without the order of the District Court, under Section 84 of Act XX of 1866, proceed with the registration of the instrument, as the provisions of Sections 66 and 67 could not be complied with. Denial of the receipt of part of the consideration-money by the executing party is not a sufficient ground for the District Court refusing registration under Section 84 of the Act.

Where two instruments are contained in the same paper and relate to the same property, and are both presented for, and in all other respects are entitled to registration, it is not a sufficient ground for refusing registration that in one of the documents the property is described only by reference to the other.

When any question arises under the Registration Act as to the nature or effect of any instrument, or the sufficiency of any description contained in it, the Court must endeavour to gather from the words used the intention of the parties, and give effect to it, and not require as a condition of registration that the instrument be drawn up in technical language.

Though in the later of two instruments there are no words directly referring to the first, yet the frame of the document showing that the second document should be taken to refer to the first, the second document must be taken to contain a sufficient reference to the first. Refusal by the executing party to initial an apparent alteration not materially affecting the instrument, unaccompanied by any suggestion that the alteration was improperly made after execution, does not render the document non-registerable. Re Venkutama Naik, 4 Mad. Rep., 101.

The only two things which are absolutely required by Section 21 of Act XX of 1866 as conditions without compliance with which registration is prohibited are, first, that the instrument shall contain a description of the property sufficient to identify it; and, secondly, that if the instrument contains a map, a copy or copies of the map shall accompany the instrument when presented for registration. Both the circumstances, therefore, that the description of the parcels in the instrument does not specify the registration district, or sub-district, or division, or village, in which the property is situate, or the former occupancy, is not alone sufficient to disentitle a party getting an instrument registered, if the description in the instrument is sufficient to identify the property. Upon a petition under Section 84, Act XX of 1866, the District Court is bound to ascertain whether the description is sufficient to identify, notwithstanding the failure to supply some particular mentioned in Section 21 or the rules. It is not necessary that the executing party should attend in Court pursuant to notice served under Section 84, in order to authorize the Court to order the registration of the instrument. Under Section 84, the Court is not bound to direct registration of the instrument even if satisfied that the requirements of the law have been complied with, though in the exercise of this discretion the Court ought not to refuse registration unless very clearly satisfied that the refusal will work injustice. The verified statement, as the petition for registration, of the execution of the instrument, is not, when the executing party fails to appear in Court, sufficient proof of the execution, in order that the Court may direct registration.

Sembh,—The words, “the revenue officer in whose jurisdiction the person whose attendance is desired may be,” in Section 49 of the Act, point to the chief revenue officer of the district, viz., the Collector, or if in any defined sub-district, the sub-Collector. Such sub-Collector has all the powers of a Collector. In the matter of the petition of Narainasami Pillai, 4 Mad. Rep., 91.

A. brought a suit in the Moonisif's Court against B. and C., alleging that they had sold outright to him by saf-kobala certain landed property for Rs. 300, which was duly paid, and the kobala was executed; that possession was given to him; that B. and C. set up before the Deputy Registrar fraudulent objections to the effect that a stipulation to return the property to the vendors on the repayment by them of the consideration-money, had not been embodied in the deed, and that part of the consideration-money was still unpaid; that, therefore, the Registrar refused to execute the deed; that in fact there was no such stipulation as set up by B. and C., and that the whole of the purchase-money was paid; and it was stated in the conclusion of the plaint, that the suit had been instituted to set aside the fraudulent objections, and to establish the full title of A. as purchaser. Held (Mitter, J., dissenting) that the suit would not lie. The unregistered deed could not be admitted in evidence, nor parol evidence of the contract be given under which A. alleged that he acquired his title.

A. ought to have proceeded under Section 83 of Act XX of 1866. Sheikh Rahamatullah v. Sheikh Surutulla Kagchi, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 59; 10 W. R., F. B., 51.

A. sued B. to enforce registration of a pottah, on the allegation that the Registrar had refused registration, on the ground that B. denied before him the execution of the deed. Held that, under Act XX of 1866, a suit would not lie. A. should have proceeded under Section 83 of the Act. Tulusa Saha v. Mahendra Doss and another, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 105.

A deed of sale of land situated in the Registration District of Calcutta was executed and presented by the purchaser for registration. The vendor appeared personally, and admitted execution, but refused to endorse the deed, on the ground that she did not intend to sell, but only to renew a certain deed of mortgage. The Registrar refused to register the deed. The purchaser petitioned under Section 84 of the Indian Registration Act, Act XX of 1866. It was objected, on behalf of the vendor, that an appeal should have been first made to the Registrar-General, in accordance with the provision in Section 83 of the Act, as the refusal was made by the Registrar as Sub-Registrar. Held, that the proviso in Section 83 applies solely to the case where the Registrar for a district, including a presidency town, passes an order on an application which relates to such a portion of his district as is not included in a sub-district.

The order so passed becomes the order of a Sub-Registrar, and is not within the words of Section 83.
84, which give a right of petition to the District Court, but in such case an appeal first lies to the Registrar-General.

There being no evidence that the premises which were the subject of the deed of sale were situated in a part of Calcutta not formed into a sub-district, the Court will inferred that the order was made by the Registrar as Registrar, not as Sub-Registrar. The Registrar was justified in refusing to register the deed, on the ground that the vendor, one of the parties to it, refused to endorse it. In the matter of the Indian Registration Act and Brijanath Pyne and Armadali Dasi, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 60.

A petition under Section 84, Act XX of 1866, need not be in English, unless the party presenting it understands that language sufficiently for the purpose of verification.

When an appeal is filed under that section, a notice in accordance with Clause 4 thereof ought to be issued on the registering officer, and on the other persons interested.

The Deputy Registrar is competent to fix the time for hearing, and to require the appellants to insert the names of persons interested, and also to serve them with notices.

The document, the registration of which is refused, should be put in with the petition, and the presentation should be in the office. In the matter of Jugmohan Pattee, 12 W. R., 2.

Held (by Kemp, J., whose opinion prevailed) that, where the executant of a deed denies execution, and the application for registration is refused by the Sub-Registrar or District Registrar, the applicant cannot enforce registration by a regular suit; but the District Court has jurisdiction, under Section 84, Act XX of 1866, to summon and examine witnesses, make an inquiry into the fact of execution, and order the Registrar to register the deed.

In the matter of Sunkur Dobey v. Obhoy Churn Mohapatra, 12 W. R., 385.

Held, in appeal under Section 15 of Letters Patent, that when registration of a document has been refused, because the execution of it is denied by one of those who are said to have executed it, and when a petition, under Section 84 of Act XX of 1866, is presented to the District Court by the party claiming under the document, in order to establish his right to have such document registered as having, in fact, been executed, the Judge must himself try the question whether the document was really executed or not, and has no power to remand the case to the Sub-Registrar for the purpose of examining witnesses. Such petition is not an appeal from the decision of the Sub-Registrar or Registrar-General, but is a mode of bringing the question before the Judge as a Court of original jurisdiction, in order to determine whether an order ought to be made for the registration of the document. The words "appealed against" in Section 84 mean "complained of" or "objected to." Obhoy Churn Mohapatra v. Sunkur Dobey, 12 W. R., 500.

Held that there was no appeal to the High Court from the decision of a District Court on a petition, under Section 84 of Act XX of 1866, to establish the right to have a document registered; nor would the Court interfere with such a decision under Regulation XI of 1827, Section 5, Clause 2. Ex parte Dharamdas Bhagbandas, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 104.

Although the Registrar-General may have a discretion to refuse to register without endorsing his refusal on the document, yet, in cases where he does so endorse his refusal, the last clause of Section 82 is applicable, and the case falls within the provisions of Section 84; the party aggrieved has a right of petition to the District Court. Where the property, the subject of a deed presented for registration, was without the jurisdiction of the High Court, but the order of refusal was made by the Registrar-General, who was within such jurisdiction,—Held, the High Court was the District Court, under Section 84, to which the petition should be made. In the matter of the Indian Registration Act (XX of 1866), and in the matter of Percy Wyndham, 6 B. L. R., 576.

A. applied to a Registrar to have a deed of sale registered, alleging it to have been executed in his favour by B., who denied the execution. The Registrar refused to register the deed. A. then applied to the Judge by petition, under Section 84 of the Registration Act, to order the registration of the deed, alleging that B. had falsely denied the execution of the deed. The Judge dismissed the petition, on the ground that he had no authority to examine witnesses in the matter, or to determine whether the deed of sale was executed or not.

Held (Macpherson, J., dubitante), that the Judge had wrongly refused jurisdiction. He ought to have examined witnesses as to whether or not the deed was really executed. The petition to the Judge was not an appeal from the officer who refused to register the deed, but an original application to the Judges for an order to compel the Registrar to register. The words "appealed against" in Section 84 of the Registration Act, only mean "complained of" or "objected to." In the matter of the petition of Sunkur Dobey, 4 B. L. R., A. C. 65, and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 385.

In an application to a Civil Court, under Section 84 of Act XX of 1866, for a declaration of petitioner's right to have a document registered, the Legislature intended to give the petitioner something more than a mere appeal from the order of the registering officer. It is intended that the Court should summarily determine the facts of execution in those cases in which it has not been admitted by the respondent, and that on proof of the execution and of compliance with the requirements of the Act, the Court should order registration, without enquiring whether or not the petitioner was entitled to enforce the deed.

Where a person who is alleged to have executed a deed denies before the registering officer that the deed was executed by him, the Zillah Judge, having regard to the provisions of Section 84 and the form of the petition given in the Schedule to the Act, has jurisdiction to determine such a question. Fudder v. Samo, Lachumbar Singh Doss, 16 S. W. R., 104.
Sections 94 and 95.

The proceedings of a Magistrate who tries prisoners charged with having committed offenses under Sections 93 and 94 of the Indian Registration Act XX of 1866 are not illegal and without jurisdiction, or otherwise bad, merely because the prosecution was (with the sanction of the Registrar to whom he was subordinate) instituted against the accused by the same Magistrate in his capacity of Sub-Registrar. Under such circumstances, where it can be done, it would be better if the case were tried by some other person. Queen v. Hira Lal Doss, 8 B. L. R., 422.

Three persons who put up a fourth to personate one whose authority was required to complete a conveyance of immovable property, were held guilty under Section 94 of the Registration Act XX of 1866. Queen v. Solemoooddeen and others, 7 W. R., Cr., 99.

A Registrar under Act XX of 1866 is competent under Section 95 to institute a prosecution for any offense under that Act. Queen v. Ramdhary Singh and others, 10 W. R., Cr., 5.

Section 100.

A purchased certain lands in 1866, and duly registered his bill of sale. B. had purchased the same lands in 1855 from the persons through whom A.'s vendors made their title, and had been in possession ever since, but had not registered his bill of sale, as he might have done, under Section 100 of Act XX of 1866. A. sued to obtain possession. Held that B. was not bound to register, and his title was good against A. Girija Singh v. Giridhari Singh, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 14; 10 W. R., 65.

(f) Registration Act VIII of 1871.

The effect of the first and fourth clauses of Section 2 of the Indian Registration Act of 1871, read with the provisions in the first schedule as to the extent of the repeal of Act VII of 1870, is to keep in force all the provisions of Act XX of 1866 relating to the procedure for the recovery in a summary way of the amount of an obligation upon agreements recorded under Section 52 of that Act, before the 1st day of July, 1871. Pachaipenmal Chetti v. Savodyar Avdani Kurnsa Ravvel, 6 Mad. Rep., 351.

Sale certificates under Section 259 of the Civil Procedure Code are instruments declaring an interest in property, and if the value of the interest so declared be Rs. 100, or upwards, the registration of these instruments is compulsory under Section 17 of Act VIII of 1871. 6 Mad. Rep., Rul. XL.

8.—Stamps.

(a) Miscellaneous.

A bond stamped subsequently to the institution of a suit is valid, under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and of the Stamp Acts of 1860 and 1862, provided it be properly stamped when produced at the first hearing of the suit. The Court is asked to receive it in evidence. Amin v. Goobrai v. Amirchand Rupchand, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 92.

The decision of the Court of first instance as to the admissibility of a document subject to the payment of stamp duty is final, and cannot be reviewed by the Appellate Court. Lakshomi Narayana Aiyar v. Suppara Gaundam, 2 Mad. Rep., 321.

An endorsement upon the pottah transferring it for a consideration not exceeding 100 rupees, is not admissible in evidence unless it bears a stamp not less than the proper stamp, as per schedule annexed to Act X of 1862. Pilyee Akhoo v. Girghee Koer Ajoonah, 11 W. R., 365.

A petition which has been accepted by the lower Court as good and valid evidence of a mortgage cannot be objected to in special appeal on the score of its not being engrossed on a proper stamp. Doomah Sahoo v. Tumarain Lall, 12 W. R., 362.

Where no application was made to the lower Court to receive unstamped receipts for rent on payment of the stamp duty and penalty, the Appellate Court held that it was not in a position to order their admission on such payment. Gour Persaud Singh and others v. Lalla Nund Lall, 7 W. R., 439.

An objection by way of cross-appeal will not be entertained except on payment of the stamp duty required by Section 6 of Act XXVI of 1867, though a petition setting out the grounds of such cross-appeal on a stamp of Rs. 2 had been filed before the passing of that Act. G. L. Pagan and others v. Chunder Kant Banerjee, 7 W. R., 452.

The plaintiff appealed to the Judge against a dismissal of his suit, who reversed the decision of the Court below, and gave the plaintiff a decree. The defendant thereupon appealed to the High Court, on the ground that a document had been admitted in evidence in support of the plaintiff's case which did not bear a proper stamp. Held that the defendant, having omitted to take the objection before the Judge, could not appeal on this ground. Rambrem Lall v. Abbek Singh, Marsh., 267.

The examination of stamps is a fiscal duty belonging to a revenue officer, and for which the Registrar of the High Court should not be responsible.

Where an appeal to the High Court in a case involving property not exceeding Rs. 3,000 in value was filed, under Act X of 1862, on a stamp paper worth Rs. 100, and the result was a remand in respect to a portion of the property of which the value was Rs. 1,756, it was held that as the appellant was successful in his appeal in respect of property representing a value which must of itself have required a stamp duty of Rs. 100, that portion of his appeal in which he failed did not necessitate the payment of any further stamp duty; consequently the appellant was entitled to a refund of the stamp duty in full. Bhikoo Mollah and another v. RashMoney Dossee and others, 9 W. R., 357.

Where a case is remanded in part the appellant is entitled to a refund of stamp duty in proportion to the value of that part of the claim only which has been remanded. Dourga Doss and others v. Mooka Kessy Debbo, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 401.

Where a landlord claims to eject a tenant, he claims to recover the tenant rights in the holding, and the stamp duty chargeable on the plaint should be determined with reference to the market value of that right only.

Held further that a defendant is legally chargeable with that amount of stamp duty which can legally be demanded from the plaintiff, and not with the excess which he was obliged to pay through a mistake in law of the Court. Ajoodya Chowbey v. Daiidee Singh, 4 Agra Rep., 5.

The terms of the Bengal Stamp Regulation X of 1829 upon the subject of value should be carefully attended to. Mohun Lall Sooalk v. Debee Doss Dutt, 2 W. R., P. C., 9.

The refusal to give a stamp receipt for money paid not being in itself an offence at law, to make a false charge against a party of refusing to give such a stamp receipt is not an indictable offence. Reg. v. Gopoo Kom Koopseeje, 1 Bom. Rep., 93.

A decree had been obtained by a party suing in forma pauperis against the appellant. The Government now sought to recover against the appellant the amount of stamps which would have been paid by the plaintiff, if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper. Held that the right of Government to recover the stamp fees in question, under Section 309 of Act VIII of 1859, is not affected by the Law of Limitation laid down in Section 20 of Act XIV of 1859. Shami Mahomed v. Moonshee Mahomed Ali Khan, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 22.

An unstamped document having been received in evidence by the lower Court, the objection of the want of stamp is unsustainable in the Appellate Court, as it does not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the lower Court. G. Brawley v. R. Maling, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 63.

Held that, for the purpose of refund on half-stamp duty under Section 26 of Act X of 1862, the hearing of a suit in a Small Cause Court commences when proof of the service of the summons is taken on the day appointed for the hearing; and where proof of the service of the summons has been previously taken it must be considered as taken at the commencement of the proceedings on the day appointed for hearing. Amirsland Jamadus v. Mangan Ali, 1 Bom. Rep., A. C., 176.

The words in Section 3 of Act X of 1862, "unless in any case in which a higher penalty is imposed," and "not exceeding," apply both to the penalty of Rs. 100, and one higher than ten times the value of the omitted stamp.

Attesting witnesses and persons who draft documents and note the fact with their signatures at the foot do not come within the words "make, execute, sign, or be a party to," used in the section, and are therefore not punishable under it. Anonymous case, 3 Mad. Rep., A. P., 27.

The mere engrossing of a deed on unstamped paper, or the using it as witness, is not an offence under Section 3 of Act X of 1862. Reg. v. Jetka Moti; Reg. v. Verji Kuwarji, 2 Bom. Rep., 135.

Note (c) to Article 11, Schedule B, Act XXVI of 1867, contains no reservation as to the stamp duty to be levied on a petition of objection under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, filed by a pauper respondent. Rashmen Dasse v. Chowdry Jonmunjoy Multik, 9 W. R., 356.

The stamp duty is refundable, and should not be charged to the respondent in a case remanded. C. B. Massayk v. Fuggobundhoo Dutt, 1 W. R., Mis., 12.

Copies of decrees, applied for after the present Stamp Act (X of 1862) came into operation, but passed before that Act, must be prepared under the rules prescribed by the Act. Haffeezoonissa Begum v. Radha Binnud Misser, 1 W. R., Mis., 21.

An appeal does not lie from an order of the lower Court made on an application for refund of sufficient stamp duty and penalty, after a case remanded to it has been compromised. Redress should be sought by way of motion rather than as an appeal. Mohunt Ramanooj Doss v. Government, 2 W. R., Mis., 36.

No refund of stamp duty can be allowed when a suit is compromised pending the hearing of an appeal preferred. Land Mortgage Bank of India Limited v. Gregory Paul Meiktus, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 96.

An application presented on the 90th day from the date of the decree having been returned for deficiency of stamp was re-filed, after the deficiency was made up, beyond the time allowed. Held, that the application must be dealt with as filed after the 90th day. Gour Mohun Surnah v. Jugger Nath Achhaye, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 446.

(b) Where Stamp is required.

A suznud which authorizes a gomasta to collect rents, and to sue for them, requires to be stamped. Such a suznud requires a 4-rupee stamp under Art. 43, Schedule A. of Act X of 1862. Raghunund Thakur v. Ramcharan Kapali, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 55; 10 W. R., F. B., 39.

Where notice of an objection to be taken by a respondent, under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859, at the hearing of the appeal, was given before Act XXVI of 1867 came into force, but the objection was taken after that Act came into force,—Held that the objection could not be taken without payment of the proper stamp duty prescribed by Clause 9, Article 11, Schedule B. of Act XXVI of 1867. Sreennath Roy Chowdhy, petitioner, 7 W. R., 462.

A co-owner of village lands sued in 1861 to have them divided among the villagers according to a custom (last observed in 1835) that at the expiration of every twelve years the lands should be re-distributed by lot among the co-owners, and to have two of the shares delivered to him as one of such co-owners.

In 1851 another co-owner had, in a suit to which some only of the present defendants were parties, obtained a decree for the periodical allotment of the lands, and in 1853 such decree, which clearly recognized the existence and validity of the custom, was affirmed on appeal. Held that the plaintiff need not pay an institution fee on the aggregate amount of the value of all the shares in the village, and that the stamp on the plaint need only be proportioned to the value of the property actually sued for. Venkatarami Nayak Ram and others v. Subba Ram, 2 Mad. Rep., 1.

A security and executed by a third party to CONVEYANCING—STAMPS—WHERE STAMP IS NOT REQUIRED.

the abkaree renter is not exempt from stamp duty. Ramasvami Chetti v. Puppu Reddi, 1 Mad. Rep., 190.

An agreement on a Rs. 24 stamp paper between A., who had obtained from Government the abkaree farm of a certain talook, and B., stipulating that, in consideration of Rs. 2,000 advanced by B. for payment of deposit, the whole management should reside in B., that the parties should each have a half share and be respectively entitled and liable to profit and loss in respect of his share; that they should account with one another for the sums laid out by B., and that such annually the accounts of profit and loss upon the half share, — Held to be a partnership agreement, and to be sufficiently stamped under Act XXXVI of 1860, Clause 20, Schedule A.

In determining the stamp to be affixed to a document, the state of things at its execution is alone to be regarded. Chinnaiya Nattan v. Mathuswami Pillai, 1 Mad. Rep., 226.

It is open to an Appellate Court to consider the question whether a document which the Court of first instance has declared liable to be stamped under Act X of 1862 is properly so liable. Chella Pillai v. Sriivasa Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 71.

Where the objection is taken for the first time in special appeal that a document which, according to Act X of 1862, ought to have been stamped has been admitted by both the lower Courts unstamped, the High Court is bound to take notice of the objection (although not one of the grounds set forth in the petition of appeal), and to require payment of the stamp duty and penalty, or to reject the document. A. Adinarayana Setti v. F. J. V. Minchin, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 297.

(c) Where Stamp is not required.

A claim for possession and a claim for mesne profits may be brought separately, or may be united. When united, a separate stamp fee for mesne profits is not necessary. Beebee Syedun v. Syud Allah Ahmed, W. R., 1864, 327.

Under the old Stamp Law, agreements not on stamped paper executed in Calcutta bond fide by parties residing or carrying on business therein, when there is no intention of pleading such documents in the Mofussil Courts, were held to be good and binding. Gowry Churn Mukerjee v. Jogendranath Mukerjee, W. R., 1864, 238.

Mourosee ryottee pottars are not required either by the old or new Stamp Law to be written on stamped paper. Mohoohooden Ahmed v. Prannath Roy Chowdhry, 3 W. R., Act X R., 142.

Held that as the original deed was on the face of it an absolute sale, and as the effect of it was merely controlled by the ekrar, the return of the latter extinguished the equity of redemption. A separate document requiring a separate stamp was unnecessary. Raj Coomar Singh and others v. Ram Suhye Roy and others, 11 W. R., 151.

In a suit for payment of rent for use and occupation of land, where the basis of plaintiff's claim was for a kubuleut, the agreement produced as evidence of the contract, not being the deed of contract itself, was held to be not liable to be stamped under Article 3, Schedule A, Act X of 1862.

A petition on a lease when used as evidence of a contract to be entered into between parties is not subject to the payment of stamp-duty. Choonoo Mindar v. Chundee Lall Dass, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 334.

A complaint preferred by a Moonsiff under Section 168 of Criminal Procedure Code need not, though it do not bear the seal of the Moonsiff's Court, be on stamped paper. Reg. v. Sajjan Valden Viten, 5 Bom. Rep., Cr. C. P., 104.

(d) Amount of Stamp required.

In cases where, for the purpose of stamp on appeal, it is impracticable to ascertain accurately what portion of permanent revenue has been assessed on the lands in dispute in a suit, the appellant should furnish to the Registrar a memorandum giving an estimate of the market value and the date on which it has been calculated. If the Registrar considers the estimate clearly insufficient, the Court will issue a Commission to ascertain the proper market value.

In determining the stamp required for any particular instrument regard must be had to the real nature of the instrument, and not to the title which may have been given to it by the parties, if the contents of the instrument show that the title is a misnomer.

The discretion vested in a Court of Justice must be exercised in a sound and reasonable manner, and a capricious and unreasonable exercise of discretion on the part of a Court of first instance is an error in law which it is the duty of an Appellate Court to correct. Pendse v. Malse, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 94.

Where the zemindar values his right to measure at a certain amount, the petition of appeal must be written on a regular stamp according to such valuation, and not upon a stamp used for miscellaneous petitions. Ooma Churn Biswas v. Shibnath Bagchee, 8 W. R., 14.

When the appeal of an appellant is against the whole of the decision of the lower Court, and upon the full value of the original suit, no additional stamp duty is required in respect of the respondent's objection under Section 348, Act VIII of 1859. Anund Mohun Chatteejee v. Sultto Ram Mozoodmar and others, 8 W. R., 124.

Petitions of appeal in cases where measurement is disputed may be written on the stamp used for miscellaneous petitions. J. Smith v. Nundun Lall, 6 W. R., Act X R., 13.

Security bonds for costs of appeal to the Privy Council come within Article 12, Schedule A, Act X of 1862, and ought to be executed on a stamp as therein specified. Soorjheere Koowar v. Ramessur Pandey, 5 W. R., Mis., 47.

In valuing a suit relating to a share of land, the rental of the share is to be the criterion of the stamp. Ram Buksh Thakoor v. Ojoodya Lall, 2 W. R., Mis., 45.

In a suit upon a bond for Rs. 40 with interest, the defendant filed a solehnamah admitting that the amount due from him was Rs. 25, and agreeing to pay that sum by instalments. Held that the solehnamah was not a petition within the meaning of Article 10, Act XXVI of 1867, but an agreement within the meaning of Schedule A., of Act X of 1862, and was liable to a stamp duty of 2 annas as for an instalment bond. Punchanuu Sircar v. Gunnesh Munchul, 8 W. R., 214.

A suit for the declaration of title to a fractional share in a zemindary paying revenue to Government is not a suit "for lands forming one entire mehal or a specific portion thereof with a defined jumma;" such share being "an interest in land" should be valued according to the provisions of note (e) Clause 11, Schedule B., Act X of 1862.

To Chunder Roy v. Chundee Churn Mai, 12 W. R., 449.

Clause (d) must be read as meaning revenue or for the assistance of the Collector in ejecting a ryot, is not a suit; and therefore the Revenue law, even though the petition is written on one stamp paper of the value of eight annas. Ryari petitioner, 7 W. R., 455.

An application, under Section 25, of Act X of 1859, for the assistance of the Collector in ejecting a ryot, is not a suit; and therefore the Revenue Courts should receive such petitions engrossed on a stamp paper of the value of eight annas. Ryari Mohun Mookerjee v. Kinu Bawa, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 117, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 116.

Where, owing to an irregularity, a petition of appeal was returned before the new Stamp Act XXVI of 1867 came into force, and the appeal was not filed until after that Act came into force,—Held that the appeal must be filed on a stamp of the amount prescribed by the new law. Arahdun Dey and another v. Golam Hossein Maloom and others, 7 W. R., 460.

An application, under Section 25, Act X of 1859, for the assistance of the Collector in ejecting a ryot, is not a suit; and therefore the Revenue Courts should receive such petitions engrossed on a stamp paper of the value of eight annas. Ryari Mohun Mookerjee v. Kinu Bawa, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 117, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 116.

Where a suit to resume lands as lakheraj falls in respect of stamp duty, under Clause (d) Section 11, Schedule B., Act X of 1862. The term "revenue" in Clause (d) must be read as meaning revenue or rent, whether to Government or to a zemindar. Gope Mohun Mojoomdar v. Mackintosh, 9 W. R., 395.

The objection that a bond is engrossed on an 8-annas-stamp threaded to other stamps aggregating the full value is merely technical. Dunne v. Ameerroomissi Khatoon, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

The objection that a bond is engrossed on an 8-annas-stamp threaded to other stamps aggregating the full value is merely technical. Dunne v. Ameerroomissi Khatoon, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

Where a document is admitted by the first Court as not requiring a stamp, its admissibility cannot be questioned in appeal. Enayyotollah v. Shaikh Mejjan, 12 S. W. R., C. R., 6.

Where a stamp of the full value is available, parties ought to use as small a number of stamps as they can. Ranee Khajoooroomissa v. Mussamut Rohimoissa, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 152.

There is no illegality in making up the stamp fee chargeable in an appeal by means of any number of stamps of smaller values. Mirza Dawd Ali v. Syud Nadir Hossein, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 153.

Where a suit was remanded to a Moonsiff's Court, and on the defendants objecting that the plaint had been undervalue, an order was made by the Court that the plaintiff should in some shape or other put in the additional amount of stamp duty, and a supplemental plaint with the required stamp was accordingly put in and received, the irregularity was not considered to have affected the merits of the case or to call for a reversal of the Moonsiff's decision. Guddadhur Banerjee v. Runa Premoyee Debia and others, 10 W. R., 286.

When a lower Appellate Court finds that a suit was undervalued in the first Court, it should give the plaintiff the option of supplying the necessary stamps. Such an error does not subject the first Court's order to reversal. Wahed Ali Khan v. Hunoomun Pernsh, 12 W. R., 484.

The Civil Court is authorized, under the present Stamp Act (Act XVIII of 1860), to receive the proper amount of stamp which should have been affixed on a plaintiff's pottah under the law in force when it was executed. Mahomed Rijah v. the Collector of Chittagong, 6 B. L.R., Ap., 117, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 116.

The provisions of the Stamp Law, by which unstamped or insufficiently stamped documents are excluded, were framed primarily in the interests of the Government revenue, but were never intended to be used to put an end to litigation. Where a document is admitted by the first Court as not requiring a stamp, its admissibility cannot be questioned in appeal. Enayyoollah v. Shaikh Mejian, 12 S. W. R., C. R., 6.

There is no illegality in making up the stamp fee chargeable in an appeal by means of any number of stamps of smaller values. Mirza Dawd Ali v. Syud Nadir Hossein, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 153.

When a suit was remanded to a Moonsiff's Court, and on the defendants objecting that the plaint had been undervalue, an order was made by the Court that the plaintiff should in some shape or other put...
besides yourselves, nor to make any shipments during the term of this contract, without first obtaining your consent in writing, or I will render myself liable to yourselves to a penalty of Rs. 5,000 by way of liquidated damages, without prejudice to your other rights. Should I fail to deliver the hogs' lard to you according to this contract, and should you fail to take delivery in any month of any of the instalments of hogs' lard when ready and after I have given you notice in writing, you must render yourselves similarly liable to a penalty of Rs. 5,000 and by way of liquidated damages.” This letter was signed by the defendant, and, as the plaintiffs alleged, formed the contract between them. The letter bore a stamp of one anna. In an action for a breach of the contract, it was tendered in evidence by the plaintiffs, and objection was taken to it that it was insufficiently stamped, that it required an ad valorem stamp as being a bond for the payment of money under Act XVIII of 1869, Schedule 1. Held it was a document which required an 8-anna stamp only under clause 11 of Schedule 11 of the Act, and the document was admitted on payment of the stamp and penalty. Roberl and Charriol v. C. G. M. Sln'rmre, 7 B. L. R., 510.

The plaintiff sued his elder brother for a share in certain family property. The defendant raised a question of family custom, and relied on a certain deed of release which he said the plaintiff had given him, but the existence of which the plaintiff denied. That document was not stamped, though on the face of it it stated that it was to be stamped. No objection was taken on that score to the document before the first and the Lower Appellate Courts, who considered that the document was a genuine document executed by the plaintiff. After its production, it had an insufficient stamp of two annas put upon it. The High Court, on appeal, left the deed as part of the evidence in the case, but qualified its effect and the extent of its operation by making it a deed of release, relegating so much of that which the plaintiff might otherwise claim as would be covered by the insufficient stamp of two annas.

Held that the High Court might either have refused to admit the document for want of a stamp, or—which would be more correct—it might have required it to be properly stamped and the penalty paid into Court; but the course taken was entirely without precedent, without principle, and without authority. Maniappan Nadgowda v. Baswantrao Nadgowda, 15 S. W. R., P. C., 33.

No ad valorem stamp duty is payable under Act XVIII of 1869 upon a conveyance where the consideration consists of shares in a public company made over to the vendor.

The word “amount” in Article 15, Schedule 1 of that Act, signifies the sum total, or amount of money, forming the consideration, and the words “or secured” apply only to cases of mortgages and the like, not to an out-and-out conveyance. The Port Canning Land Co., Limited, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 208.

Where a decree had been prepared while the old stamp laws were in operation, and Rs. 6 were awarded in it as the value of the stamps for a copy thereof, the Court allowed a copy to be taken for Rs. 4 by a party applying after Act VII of 1870 came into operation. Hurezur Mahtoon, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 167.

No larger sum can be recovered under Section 14, Act XXXVI of 1860, upon a bond executed on an optional stamp than that optional stamp covers, and no amount of penalty can make up the deficiency in the stamp. Syed Keramut Ali v. Moonshee Abdool Wahab, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 130.

If the parties to an agreement add to the stipulations which it contains a provision whereby a sum of money is made payable by way of fine or penalty, in the event of the non-performance at the appointed time of the work contracted to be done, such a provision is in the nature of an obligation for the payment of money, and for the due execution of the work within the meaning of Article 18 of Schedule A. of the Stamp Act X of 1862, and requires an optional stamp. Collins v. Dewan Singh, 2 N. W. R., 465.

Where a document contained two distinct contracts requiring separate stamps, but the whole was impressed with one insufficient stamp, it was held that the stamp might be taken into account in making up the aggregate of the stamps required. Baldaji Mahdder v. Krishudji bin Chimnoodji et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 95.

Whether permission to pay the stamp duty and penalty can be given in the case of a lost instrument. Arunachillum Chelly v. Olagappah Chelly, 4 Mad. Rep., 312.

Held that the description of a document delivered to the Court, under Section 40 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is neither a petition nor an application, liable to duty within the meaning of the Stamp Act. Chotaldal Amridal v. Bombay, Baroda, and Central Indian Railway, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 101.

In a suit for a declaration of right to an annuity (varshasam) it was held that the stamp for the petition of special appeal should be regulated by the market value of the annuity, and that prima facie ten times the amount of the annuity may be assumed to be its market value, as enacted for analogous agreements by Section 2, Schedule A, Act X of 1862. Narsinwacharya et al. v. Svami Radyel Chdroy, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 55.

The stamp duty payable under Section B. of Act X of 1862, on a suit to redeem mortgaged land paying revenue to Government, should be calculated in the sum for which the land is mortgaged, and not on the market value of such land.

Semple—That an error in the valuation of the plaintiffs claim, on account of which error the defendant is compelled to pay more costs than he would otherwise have to pay, is not in general a ground of special appeal. Nandram Sundarji Naid v. Baldji Vithal et al., 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 153.

An agreement to supply cotton in consideration of a sum of money received should be stamped under Article 4, and not under Article 15, Schedule A., Act X of 1862. Samsuddin Sultân v. Râmji Bhîkâ, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 151.

I.—MISCELLANEOUS RULINGS.

Held, that the act of the defendants in assembling and forcibly interrupting a procession was forbidden by Clause 4 of Section 141 of the Penal Code, although the defendants acted upon the ground that the procession was a nuisance or annoyance to them or their community. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. VI.

The defendant was convicted under Section 447 of the Penal Code for cultivating village waste land which he had been ordered by the Subordinate Collector to refrain from cultivating. The High Court upheld the conviction. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. XVII.

The prisoners were convicted, the one of disposing of and the other of receiving two children, females under the age of sixteen years, with intent that such females should be used for the purpose of prostitution. The evidence showed that the children were disposed of and registered as dancing girls of a Pagoda for the purpose of being brought up as dancing girls. Held that offences under Sections 372 and 373 of the Indian Penal Code had been committed, and that the prisoners were properly convicted. Ex-parte Padmanati, 5 Mad. Rep. 415.

The prisoner was tried upon a charge of having obtained possession of Dowlath Bee, a minor aged ten years, with intent that she should be used for an unlawful and immoral purpose, that is to say, for the purpose of illicit intercourse, and having thereby committed an offence under Section 373 of the Indian Penal Code.

The evidence showed that the prisoner met Dowlath Bee, a girl eleven years old, in a street at Triplicane, and promised to give her a nice if she would accompany him into an uninhabited house close by and allow him to have sexual intercourse with her. The girl went willingly with the prisoner, and both were detected in the act of having sexual intercourse. The girl had gone out without permission, had not attained the age of puberty, and the evidence tended to show that the girl had not before had sexual connexion. The Jury convicted the prisoner. Held by the High Court, that the case proved against the prisoner did not make out the offence charged. Queen on the prosecution of Dowlath Bee v. Shaik Ali, 5 Mad. Rep., 473.

In the trial of prisoners for the offence of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery (See 401 Penal Code), the judge should, in his charge, put clearly to the jury, - 1. The necessity of the proof of association. 2. The need of proving that that association was for the purpose of habitual theft, and that habit is to be proved by an aggregate of acts. Shriram Vethkutsami, 6 Mad. Rep., 120.

A sub-Magistrate convicted certain persons, under Section 174 of the Penal Code, of disobedience to summonses issued by him as Tahsildar, - Held that the convictions under the first part of Section 174 were sustainable. 6 Mad. Rep., Rul. XLIV.

Where the defendants, ryots of a portion of a remand sold in execution of a decree of the Civil Court, reaped and carried away their crops despite the purchaser's people, and refused to allow the purchaser's people to seal and mark grain which had been reaped, and the ryots were assembled in such numbers and so armed that nothing could be done against them, the act of the defendants did not amount to an offence under Section 141 of the Penal Code. 4 Mad. Rep., Rul. LXV.

Held that the dedication of a minor girl under the age of sixteen years to the service of a Hindu temple, by the performance of a religious ceremony, where it was shown that it was almost invariably the case that girls so dedicated led a life of prostitution, was a disposing of such minor knowing it to be likely that she would be used for the purpose of prostitution within the meaning of Section 372 of the Indian Penal Code. Reg. v. Talia Bhavin, 6 Bom. Rep., Cr. Ca., 60.

Held that a person who placed in his toddypots juice of the milk-bush, knowing that if taken by a human being it would cause injury, and with the intention of thereby detecting an unknown thief who was in the habit of stealing the toddy from such pots, and which toddy was drunk by and caused injury to certain soldiers who purchased it from an unknown vendor, was rightly convicted, under Section 328 of the Penal Code, of "causing to be taken an unwholesome thing with intent to injure," and that Section 81, which says that "if an act be done without any criminal intention to cause harm, it is not an offence," did not apply to the case. Reg. v. Dhanid Daji, 5 B. R., Cr. R., 59.

A settlement of accounts in writing, though not signed by any person, is a "valuable security" within the definition of Section 30 of the Indian Penal Code. Kapalavaya Saraya Ex-parte, 2 Mad. Rep., 247.

The tearing up of a potah is destruction of valuable security within the meaning of Section 477 of the Penal Code. Queen v. Nittai Mundale, 3 W. R., Cr., 38.

The words "accused person" in Section 436 of the Penal Code do not apply to a party who has been convicted by the Magistrate under Section 411, from whose sentence there is no appeal. Bayde Manjee v. Mohendro Narain and others, 10 W. R., Cr., 16.

The feigning of an attempt to commit suicide in order to extort money is an offence under Section 389 of the Indian Penal Code. Reg. v. Gregory, I Ind. Jur., N. S., 423.

Section 201 of the Penal Code refers to prisoners other than the actual criminals who, by their causing evidence to disappear, assist the principals to escape the consequences of their offences. But the person who commits an offence, and afterwards conceals the evidence of it, cannot be punished on both heads of the charge. Queen v. Sham Soonder Chotar, 7 W. R., Cr., 52. See also Queen v. Goburdhun Bera, 6 W. R., Cr., 80.

Section 75 of the Penal Code only applies to convictions of offences committed after the Code came into operation. Queen v. Hurpaul, 4 W. R., Cr., 9.

To obtain the benefit of the exception allowed by Section 94 of the Penal Code, it must be shown that the prisoners were compelled to act as they did from apprehension that instant death would be the consequence of a refusal. The Queen v. Sonoo and others, 10 W. R., 48.

Where a person applies for the execution of a decree which has already been executed, his offence falls, not under Section 209, but Section 210 of the Penal Code. Section 209 relates to false and fraudulent claims in a Court of Justice, and is confined to the Civil Court in which the original suit was brought. The Queen v. Begum Mahtoon, 3 W. R., Cr., 37.

Retrospective effect is not to be given to the penal provision of Section 2, Act VI of 1852. Nobokan Dey v. Raah Boradakangh Roy Bahadoor, 1 W. R., 100.

The mere possession of weights in excess of the authorized standard will not support a conviction under Section 266 of the Penal Code; a fraudulent intent must be charged and proved. Reg. v. Damo Dhor Daljie, 1 Bom. Rep., 181.

Evidence of guilty knowledge is necessary to a conviction on a charge of dishonestly retaining Quare—Whether the words "during a voyage or journey" in Section 490 of the Penal Code do not limit the offences made under that section to offences against travellers. That section, however, does not apply to a contract to place the defendant's cart at the complainant's disposal for a specified time to convey a thing from where he pleases to where he pleases. Sage v. Nirmunjun Chatterjee, 9 W. R., Cr., 12.

Held by the majority of the Court (dissentient Campbell, J.), that a warrant addressed to a police officer to apprehend an offender, and to bring him before the Magistrate, is not a "summons, notice, or order" within the meaning of Section 172 of the Penal Code, and that the offence of absconding by an offender against whom a warrant has been so issued is not punishable under that section. Queen v. Womesh Chunder Ghose, 5 W. R., Cr., 71.

In a case of separate convictions and sentences for housebreaking by night and theft under Sections 457 and 379 of the Penal Code, the conviction and sentence under Section 379 were quashed, and those under Section 457 were upheld. Jagoeen Pullee v. Nabo Pullee, 6 W. R., Cr., 48.

Refusing to sign a summons by an accused person does not constitute the offence of intentionally preventing the service of a summons on himself, under Section 171 of the Indian Penal Code. Reg. v. Kalya bin Fakir, 5 Bom. Rep., Cr., 34.

Where a Court finds that parties came with a number of armed men, and carried off a crop, the finding amounts to that of a forcible carrying off without the consent of the owner. Even if they took no part in the actual taking they must, with reference to Section 114, Indian Penal Code, be considered guilty of the substantive offence under Section 378. Queen v. Shichunder Mundle and others, 8 W. R., Cr., 59.

It is at all times desirable that questions of title should not be tried in criminal courts, and more especially where such questions depend on the construction of obscure documents, or fall to be decided in reference to transactions of which at the best but an imperfect record is preserved.

A prosecutor, in order to establish that a title has been asserted with a fraudulent or dishonest intent, must show that the accused had no reasonable ground for asserting the title, and that accused asserted the title dishonestly or fraudulently in the sense in which these terms are used in the Indian Penal Code. Queen v. Kishen Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 202.

The actual driver, and not the owner of a carriage, is liable, under Section 279 of the Penal Code, in case of a collision and injury to another arising out of rash driving. Larrymore, A. W. v. Perundoo Deo, 14 S. W. R., Cr., 32.

The offence defined in Section 312 can only be committed when a woman is in fact pregnant. Queen v. Kabul Pattur, 15 S. W. R., Cr., 4.

The mere possession of arms in a certain district being an offence, if there be satisfactory evidence that the prisoners were in the possession of arms they would be punishable for other illegal possession, notwithstanding the police may have also committed an illegality in their procedure in conducting the search for same. Queen v. Sheopershun Roy, 2 N. W. R., 57.

Where a first-class subordinate Magistrate sentenced a prisoner to six months' imprisonment, under Section 457 of the Penal Code, and finding that the prisoner was liable to enhanced punishment under Section 75 of the Penal Code, sentenced the prisoner to six months' further imprisonment, under Section 45 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the latter sentence was set aside by the High Court. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul., 111.

Upon conviction of the offence of housebreaking, the accused was sentenced by the Deputy Magistrate to six months' rigorous imprisonment, and to be whipped. On appeal, the Judge found that, as this was the first offence, the additional punishment of whipping was illegal; and setting aside so much of the sentence, passed a sentence of three months' rigorous imprisonment, in addition to the six months' rigorous imprisonment passed by the Deputy Magistrate,—Held that the commutation of the punishment was illegal. Queen v. Bunda Ali, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 95, and 15 S. W. R., Cr., 7.

An accused person cannot be punished, first on a charge for rioting, and afterwards on a charge for hurt, when the latter is included in the former. Goonaonme and others, 17 S. W. R., Cr., 59.
